Should you be making the jacket for a gift you might include with the present a bath mitten. This can be made from Turkish toweling also, or a better idea would be to use a Turkish wash cloth for the purpose, since it is not necessary to have fingers or a thumb in the mitten. All that is necessary is to fold a wash cloth in half, stitch it along the long end and one short end and finish the edges with crochet stitches to match that used on the jacket. On the mitten a spray of the design used on the jacket can be embroidered, or the monogram of the recipient can be substituted. Many people prefer the bath mitten to the regular wash cloth. It is quite convenient for bathing children.

THE DISORDERED HOME.

The Happy Policy of Keeping Things In Their Place.

Sometimes women are not responsible for the big sorrows which invade the home, but it is within their power to make life wretched for others in innumerable little ways. You have probably been to a shiftless home where affairs are allowed to run themselves, just as if they could.

Nothing is in its place, so that needed trifles must often be renewed because the ones on hand can never be found. There is no health in such a home, no repose, no dignity. Good housekeepers abominate bad ones and rarely put down the failings of the defective woman to inability in domestic matters. No excuses are made for the atrocious housekeeper who is besides a wife and mother, for it is a woman's business to know how to keep a home.

The young daughters and sons of such establishments get a taste of better kept homes as they go about and soon become ashamed of their own. If they grow up to its ways unconscious of its discomfort and inelegance there must come a time when they will be reduced to the society of persons beneath them, as the saying is.

The effects of the disordered home life, too, follow the young people with their own marriage and home relations, and the partner who has been brought up in a better manner is the one who suffers and revolts. Disorder without encourages disorder within, and harmony of externals encourages serenity of mind and heart.

of cerise are modish, and this same design is being put up in cerise straw with a black velvet bow. This kind of a hat always freshens up a dark tailored suit.

Salad Dressing.

Three-fourths of a cupful of vinegar, one-half cupful of sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, butter size of walnut.

Boil vinegar and butter together for three minutes, mix dry ingredients and add to beaten egg. Combine this last mixture to the former slowly, stirring constantly, and let cook (but not boil) for fifteen minutes.

Fruit Salad.

Wash thoroughly one cupful of seedless raisins, cover with boiling water, let simmer until plump, then drain dry in napkin and cool. Add one cupful of finely cut celery, one cupful of diced apple and one-third cupful of blanched and sliced almonds, toss lightly with a fork, sprinkle with the juice of half a lemon, place on crisp lettuce leaves and mark with mayonnaise or cooked dressing.

CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

Hints to Mothers Who Make Hand Embroidered Frocks at Home.

A mother can scarcely resist adding a few touches of hand embroidery on a frock she makes for her children, and yet she feels that it requires so much time to do the work that she must forego the pleasure and let her machine make all the stitches. But by picking out a few simple sprays and letting them ornament a yoke or a panel it would not take so long to embroider them on a dress. By using lace in combination with the hand touches it always looks as though there is more work on the frock than there really is. For instance, one dress which called forth much admiration has been made of finest nainsook. From the neck to the bottom in front there is a panel formed of two inch strips of lace and tucked material. Along either side of the panel there are embroidered sprays and leaves—only a few, yet there are sufficient to give the impression that a great amount of handwork has been added.

Another dress had a shallow yoke on which a few butterflies were embroidered. The baby waist was gained by the addition of beading through which pink ribbon was run.

Smocking is not to be forgotten when speaking of hand touches on children's frocks. For a child four years of age a very pretty dress might be made of natural colored pongee. Use the diamond shaped smocking to give fullness at the front and back of the dress and run some of it at the cuffs, so that the sleeves will be sufficiently full. Do the smocking in brown if you wish to gain a truly artistic effect.

Beginning Right.

Papa he has been a-sayin'
We should start the new year right,
An' not quarrel in our playin',
An' mind mamma day an' night.

An' he said there's no disputin'
That whatever we might do
On the first day, sure as shootin',
We would do the whole year through.

An' I saw the chance was splendid
To do something right away
That, until the year was ended,
I would like to do each day.

An' on New Year's, startin' squarely,
I got up soon as 'twas light
An' learned all my lessons fairly,
So's I'd always have them right.

KING OF GREEKS SEES ALLY MOVE

London—In an interview with the Athens correspondent of the Daily Chronicle King Constantine declared that his conference with General Sarrail had done much to revive confidence in the Entente Allies.

"As far as I am aware," King Constantine is quoted as saying, "the Greeks as a body have never been pro-German; but, putting it mildly, the series of pin pricks administered by the Franco-English have made then anti-Ententists. I am now told that the pin pricks are to cease, but even though a radical change in the treatment toward Greece has been inaugurated the irritation caused by the former system will taken some time to disappear."

"Marrying For a Home."

Marrying for a home or any sort of marriage as a means of support may be considered by some as a part of the business of marriage, but generally speaking it is a risky business—a wild speculation in which the girl pays very dearly for something she is not likely to want when she gets it and in many cases will rid herself of on short notice. And the price she pays is not only her youth and whatever charm and ambition she may possess, but a poor, miserable, broken life.—Bailey Millard in Woman's World.

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN—The time is getting short. Have you secured your tickets for the first concert of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra? If not, you had better get them at once. The exchange of seats took place at 1:30 at the Quirk.

You will certainly be surprised when you hear what your own orchestra can do. It is wonderful.

Let's fill the theater and show our Fulton spirit for once. When you do this once we are sure you will feel satisfied and keep on doing it.

Out with the Hammer —

That is what the Fulton Chamber of Commerce is trying to do.

There is a vast difference between "hammering" and "knocking."

Hammering pre-supposes an intelligent idea and a purpose, something which is planned to accomplish. It takes brains and continued effort, persistence and stick-to-itiveness. These efforts tend toward something worth while. "Hammering" is a means toward accomplishing a constructive program or policy. and results in something accomplished, something done.

Knocking on the other hand, is belting around with possibly an equal display of energy and effort, but without that thought and that plan which will accomplish anything but destruction. It is destructive and leaves matters no better than before.

Every "knocker" can be come a hammerer and then, magically he discovers that he has become a "booster." Every where "Hammerers" are needed, while the community can well dispense with "knockers."

THROW AWAY YOUR HAMMER AND BUY A HORN.

Symphony Orchestra Players Rounding Up for Public Trial—Conductor Newton Interviewed This Morning

The Evening Times secured an interview this morning with Mr. F. Jess Newton, conductor of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, relative to the progress made by the organization since rehearsals were first begun, down to the present time, or immediately before tomorrow night's public concert in the Quirk theater.

The rehearsal of the orchestra yesterday was a surprise to every member, and especially to Mr. Newton, who says for the benefit of The Evening Times readers as follows:

"Yes, I really believe we will give the music-lovers of Fulton a happy surprise at our concert tomorrow evening.

"There are many excellent musicians in the orchestra and while we have not played together long enough to get the very best results there being now and then a little roughness, still I think we have obtained wonderful results:

"Our violin section is especially fine, comprising as it does, Messrs. Buell, Reynolds, Crow, Haney, and Mrs. Newton. Any Orchestra should be proud of these five.

"Our cellos and basses are good, and by having Miss Brooker and Mrs. Haviland, who are both excellent accompanists, the foundation is well taken care of. Our wood, wind and brass sections are all right; in fact, in every section here are one or more fine musicians.

"Besides the above, we are exceedingly fortunate in having Miss Rumsey as harpist. Mr. Adkins on tympanies and chimes is a big acquisition to the orchestra.

"Surely you would have to travel some to find a city the size of Fulton, possessing the musical talent which is comprised in the the Fulton Symphony Orchestra."

SONS OF ITALY AIM TO AMERICANIZE MEMBERS; LODGE ELECTS OFFICERS

Under the direction of Raffael Amaraso, of Oswego, Grand Master of the Sons of Italy, an election and nomination of officers was held yesterday afternoon in their temporary meeting place, in Oneida st. The result of the election was as follows: Guiseppe Rosetti, corresponding secretary; Guiseppe Callavini, finan master; Salvatore Manitto, ex-venerable; Michele Linsi, orator; uiseppe Rosetti, corresponding secretary; Guiseppe Callavini, financial secretary; Joseph Cincotta, treasurer; Antonion Troproni, vittorio Ranieri, Carmelo Calloca, Muiccio Carmelo and Pasquerle Ristangha, trustees; Agostino Visconi, inside sentinel; Guiseppe Zito, out side sentinel. Gaetano Mirabita and Antonio Bafoni were elected to minor offices. Guiseppe Cincotta, Michael Luisi, and Augostino Visconi were in charge of the election.

Plans were discussed at the meeting for enlarging the membership of the order. The personel of the local lodge includes a number of business men. Most of the present members have citizenship papers, it being the aim of the Sons of Italy to assist members who have not become naturalized in doing so. This is also offered as an inducement to non-citizens to become members of the order.

JOHN NASH ATTEMPTED SUICIDE BY POISON IN A DOWNTOWN CAFE

After making repeated threats to end his life, John Nash of Oneida st., in the presence of two men in a cafe in 1st st. at 8 o'clock this morning took arsenic which may result fatally according to Dr. A. L. Hall, who treated the man at the police station prior to his removal to the hospital.

After taking the poison, Nash left the cafe and purchased another package of arsenic in the form of "rough-on-rats", and it is believed that he also swallowed a portion of this as some of the poison had been removed. Patrolman Sweet went on a hunt for the man after the proprietor of the cafe had called up the police station, and he found him in the barn of Dr. E. J. Cusack. He was still conscious and walked to police headquarters.

Until the result of Dr. Hall's examination was made known, it was believed that the entire affair was a hoax. When Nash entered the cafe, he asked the proprietor for a glass of water. After receiving it, he walked into an adjoining room and in the presence of an employe who was in the ante room swallowed the water after having empited some powder into it. Nash immediately showed the box of "rat poison to the two men and said, "Well, I have taken a good dose of this and I guess I am done for."

Nash left the place before the arrival of Officer Sweet and at this time purchased the other package of poison. According to Dr. Hall the man had been addicted to the use of morphine. Last summer, immediately after the law prohibiting the sale of the drug was passed, the man left his home and attempted suicide by swallowing the contents of a bottle of chloroform. His attempt was forestalled by a member of the family.

PIPERS MARRIED IN NEW JERSEY

This newspaper is in receipt of the following announcement of a wedding, which will interest a number of friends of Mr. Ray D. Piper, who was born in this city ,the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Piper of 827 Oneida street.

The announcement, which in reality is a copy of the certificate of marriage, indicates that Mrs. Ray D. Piper's maiden name was Florence L. Plusch, whose place of residence is mentioned as Long Branch, N. J.

Mr. Piper's place of residence is mentioned as Chicogo, Ill. The wedding occurred in Trenton, N. J., on March 1, 1915, at 4 p. m. Mr. Piper's age is given as 32 years, and that of his wife, 24 years. Mr. Piper is by occupation a manager.

The certificate of marriage bears the seal of the State of New Jersey, and is signed by the person who performed the ceremony, Albert C. Busch, 148 Mercer st., Trenton, N. J., to which is affixed the names of witnesses, L. C. Woolston and Margaret W. Busch, both of Trenton, N. J.

ZEPPELINS DROP BOMBS; KILL 12

London—Twelve persons were killed and thirty-three injured in last night's Zeppelin raid. Three Zeppelins took part in the attack. This information was given out officially today.

The statement follows

"The number of Zeppeline which took part in last night's raid is now believed to have been three.

"After crossing the coast, the airships took various courses, and from the devious nature of their flight apparently were uncertain as to their bearings. The area visited included Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Rutland, Huntingdon, Cambridgeshire, Norfolk, Essex and Kent."

CONGRESS MAY VOTE DIRECT

Washington—Statements made today by leaders in Congress made it certain that not only the Senate but the House will sooner or later declare directly for or against a resolution warning Americans off armed merchantmen of belligerent nations.

In the opinion of these leaders the House probably will voice its opinion in favor of such a warning.

It is practically settled that the McLemore resolution will be tabled when the Rules Committee makes its report to the House Tuesday, Every indication tonight, however, points to this action as not ending the matter.

It rather will mark the beginning of a new fight on the floor of the House that will make the outbreak in the Senate Friday seem tame by comparison.

Administration leaders were alarmed today when the report spread that the Republicans would vote almost solidly against the rule to be reported by the Rules Committee. If enough anti- administration Democrats voted with the Republicans it was realized the rule might be defeated.

VEGETABLE GROWERS WILL MEET IN GRANGE HALL

Professor Wilkinson of Cornell University and Victor E. Underwood, manager of the Oswego County Farm Bureau, will be in the city tomorrow, to address the Vegetable Growers Association upon matters of vital interest to the shippers of lettuce, celery and onions. ## VIEWS OF STATE EDITORS

Once in a blue moon a man comes forward to really interpret the American mind to itself. There are over a million of us now. It take a statesman to do it. It remained for Elihu Root, high priest of the Republican party, that met its Waterloo in Chicago in 1912, to become the high god of the Republican party which should rise like the Phoenix from the flames in 1916.—Poughkeepsie Evening Star.

IT MEANS PROTECTION

Army physicians tell us that the most destructive moral and physical, the most dangerous mental force in the American army today. is idleness. They would have the soldiers receive more pay, and them give them more work. In other words, the physicians would have the army put on a business basis, which would provide a waiting list of the best men in the world for work or for fighting. The idea is right, provided we must have soldier boys.

The same idea, the same principle, is applicable to our home and city affairs. It was tried out by the Chamber of Commerce in sub-dividing the membership, but somewhere along the line the stepping was not good. Along came a new officer who recognized the futility of the effort to secure a real working organization, and the order came to disperse. A new line had to be formed; it is still in the formative period—but it is working just the same, and no one feels that time is being lost by those persons who have enlisted under the banner of the Chamber of Commerce, to win a big measure of civic pride. Instances of its success abound on all sides, but nowhere are they more perceptible than in the organization of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, whose initial public performance occurs tomorrow night. In that organization of music-lovers and players the people of this city have one of the best exemplifications of the cooperative spirit that could be hoped for in a place where it has been so sadly lacking. It is putting into practical use the latent abilities of nearly two-score of persons whose interests are wound and bound up in this city of 12,000 souls. It is "preparedness" spelled with a big "P," because it is a superbly constructive idea. In bringing together this body of musicians for a public concert the Chamber of Commerce has made a long stride in the direction of welding the ends of the rods which have represented the persons who were made to feel they had no place in civic life, and on the other hand, the persons who were indifferent to the needs of the city. In short, the Symphony Orchestra is right now the greatest factor for the success of community spirit in this city.

Then the next step is to prepare to make the first public concert a success in every way, because it means protection to the great business before us—the People's Business.

STATE POLICE FORCES

In recent years two forms of disorder have been a source of great trouble. In the rural districts crime has been common, because the inhabitants of sparsely settled regions cannot take the necessary measures to preserve law and order. In industrial towns in time of strikes, the local police force is unable to cope with the situation. Employers too often hire armed but irresponsible men to guard their property, and if the militia is at last summoned after the situation has become desperate, its very presence implies that a state of war exists, and not infrequently increases the dangers it is intended to prevent.

The remedy seemed to lie in organizing a permanent body of police not attached to any one place, but under the control of the state authorities. Such a force can be moved at a moment's notice to the spot where protection is needed, and if composed of men chosen for character, intelligence, and general resourcefulness, and maintained at a sufficient strength, is adequate for any emergency.

The Pennsylvania State Constabulary is perhaps best known and most efficiently organized of such police forces. It was created nine years ago, and it consists of two hundred mounted men, nearly all of whom have served in the United States cavalry. They form four troops of fifty men each. A trooper receives $750 a year, and his uniform, arms, horse, and other equipment. In command of the force is a veteran officer of the national guard who had experience in the Spanish War, and who accepted his present post purely because of his public spirit. He has done his work so well that his men compare favorably with the famous Canadian Northwest Mounted Police.

Before this police force had been organized a year it showed both courage and impartiality in managing a strike mob; at the time of the strike of the street-car men in Philadelphia in 1910, it performed a difficult duty with even greater success. It has also given a surprising degree of protection to the rural districts. It has checked the tramp evil, made roads safe at night, and given country life and property a measure of security that it never had before.

In view of the success that this small force has achieved, it is not strange that other states are bestirring themselves to establish similar bodies. Evidences of lawlessness and the toleration of lawlessness are multiplying. It is none too soon for public sentiment to awake to the need of more efficient organization to preserve the public peace.—Youth's Companion.

POLITICALLY SICK

The country is facing a need of what it is to be hoped will be a more efficient degree ofm ilitary preparedness. Our grain farmers and war-stuff makers have been doing well. Our railroads are at last earning money through the urgent demand of Europe for food to eat and for additional materials of war. A large part of the free gold of the world is in our hands, We have high hopes that when the inevitable revival of European industrial activity comes we shall be able to face it on an even keel. It is at this time and under these abnormal but in many respects favorable conditions that the treasury at Washington is unable to meet the current expenses of our ordinary public expenditures. The Democrats have ripped open the stable and efficient system of public revenue that we had, and have given us in its place an incoherent and inefficient mess. Economically the country is in fairly sound health, the main question being for us to use our resources prudently and sagaciously. But politically the country is very sick, and will remain so until our public financial business is placed in the hands of men of more experience and broader minds than those who in less than three years have reduced the United States Treasury to the emptiness of Mother Hubbard's cupboard.—Hartford Courant.

TO CAPTURE THE RUSSIAN MARKET

Realizing that the early bagman catches the trade, English business men are already making plans to place Great Britain in the position occupied by Germany before the war in the trade of the Russian Empire. English and German merchants and manufacturers had long been rivals in Russia, and in the contest Germany had far outstripped her competitor. At present the hatred of Germany in Russia is intense and widespread, and the use of the German language in the Czar's dominions is forbidden by law. This feeling of antagonism toward Germany will persist for a long period, and the bulk of Russian foreign trade will go, after the war to the non-Teutonic nations first in the field and best equipped to adapt themselves to the peculiarities of Slavonic business methods.

Putting aside the geographical advantage Germany has over other countries in regard to Russian commercial intercourse, the triumph of the Germans over the British in the Czar's markets was due to German adaptability to existing conditions and to the English conservatism and lack of patience and tact. As business men the Russians are irritating and frequently inexplicable to Britons and Americans. Honest and courteous, they are procrastinators, they demand long credits, and knowing their own markets, are inclined to buy cheap lines of goods. Furthermore, they have found it easier to deal with Germans who speak Russian than with English and American salesmen ignorant of the buyer's native tongue.

That the United States will share with Great Britain much of hte Russian trade morferly the possession of the Germans seems to be inevitable. But American merchants and manufacturers who desire closer relations with the Russian markets must follow in the footsteps of the trade futurists of England and take time by the forelock.

Opinions

A COLD STORAGE BILL

It seems to be easier for a man to do foolish things in this free country than in a country where the liberities of a people are restricted. Congressman Cary of Milwaukee, Wis., has, to our way of thinking, done a most stupid act of introducing a cold storage bill in Congress limiting the time food products may be kept in cold storage. According to provisions in the bill butter may be kept in cold storage three months.

If butter is held in cold storage for any length of time it must not be returned to cold storage again as normal butter, but as adulterated butter, and adulterated butter is subject to a tax of ten cents a pound. This would bar a creamery from holding its butter a week or two and then shipping to some cold storage in the city. A creamery located in the country very often finds the roads impassable and butter must be held in cold storage till teaming becomes possible. If the Cary Cold Storage Bill becomes a law a creamery so holding its butter would be forced to sell it for immediate consumption. This, in many instances, would bring losses to the creamery. Further, a provision of this kind renders no service or protection to the consumer, in whom Mr. Cary may be interested, but would work injury to those manufacturing and dealing in butter.

Cold storage has been the means of equalizing the prices of butter and this has been a benefit to both consumer and producer. Butter is a product that can be stored many months without any particular depreciation as a food. Why Congressman Cary has introduced a bill limiting the length of time butter and other food products may be kept in cold storage and providing other provisions for storing, we cannot understand.

He must know it is of tremendous advantage to all to be able to put in cold storage perishable products, like butter, eggs, etc., when there is an over-production, but from thep rovisions in his bill he has utterly ignored them. Like all cold storage bills that have of late been introduced in Congress, it is silly, stupid, and uncomprehensive.— Hoard's Dairyman.

SING SING DISCUSSES MORALITY

Occasion both to point a moral and to adorn a tale has been found by the editor of the Star of Hope, Sing Sing's often astonishing product of convict journalists, in the recent gift by a woman once known to the public the world over as a shop lifter and pickpocket of $37,000 foro the founding of a temporary home for released prisoners. That such a woman in her old age —the Mrs. Burke, who wasn otorious as Sophie Lyons is now 67—should have as much money as this for philanthropic use oqr any other is a contradiction of accepted notions as to the invariable unprofitableness of crime. Therefore the convict editor imagines himself as asking why the $37,000 was devoted to the establishment of an institution to turn men from ways of pillage and not to that of one to teach them how to attain in those ways the success gained by this veteran follower of them.

He goes further and admits, of. claims that from the material point of view honesty is not always the best policy—that it sometimes is a very costly one, while the opposite policy "oftime pays —in money and pleasure—and does it with no miser's hand." But these are exceptional cases, he insists, when he begins to write his real sentiments.

The thief earns and deserves the contempt felt for all parasites, including those in the insect world hardly to be mentioned in polite company. Crime taints the money and the pleasure it yields and the man who gets them —"taints his very life and takes from it the sweet savor of living." In other words, the editor of The Star of Hope realizes that there is a higher as well as a lower expediency, and that, after all, honesty is the best policy, always.

Sophie Lyons herself came to that realization many years ago and is said to have given away in intelligent beneficence more than she ever gained by her skillful thievery. Yet even her case is not quite simple for the commenting moralist. The fortune from which her reparation to society has been made came from wise investments of nefarious gains, and whether what she has now is honest money or not is a question which, in spite of the fact that for many years she has done no wrong, might be argued at considerable length by anybody who chose to do so.—N. # EASTER COMES ON APRIL 23RD

With the lateness of Easter Sunday this year, the season of Lent also falls upon a later period than usual. Lent begins on Ash Wednesday, March 8, and continues until Easter, which this year falls upon April 23. The principal days during the Lenten season are Passion Sunday, April 9, Palm Sunday, April 16, Holy Thursday, April 20; Good Friday, April 21, and Easter.

All days during Lent with the exception of Sundays are known in the Catholic church as fast days of obligation and feasting is not allowed on Mondays, Tuesdays and Saturdays in the week of Ember and Holy week.

The use of fish and meat at the same meal is forbidden by the Catholic church even on Sundays during Lent and all Catholics are required to fast during the season unless otherwise provided. The sick, those who are of weak constitution and the heavy laborer are exempt from fasting during the season and the use of meal at their meals is not restricted. In all churches, when feasible, services are held on Sunday, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Sundays the services must consist of vespers, sermon and benediction; on Wednesdays the rosary, instruction and benediction, and on Fridays, the way of the cross and benediction.

MAN HAD NARROW ESCAPE SATURDAY EVE

An unknown man created a scare among people in the vicinity of the O. & W. Station at Cayuga and Second sts., at 6:30 o'clock Saturday night. In attempting to board a train which was leaving the depot, he slipped and was dragged along in danger at any moment of being caught beneath the wheels. The man's coat fortunately had become caught in the vestibule of the car in such a way as to prevent his falling. A trainman pulled the man aboard.

Some Nautical Facts.

A knot is 6,080 feet long. The distance from New York to Liverpool is 3,004 nautical miles by the northern track and 3,139 by the southern track. The former course is taken by vessels bound for New York, the latter by vessels bound for Liverpool. From Liverpool to New York the distances are respectively 3,089 and 3,109 miles.

In estimating records the points taken on either side are Sandy Hook and Daunt's rock, Queenstown harbor. The first light sighted on the British coast is the Bull, Cow and Calf, Ireland, and on the American coast either Nantucket or Fire island.—New York Globe.

LENTEN SEASON AT P. E. CHURCH

Special Season of Fasting and Prayer Begins Wednesday, With Special Program of Visiting Rectors.

On Wednesday, which is Ash Wednesday in the church calendar, marks the beginning of Lent. This period of forty days between Ash Wednesday and Easter Day is observed as a season of special fasting and prayer by the church. During these forty days Christ's fasting and temptation in the wilderness, and his passion and death are commemorated.

A special program of services for the Lenten season in All Saints' church has been prepared and cards announcing the hours of these services will be distributed in the church. Special visiting preachers have been secured for the evensong service on every Tuesday during Lent. All are cordially invited to attend these services and a hearty welcome will be given to all.

The service card bears the following announcements:

Special Days—March 8th, Ash Wednesday. Strict Fast).

Matins, Litany and penetential office, 10 a. m.; Holy Communion and sermon 10:30 a. m.; evensong and sermon, 7:30 p. m.

March 25th—Annunciation of Blessed Virgin Mary.

Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

April 20th—Maundy Thursday.

Holy Communion, 10 a. m.; Devotion and Meditation, 7:30 p. m.

April 21st—Good Friday.

Matins, litany and pro-anaphora, 10 a. m.; Evensong and sermon, 7:30 p. m.

Sundays—Litany and Holy Communion, every Sunday, 8 a. m.; first Sunday in Lent, fourth Sunday in Lent and Palm Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

Matins— Second, third and fifth Sundays in Lent 10:30 a. m.

Evensong—every Sunday, 5 p. m.

Other days — Tuesdays, evening prayer and sermon, special preachers, 7:30 p .m.

Wednesdays—Litany and supplications, 10 a. m.

Thursdays —Holy Communion, 10 a. m. Fridays, evening prayer and sermon, especially for children, 4:30 p. m.

Services for Easter Day—April 23d, Holy Communion, sunrise service, 6:30 a. m.; children's eucharist and sermon, 10:30 a. m.; choral evensong and sermon, 5 p. m.

SENECA HILL FARM HAS CHANGED OWNERSHIP

Through the agency of Streeter & Van Sanford, the Bertrand Rumsey form of sixty acres, on the Kingdom road, near Seneca hill, has beens old to Mr. Rusha, an enterprising farmer of the same section. The consideration remains confidential, but it is understood a fair price was secured by the dealers. Immediate possession will be given by the former owner.

UTICA JURY DISAGREED IN TRIAL OF MILKMEN

Utica — The jury trying Simon Isaac, Frank Liberman, Meyer Goldstein and Henry F. Ineberg, all of New York, on a charge of larceny of $17,000 work of milk from producers, disagreed Saturday after being closeted for 24 hours and was discharged. The jury stood 8 to 4 for conviction. The men were released on $4,000 bail for later trial.

FORMER RESIDENT OF MEXICO DIES IN UTICA

Utica—Mrs. Alexander W. Sweezey died at her home in this city yesterday. Her maiden name was Andrews and she was born in Mexico, N. Y., in 1850. Her husband was at one time master mechanic on the M. & M. railroad, and for a time they resided in Herkimer. She is survived by the husband and four sons, one sister and one brother.

MRS. ATWOOD ENTERTAINED CHURCH CIRCLE NO. 5

The Kauri Gum Diggings.

Kauri gum, found underground in New Zealand and dug to the amount of a million and a half pounds yearly, is used for furniture polishes and varnishes, and most of it is exported to America. The industry of digging it is unlike any other in the world. A kauri forest is a beautiful sight, but kauri gum country is treeless, barren and desolate, even and swampy very often, with singularly heavy, clotty soil, out of which the gum formed on kauri pines of ancient and long vanished forests is dug or speared. There are whole stretches of this treeless kauri country with nothing but a little scrub and fern growing on it.

AUTO CLUB GETS SOME BOOSTING

New Car Owners Ready to Cast Their Lot With Organization Whose Purpose Is Wholesome.

When Mr. R. L. McCully, president of the Automobile Club returns from New York city he will make public the matured plans for the coming mass meeting of knights of the road, to be held at the Citizens Club early in the present month. Since Friday night's meeting of the club, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, a number of interesting developments have occurred to convince the officers that never in the historyof Fulton did greater need exist for renewed activity in the ranks of the autoists than during the coming season.

Before leaving for New York Mr. McCully informed this newspaper that last Friday night's meeting of the Automobile Club was the most gratifying one in his memory, as it brought out so many new owners of cars who exinced as much interest in the proceedings as the old members of the club.

Another matter most gratifying to President McCully was the trip he made with Secretary Hollenga, last Friday, into South Hannibal and other points, in the interest of a good roads movement and the extension of a jitney bus line. Everywhere the men were greeted with enthusiasms, returning to the city in the belief that in reality there are no obstacles to be placed in the path of improved trade conditions between the people of this city and the members of the community who live beyond the city limits.

MACCABEE BASEBALL FANS BECOME ACTIVE

Unless the unforseen occurs, the Maccabees will have ab aseball team this year that may give some hard rubs to teams throughout Central New York. Plans are now afoot to hold a benefit performance at the Happy Hour for the purpose of raising funds to defray the expense of equipping the team. Messrs. George Snow, D. B. Reed, W. S. Gardner and LeRoy Lewis comprise the committee to arrange for the benefit.

SPORTING NOTES

"Iron Neck" Mott will meet the "Masked Marvel" of Buffalo in a wrestling match tonight at Church's hall. The match will be under the direction of the Independent A. C.

"Young" Tunk and Fred Renous, of Minetto, will stage the semi-final bout. Two other preliminaries are scheduled.

FULTON LIGHT, HEAT & POWER CO.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company will be held at Room No. 1943, 42 Broadway, in the City of New York on Thursday, the sixteenth day of March, 1916, at three o'clock, p. m., for the following purposes: to see if the stockholders will increase the number of directors of the company from eleven to thirteen; for the election of directors; to see if the stockholders will change the face value of the shares of stock and fix same at ten dollars each; for the purpose of ratifying and confirming the acts of the directors and officers of the company in the conduct of its business to date, as well as such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

M. J. WARNER, President.
T. C. CLARK, Secretary.

Pete says:

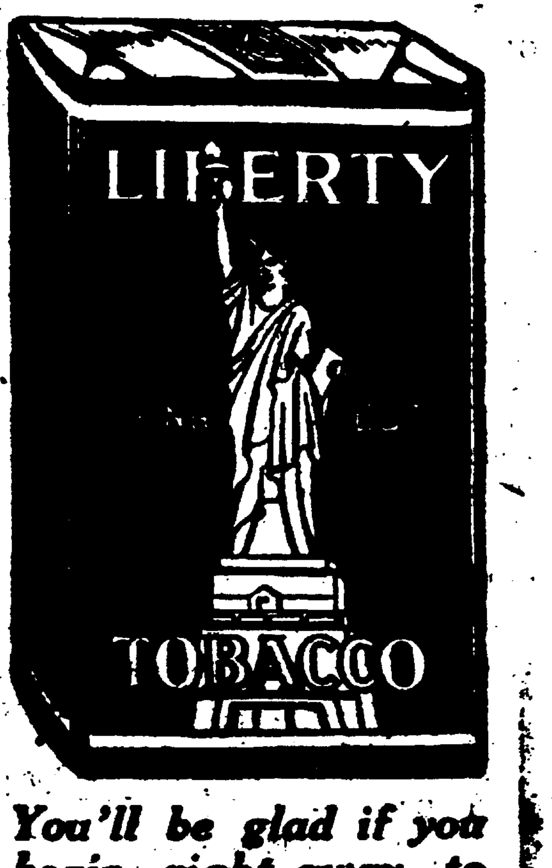
"Tobacco's tobacco, I s'pose, an' there must be a 'raft of fellers that likes to chew an' smoke the kind that tastes like a' infants' an' invalids' breakfast food.

"An' a lot more marks must enjoy diggin' tobacco stems from between their teeth or tampin' 'em down in their pipes an' tryin' to make 'em burn.

"They're welcome—let 'em go as far as they like. But for me, as old Patrick Henry said, 'Gimme LIBERTY!'"

Live wires whose jobs keep them on the jump all day want a tobacco with "insides" to it—something with body and fullness and relish. They get it in LIBERTY Long Cut. It's all choice, selected leaf, aged from three to five years to ripen and sweeten and grow fragrant and tasty.

LIBERTY is all real-thing, meaty, smoking-and-chewing goods, too—no loose, hard stems—no short, broken leaves—just real QUALITY clear through.



You'll be glad if you begin, right away, to smoke and chew LIBERTY. It's the BEST money's worth your nickel can buy.

Hughes Ready to Run; Nomination Must Be Made Unanimous

New York—With the Presidential campaign started on its way this week, with primary elections in Indiana the interesting fact has become known that probably half of New York State's delegates to the National Convention will vote for Justice Hughes on the first ballot.

It may be definitely stated that this will be the programme unless meanwhile Justice Hughes unequivocally takes himself out of the race. It may be stated also that many of the leading Republicans who are hoping for his nomination believe that Justice Hughes has made up his mind to accept the honor if it comes to him in the right way. The "right way," it is asserted, means that the nomination must come to Mr. Hughes as a practically unanimous party call.

From a man who has always been looked upon as one of Justice Hughes' closest political and personal friends, it was learned yesterday that Mr. Hughes has given no interviews on the subject, has not discussed the Presidency for quotation with any one and has not opened his mind freely to a single person outside of his family.

The opinion of most of the politicians is, however, that he intends to be the nominee if the party requests him. His attitude in 1912 can hardly be taken as a criterion of what he might be expected to do in 1916. Four years ago the Republican party was headed for an inevitable split. Nomination that year presumably meant defeat. This year conditions will be vastly different.

HEALTH DEPT. IS VINDICATED

Dr. Biggs Wins Prediction Made Year Ago That 2500 Baby Lives Would Be Saved in Year.

Albany—With a view of informing the public what has been done and how appropriations were expended during the last fiscal year, Commissioner Hermann M. Biggs of the State Department of Health is mailing to members of the legislature, mayors of cities, villages presidents, health officers and others interested, a pamphlet summarizing the work of the Department from October 1st, 1914, to September 30th, 1915. The annual report to the Governor, which covers the calendar year instead of the fiscal year, will be filled within a few days.

Particular attention is called to the reduction in the death rate from 15.8 in 1913 to 15.1 in 1915, and also to the marked reduction in the fant death rate from 120 in 1913 to 101 in 1915.

"Considerable skepticism was expressed a year and a half ago," says Commissioner Biggs, "when the department made the promise to save twenty-five thousand lives in New York state outside of New York city within five years if proper support was given to the work of the Department by the Governor and the legislature. The death rate is computed on so many death per thousand population, and the reduction from 15.8 to 15.1 indicates a saving of about 4,000 lives.

"The death rate for 1915 would undoubtedly have been lower had it not been for the immigration from this state of a large number of men at the early middle period of life, when the death rate is exceedingly low. It may be conservatively estimated that as a result of the European war not less than 50,00 persons outside of New York city left New York state. t is to be confidently expected that a further reduction in the death rate will be secured in the coming years."

The department's statement summarizes the work of the different divisions. The increase in the amount of mail received is noted—87,000 pieces in 1913, and 152,000 in 1915. The shipments from the department increased from 196,000 in 1913 to 1913 to 477,000 in 1915.

Summarizing the work performed by the sanitary supervisors, it is noted that there were 4,036 interviews with local health officers and 1,981 with the registrars; a total of 406 outbreaks of communicable diseases were investigated and placed under control; 558 nuisances were abated and 676 lectures given.

The division of child hygiene conducted 53 infant welfare campaigns, organized 250 Little Mothers' leagues sent child welfare exhibits to 64 fairs, distributed over 78,000 baby books to mothers when their children were born, and established 22 new infant welfare stations.

A notable increase in the work of the division of cold storage inspection is noted. In 1913, with ten inspectors, 3,321 inspections were made. In 1915, with eight inspectors, a total of 17,660 inspections were made in warehouse and retail establishments. Fines collected increased from $425 in 1913 to $4430 in 1915. The prosecutions jumped 19 to 256 and convictions from 5 to 137 in the same period.

In the division of laboratories and research, as compare dwith 1913, an increase of over 400 per cent in the number of examinations of diagnostic specimens and a 50 per cent increase in the distribution of curative antitoxin is noted. The fact that the scientific staff of this division worked 21 per cent overtime, and the regular employees of the laboratory 16 per cent overtime, without extra compensation, is also noted.

Commissioner Biggs will be glad to mail a copy of the pamphlet to any one interested in knowing khat the department has been doing during the past year.

THE VALUE OF CONSISTENCY

Senator Lodge and Senator Sterling have clearly and forcefully stated reasons why this country shoulld refuse assent to the German contention that armed merchant ships must be regarded as ships of war, to be sunk without warning by submarines at sea. and to be denied in neutral ports the ordinary privileges of traders.

The position taken by the senator from Massachusetts and his colleague from South Dakota rests upon two broad grounds. The first relates to the undisputed rules and customs of international law, which we are asked to set aside at the behest of a government which cannot conduct naval warfare according to established methods, and therefore demands a special code entirely in its own favor. The second ground is of moore recent origin and therefore more vital to the present discussion. It is the argument that, having formally announced ourselves at the beginning of the war as tolerating the arming of merchant ships, we cannot modify or alter that attitude without becoming the partisan of one group of belligerents as against another.

There can be no dispute as to what international law has prescribed concerning the arming of merchant ships. The idea that all laws, all customs and all traditions of sea warfare must be swept aside merely because the submarine is a new and vulnerable agency of offense is one we can accept only at our own peril We may not unreasonably conceive that the United States as a belligerent may some day seek from neutral powers the same consideration for ships flying its flag and equipped with guns solely for defense which is now sought from us.

And, in a still broader sense, we might suffer from the precedent we should establish by a reversal of attitude during the progress of a war. It is now worth a great deal to our national sense of self-respect; it may be worth a great deal to our security in some future crisis to be able to show that our policy as a neutral has been unwavering and consistent. No neutrality proclamation or act hereafter affecting the United States as a belligerent could be relied upon by us, if we knew that the government responsible for it could at any moment reserve or modify it on the strength of what we ourselves had done in reversing the policy laid down in Mr. Lansing's note of September 19, 1914.—Brooklyn Eagle.

NOTABLE GAINS NOTED IN TRADE AND COMMERCE

Dun's Review says:

All speculative markets have under gone reaction, but commercial enterprise moves steadily forward, adding to the notable gains previously recorded. Influences that affect stocks. grain and cotton fail to alter the even course of money and exchange, nor is the solid foundation of business confidence shaken. Rapidly rising prices of materials and products, however, cause increasing uncertainty, though in most cases stimulating rather than curtailing consumption. Many buyers, anticipating continued advances, are prompted to provide for future requirements at current levels, yet experience greater difficulty in further extending commitments. Manufacturers, already covered for months to come and in instances as far ahead as 1917, are in an independent position and, instead of seeking new contracts, endeavor to work orders off their books and thus relieve the pressure upon productive forces. But at a time when capacity operations are essential to meet the insistent requests for quick deliveries, some mills and factories are hampered by a shortage of materials, a growing scarcity of skilled hands, and by labor troubles that are annoying, if not serious. Notwithstanding claims of improved conditions, transporting facilities continue inadequate and the freight congestion adds to the burdens of producers and consumers alike, besides accelerating the rise in commodities.

LaTouche Hancock in The New York Sun Says of the Best Thanks as Follows:

If you can't be thankful for much,
Be thankful for what you've got,
For these little thanks are a crutch
To help on your own poor lot.
But you'll feel most thankful of all,
If you can honestly say
That you've helped on somebody else
In a quiet, unselfish way.

Bowser Killed It

Why Woman Suffrage Was Defeated In His Town

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

From the very first Mrs. Bowser had been champion of woman suffrage. She has attended very few public meetings in behalf of the cause; she has not shouted on the street corners; she has not allowed her name to appear in the public prints; she has conducted what may be called a solemn campaign, but one that left no doubt that she was on the right side of the fence.

Mr. Bowser, on the contrary, until very recently has conducted no campaign at all. He has been almost indifferent to the great question. On occasions he would be a champion of the suffragettes; on others he would remark that women had been several thousand years without the right to vote and it wouldn't hurt them any to wait several thousand years longer.

Last fall, when the women of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New York began their vigorous campaigns and were riding about in automobiles bedecked with flags or making eloquent appeals on street cars Mr. Bowser became excited. He decided within an hour's time that the women of America should vote. He called man a tyrant for keeping his foot on her neck so long. He would be one to give that tyrant something to sit up and think over. He found more than fifty reasons why every woman in the land should wash the breakfast dishes, put on her hat and walk down to the polls and cast a vote for a mighty change in man's way of running things.

With Mr. Bowser, as we all know, to think is to act. Mr. Bowser thought and he acted. In going home he came across a corner meeting of suffragettes. A woman who was a fair speaker was making an appeal to a score or more of Eskimos, Laplanders and Turks who had just landed and hadn't yet time to learn the English language. They stood around gazing at her blankly and were wondering if she was telling them to go back home and resume their fishing or advising them to pitch in and get their fair share of the political graft that was to be divided up on every corner, when one of the leaders of the movement approached Mr. Bowser and said:

"You are an intelligent man, sir, and I believe you have our cause at heart."

"You are right, ma'am," he replied as he raised his hat.

"I felt that I was, and perhaps you would do us a great favor. When the lady is through with her remarks will you take her place and make a stirring appeal to this audience? Let them see that you are with us. Let them understand that a part of the men favor us and are willing to do all they can. Providence will bless you if you do."

Mr. Bowser was taken off his feet by the request, but we know him to be a man who will call a bluff every time. Some Persians, Egyptians and Chinese came up just then, and he hesitated for a moment, and then the speakeress got out of breath and cut her speech short, and he took her place. What he said to the crowd in the next ten minutes may have convinced them that every woman in America, including maids and cooks, should have the right to vote twice on election day and maybe it did not. He was cheered when he came to the end of his remarks. Most of the audience had been in America for two hours and had learned that one of our customs was to cheer a man who shot off his mouth in public.

Mr. Bowser reached home a new man, and as soon as dinner was over he said to Mrs. Bowser:

"I have won your cause for you. Woman suffrage will win at the polls in November by a majority of millions."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

And he told her about the meeting on the corner—the Eskimos, the Laplanders, the Turks, the Egyptians and the Chinese.

He told of his fervid speech and the way they absorbed it. He told her of how the welkin rang with cheers as he stepped off the soap box, and he thought he saw a shade of disappointment come to her face instead of one of eagerness and delight as she got ready to ask:

"Mr. Bowser, you know I am deeply interested in this thing. I should have liked to have heard your remarks. But, as I was not there, will you please repeat them as far as you can remember?"

"They were impromptu, Mrs. Bowser, as all my best speeches are," he answered as he drew himself up with great dignity. "However, I think I can give you a pretty good idea of that thrilling little speech. I began with my eyes fastened upon a Laplander and let them wander to an Eskimo and then to a Turk as I said:

"'Fellow countrymen, we all have wives and daughters and mothers and sisters. The man who disputes this fact is a liar and a scoundrel. They are women. They belong to the sex which Herod, Cicero, Plato and numerous other old back numbers regarded as no more account than the tails of their oxen. They cuffed them; they beat them; they made slaves of them. In their days a wife dared not sit in the presence of her husband unless she had a special invitation and a card of admission to pass her in. Her place was in the woodshed.'

"Here I paused to get my breath," said Mr. Bowser to Mrs. Bowser, "and I realized that I had made a good start, so I flourished my arms and went on:

"'What is a woman? Who is a woman? Is she a slave or an angel? Was she born brainless, as some vile scoundrels contend, or was she born with forty times the good sense of any man among us? Because we men have got the power in our hands shall we drag her around by the hair of the head, slap her face and larrup her with the rawhide because she forgets to feed the pigs? No, never! The man who wants to keep woman down deserves to be run over by a saw log and flattened out. She must not be driven out of the house to take her meals in the hencoop; she must not be tossed an old coffee sack to make a Sunday dress out of; she must not be driven with blows and curses out to milk the calves amid a howling blizzard. The man who says she must has got to face me after this meeting is over!'

"Here," explained Mr. Bowser, "I flung up my right arm and then my left, and, working up a fierce look, I bestowed it on about twenty men and they cringed and backed away, and most of the women cheered—that is, I think they cheered. They made some kind of a noise, anyhow. Don't you like it, Mrs. Bowser, as far as I have told you?"

"Go on," she replied.

"Then I said that every man who would not vote to give the women the ballot was a pirate of the deepest dye and should be hung to a limb with a log chain. I advised your sex if they could not get their rights otherwise to poison their husbands, sons and brothers off and to burn every town, village and city in the land. I told them to arm themselves with butcher knives and revolvers and parade the streets. I told them to upset every court in the land. I told them to bayonet every politician on sight. I told them to march through every legislature in session and to spill barrels of blood if it became necessary. You can bet your last dollar, Mrs. Bowser, that what I said will echo from Maine to Texas, and you can consider your cause as won. Aren't you proud of your champion?"

It was half a minute before Mrs. Bowser answered. Then she said:

"Mr. Bowser, your intentions were good, but I wish you hadn't spoken on this occasion."

"What! What! You are a suffragette, and yet you do not want me to help your cause along!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser.

"But do you think you helped it?"

"Do I think? Why, woman, if that speech don't win your victory you will never win one! You ought to have seen the faces of those Eskimos and Laplanders while I was talking. They had their eyes open! They began to see their wives in a new light; they began to recognize them as human beings instead of worms of the dust. By John, but in this election in four states your victory will be one to shake the whole country, and it will be because of my speech more than for any other reason! Do not doubt it!"

Mrs. Bowser had no more to say, but she did doubt it. After a few days had passed Mr. Bowser began to doubt it himself. The damage or benefit had been done, however, and he must wait until the night of the election to find out which it was. He would have recalled the matter again and again, but Mrs. Bowser fought shy of it.

The election day came, and neither mentioned its arrival. Mr. Bowser quietly went out and cast his vote, and Mrs. Bowser pursued her usual duties. Night came, and nothing had been said. Every hour or two after the polls had closed and fate hung trembling in the balance Mr. Bowser slipped out of the house and bought a daily paper, but he said nothing to Mrs. Bowser about the returns from the different states. It was near midnight when he slipped out for the last time, and then he came back with the paper in his hand and a smile on his face, and he almost shouted out:

"I forgot my glasses and can't see very well, but as near as I can make out we have won, as I said we would win, by millions. Let us give three cheers, Mrs. Bowser."

She took the paper and read the scare heads. She didn't cheer. She quietly announced that woman suffrage had been defeated wherever it was voted on.

"And I did it," wailed Mr. Bowser as he sank down in his chair.

"You always do things," was the calm reply. And then the incident was closed for the next five years.

A Doll's House

By ELINOR MARSH

Train robberies, which had quieted down during the early part of 19—, broke out with renewed vigor in the autumn of that year. One of these attacks was not only well planned, so far as getting treasure was concerned, but in getting away with it.

Jim Charnley was the leader of the band that made the attack and chose the field of enterprise by personally investigating different points on the railroad he proposed to operate on. He discovered a cave concealed by thick undergrowth where a party of men might hide. So far as he could learn, no one knew of it. He proposed to rob a train as it passed within a few hundred yards of this cave. A part of the force would make off on horseback while another part with the plunder hid in the cave. A posse would follow those who had ridden away while the men in the cave waited till the excitement had died out and then make off.

The robbery was eminently successful. The train was stopped and the plunder taken from the express car. The robbers made off through a wood, dropping the treasure into the hands of four men who made their way to the cave unseen. Those who had ridden away were followed but not captured.

A surprise awaited those who had gone to the cave, among whom was Jim Charnley, the leader of the gang. He had not been to the cave since he had discovered it several weeks before. On entering it he saw a doll in a little bed and several articles of doll furniture beside it.

The presence of this inanimate combination of china and sawdust caused a commotion on the part of the robbers. Some of them, fearing that their presence there might be discovered, were for moving at once. But Charnley argued that the region of the robbery would be filled with persons moved by curiosity, if nothing more, and that any move for the present would be dangerous. If the child came to play in the cave she could be taken in and held from giving information of their presence.

Little Margy Bickford, who lived on the other side of the rise from the mouth of the cave, was the child who had made the place a playhouse. On the afternoon of the robbery she started to go there to get her doll and bring it home. Coming to the rise, she passed over the roof of the cave, where there was a break in the rock that formed it, not sufficient to let in light, but through which sound might pass. The robbers had closed up the mouth of the cave and supposed that they might talk with freedom. At the time Margy was passing over the break in the roof they were discussing whether they should get out or remain where they were. The question was a matter of life or death with them, and their arguments were by no means subdued. Margy, hearing voices in the bowels of the earth beneath her, turned and ran back home as fast as her little legs would carry her. Her mother, seeing that the child had been frightened, questioned her and was told that some men were in her playhouse and would take her dolly away with them.

Mrs. Bickford had heard of the train robbery, and it was not long before she began to suspect the truth concerning the voices her daughter had heard in the cave. She went at once to a neighbor and reported the case. Unfortunately most of the men thereabout had gone off after the robbers, who had ridden away, and not enough men could be got together to warrant attacking an unknown number of desperadoes ensconced in a cave, so nothing was done except to station a boy of sixteen to watch the hiding place.

Charnley decided to remain where the robbers were only till midnight, then to walk to the nearest station two miles distant and board a train that would stop there at a few minutes after 1 o'clock.

Billy Simpson, who was on watch, saw them leave the cave. He followed them to the station, near which they waited till they heard the train coming, and then went up on to the platform. Billy went to the rear car unseen by them and got aboard at the same time they did. There were four men in the gang, but they took separate seats. They paid the conductor their fare, and he passed on to the rear car, where Billy informed him as to the nature of the passengers who had just got on the train.

The conductor wrote a telegram, which he gave to Billy, instructing him to get off at the next station, five miles distant, and send it, believing that his own motions would be watched by the robbers. On reaching the station Billy stepped off on the dark side of the car unseen, and the train went on. The agent was in bed, but Billy routed him out, and the telegram was sent to a sizable town ten miles distant.

Meanwhile the conductor directed the engineer to slack speed that sufficient time might be given for preparation for a capture.

But few men could be got together in so short a time, and they were disguised, having boarded the train and went on with it. The robbers began to leave it one by one, thinking they were unsuspected. This rendered their capture easy, and they were all seized without a fight.

Little Margy, who had saved [illegible], was adopted by the express company. Billy was given a handsome reward and later a position on the railroad.

Woman's World

An American Poetess Talks About Her Special Art.

JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY

Mrs. Lionel Marks, or Josephine Preston Peabody, to call her by the name which she has made famous, is a poet whose tendency has always been toward democracy. From "The Singing Leaves," her first book of lyrics, to "The Piper," the dramatic poem which received the Stratford on Avon prize in 1910, and "The Wolf of Gubbio," the poetic representation of events in St. Francis' life in her latest published book, she has chosen for her theme not fantastic and rare aspects of nature nor the new answers of her own emotions, but things that are common to all normal mankind, such as love and religion. Also without seeming to preach she is always expressing her love for liberty, equality and fraternity, and, although she never dwells upon the overworked term she is as devoted an adherent of the brotherhood of man as was William Morris.

"Certainly, poetry is steadily growing more democratic," said Mrs. Marks recently. "More people are writing poetry today than fifty years ago, and the appreciation of poetry is more general. Most poets of genuine calling are writing now with the world in mind as an audience, not merely for the entertainment of a little literary cult.

"But I do not think that the vers libre fad has any connection with this tendency or with the development of poetry at all. Indeed, I do not think that the cult is growing. We hear more of it in the United States than we did a year or two ago, but that is chiefly because London and Paris have outworn its novelty, so the vers libristes concentrate their energies on Chicago and New York.

"You see," said Mrs. Marks, "the commonest thing there is—I may say the most democratic thing—is the rhythm of the heartbeat. A true poet cannot ignore this. At the greatest times in his life, when he is filled with joy or despair or when he has a sense of portent, man is aware of his heart, of its beat, of its recurrent tick-tick. He is aware of the rhythm of life. When we are dying perhaps the only sense that remains with us is the sense of rhythm—the feeling that the grains of sand are running, running, running out.

"The pulse beat is a tremendous thing. It is the basis of all that men have in common. All life is locked up in its regularly recurrent rhythm. And it is that rhythm that appears in our love songs, our war songs, in all the poetry of the human cycle from lullabies to funeral chants. In the great moments of life men feel that they must be sharing, that they must have something in common with other men, and so their emotions crystallize into the ritual of rhythm, which is the most democratic thing that there is."

Blouse Features.

At this time of year there is not so apt to be any radical change in the lines of the new blouses, but many details of trimming and cut make a blouse a delightful as well as a difficult article of apparel to choose in a shop. There is a dovetail front that is odd, points overlapping on each side of the blouse and buttoning with large pearl buttons. Wide stripes two and three inches wide make another kind of blouse attractive. The cape collar of silk or satin tops blouses of georgette crepe. One white blouse has a very realistic strap and buckle arrangement embroidered on the blouse in black silk.

Handkerchiefs Are Gay.

It is a question whether handkerchiefs could be much gayer than they are at present. No color of the spectrum has been neglected. Indeed, one handkerchief combines all the colors of the rainbow in its border and is almost as evanescent as the rainbow itself. Pussy willow taffeta, crepe de chine, chiffon tissues and the standby, linen, are all used for the fashionable handkerchief. There are no lace edges to speak of, but much hand embroidery, colored bindings and fancy hemstitching.

A WATTEAU MODEL.

A Pretty Spring Bonnet Reminiscent of Other Days.

This milan straw is scrapped with wide blue velvet ribbon, a flat shape with a bunch of little pink flowers massed in the back. The effect is charming for youth and a grateful variation from the banked high designs.

FOR JUVENILES

Millinery Jottings.

Buttons have entered the realm of millinery and are used on sports hats, and by this are meant real buttons, buttons used for fastening purposes.

Hatpins, too, in either pearl, brass or nickel add an ornamental touch to many a hat for spring.

Ostrich novelties effectively change an ordinary hat into one of unusual effectiveness. Ving shaped are some of these ostrich novelties, which may be bent into any desired shape, for the quill is easily persuaded to assume any shape or position.

Many straw ornaments are used on the Paris creations, and most of them are formed of the modish shiny straw.

Appliques of fruit are most popular and all the small berries are to be had as well as the larger fruits. Quite as unusual are the flowers that are seen in profusion, and after a period when flowers were not considered smart we find that the designers have turned out more beautiful and original models than have ever been seen before.

Mint Sauce.

Pick all the leaves from a large mint stalk and mince as fine as possible. Place in a large bowl with six tablespoonfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a pint of vinegar, one-half pint of cold water and one tablespoonful of salt.

Mix thoroughly with a wooden spoon; then place in a large bottle, cover tightly; shake the bottle always before using.

Instead of the ordinary plebeian "apple sauce" the addition of mint turns it into a highly tempting dessert.

Variety The Spice Of Life

No one problem is daily more vexatious than "What shall we have to eat?" Not only once but three times a day does the same plaint arise. Most families are in a peculiar rut as to their eating and manner of cooking. For instance, in one family there is a too frequent appearance of pot roast, mashed potatoes and brown gravy. Another family will not tolerate anything but broiled meat and runs up expensive bills for chops and steaks. A third family never has soup, and still another has every dessert a pudding.

Is it not possible and easy also to vary more greatly our American menus? Is not this just the time of year to install some new methods of cooking the old familiar dishes? Why must rice always be used as a cereal or as a basis for tasteless rice pudding? Other countries use it with meat, with a spiced gravy, and make it the basis of a meal either as a curry or pilaf.

Is it not possible to take the piece of chuck and cook it in some other way than as the unending pot roast? It could be seasoned with sage or capers stuffed with dressing and served with a tomato instead of a brown sauce. In the matter of soups, many of us go on in the same unvarying way of vegetable bouillon and tomato bisque. How about all the other purees, green dried peas, yellow split peas, onions, carrots? How about the many kinds of soups with balls, with noodles or spaetzle? There is not a foreign nation but excels us in the variety of its soups. So, too, with potatoes. Why always the same mashed, boiled or creamed? Under the hands of a competent cook they become tasteful, varied and really interesting. Cheese, brown stock, lemon juice, all these can be added to potatoes, and there is even a book on 101 different kinds of potatoes.

No one thing will make for greater economy in our cooking than greater variety. Instead of the steak that we think must always be broiled we can use a "skirt steak," or flank, and have a delicious casserole dish at half the price. Instead of the soup that uses expensive vegetables we can have a simple stock or puree for less money. Instead of a dessert needing three eggs or more we can create substitutes which taste and look just as attractive, but in which only a single egg or none is used. Variety in cooking, new dishes, new flavors—these will help the housewife set a better table at less money.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

A New Frock to Lure Femininity.

Pongee of beautiful, thick, soft, crepy quality is used for this costume. The skirt is shirred about the hips, and the waist is trimmed with braid loops and fancy buttons.

Some of the most attractive of the spring frocks are shown in the new pongees, which are beautiful, soft, thick and crepy in quality. Here is a design developed in a deep ivory tone that is almost yellow. The frock has an underblouse of chiffon in the same shade and is trimmed with silk buttons and loops. The skirt is a two-piece affair with slightly raised waistline. It is shirred about the hips and closes at the left side-front. With the costume comes a removable jumper, which may be of pongee or taffeta. Made all in the same material, however, the dress requires 5¼ yards 44-inch pongee.

Today's home dressmaking has particularly to do with the cutting of the dress, because much of the success of the design depends upon this feature. Study the guide carefully and note how the front and back gores of the skirt are laid on the lengthwise fold of the pongee. Next come the back of the jumper (I) and the back of the underblouse (B). The peplum follows, being laid on a lengthwise thread, with the collar sections to the right. These, however, are laid on a lengthwise fold. The belt and band, while not laid directly on the fold of the pongee rest very near the edge. The piecings for both gores of the skirt are laid on the selvage edge, and following the piecing to the right of the back gore are the jumper front, underblouse, front and sleeve, all on a lengthwise thread of material.

For the V-shaped neck, if this outline is chosen for the underblouse, cut out the neck edge of underbody front on small "o" perforations, after turning the hem. Small "o" perforations are also provided to indicate the method of shortening the sleeves and skirt.

The smart silks in which regular or irregular stripes are repeated on a ground of natural color silk tone are also very desirable for these costumes.

How to Recharge Your Battery

Did it ever occur to you that rest is an antidote for more things than every day physical weariness? It is one of the weapons with which a man or woman may fight emotional strains of any kind. And the reason is an extremely simple one. Let us resort to the faithful old device of a diagram.

In the center of the chart suppose we put the word "energy." That is the thing that we have to work with in this life. Now on one side let's write a list of our expenditures—all the things which call for an outlay of energy. In this list is brain work, physical or manual work, emotion and diversion. These are the things that we spend our store of energy for. Every day we spend ourselves either physically, or mentally, or emotionally, or in some manner which may be a combination of any of them and which constitutes our diversions.

So much for the expense account. What shall we put in a list on the other side of the column that we might call income? How, in other words, do we accumulate energy?

Here are some of the ways: "Food," of course, and then "rest," "good air" and some of the other lesser ways which are productive of a renewed sense of energy, such as good grooming and inspiring associations.

And it is pretty true that you may add to your bank account and thus offset any sort of an expenditure with any sort of an income. That is, if we are working hard and playing hard we need a little more fuel in the way of food to keep the supply of energy up to the standard. And so, too, a little added rest will offset not only a physical, but an emotional strain.

Sometimes sleep is a better antidote for suffering than diversion, because diversion, after all, calls for an expenditure of energy, while suffering or an emotional strain of any sort has already taken a pretty full toll of the supply on hand.

Study the chart, then, and learn not only to spend wisely of the things that represent our outlay, but learn, too, to collect generously from those common sources of supply which are open to every one—food, fresh air and rest.

The Planet Mars.

Earth's astronomers know nothing of Mars beyond the fact that if the planet is of a formation more recent than the formation of the terrestrial globe its evolutions must have been more rapid, because it is so small. Mars is an older world than the earth—a world that represents the intermediate state between that of the earth and that of the moon. The phenomena on Mars now under the observation of earth's astronomers are the last manifestations of a dying life. Slowly, very slowly, time is doing its work. Mars is dying of cold, the anesthetic that benumbs the worlds and steeps them in the sleep in which they die.—Exchange.

"Uses it to guide his wandering bark, does he?" asked the irresponsible humorist.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Rarely chic and practical is this costume for a young girl. The skirt is formed of plaid silk, trimmed with plain faille to correspond with the fitted waist. Vest, with turn-down collar and cuffs are of white faille. In medium size the costume requires 3 1-2 yards 36-inch plaid and 2 1-3 yards 40-inch faille.

THIS is to tell the People, that Goodrich "BAREFOOT-RUBBER" Value lies not in its COLOR but in its composition.

It lies in the especially devised Texture, Flexibility, Cling-quality, Stretch, Lightness and Resilience of that "Barefoot Rubber" which, through years of Research, WE developed to match the marvellous Flexibility, Resilience and Power-conservation of our two-layer-Cord "Silvertown" Tires.

Color alone would have been little help in making "Silvertown" Treads stand-up in the tremendous ENDURANCE Tests which the 100-Mile-per-hour-Races of 1915 provided.

And Color alone,—Black, White, Red, or Gray—can do little for the Consumer who buys a "Me-too" Black-Tread Tire, of imitated make, on the assumption that all Black-Tread Tires are likely to be made of same materials.

THE marvellous "Barefoot Rubber" now used in Goodrich FABRIC Tires (as well as in Goodrich "Silvertowns") is black only because we elected that color, primarily for distinction and association with our SILVERTOWN CORD Tires.

When, therefore, the usual crop of "flattering" Imitations sprouts upon the Market DON'T assume that OTHER Black-Tread Tires have in them the "BAREFOOT-RUBBER" which made the enormous ENDURANCE of Silvertown Cord Tires possible in the 90 to 103 Mile-per-hour Races of 1914-15.

No Tires on the Market, Size for Size, and Type for Type, are LARGER than Goodrich, and none more generously good, at any price.

TROOPS EAGER TO SPEND THEIR CASH

So much has been said about the way the soldiers are robbed by hucksters who manage to circulate just behind the front and offer a miscellany of goods for sale that the French chamber of deputies has sent commissaires to the front to investigate the question. These hucksters are generally residents in the military zone and obtain permission to carry on a trade in objects ranging from a piece of soap to an anthology of French poets as a recompense for the losses they have suffered.

A newspaper man who had left the army from illness determined to become a huckster for a day to see what there was in the business. His experiment seems to show that at the bottom the fault, if it exists, is due as much to the inherent desire felt by human nature to buy something when the opportunity has not occurred for some time.

About 6:30 one morning he laid out his little stock on the steps of a church in a little village of some thirty houses, four or five of which were still intact. To his right he placed the soaps, of many colors, and the perfumes to the left, letter paper, collections of songs, and in the middle knitted goods, socks, etc., under which were hidden a few bottles—not bottles containing alcohol (the risk of prison would have been too great), but of light drinks of legal degree of spirit.

Pay Ten Times the Price.

"How much is the mirror?" asked the first customer.

"One franc (20 cents)."

It was a little mirror sold at 2 cents in Paris, but it was taken at ten times the price without an attempt to bargain.

Ten cents for a glass of light wine about as big as a thimble, yet the bottle was emptied in five minutes. Five cents a sheet of paper with Joffre's portrait. An automobilist paid 8 francs ($1.60) for a bottle of eau de cologne and offered two 5 franc bills. He refused to take change and was delighted with a child's trumpet to make up the remaining 40 cents. He at once began to blow it and his comrades to dance to his music.

For men who had just come back from six days' burial in the trenches to buy sometimes meant civilization and life. The seller was soon cleared of all his goods. What had cost him $10.40 had cleared $65.20, a profit of more than 500 per cent.

Before leaving the village the amateur huckster handed over the $65.20 to the captain of the section to be used to add some delicacies to the men's rations.

The officer smiled and invited the donor to lunch, adding a few words which showed that officers are no more free than men from the desire to buy something. "If you have anything left we will buy it."

REORGANIZING PATENT OFFICE

Commissioner to Act at Once Under Law Just Passed.

Reorganization of the United States patent office working force will be undertaken immediately under a new law passed by congress and just approved by President Wilson. Commissioner of Patents Ewing said that he expects greatly to increase the efficiency of his staff by encouraging competent examiners to remain longer in the government service.

For years the patent office has been regarded as a government training school for patent lawyers who enter private practice at about the time they become valuable to the government. Under the reorganization the number of examiners in the several grades is to be equalized. This will permit quicker promotion from the lower grades and, according to Mr. Ewing, will reduce the number of resignations.

The new law also removes the limitation against the employment of only two women as second assistant examiners. Any number of women may now be appointed. "Women make excellent assistant examiners," said Commissioner Ewing, "and should be appointed whenever opportunity offers."

The Phrase "Mere Man."

In his book, "The Pulse of the World; Fleet Street Memories," Malcolm Stark gives what he believes is the origin of the expression "mere man." A Scottish doctor, he says, wrote as follows:

The earliest use of the phrase known to me is in the shorter catechism, where it is said, "No mere man since the fall is able in this life perfectly to keep the commandments." The phrase caught on in Scotland and was probably brought to England shortly after the union. The only difficulty in the way of this theory is that it allows barely two centuries for the English mind to see the joke.

This last sentence is indeed carrying the war into the enemy's camp.

WOMEN FIGHT MARRIAGE BAN

New York—Feminists of New York are gathering to the colors for another attack upon Board of Education strongholds.

They are advancing under the flag of Mrs. Elizabeth D. Eldredge. In her cause they hope to wrest another victory fo rthe cause of woman in general.

The attack is aimed to bring about repeal of the by-law which forbids the appointment of a married women as a teacher in the public schools unless her husband is so sick he cannot earn a living or unles he has deserted her continuouly for one year.

Two years ago Mrs. Elizabeth Eldredge was Miss Elizabeth Dunning, a young graduate of Barnard College. She took the examinations of the Board of Education to become a teacher of biology, and received the grading of firsct. No position was available for her at that time. Lately she was notified by the board that the appointment that should belong to her, according to her grading, was denied becaue in the meantime she had gotten married.

[illegible] IN AERIAL PATROL

Scouts Along Coast to Be Used In Peace and In War.

PART OF DEFENSE SCHEME.

Seaplanes Would Protect Human Life and Remove Menaces to Shipping in Days of Peace—In War They Would Discover Approaching Enemy and Report.

The aerial coast patrol proposed by the Aero Club of America, a plan intrusted to Rear Admiral R. E. Peary, as its originator, to develop and carry to accomplishment, proposes a new departure in preparedness for war never attempted by any nation and utilization in time of peace of the scheme for humanitarian purposes of saving the lives of those who go down to the sea in ships. The co-operation of the army and navy and of the coast and geodetic survey has been invited. Other government activities, especially the coast guard, which is expected to benefit most by the peace utilization of the aerial patrol, are also included in the scope of desired government co-operation.

Rear Admiral Peary has named a number of members of a committee to formulate working plans to carry out the scheme. Among them is Assistant Secretary Byron R. Newton of the treasury department, in charge of the coast guard. Mr. Newton is also a theoretical aeronaut. As a newspaper man he made a specialty of aeronautical news and was often in a flier. He is also a member of the aeronautical board of the government, named to advise the army and navy.

While the "preparedness" part of the program is insisted upon by those who conceived it, the humanity aspects of it are regarded as of even more vital importance. For there are those that predict that the navy some day—when there cease to be wars and rumors of war—will be only an adjunct of the coast guard, developed to its highest capacity as an economizer of life and property, and that the navy in peace times will have peace work cut out for it that is not entirely making ready for war, but will have a commercial and utilitarian purpose.

To Divide Coast Into Sections.

The idea, as set forth by the Aero Club of America, is to divide the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, the shores of the great lakes and the coast of the gulf of Mexico into sections "of convenient length, say about 100 miles each." In each of these sections would be established a coast defense station, where would be erected a hangar for housing a seaplane and equipment to make all minor repairs. Several larger stations would be established at suitable intervals, where all more complicated repairs could be made or a complete overhauling given at regular periods.

Elaborating the plan, as set forth by the Aero Club of America, each hangar would be the home of a seaplane. A driver and an observer would be attached to it. The seaplane would be equipped with light wireless apparatus, powerful binocular glasses and a sensitive microphone.

"The partly submerged derelict," says the Aero Club of America, "too light to sink and a constant menace to traffic, would be spotted by the aerial scout and its presence reported. Wrecks, vessels in distress and all other marine accidents would be reported and aid quickly summoned when necessary."

But if ever war should arise, in the opinion of Rear Admiral Peary, the first value of this coast patrol service would be the prompt report, "ready and equipped for service," from a hundred or more trained fliers and observers from mechanicians and helpers organized into a state of "military preparedness."

Duty In Time of War.

As war duty each of the seaplanes, according to the outline of the plan, would take position about fifty miles off shore and patrol its respective beat, the shore line of the prescribed section, continuously back and forth. In clear weather, at a height of 2,000 feet above sea level, the observer would have a vision of fifty miles to the horizon. At night or in fog the seaplanes would be compelled to sweep lower or find a landing. At all times they would be expected to be invisible to a distant enemy.

By means of the wireless information as to character, number and apparent destination of approaching ships would be transmitted to shore stations and thence to Washington or a government center, whence if the ships were hostile orders would be issued directing the movements of defending warships and the submarine squadrons for the preparation of coast defenses and for the concentration of troops. If necessary reserve seaplanes, hurrying out, would keep the approaching craft under continuous observation while themselves invisible and in communication with shore.

"Such a system is a new departure," declares Rear Admiral Peary. "The like of it exists nowhere at present. Yet it involves no new principle, but is simply the utilization and multiplication of the known capacities of a single seaplane."

GERMANS LOSE ONE TRENCH

Paris—The Germans within the last twenty-four hours have suffered a series of checks in their operations against Verdun. At one point, in the region northeast of Badonviddier, they have been forced to cede ground.

The terrific bombardment by the Germans of the defending fworts continues without interruption on more than a fifty-mile front, but their infantry attacks, according to French official reports, have, for the moment at least, been brought to a standsctill.

The Germans at duskq lost evening launched a furious assault on the key front between Fort Dauaumont and Haudremonet wood. Strong artillery preparation had been made, but when the attack was launched concealed French guns opened up and the Germans were forced to fall back to their trenches.

THE QUIRK TODAY

William Farnum, the world's foremotsdramatic actor, who deserted the legtimate stage to play exclusively in the feature films of William Fox, has never had a role that was more to his liking than that of Daniel Esmond, in "The Broken Law," by Oscar C. Apfel. Mr. Farnum, who is a $100,000 a year star, deserted the speaking stage because he felt that the Fox Feature Films offered him a lorger field in which to display his talents. Also he was of the opinion that the photoplay as presented by Mr. Fox, offered greater opportunity for artistic work.

Mr. Farnum has never regretted his departure from the stage. He may return to the legitimate stage at some future time, but movie enthusiasst can rest assured that they may have the pleasure of seeming him in Fox pictures for some time to come.

SEA RAIDER SAFE IN GERMAN PORT

Cruiser Moewe Lands Prisoners and Gold---The Means of Sending British Battleship to the Bottom.

Berlin—The Moewe is safe at home today.

While the fastest cruisers of the British navy scoured the North and South Atlantic for her, she slipped quietly through the unsleeping patrols of the North Sea and berthed in Wilhelmshaven, with 199 enemy prisoners, a million marks in captured gold bars and the record of having captured or sunk fifteen enemy merchantmen. She also laid mines that sunk the British battleship King Edward VII.

Germany is thrilling from end to end at the news of this incredible exploit on the high seas.

Count von Dohna-Schlodien, captain of the successful raider, hos been summoned to meet the Kaiser at headquaters. Already he has been awarded the Iron Cross of the first class while each member of the crew is to receive the Iron Cross of the second order.

The Naval General Staff announces the return of the Moewe with succinct and sober brevity, as becomes the dignity of a General Staff, but no one can fail to read between the lines the tremendous satisfaction, perhaps unequalled by any other German triumph of the war, at this humiliation of the mightiest navy that ever dominated the seas, not to mention the fatal puncturing of its pretense that it maintains an effective blockade of the German coast.

Flight of the Locust.

Locusts in South Africa are very tiny creatures, at most two or three inches long, yet giant jawed and shelled in a grim brown mail so hard that as they strike it causes a sharp smart. They travel in such numbers that it takes them four or five days to pass over. The scouts alone, hovering in patches like red dust clouds, are numerous enough to destroy the vegetation of a district, while the main body, high up in the air, a host of little black specks, stretches out into an interminable screen between heaven and earth. The fanning of their wings brings a fresh coolness over the hot earth even in the depth of summer. There seems to be a fresh breath of ozone as of the sea.

$12,168,000 Invested In City's 51 Industries, Says Commerce Dept.

A preliminary statement of the general results of the census of manufacturers for this city has been issued by the Bureau of Census Department of Commerce of the U. S. It has arrived here and consists of a summary comparing the figures for 1909 and 1914, by totals.

The statement in part is as follows:

The figures are preliminary and subject to such change and correction as may be found necessary from a further examination of the original reports.

The census of 1914, like that of 1909, with reference to manufactures, excluded the hand trades, the building trades, and the neighborhood industries, and took account only of establishments conducted under the factory system. In the last census, also, as in that for 1909, statistics were not collected for establishments having products for the census year valued at less than $500; except that reports were taken for establishments idle during a portion of the census year, or which began operation during that year, and whose products for such reason were valued at less than $500.

Steady Progress

The word "establishment" as used in the census reports may mean more than one mill or plant, provided they are owned or controlled and operated by a single individual, partnership, corporation, or other owner or operator, and are located in the same town or city.

The reports were taken for the calendar year ending December 31, 1914, wherever the system of bookkeeping permitted figures for that period to be secured, but when the fiscal year of an establishment differed from the calendar year a report was obtained for the operations of that establishment for its fiscal year falling most largely within the calendar year 1914.

The summary shows a consistent increase at the census of 1914, as compared with that for 1909. In the order of their importance, from a percentage standpoint, the increases for the several items rank as follows: Salaries, 47.6 per cent; primary horsepower, 37.4 per cent; wages, 33.7 per cent; salaried employes, 24.3 per cent; materials, 22.3 per cent, value of product, 21.7 per cent; value added by manufacture, 20.7 per cent; capital, 10.3 per cent; and wage earners, 8.7 per cent.

Gain of 10.3 Per Cent

The capital invested, as reported in 1914, was $12,168,000, a gain of $1,135,000, or 10.3 per cent, over $11,033,000 in 1909. In this connection it should be stated that the inquiry cantained in the census schedule calls for the total amount of capital both owned and borrowed, invested in the business, but excludes the value of rented property, plant, or equipment which was employed in the conduct of manufacturing enterprises. In the final bulletins and reports the rental paid for such property will be shown separately.

The cost of materials used was $5,940,000 in 1914, as against $4,857,000 in 1909, an increase of $1,083,000 or 22.3 per cent. In addition to the component materials which enter into the products of the establishment for the census year there are included the cost of fuel, mill supplies, and rent of power and heat. The cost of materials, however, does not include unused materials and supplies bought either for speculation or for use during a subsequent period. Ahe census inquiry does not include amounts paid for miscellaneous

Ships of Three Nations Believed to Be Ready to Strike Final Blow

London—Certain somewhat vague but persistent rumors which have been circulated here for several days regarding the North Sea war zone have caused a state of expectancy.

This expectancy has been heightened by despatches received from Scandinavia today predicting that a battle between British and Russian and German war ships is not far distant.

Russian torpedo boats are reported to have been seen near the island of Oland, Sweden, in the Baltic Sea, and a half dozen German submarines have been observed off Oxelsund, on the Baltic, to the south of Stockholm.

The general opinion in Scandinavia is said to be that Great Britain and Russia will intercept German vessels clearing for Sweden as soon as the ice has melted. The ice already has partly broken up and thus rendered it easy for forcing.

Naval experts have expressed the opinion privately for several days that the Germans are preparing to venture out and that important events are pending. As to whether the British officials believe this obviouscly nothing is known.

KAISER'S WARSHIPS MAY RAID THE ATLANTIC OCEAN

Washington —Following the success of the German raider, Moewe, in twice running the British blockade, a score of other merchant-cruisers, it is said, are about to be victims on the high seas. This information was received in Washington today by an official close to the German Embassy, who said:

"The important thing is not so much what the Moewe has done, as what Germany may be counted upon to do from now on. Above all, the fact is established for all time that Great Britain's boast that she maintains a blockade of German ports is nothing but a fallacy.

"What the Moewe has done any ship can do.

"What the Moewe has done many other German ships will do.

"What the Moewe has done many other ships ,of other nationalties, are doing all the time—and have been for months past.

"All the great Swedish liners run the so-called blockade regularly. Twice out of three times they succeed.

The line of blockade is from the northernmost point of Scotland straight across the North Sea to a point off the south of the Scandinavian peninsula. This blockade is supposed to make it impossible for a ship to get by whether she starts from the North Sea coast of Germany or from one of the Baltic ports.

GERMANS BREAK THROUGH FRENCH KEY FRONT

Paris—The Germans by a heavy blow against the key front northwest of Verdun today broke through the French lines for an advance of more than a mile, capturing the village of Forges.

The midnight statement of this French War Office admits this gain. It also admits the success of a German attack in Champagne, where, in the vicinity of the recent German drive, new trench sections were lost.

During the day the Germans launched sudden attacks at two vital points on a front of 150 miles, stretching from the Woevre to Champagne. On another sector of this front, in the Argonne region,

A PROMISE TO BE KEPT

When President Lincoln fifty years ago congratulated the crew of the Monitor and invited them to ask for favors, John Driscoll requested that when a canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific should be built that he be permitted to ride through it on a ship of war. John Driscoll is alive and the navy department will fulfill the promise made by Lincoln. The next battleship going through the canal will bear John Driscoll as the guest of the navy. There is yet some romance in this material country of ours.—Watertown Standard.

THE RURAL CREDITS PROBLEM

The tendency to paternalistic legislation and to favor one or another class at the expense of the people finds new expression in the Hollis bill to enable farmers to borrow on long time farm mortgages.

In the Journal-Bulletin of the American Bankers' Association for March there is strong criticism of the government aid features of this measure, and reference is made to the recent attempt to have the federal government foster the cotton growing industry and sustain the price of the staple—which experience has shown was wholly unnecessary.

The proposal to make mortgages and farm loan bonds issued under the act direct obligations of the United States, and therefore exempt from all taxation, and similar suggestions of the bill are diametrically opposed to the independent cooperation and self-help principles of the proiect advocated by Mr. Myron T. Herrick, the highest American authority on the subject of rural credits.

Better ignore the problem than attempt its solution by such mischievous and subversive methods. —N. Y. Herald.

THE DIRECT PRIMARY IN OTHER STATES

Wherever the direct primary is working and "worked" the product seems unsatisfactory to those who judge a system by its results. The Indianapolis Star, an independent newspaper, 'always faithful to what makes, in its opinion, for better representative government, finds that the nominees of both parties to be voted on in Indiana in November are, on the whole, "considerably below the average." This in spite of the time and money spent in "getting them before the people." There is no responsibility. It is "practically impossible for good citizens to combine in support of any candidate against the machine choice." The independent voter can do nothing. On March 7, Primary Day, "thousands of citizens will go to the polls without knowing whom they ought to vote for, except in the case of a few offices." In every convention there are honest citizens who can fight the bosses and make them fight in the open.

The direct primary is a device of darkness for the special benefit of the bosses. It is "one of those reforms", says this impartial witness, "that does not reform." Direct party government, like direct government, is a humbug. For party, as for state and nation, an honest, genuine representative government is indispensable. The direct primary insures irresponsible, unrepresentative party government. All this has been shown and said again and again. Continual dripping hollows the stone.

The Chicago Herald, apparently in good faith and with no ironical intention, wants to have the pay of certain Chicago judges raised from $6,000 to $9,000 a year on the ground that the "expenses of running in a primary" justify the increase. Thus the primary, so fertile in disagreeables drags candidates for the bench, as it drags other candidates, into the slime and ooze of the campaign fund, and excludes from office men too poor or too proud to pay for a primary campaign.

The Sioux City Journal gives a glimpse of this inestimable 'reform" in Iowa:

"The talk about the voters having something to say about their convention delegates is a good deal of a joke. Here in Iowa delegates to the national conventions will be elected on April 10. Theoretically they will be named by the people. As a matter of fact Republican delegates have been already named. A group of party leaders got together in Des Moines and agreed upon four men for delegates at large."

The people's choice is kindly picked for them in advance. This "reform" needs to be reformed out of business.—N. Y. Times.

A PROUD DAY

The response in appreciation of our Symphony Orchestra's initial bow tonight is indeed inspiring. Not alone from local persons has the voice of approbation been heard, but too from adjoining communities. "It is a fine beginning toward the real things of a city, and it needs must be encouraged" is the sentiment. When the people in our neighboring cities are watching and commend us we may well feel encouraged. Cooperation may rightly exist between communities as well as between individuals in a community. The surrendering of self-interest, to live outside oneself, whether it be in the interest of a Symphony Orchestra or any other helpful medium that the welfare of the whole may be considered is to claim one's inheritance—that of true manhood or womanhood. The big joy in impersonal work is found in its creation of a wiser, happier, finer spirit in all one's relations with his fellow-men.

When a man, woman or child can so far put self aside as to work for the "good of things," without a thought of personal gain a fine dignity cloaks the individual.

The persons enlisted in working for Fulton; those who give unselfishly of their time and thought to the solving of our common problems are indeed "greatest" among us. To each and every person who worked to make possible a local Symphony Orchestra all praise and honor is due. They are truly the "Trail Blazers" of our little city—and hats off when the first note is struck.

OLD TIN CANS

The largest and most successful concerns in this country have built on what we call waste. Armour uses everything but the squeal of a pig. The Standard Oil utilizes every by-product, until it is able to produce cheaper and better. And now we have the Waste Material Dealers' organization, representing an investment of over $700,000,000.

Things that have been considered useless in the past are now making us more successful. The waste material dealers are true conservationists, and if they, by commercial cleverness and economic administration, build big successes, we shall be compelled to call them "trusts." Think of the rag dealers' trust, the old tin can trust, the scrap-iron trust—all built from waste. If, by saving, by economy, by genius, we convert waste into millions, long live the so-called "trusts."—The Silent Partner.

HOME PREPAREDNESS

Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the National Housewives' league is addressing women's clubs, high school students and other assemblages in various parts of the country these days. Her general subject is "Preparedness in the Home" and during the course of each address she introduces a set of resolutions in which there is an unusual amount of sense. They are, in part, as follows:

Whereas: A large percentage of the men who apply for admission to the National Guard are rejected because of physical disability. And,

Whereas: Statistics show a great loss of human life during infancy and childhood by the facts that in the United States 300,000 babies under twelve months of age died during the past year, 1,500,000 children under ten years of age during the past four years. And,

Whereas: This great loss of life and efficiency is largely due to malnutrition. And,

Whereas: Preparedness for the defense of the nation rests upon the physical preparedness of the individual. And,

Whereas: The health and well-being of the individuals of society are under the direct care and charge of the housewife for physical and mental development. And,

Whereas: The housewives of the nation must have full knowledge of foods and their value in order to develop and conserve the mental and physical well-being of the individuals. Therefore,

Be it resolved: That we, the housewives of America, hereby rally to the defense of the nation by constituting ourselves a great standing army for the study of nutrition looking toward the physical upbuilding of the nation, and therefore of its defense.

Mrs. Heath urges that in order to insure an upbuilding of the nation through proper food that a careful survey of the food supply be made in each state.—Batavia News.

She is Always to Blame.

Of what use is it discussing whether men or women will do the sillier things to maintain a pose? We all know—or ought to, perhaps—that when the woman buys a twelve dollar pair of white kid boots that are unsuitable to wear with anything else that she can afford she is herself to blame; and when a man mortgages his farm to buy an automobile that he cannot afford to run it is the women of the family who are to blame; and there you are!—"As She Sees It," in Lowell Courier-Citizen.

Trouble Ahead.

Young Husband (to wife)—Didn't I telegraph to you not to bring your mother with you?

Young Wife—I know. That's what she wants to see you about. She read the telegram.

A few years ago the career of Porfirio Diaz, president of Mexico, was looked upon as a wonder, to be admired or otherwise, according to one's point of view. Dictator he was, but the term was softened by the addition of an adjective which takes the curse out of the terrible word—"Benevolent Dictator." The best to be said of him was that he kept order; the worst, perhaps, that he re-elected himself again and again and in governing his people so well and so fatherly failed to train them to govern themselves. No man can last forever, and no one man system built around a peculiar individual can move smoothly after that guiding hand is taken away. Another Diaz is impossible; a near Diaz might not be an improvement on the national fortunes of Mexico. If the Diaz rule did not debase the state, it did not prepare it to weather storms. Order must be restored, but in such a way that the best that is in the people politically shall have a chance to become a force.

Of late the New York Times has devoted space to discussions of the national guard in its relation to a reserve force to the regular army. In a recent editorial summary of the situation this paper said: "Obviously the Continental army plan should not be abandoned merely because the national guard disapproves of it. If the national guard can really be separated from state control, well and good. But if not there are thousands of loyal citizens in the guards who are also good soldiers. They have derived much benefit from the training of federal officers. They can resign from the guard and join the Continental army. They can help to make that body of really national militia an efficient military arm. State soldiers, permanently controlled by state governments, cannot be nationalized merely by the payment to them of money out of the army appropriations."

At a recent national trade convention the president of the Brazil Railway company surveyed trade conditions in South America in which the business men of this country are interested. He spoke of the products from South America which are consumed in the United States, as iron ore, nitrates, tin, copper and silver, rubber and meat. To trade for these products the United States has coal to furnish cargoes for steamers southward bound. This gentleman suggested that the situation in South America be closely studied by Americans with a view to developing new channels of trade.

Recent private advices from Italy on the inside tell of a sad state of things brought on by the war. Business is dead, and all sorts of activities languish. All the males between seventeen and forty-five are at the front, and those between forty-five and fifty are in arms at depots. Only old men, women and young boys are at home to do the work. And Italy has little to show for the sacrifice except on the side of loss.

The question of whether the people will approve of universal military training could best be equitably settled by a plebiscitum of men of military age who are physically fit. The burden must fall upon them. The race of Artemus Wards, ready to sacrifice all their first wife's relations on the altar of the country, is not yet dead.

At the rate the old world is killing off bone and sinew it looks as though American manhood would have to get into training to handle the pick and spade as in the days before the immigrant cornered the job.

On the good side of war it can be said that doctors are too busy tracking shell splinters and bullets to pester humanity with all sorts of germ scares.

The hopes of the Chinese should feel an uplift in Wilson's pronouncement that the United States will champion freedom throughout the world.

THE CANBY IDEA

By Bernard Ostrolenk

(Written for The Banker-Farmer)

When we speak of Canby in these parts of Minnesota we have in mind more than the restricted area that lies within the imaginary line known as the city limits. Canby, politically only, has a population of about 1800 people, but Canby, as conceived here, goes out and takes in every man, woman and child within a radius of fifteen miles. The function of a small country town according to all classics is to serve as a trade center for farmers, but Canby with its larger horizon has conceived larger ideals of service. True, the mainspring of Canby's activity is in its trade, but grouped around it there has sprung up the idea that the farmers and the town are interdependent, that they are one in purpose, ideals and ideas, that to make the best program they must pull together.

Canby's farmers have combined into ten strong farmers' clubs. That is not a strange phenomenon. Farmers elsewhere have done the same thing. What distinguishes the Canby Farmers' clubs from the others is that, while elsewhere the chief motive was to get cooperation among farmers for the purpose of making the farming population self sufficient, to eliminate the man in town, so to speak, here the farmers' clubs were organized to cooperate with the man in town and to assist the farmers to utilize the many splendid advantages, social, educational, religious and commercial, that the town provides. No attempt is made by the farmers' clubs to usurp the function of the merchant or in any way to displace him. Efforts here are chiefly directed to cooperate with the people of the town for better schools, churches, social life and efficiency in markets, merchandising and agriculture. The clubs are chiefly used by the farmers and merchants to become better acquainted and to jointly discuss their problems. A club meeting is primarily a social function in which the women and children play as prominent a part as do the men. Instead of worshipping at the shrine of the mail order catalogue our farmers are asking their merchants to join with them for greater efficiency in credit, merchandising and farming.

And the people of the town of Canby have responded to the call of the farmer. Every agency has been put to work to make this a greater Canby community. The public school curriculum was enlarged to better fit the children from the country, consolidation with the neighboring country schools was effected. The school board encouraged its teachers to visit and assist the country school and special efforts were made to engineer corn, pig, alfalfa, tomato and canning contests. Canby merchants en masse or individually engineered the prizes for these contests. Two farmers' short courses, each lasting one week, was held at which the average attendance of farmers each day was 550. The merchants of Canby acted as hosts on both of these occasions. The Bank of Canby made a special campaign by literature, example, persuasion and prizes, to introduce alfalfa into the Canby soil. The result was that one year after the contest was announced seventy-five farmers reported as many four-acre plats ready for inspection. Judge McCullock pronounced these seventy-five alfalfa plats among the best he had ever seen. The movement has been gaining momentum from this initial impetus. Alfalfa is increasingly getting to be a familiar sight. Mr. G. W. Allen of the Allen Land company then started to display special interest in the farmer's friend, "Mr. Porker." He offered $100 in prizes to the boy that could raise the cheapest and largest amount of pork from a sow in one year. The educational value of this contest, involving as it did, cost account, a study of breed, feed and care has been most commendable.

The county fair, not to be left behind, continued to dangle before Canby farm youth the alluring prizes up to $700 for the largest yield of crib dry corn per acre. The result was startling. The corn yield that had been hovering around 40 bushels pere acre was suddenly shown to be capable of increase to 103 bushels without materially increasing the expense. The discussion, examination and overhauling of the Canby seed-corn proposition has been invaluable to Canby.

It would be interesting to tell here how the cooperation between town and country is working for better livestock markets, for a more thorough understanding of breeding through the Breeders' association; how by special cooperation the silo is becoming a common farm ornament; how electricity is becoming a rural necessity;

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

With every weight of responsibility dropped from the shoulders down to a point where it can be supported by a long, well shaped sleeve, the waist of this white serge frock is charmingly care-free and dainty in effect. Attached to it under two dark blue satin cords is a plain skirt, finished with a hem. Blue silk braid trims the frock, which requires 4 3-4 yards 64-inch material.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6604. Sizes, 34 to 42 inches bust. Price 15 cents. Braiding design No. 11347. Yellow transfer only, price 10 cents.

how joint mass meetings between town and country are enabling merchants to exert their personality, and how the school has been made of service to both town and country in every relation. Suffice it to say this movement has proven of inestimable advantage to both the farm and town population. To promote it no dependence can be placed on any special organization or some able hireling. These will help, but primarily there must be developed the community spirit, a spirit that will bring every organization, every merchant, every banker, farmer and professional man behind the movement. Canby can not offer any patent medicine that will duplicate Canby's result. Every banker, merchant and farmer here feels that it is incumbent upon him to support the movement of a bigger and better Canby.

WIDOW STARVES; UNABLE TO COLLECT INCOME

New York—Mrs. Mary Hardy, widow of John Hardy, a lawyer of this city twice elected to the House of Representatives, testified in the Supreme Court that she is starving because she has been unable to collect $15 a week allowed to her by the courts from the estate of her husband amounting to $200,000.

The fact became known in a decision just made by Justice Cohalan, who criticised the conduct of Lambert Hubbell, husband of Mrs. Hardy's sister.

The Justice heard an application by Miss Lillian M. Brown, niece of Mrs. Hardy, who holds a judgment against her of $381 for board and money loaned. The niece asked to set aside a confession of judgment for $2,500 signed by Mrs. Hardy in favor of her brother-in-law.

Miss Brown said that Mrs. Hardy married the late Mr. Hardy in 1865 and separated from him in 1873. The next year they signed a separation agreement by which he agreed to pay her $25 a week for the rest of her life. Later the amount was reduced to $15 a week. At the death of Mr. Hardy the income paid to Mrs. Hardy stopped, and she came here from the West, where she had been stopping, to establish her residence in Newark N. J., and bring action to enforce the separation agreement.

TRAINING OF SENSES DEMANDED BY DR. ELIOTT

New York—Dr. Charles W. Eliott, president emeritus of Harvard University, is the author of a pamphlet which the General Education Board will send out this week calling for more training for the senses by pupils than schools now give. He finds that many persons reach the adult stage whose senses have so lacked training that they are unable to enjoy the real benefits of education.

"Many highly educated American ministers, lawyers and teachers have never received any scientific training, have never used any instrument of precision, possess no manual skill whatever and cannot sing, draw or play any musical instrument," Dr. Eliot writes.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

Separate Skirts Have Graceful Lines.

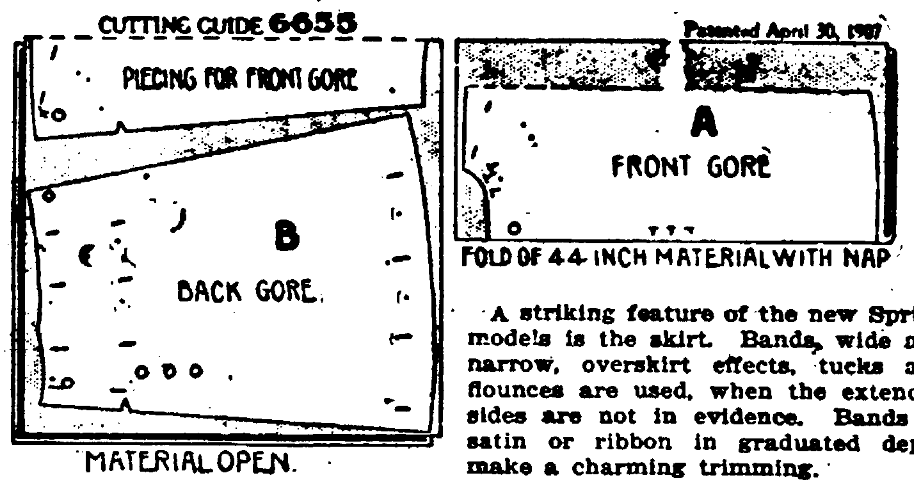
A new separate skirt of three-piece design, with cascade drapery. It is gathered in front and laid in deep pleats at the back.

At its best the newest separate skirt is eminently chic and sensible as well. The extra touches embodied in draperies, applied stitchings, etc., add to its value because they give a dressy effect that makes the skirt suitable for most informal occasions. The model shown here is a three-piece skirt with cascade drapery at the sides. It is gathered at the front and laid in deep pleats at the back, the adjustment being effected at the side.

In medium size the skirt requires 3⅞ yards 44-inch material. In cutting the design, the back gore and piecing for front gore must be laid on an open width of material, as shown in the cutting guide. The front gore, which is marked by triple "TTT" perforations, is placed on a lengthwise fold, while the stay, having one "T" on the edge is placed on a lengthwise or a crosswise fold. If the skirt is desired in shorter length, cut off from lower edges gores or turn a hem the desired amount.

There is no denying the fact that the draped skirt is a trying one for many figures, yet some of its difficulties may be overcome by not overaccentuating the breadth at the sides. Youthful and slender figures wear it admirably, however. The new season's styles are so charmingly varied, though, that the wise woman discreetly passing by unbecoming designs, finds many others that will become her figure and be exceedingly modish at the same time.

The materials most used for separate skirts are gabardine, broadcloth, serge, voile, taffeta and faille.



A striking feature of the new Spring models is the skirt. Bands, wide and narrow, overskirt effects, tucks and flounces are used, when the extended sides are not in evidence. Bands of satin or ribbon in graduated depth make a charming trimming.

Pictorial Review Skirt No. 6655. Sizes 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SEASONABLE LUNCHEONS.

SARDINES BROILED ON TOAST. —Carefully open a box of good sardines, twelve or so in a box, and neatly wipe after draining off oil. Arrange on a double broiler and broil on a brisk fire for three minutes on each side. Have ready toast strips a little longer and wider than the sardines. Place a fish on each strip, pour a little hot melted butter over them and serve, or garnish with slices of lemon and a sprig of parsley. Arrange on plates, serving not more than two to each person.

Corned Beef Balls.—Two teacupfuls of finely chopped corned beef, one onion minced very fine, three teacupfuls of mashed potatoes, salt and pepper to season and one egg. Beat all together well, form into balls, roll well in flour and fry in deep fat as you would fry doughnuts. Garnish with parsley or celery leaves and serve hot.

Fried Liver.—First cut all hard, white pieces out and cast aside, and then cut all into pieces about two inches square or less. Then cover with cold water and let stand fifteen minutes. Into your frying pan put several bits of fat salt pork cut very small. Let this cook till almost done; then drain off the liver and put quickly into the fried pork. Do not cook long or it will be tough. Turn once, and in a few minutes it is done. Of course if you prefer bacon to the pork that can be used instead.

French Stew.—One and one-half pounds fresh pork cut in small pieces; stew until tender, place meat in shallow baking pan with plenty of broth, add four medium sized potatoes diced, one small onion and season with salt and pepper. Bake one-half hour; then make biscuit dough and cover top with small biscuit placed closely. Bake until golden brown.

POLICE DEPT. HELD FODARO

Alleged Assailant of Countryman, Now a Fugitive, Was Held Here Four Hours

The failure of the Syracuse police force to notify headquarters here of a stabbing affray, that of Raffaele Burcello, Saturday night, resulted in the man charged with the crime, Dominico Fodaro, making a safe get-away from this city, although he was harbored at the local police station from Sunday morning at 4 o'clock until four hours later.

Patrolman Brannigan came upon Fodaro at the D. L. & W. station. The man had no overcoat and his actions aroused the suspicions of the police officer. As Brannigan approached him, Fodaro asked the officer where he could find a boarding place, but his actions did not satisfy the policeman, who asked him where he had come from. Fodaro replied that he had come from Oswego, but was unable to state the amount of fare he had paid.

Fodaro was taken to the Broadway police station and later to headquarters. In communicating with Oswego the police there advised that they did not want Fodaro and he was permitted to spend the remainder of the night in City hall. Later Patrolman Fox escorted the man to a cousin's house over the river, but within fifteen minutes Fox saw the fugitive making his way toward the upper bridge.

When an account of the stabbing was read in a Syracuse paper local headquarters got in touch with the Syracuse sleuth department and Detectives Bennett and Santy arrived in the evening, whereupon a search was begun for the alleged slayer, but without success.

The fatal stabbing resulted during a quarrel between the two men over a delinquent board bill.

Fodaro is described by the police as 2 0years old, with black curly hair, wearing a blue suit and cap and black shoes. He is short, or about 5 feet 2 inches in height, weighing probably 140 pounds. Chief Dyer holds a recent photograph of him. He is said to have worked here at one time. He has also been employed in a match factory in Oswego where a search is also being made for him.

REYNOLDS TO FILL CAPT. IVES' PLACE

The Maccabee basketball team will oppose the A. C. U. five of Syracuse at Church's Hall tomorrow night, in what promises to be a close and interesting game. On account of the inability of Captain Ives to be in the lineup the local team has added to the squad Reynolds of the high school.

The A. C. U. outfit defeated the Maccabees in a one-sided contest at Syracuse two weeks ago, but the game was played on the night following the hard Y. M. H. A. game which left the entire team crippled. Although the A. C. U. outfit is one of the contenders for the amateur title in Syracuse, a series of matches having been arranged between the Y. M. H. A., Pastimes and A. C. U., it is not expected that the visitors will duplicate the previous performance.

During one period of the preceding game, the Maccabee team more than held its own against the Catholic institution boys, the Maccabees practically running away with them, but the pace was too hard to maintain because of the condition of the players.

Manager Snow has also arranged for a return game with the fast Victor five to be played in Oswego next week.

Go Light on Buckshot.

Buckshot should be relegated to the past along with the buffalo gun and the market hunter's "cannon." It will inflict a painful wound upon deer and yet will not kill except at very close quarters. Even the poorest shot can usually score a hit with buckshot, and he will in nine cases out of ten be tempted into "letting her have it" when the game is absolutely out of effective range. About the only useful purpose for which buckshot can be recommended is in self defense against a human enemy at close range.—Outing.

WRONGDOING.

If society is to be further uplifted, if it is to be kept from slipping back, it must hold firmly to the right of saying that wrong is wrong, no matter who commits it or how guilty others may be. If there can be no responsibility and no condemnation till we get a perfect world there can be no way of holding the world up to the level which it has already reached.

Marriage In France.

In France a man under twenty-five and a girl under twenty-one cannot marry without the consent of their parents if they are alive or of the survivor if one is dead. If both are dead the grandparents must be consulted if living. Even the would be bridegroom over twenty-five and the bride over twenty-one must ask the parental benediction. Over thirty and twenty-five they must give their parents or their representatives a month's clear notice of their intention to marry.

Everlasting Bricks.

Once made a brick is practically indestructible. Nearly every brick that has ever been made by man from the beginning of time is still in existence on this earth. The men who made and laid them and who directed these operations have long since been withered into dust. Some of them have doubtless contributed in their bodies to the making of more bricks. But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.—Exchange.

FARM BUREAU MEETING DATES

The Farm Bureau meetings are being well attended. The meetings for the week of March 13th will be general in nature excepting the pear psylla meetings in Scriba and Oswego Center.

Monday, March 13th, Daysville — 1 p. m. General Farm Bureau meeting will be held in the Daysville church.

Wednesday, March 15th, Amboy—1 p. m. Grange hall. Meeting in cooperation with the Grange. The first meeting in this locality this winter. Everybody invited.

Thursday, March 16th, North Scriba—1:30 p. m. Oswego Center—7:30 p. m. Prof. H. E. Hodgkiss will be present and discuss the pear psylla. Arrangements will be made by the Manager for co-operative demonstrations work for 1916.

Friday, March 17th, Volney Center —1 p. m. Keeping of dairy records, lime and its uses will be among the subjects brought up for discussion.

Don't forget the date of the meeting in your section. Come if possible. A general invitation extended to all. E. Victor Underwood, Manager.

ONE BOARD DID NOT, ANOTHER WILL NOT MEET

The Board of Public Works did not meet last night, owing to the severe weather conditions. The meeting may be held later in the week.

The Common Council will meet tomorrow night instead of tonight, the postponement being the result of a desire by the Mayor and members to attend the orchestra concert. This meeting will be full of action, it has been announced, as a final threshing out of the pool room ordinance, the taxicab license fee, and other important matters.

CATHOLICS WILL OBSERVE FATHER KERNEY'S DEATH

Preparations are being made for the observance of the tenth anniversary of the death of Rev. Father Kerney at high mass Saturday in the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Rev. Father Kerney occupied the pulpit of the church for thirty years, being succeeded at his death by the Rev. John L. Lindsman. While he was pastor the new church and parish house were constructed. A number of relatives of the beloved priest live in Syracuse.

JOHN NASH DIED AT HOSPITAL YESTERDAY

John Nash, 55, of 220 Oneida st., who swallowed poison yesterday morning died yesterday at 3 p. m. at the Lee Memorial hospitol. His body is lying at the E. S. Brown undertaking rooms, awaiting the funeral arrangements. Mr. Nash leaves a widow and several brothers and sisters.

COLLECTORS OR REFUSE MUST STEP LIVELY

The first step toward controlling the collection of ashes and garbage was made today, when Chief of Police Dyer was directed by the Boord of Health to see that all wagons engaged in the work and covered properly. The police have been advised to enforce the law at once.

MUCK LAND GROWERS MEET

Prof. A. E. Wilkinson of Cornell Gave Interesting Talk on Cultivation of Muck Land Products.

At a special meeting of the Oswego County Farm Bureau, which was attended by a large number of muck growers this afternoon in the Grange Hall, Prof. A. E. Wilkinson, of the State Agricultural Department addressed the growers on matters pertaining to the cultivation of onions, celery, lettuce and other muck land products, particularly emphasizing the subject of fertilizers as well as methods of combating diseases.

The speaker was introduced by E. V. Underwood, Manager of the Oswego County Farm Bureau, who stated that it was desirous to have this session result in establishing co-operative relationship with the State Experimental Station. Mr. Underwood said that Prof. Wilkinson and he had conducted a meeting yesterday in Phoenix, the topic discussed was fertilizing of cabbage. He made mention of the fact that there is at present a considerable interest in growing cabbage for kraut in that vicinity. The men who attended the meeting were presented with demonstrations on fertilizers, in which different combinations were tried out. Although potash was found to be the best material which could be used, the present cost of it is prohibitive and the best substitute was found to be phosphoric acid.

Prof. Wilkinson described the experimental stations at S. Lima, North Rose, and Canastota, where extensive experimental work is being carried on by the state. Considerable work is being done towards liberating nitrogen from the soil, he stated. A grower at Sanborn is conducting experiments with lettuce, celery, onions,caulifiouer and carrots under the State's direction, using seven different forms of fertilizers . The speaker expresssed the feeling of one of the oldest muck cultivators of Canastota, who said that had he been presented with the knowledge given by the State in the first four years of his growing, he would have saved thousand of dollars.

Prof. Wilkinson in describing the experiments towards eliminating the smite on onions mentioned that after considerable work along these lines, it was found that formaldehyde was the best disinfectant to use, although sulphur and lime mixed were at first used. The conclusion is that formaldehyde is the best. Before asking for questions from the growers ,which method he deemed the best in conducting the meeting, Prof. Wilkinson, presented statistics on onion growth in Canastota and in Orange county. In the latter place, which is occupied mostly by foreigners, there is a tremendous loss owing to ignorance on the part of the growers.

MOTT WINS TWO OUT OF THREE FROM "MARVEL"

One of the largest audiences that has ever witnessed a wrestling bout in this city attended the final bout of the Independent A. C. show last night in "Church's hall when "Iron Neck" Mott met the "Masked Marvel" of Buffalo, who was not masked. The "Marvel" displayed a hundred and one holds ,a number of which were in the jiu jiutsi class, most of which were of an amusing variety.

Mott, although apparently outclassed, won the first and third falls. Mott was handicapped also by a difference of twenty pounds in weight.

"Young Tunk" of this city bested Ted Renous of Minetto in the semi-first and third falls. The preceding bout between "Kid" Green and "Young" Wallace, resulted in a victory for the latter, the first two falls going to Wallace.

Stewart was referee in the final and first bouts while the "Marvel" officiated in the Renous-"Young Tunk."

Cheering Him Up.

A professional boxer was badly beaten in a sparring match and carried to his bed exhausted and melancholy.

"I wish you'd say something to cheer him up, doctor," pleaded the defeated warrior's wife. "He's gettin' low in his mind, and when he's like that you've no idea how hard it is to wait on him. He's worse than a bear with a toothache."

"What can I say that will please him most?" asked the doctor.

"You might just tell him, in an offhand way, that the man as licked him is mighty bad in the 'orspital and that they may have to hold a post mortem on him any minute now," was the solemn suggestion.—London Telegraph.

Nelson as a Courtier.

Nelson was the hero of England even in his own time, but not apparently of the court. Samuel Rogers recounts a conversation with him which appears in the life of the poet by R. Ellis Roberts. "I heard him once during dinner," says Rogers, "utter many bitter complaints (which Lady Hamilton vainly attempted to check) of the way he had been treated at court that forenoon—the queen had not condescended to take the slightest notice of him. In truth, Nelson was hated at court; they were jealous of him." But then it must be remembered that Rogers was renowned as a particularly ill natured gossip.

ECONOMY.

Economy is not a natural instinct, but the growth of experience, example and forethought. It is also the result of education and intelligence. It is only when men become wise and thoughtful that they become frugal; hence the best means of making men and women provident is to make them wise.—Samuel Smiles.

Pleading Insanity.

A French lawyer once defended a man who had stolen a chicken from a barnyard. He said his client was insane.

"I do not see in this theft anything that would indicate the mental derangement of the prisoner," said the judge.

"I beg your pardon," replied the lawyer, "this poor fellow is certainly insane. He stole a wretched chicken when he might have taken a nice fat pig."—Chicago News.

HOME RULE FOR CITIES AND COUNTIES

Power to Legislate Upon Local Matters Conferred Upon City and County Governments in a Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Offered by Senator Brown for the Joint Committee That is Investigating the Financial Condition of the City of New York—Gives Similar Relief to Up-State Cities and Counties as is Given to Greater New York.

Albany, March 6.—A constitutional amendment to grant to cities and counties as broad a measure of home rule as is consistent with the public interest, is proposed in a concurrent resolution offered in the Legislature by Senator Brown, chairman of the joint committee of the Legislature appointed to investigate the financial condition of the city of New York.

In its first report to the Legislature the committee recommended that large powers should be conferred on the Board of Estimate to abolish and consolidate departments. As these departments are all statutory, the constitution stands in the way of their consolidation or abolition by the city authorities and the proposed amendment to the constitution is to overcome this obstacle. The effect of the amendment will be to extend to all cities and counties an equal measure of home rule and will relieve the Legislature of the consideration of innumerable bills that are of purely local interest.

The resolution inserts in section one of article 12 of the constitution the provision that the Legislature may by joint laws confer upon cities such powers of local legislation and administration as the legislators may from time to time deem expedient.

It also amends section 26 of article three by adding the provision that the Legislature may provide for another form of government for a county or counties not wholly included in a city, subject to the approval of the electors of such county or counties at a general election in an odd-numbered year. In any county giving such approval, the powers and duties of towns and town officers as to highways, public safety and the care of the poor may be invested in or devolved upon county officers by law.

It also amends section 27 of article three so as to provide that the Legislature shall, by general laws, confer upon the boards of supervisors, or other governing elective bodies, of the several counties of the state such further powers of local legislation and administration as the Legislature may, from time to time deem expedient.

In a word, very broad powers are granted to all cities and counties to legislate for themselves as long as such legislation is not contrary to state wide interest, in which event the state has the power to protect itself by the withdrawal of the privilege.

In explanation of the proposed amendment, Senator Brown made this statement:

"This amendment is intended to confer upon the Legislature power to extend the measure of home rule to cities and counties consistently with the public interest, as local sentiment demands. The calendars of the Legislature are crowded with bills for purely local relief. This is especially true of the larger cities and counties in the neighborhood of cities which are really suburban communities. This amendment is introduced because of constitutional objections to general legislation conferring upon the city of New York the power to consolidate and reduce departments at will. It is really in discharge of the obligation resting upon the New York committee to do all in its power to give relief to the city under the terms of the committee's report.

"The performance of the fundamental obligation by the state to protect the rights of citizens should not be jeopardized by fixed constitutional delegation of sovereign powers to municipalities. Under the amendment offered, the Legislature may delegate the right to the municipality to enact such local legislation as it sees fit, and so long as the local adminstration is in harmony with the public interest, it is sure to be undisturbed. The knowledge that the power may be withdrawn if anything is done contrary to state-wide interest will act as a deterrent to the enactment of any local legislation in violation of the state's policy and duty to its citizens.

"In framing this amendment, it is intended to give great latitude so that laws could be passed expressive of a local popular desire. Nothing has tended more to hinder municipal progress in the more populous communities than insistence upon the application of principles to their government which had their origin in and are still cherished by smaller communities."

Gissing Blessed the Piano.

Bismarck's love of noise was shared by George Gissing. He found "five finger exercises" played on a neighbor's piano "grateful and helpful" when at his desk and said: "Even the street organs put me in a happy mood. I owe many a page to them—written when I should else have been sunk in bilious gloom."—London Standard.

RELATIVES IN LAW.

A Little Advice That May Help to Make Things Pleasant.

If I were giving counsel to the husband and wife who would make each other happy and hold each other's love I would suggest that neither call the attention of the other to the disagreeable qualities of the family of either.

"My husband loves my people as if they were his own," a wife told me. "It makes me so happy!"

I doubt if he did love her people very dearly, but he overlooked those characteristics which a more selfish man would have resented. If it was what a schoolboy would call a "bluff" it was a gloriously unselfish one.

Most of us can stand the tempers and idiosyncrasies of our own when we love have to bear them. It is when we see them through the eyes of a third person that they become unendurable. That is perhaps one reason why so few roofs are large enough to cover two families.

If each "in-law" exercised toward the members of the household into which he or she married the same pardoning love that is exercised toward one's own the aspersions cast upon the mother-in-law would die a natural death because they would have nothing on which to feed.—Virginia Terhune Van de Water in Mother's Magazine.

WHIRLIGIG BEETLES.

These Four Eyed, Six Legged Creatures Are Expert Swimmers.

More than likely you have watched him skating in "figures 8's" and all sorts of elaborate designs in quiet pools along a stream or on the edge of a lake. He will turn this way and that, describing one graceful curve after another, and then dart off in a straight line when he's frightened. He's speedy, as well as graceful. He's the whirligig beetle.

He has six legs, two longer ones in front and two pairs of short, flat paddles behind. These paddles make him an expert swimmer. His front legs, stretched out, look like arms.

Nature was also generous in giving him two pairs of eyes. With one pair he looks at objects on top of the water, and with the other pair he keeps watch for praying fish below.

There are something less than 300 species of whirligig beetles and they're scattered in all parts of the world. All summer you'll see their shiny bodies skating in spiral tracks and in curves on the surface of pools and sluggish streams.—Philadelphia North American.

Choate and the Green Bag.

Very few of our lawyers carry the green bags which were once a badge of that profession.

"I think the sight of such a bag once kept Joseph H. Choate from coming to Philadelphia to make a speech," Mr. Conlen said.

Mr. Conlen and another lawyer had gone to New York to invite the ex-ambassador to England to deliver an address in Philadelphia. Mr. Conlen's companion carried a green bag, which he laid upon Mr. Choate's table, evidently to the great lawyer's annoyance.

"What do you carry in that thing?" he asked.

"I have some law books," the young Philadelphia attorney replied.

"When I was a young lawyer," Mr. Choate said rather coldly, "I was taught to carry my law in my head."

And the invitation was declined.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Carved by Newton.

In the Newton chapel of the church at Colsterworth, in Lincolnshire, England, where Sir Isaac Newton was born, is to be seen one of the most interesting relics of the greatest of philosophers. It consists of a sundial and was carved by Newton when he was a boy on a stone in the house in which he was born, his only tool being a penknife. There it remained for many years until removed to Colsterworth church. Unfortunately the organ has been built directly in front of this interesting relic, so that unless one knows of the stone's existence and its presence in the church it is overlooked.

Nelson's Message.

In a book called "National Humor" a serious footnote states that Nelson's celebrated message, "England expects each man to do his duty," was phrased by the famous admiral as "Nelson expects," etc., and that one of his officers suggested the change of the first word to "England." Nelson's greatness was evident in his immediate acceptance of the change. A smaller man would have felt insulted at the proposed elimination of his own name.

It Sounded Big.

"She talks at different times of 'my maid,' 'my cook' and 'my laundress,'" said the woman with the mackinaw.

"Has she actually so many servants?"

"No," said the accompanying male person. "She means that her hired girl is a lightning change artist."—Detroit Saturday Night.

Extreme Ennui.

"I fear hers is a hopeless case. She's tired of everything."

"Everything?"

"Yes; even of going to the doctor."—Kansas City Journal.

Cured.

"Bacon lost a lot of money in a big sugar deal. That cured him of speculation."

"Sugar cured, so to speak."—Boston Transcript.

FIDDLERS LIGHTEN HEART OF GEORGIA

Old Echoes Heard When Mountaineer Musicians Meet.

MANY ARE MOONSHINERS.

All of Fifty Men Assembled Are Deep Dyed Americans and Are Able to Trace Their Ancestors Back Many Years—Look With Scorn Upon Modern Popular Music.

Atlanta.—The Old Fiddlers of Georgia, first assembled as a clan a year ago, have recently closed their second engagement in this city. The pride of Georgia's heart is in her annual grand opera, and thousands of people congregate in the Auditorium every April to listen to strange music in a strange tongue, and many of them enjoy it "almost as much as they think they do." But the "old fiddlers" really touch the heart.

As a class these musicians represent the mountaineer type, long and limber of body, silent, slow of speech, refined of feature, with quiet gray eyes, hair parted in the back. Their ancestors took the mountains, and the sons have never left the neighborhood. One family live in the same house built by their sire more than a century ago. A great majority of the men are poor. Their fare is simple, their life is bare and hard, and almost the only diversion is from the music of the fiddle or melodion—that is, if the family be rich enough to invest in a melodeon. The fiddle is often homemade.

When the mountaineer visits or receives visits the fiddle is used as the entertainer, and when the men journey to the county courthouse the instrument is carried along to make music and join in with other fiddlers congregated there, and in the hands of these men, who know no such thing as note or tempo, the fiddle is made to sing for all she's worth.

Inactivity and isolation have not made ambitious men of the mountaineers, and on long sunny days when it's too hot to work in the fields the fiddle is picked up by "pa," for the average mountaineer does not seem to take to master the instrument till he's in the forties. Some of the fiddles—there are no violins in the convention—are older than the tunes they play, having been in the family generations, and in one instance the instrument has been handed down to seven sires. The men look with scorn upon modern popular music, ragtime and opera, and nothing interests them except tunes that have been sung or played among them time out of memory.

When the winter is a particularly hard one and everything goes wrong on the little strip of land to make both ends meet, the head of the family finds a use for his corn—almost the only crop he can depend upon—and turns his cabin into a distillery, sometimes running the pipe into the kitchen chimney to put the revenue officers off the track of smoke. The distiller and lawbreaker is found sooner or later, and, with others, plodding slow and weary, he is brought before the federal judge, who gives a word of kindly counsel and a light sentence.

The fifty men assembled are not all moonshiners, however, a small percentage coming from wire grass regions, but all are from the heart of the woods on peak or in dale, far from the roll of locomotive or honk of automobile. All the musicians are Americans. They do not represent the Georgia Cracker from the fact that for centuries they have not mingled in the lowlands. If any enthusiasm on the subject could be raised—which is not probable—the fiddlers could trace their origin straight back hundreds of years to their mother country.

NO CLOCKS IN PRISON.

Oklahoma Convicts Go by the Sound of Electric Gongs.

McAlester, Okla.—After a trip through the state penitentiary here a visitor realizes that he has seen no clocks. Neither in the administration building, the rotunda nor cell houses is there a timepiece.

Recently a visitor without a watch was escorted back to the administration rooms after a tour of the prison. He glanced at the walls looking for a clock to see if he had time to catch a car into the city. There was none.

"Why, where are your clocks?" he asked a trusty.

The man grinned.

"We don't need any. We all have all the time we want here," he replied. Then he added, "Electric gongs announce divisions of time—work, eat and retire—according to the rings."

Jail Inmates Go Hunting.

Petersburg, Ind.—Hunting has become a pleasant diversion for some of the inmates of the Pike county jail. Time hangs heavily on their hands, and twice during one week recently prisoners were permitted the freedom of the nearby fields, and the privilege was given to kill, maim or capture wild game. Thus far the boarders have returned and have not violated their parole.

Cough Proves Fatal to Man.

Reading, Pa.—Calvin I. Rehrer, sixty-six years old, was seized with a violent coughing attack and burst a blood vessel. Hemorrhage followed and death resulted before a doctor came.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story, Written by FREDERICK LEWIS In Collaboration With JOHN T. M'INTYRE, Author of the Ashton Kirk Detective Stories. Read the Story and See the Essanay Moving Pictures

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. Shale, a crook and tool of Pollock, was on the fire escape watching for Langdon. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

"MY TIME WILL COME!"

"KEEP your eye on this man Langdon! He was either in the room or at the door when James Pollock was murdered!"

The words of the witness were like a stone flung into a pool of subtle inference that sent ever-widening ripples of possibilities to lap the very shores of suspicion itself. Every eye was on Langdon now, but except for a tightening of the muscles about his jaw he gave no sign of perturbation or anger.

The actor himself was uneasy now, however, and cast apologetic glances at both Mary and Langdon, moving nervously in the witness-stand as the prosecutor took up his questioning again.

"You say you overheard only a part of what was said before the police came. Will you tell us where you stood and why you heard only a part?"

"Yes, sir. The door opens out—as is always the case in hotel rooms—and when I started to open it I was behind it and therefore not visible from the room. But I could hear what was said when Mr. Langdon and detective Farley came out from the inner room of the suite where they had gone to look for Miss Page."

"And when the police came, did you remain in the room or did you join in the search for Miss Page?"

"I joined in the search, and went with the police down the fire-escape and through the back street."

"What had become of Miss Page?"

"I don't know."

"Do you mean that the police did not find where she had gone?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I returned to the hotel, got my hat and coat and went home."

"That is all," said the prosecutor. But the Judge leaned forward and voiced the question that everybody in the courtroom was mutely asking.

"Do you mean to say that a young lady in an evening gown and with no cloak walked through that street back of the hotel and that no one saw her? That you and the police got no clue in your search?"

"Yes, your Honor. Mary Page had disappeared absolutely, and no one knows where she went."

Langdon smiled, and the Judge sat back with a little exclamation that was not complimentary to the police; but when the name of the next witness rang through the room he leaned forward again and spoke with some irritation to the prosecutor.

"Is it your intention, sir, to develop through the testimony of THIS witness the whereabouts of Miss Page after the murder? It seems to me that that is the testimony that should be brought forward now."

"Your Honor, the movements of Miss Page between the time she was left unconscious in the room at the Republic until the following morning will have to be told by Miss Page herself. They are not known to me and I have no witnesses to testify to her whereabouts or actions. I have, in fact, been unable to get anyone who actually saw the prisoner during her flight. The truth must come out, of course, and I have in the meantime called the sister of James Pollock to develop an important line in the case for the State."

Again Langdon smiled, and the Judge sat back with a little shrug, as, amid a murmurous wave of comment and curiosity the name of the new witness was repeated:

"Ruth Pollock!"

The sister of the dead man who throughout the earlier testimony had sat unnoticed among the throng, was a tragic figure in her trailing black garments as she went to the stand.

"Miss Pollock, you have known the prisoner, Mary Page, for some years, have you not?"

"Yes, we were at school together and remained intimate friends afterwards."

"Was your brother also a friend of hers?"

"He was."

"Was there ever any closer relationship than that of mere friendship between your brother and Mary Page?"

"Yes. They were engaged to be married."

Even the Judge sat forward in his chair at the words, so simply uttered and yet so sharply changing the aspect of things. The prosecutor's next question came quickly.

"Was your brother happy in his engagement?" he said.

"I don't know how to answer that question. He was happy because he wanted to marry Mary, but he knew she didn't love him."

"If Miss Page did not love your brother, why was she willing to be his wife?"

The girl flushed and answered less readily:

"Well, you see—there were reasons—and she had promised."

"Will you please tell us those reasons?"

A little gasping sob wrenched from a woman's overburdened heart broke the stillness at that question, and Mrs. Page suddenly drooped forward, hiding her face in her hands. She knew only too well what was coming, and the courage that had kept her erect and smiling during the torture of the trial, gave way suddenly at this tearing open of old wounds. All her agony found vent in that one piercing cry of grief.

With her own eyes tear-dimmed Mary stretched out her hands yearningly, half whispering, "Mother! Mother!" and Langdon was at her side in a moment. She waved him back, and, drawing her veil across her distorted face, smothered the sobs that shook her thin shoulders like a storm, as the prosecutor repeated his question.

"Do you mean that the check was forged?"

"It all happened several years ago—five—maybe six. Mary and I were very good friends at that time, and I was at her home a great deal. So I knew that—that—they were greatly in need of money. I overheard Mr. Page say that there would be ruin for all of them, and that they'd be turned out on the streets unless he 'got the money' before morning. Mary overheard him, too, and when he went out she and I sat trying to think of some way by which we could raise money. It was while we were still talking that Mr. Page came back. He—he—had been drinking, and he was waving a check around his head and cried, 'I've done a good turn for a friend and I've been well paid for it. The Lord helps those who help themselves.' He seemed terribly excited, and went out again almost immediately saying that he wanted to cash the check before the banks closed."

"Whose check was it?"

"My brother's."

"Was he interested in Miss Page at that time?"

"Yes. He had always been, I think, but she was not at all in love with him. She had told me that."

"Yet he gave her father a check for a large sum?"

"No." She flushed hotly now, and cast a timid glance at Mary, as if half deprecating the necessity of the testimony. "That was just it. My brother had not—signed that check."

"Do you mean," broke in the Judge, "that the check was forged?"

"Yes. A detective sent by the bank came to the Page home while I was there and told Mrs. Page and Mary and me. Mary didn't believe it at first, but at any rate she said she didn't know where her father was, though we both guessed he—he—was in the bar of the hotel. He was mostly there. James was horrified when he found out that it was Mary's father who had cashed the check because, not knowing, he had already told the police to 'prosecute the man to the limit.' Mary cried and begged him to do something to save her father, and James said, 'I'll save him for your sake, Mary, if you will promise to do something for me in return.'"

"Did he say what that something was?"

"No. She didn't even ask. She just said she would do anything in the world he wanted if he would save her father. So he went with us to the hotel and we got there just in time to save Mr. Page from arrest."

"How did you 'save him,' as you call it?"

"James told the detective that he had forgotten about giving the check to Mr. Page and that it was perfectly good."

"And Miss Page was naturally grateful to your brother for his having saved her father?" prompted the District Attorney, as Ruth broke off, not knowing how to go on.

"Grateful? Yes. She—she promised to marry him. I heard her tell Mr. Langdon."

"Was Mr. Langdon at the house at that time?"

"No, he came while I was sitting talking to Mrs. Page. Mary and James were in the next room, so I went to let Mr. Langdon in. He stopped at the gate, looking at my brother's automobile, and I walked down the path to meet him. While we were coming back toward the porch the others came to the door. Suddenly James caught Mary up in his arms and kissed her. She seemed to struggle against him and, slipping away, ran into the house. Mr. Langdon, thinking that my brother had kissed Mary against her will, rushed at him and threatened to strike him."

"Your Honor!" It was Langdon's voice, suddenly harsh and strained, "I protest against this evidence as entirely irrelevant and leading up to nothing that has a bearing upon the case at present."

"The court cannot sustain your objection," said the Judge, curtly. "It is very unfortunate for you, Mr. Langdon, but whatever brings out the details of the relationship between Mary Page and James Pollock is decidedly relevant."

The District Attorney smiled in triumph. He turned to Ruth, who looked startled at the interruption, and said, gently:

"You were saying, Miss Pollock, that Mr. Langdon threatened your brother. Was there a fight?"

"No. Mary ran between them and said that James had a right to kiss her, that—that—they were engaged."

"What did Mr. Langdon say then?"

"He didn't say anything. He just turned around and walked away, and Mary began to cry."

"Was the engagement of your brother and Miss Page made public?"

"Yes. At a dance."

"Did your brother and his fiancee seem happy on that occasion?"

"No. I—In fact, I know they were not."

"Did they tell you so?"

"No, but I overheard. I—was hiding in the conservatory."

With a smothered gasp of surprise Mary's head came up suddenly and for the first time the eyes of the two girls met; but now it was Mary's that were accusatory and Ruth's that were troubled and it was in answer to that reproach, rather than the startled look on the prosecutor's face, that made Ruth add shyly: "It was all just in fun! I had promised a dance to Mr. Brandon, but I had told him that if he could find me before the music was half over, I would give him two more, for I had discovered a nook behind the palms which I was sure no one else could find."

She stammered over the girlish confession, a tide of crimson dyeing her pale cheeks.

"While I was hidden there, Mary and Mr. Langdon, who had been dancing together, came into the conservatory. I—I—didn't move because I felt I should look so silly, hiding like a kid behind the palms, and I thought they would soon go away. But—they didn't."

"Did Miss Page say anything about her engagement?"

"They were talking about it as they came in, and the first thing I heard was, 'I have given my word, Philip, and I must go through with it—even if it kills me.' She was half crying. Then Mr. Langdon said quietly, 'Mary, you don't love him, do you?' And Mary said, 'You know I don't, Philip. There is only one man in the world that I love.' Then he took her in his arms and she broke down and sobbed; but when he tried to make her say she would break her engagement she wouldn't, and she wouldn't tell him why she had promised to marry James. She only said that she could never be free unless James gave her back her promise."

"Do you mean to say," interrupted the judge, "that Mr. Langdon knew nothing of the episode of the forged check?"

"No. Mary told me she couldn't bear to tell him about her father. Besides, James had made her promise to keep that part of their engagement a secret from everyone."

"It seems incredible!" said His Honor, settling back, and the prosecutor asked, as if suddenly seeing a new viewpoint:

"Did your brother know of Miss Page's love for Mr. Langdon?"

"I don't know whether he knew then or not, but he knew later because Mr. Langdon told him. While I was still back of the palms James came to hunt for Mary, and she didn't want him to see she had been crying, so she went out and Mr. Langdon stood waiting for James. He told my brother that Mary was very unhappy in her engagement, but felt that she was in honor bound to 'go through with it', and he urged James to set her free."

"What did your brother say?"

"Well, he was—very angry," she answered, deprecatingly. "I—I—know he thought it was just interference, and he said, 'I suppose you want her set free so YOU can marry her.' And Mr. Langdon said, 'I want her set free because she doesn't love you and is breaking her heart over her promise to marry you.' 'What is that to you?' asked James. 'Do you think she is in love with you?' And Mr. Langdon said angrily, 'I know she is, but that has nothing to do with the matter. Can't you be decent for once and set a girl free when she doesn't want to marry you?' That made James even more furious, and he fairly shouted, 'Mary will learn to love me fast enough, once we're married, and I shall never set her free. She has promised and I'm going to see that she keeps that promise. Besides, do you think I'm going to let everybody say she jilted me, after we've announced our engagement this way? I should say not.'"

"Did Mr. Langdon reply?"

"No. He just turned round with a shrug and walked away, and I came out and joined my brother."

"Did he ask if you had overheard?"

"Yes."

"Did you tell him of the conversation between Miss Page and Mr. Langdon?"

"Yes. I felt that he ought to know. You—you see, he was my brother, even though Mary was my friend."

"Did your brother make any comment?"

"No, he just flushed up a little; then he laughed and said they'd have to get over it, and he was going to marry Mary anyway."

"Did Mr. Langdon ever make any other plea to your brother, or see Miss Page again?"

"Not then, but Mr. Brandon told me—"

"Your Honor!" broke in Langdon, leaping to his feet. "I object!"

"The court will sustain that objection," said the Judge, promptly. "Miss Pollock, you must not repeat what you have simply heard from others, only what you saw and heard yourself."

"May it please the court," cried the prosecutor, quickly, "I shall be glad to have all of the answer of the witness with the exception of the words 'not then' stricken out, for what Mr. Brandon said he will tell the court himself."

Brandon! Langdon winced at the name, and Mary, lifting her head, turned a pair of despairing eyes upon him that seemed to ask if all their friends were to be leagued against them in this fight for life and liberty.

He could object—could fight to have the witness kept out of the stand—but in the end he knew that he would lose and perhaps lend added weight to the testimony. He fancied he knew what THAT would be, and his teeth clenched in an agony of longing and a rage against the futility of that desire to spare Mary the raking up of these old memories—memories that brought a throbbing ache to his own heart that was only balanced by the bitter exultation of the thought that at least Pollock was DEAD now. And he vowed to himself that Mary should soon be free of the law as well as of James; but he did not face the fleeting thought of the price that might have to be paid for that freedom of Mary Page.

As for Mary herself, after that one fleeting glance at Langdon she drooped again like a flower cut off from rain and sunlight and air.

She would not look at Brandon when he took the stand, though his eyes as he glanced from her to Langdon were full of mute appeal as if he wanted somehow to explain that it was not by choice that he stood there; and there was an aggressive, almost a hostile note in his voice, as he answered the prosecutor's first incisive question:

"Mr. Brandon, you were present, were you not, on the night of the dance given to announce the engagement of Miss Page to James Pollock?"

"I was."

"You were well acquainted with both of them?"

"We all grew up together. I was not particularly intimate with Mr. Pollock," said Brandon drily.

"Did anything occur to lead you to believe that Miss Page was not happy in her engagement?"

"Yes."

"Will you tell us what that occurrence was?"

"I had a dance with Miss Pollock, but—she hid from me and it was not until later that I found her in the conservatory. She was crying and told me that Mary didn't want to marry James and that her brother and Mr. Langdon had just quarreled about it."

"What did you do?"

"I went in search of Langdon."

"Where did you find him?"

Brandon flushed, and again his eyes turned appealingly toward Langdon as if begging forgiveness as he said in a low voice:

"He was in the bar, drinking with a group of workmen."

"Did you join him?"

"Yes. Or, rather, I urged him to join me at one of the tables. I was surprised to see him take anything to drink, but when I said so he answered that he was drinking to forget that he had lost a girl who still loved him, though she was going to marry another man. I asked him if he meant Mary Page, and he said yes."

"Did you remain with him long?"

"No. I tried to persuade him to come home with me, and when he wouldn't, I left him. In the hall, however, I met Miss Page. I wanted her to see Mr. Langdon at that bar. I led her to the door. I remember how horrified she seemed, and how she struggled to control herself. I tried to steady her; but suddenly she went right over to Langdon's table, and several loafers gathered around them. She seemed not to see them at all. Her mind was apparently on Langdon alone. Langdon was just sober enough to realize that Miss Page ought not to be in such a place. He tried to push her away; but she cried out, 'Don't drink any more, Phil!'"

"Did Mr. Langdon make any reply?"

"Yes. He said, 'Why should I stop drinking? What have I to live for?' Then she put her arms around his neck, and it was while they sat thus that James Pollock came in. This seemed to sober Langdon completely. I rushed forward, fearing there would be a horrible scene, and urged Pollock to go away. He pushed all of us back. 'I want to get at him!' he kept calling. 'Just let me get my hands on him!' Langdon was trying to get Miss Page out of the place. He did succeed, while several of us held Pollock back by main force, in getting Mary into a little anteroom, a sort of parlor next to the cafe."

"Yes, go on, Mr. Brandon," urged the prosecutor, who seemed pleased with his witness.

"Well, Pollock was determined to follow them, and we couldn't prevent him. I found myself dragged into the little room with him, and I slammed the door. But James, for some reason, was calmer now. 'What does this mean, Mary?' he said.

"'It means,' Miss Page answered, 'that I can't marry anyone but Mr. Langdon,' and Langdon went on, 'Now, James, what are you going to do about it?'"

The prosecutor interrupted: "Did Mr. Langdon know at that time that Mary's father had forged Mr. Pollock's check?"

"No, sir, he did not, for Pollock produced it at that moment, and Langdon didn't know what it was. He looked at Miss Page, who seemed overcome with emotion. 'What does this mean, Mary?' he asked. But she didn't answer. Then Pollock told him—the straight truth. 'Her father did it,' I remember he said, 'and she's going to marry me. Now do you understand?'

"Langdon thought he was bluffing. 'You skunk!' he shouted; and Pollock waved the check in his face. Langdon grabbed it, and there was a struggle. The check tore in two, and when Langdon looked at the piece he held, he saw that it bore the forged signature, as Dan Page had written it. I saw him turn white as a sheet. But suddenly he smiled, and then he went calmly over to a lamp on the mantelpiece and burned it. I remember, as though it had been yesterday, how happy Miss Page looked when she thought this evidence against her father was destroyed."

The people in the courtroom gasped with relief. They could almost share Mary's sense of relief. But they were soon brought back with a shock as the witness went on:

"Pollock had fallen down; but he recovered himself, and began to sneer at Langdon. 'That isn't the check, anyhow, you fool! That's only a copy—for just such occasions as this!'"

"Was Miss Page disconcerted?" the prosecutor wanted to know.

"Oh, yes, sir. She said, 'What shall I do, Phil? I'll do whatever you say.' And he said, 'I won't influence you now. Do as your conscience dictates,' or something like that. I can't remember every word, of course. There was something about his not being weak again, and then he turned as if to go. He looked pretty downhearted."

"What did Pollock do all this time?"

"He jumped up then, when he saw that Langdon's back was turned, and tried to put his arms around Miss Page. She leaped back, as if she hated him. I remember she said something like 'Don't touch me, James Pollock! I'll keep my word with you—I'll go through with this, but you'll regret this night to the end of your life! Yes, you'll regret it, I tell you!'"

The prosecutor beamed satisfaction. He rubbed his hands at these last words and asked:

"Miss Page threatened him, didn't she, Mr. Brandon?"

"Yes, I suppose you might call it that," answered the witness readily, with apparently no thought that his testimony might be sealing the prisoner's doom.

"That is all," said the prosecutor, looking at the jury with a triumphant expression.

"One moment," said Langdon. "I'll take the witness, if you please."

By adroit questioning the young attorney brought out the fact that Brandon, some time after the episodes he had narrated, had come to New York and served on the Daily News as a police reporter. The District Attorney objected to this line of questioning, but the Judge permitted it to go on.

Finally the witness was brought down to the night when he took Mary Page to the door of the cafe so that she might see him, Langdon, within.

"Did you notice anything peculiar about Miss Page's appearance at that time? And if so, tell the jury what you saw."

Brandon hesitated. He acted like a man who did not care to answer this question.

"Proceed," prompted Langdon.

"Well, yes, I did notice that—" He paused.

"Go on," prodded Langdon.

"I noticed that Miss Page seemed terribly excited, and when we got to the door that led to the cafe, there was positively an expression of horror on her face. I never saw any one so unstrung. She had on an evening gown, of course, and I saw—" Brandon paused again.

"Yes? What did you see?" cried Langdon.

"I saw a strange mark on her shoulder—finger-prints that came and went in the most uncanny way. I was quite unnerved myself. Miss Page was by this time looking through the door at you, Mr. Langdon."

"I object!" shouted the District Attorney. "This story has no bearing—"

"Overruled," his Honor calmly said.

"This testimony," cried Langdon, a triumphant note in his voice, "will have an important bearing on the line of defense I shall later adopt."

"I object again," fairly yelled the prosecutor. "Such talk tends to prejudice the jury—"

"Overruled," again the Judge drawled.

"Is that the first time you ever saw these marks?" Langdon asked.

"Yes, sir."

"And the last time?"

"No. Six years later—"

"Tell the jury."

The witness coughed, as if preparing for an ordeal.

"It was the night of the opening of Miss Page in New York. I couldn't get a seat, so I stood in the rear of the theater, near the side. I was a police reporter then, and it was almost time for me to be on duty at the station. So I hurried away. Things were dull when I got there, so I sat in a corner near the stove and must have become a little drowsy. Pretty soon—I can't tell what time it was, but it must have been a couple of hours later—Langdon came rushing in. He was looking for Mary Page. We recognized each other, and I was surprised to find him in such a place on such an errand. Then he told me of the murder of Pollock.

"Somehow the night wore on. I had to stay on duty. In the morning, very early, the prisoners were brought out from the pen. I hadn't slept much. A paper was brought in, and I saw the staring headlines, telling all about the murder. That woke me up, I can tell you! What was my surprise, an instant later, to see Mary Page enter the room from a side door, in full evening clothes, but with no hat or coat! I could scarcely believe my eyes. I thought I'd gone mad, or something! Why, I'd just been reading about her—and there she stood, pale and beautiful, but bewildered and frightened. A police officer took hold of her.

"'Who is this woman?' the sergeant said.

"'We don't know who she is,' the officer answered. 'She wouldn't talk. She was pulled last night with a couple of—'

"Just then I was close to her. She didn't recognize me; she seemed strangely dazed, almost hypnotized. Then she caught sight of the paper in my hand, with its big type running across the whole front page—'Sensational Murder.' She grabbed, and read it, horrified, and we all just stood there looking at her, without saying a word. Even the sergeant was silent. She seemed to devour the story. And then—some vision must have come before her eyes, for she whispered something about 'a bottle,' 'whiskey,' and her face and arms became tense. I looked at her bare shoulder, and that's when I saw those strange finger-prints again. They came and went as before.

"Then the outer door opened, and you, Mr. Langdon, came in. You looked tired, haggard, bedraggled. You still had on evening clothes, I remember," turning directly to the jury, "what a sensation Mr. Langdon's presence created, his name having been in every headline too. Miss Page saw him. He went up to her without a word, and they embraced each other. And then Miss Page stepped forward to the sergeant's desk and whispered, so low that I could hardly hear her, 'I give myself up.'

"Everybody was astonished, as you might realize. Then she turned, and buried her head on Langdon's shoulder."

The attack on Forges followed an almost ceaseless bombardment for fifteen days of the French positions west of the Meuse, stretching as far as Malancourt.

With the coming of dawn this morning the violence of this bombardment was doubled, especially in the sector between Bethincourt, east of Malancourt, and the river. Shortly after noon the cannonading died away and picked infantry corps, leaping from their trenches, swept forward.

CENTRAL SAID TO HIDE $12,000,000

Counsel Charges Concealment of Profit, In Fight for Increase of Rates.

New York—Decision on the New York Central's plea for permission to increase one way passenger rates to 2 1-2 cents a mile hinges on whether or not a charge is sustained that it concealed $12,000,000 of earnings in its report to the Public Service Commission. The accusation is made by Max Cohen, Assistant Corporation Counsel of Yonkers.

The railroad told the Public Service Commission its operating expenses have increased and revenues diminished on New York State traffic for four years past.

"We practically stumbled into the past which brought into view the structure the road had so cleverly built up in its plans to hoodwink the Public Service Commission and the travelling public," said Mr. Cohen yesterday.

"We found that in figuring the total revenue from passenger service within the State the road had not included any proportion of the fares partly within and partly without the State. Yet these fares composed one of its most important sources of revenue.

"For 1914 the proportion of this interstate traffic carried within the State amounted to $11,293,000. In 1915 it exceeded $12,000,000. Officials of the New York Central were loath to admit the facts, however, when we called the matter to their attention.

"In short, we have found that the greater net revenue from its passenger troffic in this State than it has set forth. Now it seeks to increase this income further by throwing a blind over the public's eyes."

On this showing, Louis Marshall, representing the opposition to the asked for increase, will request the Public Service Commission today to postpone the final hearing until May.

SUPREME COURT TERM IN BLAST

Justice Andrews Will Be Succeeded by Justice Devendorf Next Week.

Oswego—Justice W. S. Andrews opened the March Supreme Court term at the Court House yesterday, and announced that he would remain here for this week only. Justice Irving G. Devendorf will preside during the remainder of the term as Justice Andrews has a grand jury remaining over from the January term, now in session in Syracuse and will be occupied there next week and there after.

On the call of the jurors nearly half of the panels asked to be excused but after their reasons had been sifted only the following were permitted to go:

Grand Jurors—J. F. Healy, Williamstown, and George Minahan and Simon Symborski, Oswego.

Trial Jurors—A. E. Brunot, James Deitz, Edward Hartnett, Wilson Metcalf, Edward Svtz and James P. Turner, Oswego; W. V. Beadle, Orwell; Hartwell Douglas and Jacob B. Dillenbeck, Pulaski; Clinton Foster and Frank T. Watson, Fulton.

Justice Andrews's charge to the Grand Jury was brief and then came the call of the calendar, these cases being announced as over, off or settled:

Settled—The People vs. Charles E. Briggs; J. Amos House and W. K. Stiffey vs Frank Pickens; Peter Lafave vs. Charles L. Healey; Charles E. Wheeler vs. the New York Central, and Julius Karch vs. George A. Schilling.

Held for Settlement—The People vs. Morse Donabella.

Over—Jennie Jones, as administratrix, etc., vs. New Cork Central; Daniel R. Snow vs, Charles H. Benjamin; E. J. Guilrey vs. Seneca iver Power Company; Gerald B. Owens vs. C. Glisman Falk, et ano.; E. J. Guirey vs. Seneca Improvement Company; S. C. Dean vs. City of Fulton; Caesar Sconfetti, as administrator, etc., vs. Steam Carriage Boiler Company; Jennie R. Edley vs. Melisso L. Ballard, et al.; B. V. Tucker vs. O. & W. Railroad; P. D. Bailey vs. W. G. Babcock; Sophie C. Brosemer vs. A. E. Brosemer; Edna K. and Don H. Vant vs. M. Prouse Neal.

Off—Julia F. White, as administratrix, etv., vs. John J. Matteson.

The first case to go to trial was that of Howard Hayes against Thomas Lacey, of Mexico, for alleged malicious prosecution. George W. Davis and Judge Rowe appear for the plaintiff and R. L. Simons and C. J. Miller for the defendant.

One of the cases set for today is the action to break the will of Bridget Gibbons, of Fulton.

The Grand Jury

Charles H. Evarts, of Mexico, was selected as foreman of the Grand jury and Edward Carr. of Richland, was named as clerk. Three abandonment cases were the only things before the Grand Jury this morning and as there is only a couple of jail cases the session will be short, unless the Bar Association report is presented to it.

BRYAN MAY GET NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

Zurich, via London—Dr. Alois Heilinger, a prominent member of the Austrian Parliament, has addressed a letter to the Nobel committee at Stockholm recommending that the Nobel peace prize for 1916 be awarded to William J. Bryan for his endeavors to stop American export of munitions, which Dr. Heilinger writes would have already ended the war and brought about peace negotiations under the powerful aegis of America.

LUMBERMEN SECURED FOR CANADIAN FARMS

Toronto—The Canadian government has sent immigration agents to Michigan to obtain men from the lumber camps to work on Canadian farms next spring, it was announced tonight by Findlay MacDiarmid, Minister of Public Works. It is expected that ten thousand men will be needed in about a month.

A Trick With an Egg.

Place two V shaped wineglasses of the same size near the edge of a table. In the right hand one put an egg, just fitting the rim of the glass. Hold the bases of the glasses firmly down, the top rims touching each other. Now with a quick, sharp breath blow upon the line where the egg and the glass meet. The egg will jump to the other glass. With a little practice this can be done every time. Be careful to blow in a line with the left hand glass, or the egg will jump in the wrong direction and land on the table.

BILLY SUNDAY NO PACIFIST.

God is a god of war as well as of peace. We must fight as well as pray. If it hadn't been for war we would be singing "God Save the King" instead of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee;" if it hadn't been for war the bloodhounds would be chasing the black men through the swamps and canebrakes today; if it hadn't been for war Spain would still be tearing at the heart of Cuba; if it hadn't been for war the flag of Mexico would be waving over Texas, New Mexico, Nevada and California. Yes, I believe in preparedness; I believe in battleships and submarines, and if any of the nations across the sea should care to find out whether the American people believe in the Monroe doctrine let them start something. If they do I would like to be colonel of a regiment.—Billy Sunday, the Evangelist.

METRAPOLIS UNDER HEAVY SNOW BLANKET

New York—A storm with many symptoms of an old-fashioned March blizzard in its early stages tied up city street traffic and New York harbor yesterday. t left in its trail six inches of snow, the heaviest precipatation of the Winter to date.

One death, one probably fatal injury and a number of minor accidents resulted from the blinding snowfall and slippery streets and elevated station platforms.

The steam railroads had less trouble than any other variety of surface communication. Late last night they declared they had maintained their schedules, with slight or no delays.

OF 50 COLLEGE DRONES ONLY FIVE ARE CO-EDS

Corvallis, Ore.—Women students at the Oregon Agricultural College are superiar to the men in scholastic attainment. Fifty students failed in the past semester's work. Of these only five were women.

Oll who failed were dropping from the college rolls. Of these, twenty-eight being first offenders, were reinstated on strict probation, fifteen were denied reinstatement for at least one semester and seven voluntarily withdrew from the college.

NEW YORK CITIES IN NEW HOME RULE MOVE

Albany—A proposed constitutional amendment designed to outhorize the Legislature to delegate home rule powers to cities and counties was introduced last night by Senator Brown, the Majority Leader.

The proposal is intended, not only to carry out the committee's recommendations with respect to permitting per York to have more of a say in controlling its own affairs but to be State-wide.

CHAUFFEURS' EYES SHOULD BE TESTED

New York—Declaring that many automobile accidents are due to defective vision of the persons at the steering wheels of motor cars, Dr. Thomas Hayes Curtin, professor of oophthalmology at the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, in an address before the New York Association for the Blind, yesterday urged an eye test for owners of automobiles and chaucuers.

WOMEN TO TILL LAND WHILE BRITONS FIGHT

London—"Britons are coming slowly to a realization of the country's needs," declared Walter Hume Long, president of the Local Government Board, in addressing today the inaugural of the Women's Nationol Land Service Corps. The women will undertake agriculturtal work as their share in the defense of the country during the absence of the men on military duty.

BANK TO EDUCATE BOYS IN FINANCE

New York Institution to Award Fellowships Each Year.

TO TEACH PRACTICAL DETAIL

Offers $50 a Month to Young Men Who Study and Work—After the First Year It is Planned to Furnish Permanent Positions—Colleges and Business Men Co-operate.

The plan of the National City bank of New York "for bringing the universities of the United States into closer touch with the needs and demands of the commercial institutions of the country" and for the purpose "of helping university students to choose their vocations and to enable the institution itself to select specially trained men for its foreign and domestic service" has been announced.

The bank proposes the establishment of a business fellowship, which will enable certain students selected by colleges to spend one year in the bank during their four years or more in college. In consideration of the practical work and certain courses of study pursued while there, the universities have agreed to let those students graduate with their classes, all other conditions having been fulfilled.

At Start $50 a Month.

Under the plan the National City bank agrees to pay each student in connection with this fellowship $50 a month for the first twelve months in its employ, with an opportunity to enter the permanent service of the bank at the end of that time, provided there is an opening and the student has satisfactorily passed the requirements of the bank and his university as well.

The bank further agrees to allow the student a sum not to exceed $150 for railroad fare to and from his university and the bank, it being understood that this does not cover more than two trips to and from the bank and applies only to those students accepted by the bank.

The conditions governing the selection of the students are in brief as follows:

The university shall select and recommend to the National City bank each year certain students who have completed two years or the equivalent of their collegiate course and certain graduate students especially qualified for banking service. Selections shall be made without regard to the student's financial condition. They shall be on the basis of character, personality, natural ability, scholarship and probable fitness for banking service.

How the Youths Will Work.

The students accepted by the bank will apportion their one year's time in the following ways:

Undergraduate students entering upon their collegiate course in the fall shall spend two summer vacations of approximately three months each at the bank between their sophomore and junior and their junior and senior years. The remainder of the required year may be completed in the first or second semester of the senior year or immediately after graduation.

Graduate students shall spend at least one summer vacation, preferably two, at the bank in their graduate course and shall complete the remainder of the required year immediately upon finishing their course.

Should it seem inadvisable for a student from the middle west, west and south to return east for two summers it shall be arranged to have him work his first summer in a large bank in his home section. It might even be acceptable in some cases if the student in lieu of three months in the bank spent the same time in a commission house, a bond house, a United States custom house, a forwarding company, a brokerage house or in some form of executive work.

A recommendation from the student's employer shall be required as a requisite to enter the second summer's class.

During the twelve months of service with the bank the student, besides his practical work, will pursue certain studies prescribed by the bank with the advice and co-operation of the university. The course of study will be under the supervision of the university committee, composed of representatives of the leading eastern universities in and near New York city, working in conjunction with officers of the bank.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

There is no question about it, that the first concert of the FULTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA was a decided success and the people in FULTON are herewith thanked and congratulated for coming out as strong as they did.

It has been shown now for the second time that it is possible to get the people in FULTON interested in something from and for FULTON.

Who was the gentleman who said that the Chamber of Commerce was not doing anything at all? Please call at the office.

It shows what can be done, when we are willing to help one another. We may be able to do all sorts of things for FULTON, if we would always cooperate.

We are thankful to the Evening Times, the Patriot and The Observer for the splendid help these papers have given us to boost the first concert of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra.

The first annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held March 31st, 1916. This is an event of note and we certainly hope that all members will be present and that they may thoroughly enjoy what we are going to offer them.

* * *

Protect home institutions and YOU will always benefit by it yourself.

It is too bad that the city cannot clean our streets a little better, especially First street, where most of the traffic is. The sidewalks are in bad shape and one may as well take a bath as use those sidewalks.

We wish that all men and women and children would call attention to the many little things that we may be able to fix. If you don't tell us, we may overlook most of them, because we can't be everywhere.

* * *

Cultivate the friendship of the farmer and you will do yourself a good turn. What Fulton needs more than anything else is the return of the farmer to the city of Fulton.

Let's get busy on this; let's give the farmer the glad hand and let's show him that we are just as much interested in him as in ourself.

We are announcing already a GOOD ROADS DAY for FULTON and vicinity as soon as the weather permits.

* * *

We also announce that the clean-up campaign will be repeated this year in great style. The slogan will be as follows: CLEAN UP; PAINT UP; BRIGTHEN UP;

Are you getting ready to do your share of the work that HAS to be done?

We have some splendid material here in our city and we should be PROUD of this material instead of being jealous.

Have you ever tried to make the other fellow feel good by giving him what is coming to him, when he has accomplished something real good?

* * *

A Buffalo business man went to the concert last evening and was agreeably surprised; he complimented Fulton.

AN IRISH "TAY" ROOM WILL APPEAR SOON

The annual "library tea" will be served in the assembly hall of the Public Library, Saturday, March 18th. An attractive Irish "tay" room, and a candy and food sale will be the principal features. It is the hope of the committee that the people of Fulton will take this opportunity to help the Library, not only by buying, but also by showing interest in the work of the institution.

The Library is growing daily, and merits the help of all. If you can not go to the sale please send donations. Your interest in one of the most important of Fulton's public institutions will be measured by your support.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes, Mrs. A. L. Rice, Mrs. F. L. Marvin, Mrs. J. W. Pratt, Miss Whitaker, Miss Stanley and Miss Forsyth.

Remember, "Fulton first, last and all the time."

Muck Land Growers to Be Benefited By State Department

Experimental or demonstration plots will be established under the State Agricultural Department's supervision on the muck land farms of H. F. Crumb, Fulton; Edward Saisselin, of Oswego, near Scriba; H. C. Alexander's farm at Granby; F. B. Trask, R. F. D. 5, Fulton; and Beaver Meadow, Fulton; and a plot of muck land belonging to John Churchill, R. F. D. 9, will be devoted to seed testing.

Tentative plans for carrying out the idea were explained to the growers at yesterday's meeting of the Oswego County Farm Bureau the purpose of which was to enlist the cooperation of the State Agricultural Department in improving muck land products in this county.

State Shows Spirit

Prof. A. E. Wilkinson, of the State Agricultural Department, the principal speaker at the meeting had his wishes carried out, in that the meeting was of an informal nature—a sort of round-the-table talk. He stated that the owners of the plots would be required to furnish only tthe land, labor and seed—that the State would furnish the fertilizers and also have a representative of the Department visit the plots at intervals, for the purpose of taking notes and making suggestions. The State, he said, would require that the grower maintain the experimental plot for a period of three, four or five years.

The method of operating the experimental plots is to test the effect of the fertilizers in different forms and proportions and to have a section of land measuring about 75 x 70 feet divided into three portions, one for onions, another for celery, and the third for lettuce. These sections are to be [illegible] in such manner that each will be treated with a proportion of fertilizer in quantities of 2-8, 2-8-2, 2-8-4, 2-8-6, 2-8-8, 2-8-10, and 2-8. On the plot of land owned by Mr. Churchill, a variety of seeds will be sown and the effect of the fertilizers on the seeds will be noted.

Use of Preventives Explained

A number of the growers aimed a volley of questions at Mr. Wilkinson, all of which he answered in detail. Diseases and their preventives formed the basis for most of the quetions. The speaker stated that if more nitrogen was needed in the soil, or more phosphorus, an effort should be made to find methods of increasing the percentage. Such a procedure is necessary in this vicinity, and this is one of the purposes of the State's work, he said. The average quantity of nitrogen in New York State muck lands has been found to be about 2 per cent, with one-half to one-quarter per cent of phosphorous and a very small quantity of potash. Mr. Wilkinson asserted that every piece of muck land is different in its constituency.

One of the growers asked if experiments conducted on certain farms on the county would serve for all other farms. This man stated that 95 per cent of the muck cultivated in the county is really on four or five large plots. He also remarked that the lettuce grown here is excellent, due in th main to the liberal us of fertilizer. This last statement led him to ask Mr. Wilkinson the exact amount of fertilizer to use per acre. He continued his remarks with a statement that it was the desire of all the growers to dimish the cost of production and that if the amount of fertilizer could be diminished without affecting the yield, a large saving would be made. Mr. Wilkinson answered the grower by stating that only a series of experiments would reveal the exact amount of fertilizer to use.

The disadvantages of using lime on the soil were explained in connection with neutralizing acility in the soil. Mr. Wilkinson told of failures resulting from the use of lime when the land had been under cultivation for a number of years. A good way to correct the acidity in the soil, he said, was by a good drainage.

There was informal discussion on diseases and blights in this neighborhood during 1915. Mention was also made of the inferiority of seeds sold by one company, resulting in the failure of many

Symphony Orchestra Scored Triumph In Its First Concert

Cooperation, the handmaid of civic pride, presented a monster audience at the Quirk last night in honor of "our" Symphony Orchestra's first public appearance. It was a pleased, happy gathering that faced the footlights, and from the time the first note was struck until the final bar of the "Star Spangled Banner" appreciation was expressed in round upon round of hearty applause.

The sight of thirty local musicians seated upon the stage, each wearing an expression of a desire to do his best to shine for his home town, while aloft swung the motto, "Fulton, First, Last and All the Time," was enough to make over the most chronic "kicker" into a "booster." Director F. Jess Newton is today recieving congratulations galore, and our little city is indeed fortunate in having in its midst musicians of such fine ability as is found in the Newton family. The superior work of the director was evident thruout each number on the program.

When the Surprises Occurred

The opening number, the selection from "Carmen," Bizets' well known opera, gave evidence at the start of the excellent manner in which the organization had been rounded into form.

"Andante Religioso" by Thome, was a most pleasing number and the harp accompaniment by Miss Rumsey in this selection was a decided feature.

The Lion Du Bal Valse movement in which the string instruments were muted proved to be a most pleasing interpretation of this familiar arrangement.

"The Berceuse" from Jocelyn, which was played by the brasses and winds wood, was ap articularly novel and enjoyable number.

"The Hungarian Fantasie" by Tobani perhaps received the greatest round of applause from the audience, and this selection was certainly rendered by the organization in an entirely professional manner.

"The Dream of Love" by Liszt, and quarette from Rigoletto, as well as the closing selection from Wagner's "Tannhauser" were all given in such am anner that it was hardly possible to comprehend that the audience were listening to an organization which was giving its initial appearance.

Orchestra's Difficult Work

The encore number, "Traumeri" for the strings should also deserve special mention, and the audience approved of this in such a manner that the orchestra was compelled to repeat it.

The solo work of Mrs. Addie J. Newton, in her songs, "Sunlight" by Herbert and the Song Cycle, "In a Brahmin Garden," was of a professional order, and the manner in which the orchestra accompanied the singer in these difficult numbers was excellent.

A pretty feature of the evening and one appreciated by the audience, followed the 7th number. Two enormous bouquets of roses, were tossed upon the stage at the feet of the soloist, Mrs. Newton, who received them graciously.

The Secretary Sanguine

Following the period of intermission Secretary Hollenga appeared upon the stage and was promptly greeted with applause. In a few well chosen words he voiced appreciation for the expression of cooperation made manifest by the well filled theatre. He declared a belief that the demonstration of interest exhibited at the Municipal Christmas tree exercises, coupled with the evening's expression of pleasure, was proof sufficient that our city is working in a new era. Enthusiastic applause marked the approval of his sentiment.

Today everywhere were heard words of appreciation and pleasure. It indeed seemed as if the whole city were awakening to a new life, for, when communities as well as individuals find enjoyment in the finer things of life a good day is surely ahead.

The Chamber of Commerce and its energetic secretary deserve the highest commendation for their worthy efforts.

PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR

French scientists assert that the intensely powerful searchlight now used on the German Zeppelins is the invention of a Frenchman, M. Dussaud, who described the night lighting system to the Academy of Sciences four years ago. The invention is called "cold light," and is said to realize an effective illuminating power equal to 90 per cent. of the initial energy, whereas in the ordinary lighting systems 80 to 90 per cent. of the energy is absorbed in heat. M. Dussaud's invention was patented in all countries of the world. A Berlin concern bought the German rights in 1913, but France ignored it. After the outbreak of hostilities the inventor placed himself at the disposal of the French authorities, but red tape kept the invention and the inventor traveling from one office to another until M. Dussaud gave up in discouragement. During the recent Zeppelin raids on Paris eyewitnesses described the German light as a piercing crowd that stopped the rays of the most powerful searchlights from the entrenched camp of Paris. The light consisted of perpendicular flashes, whose rays were so intense as to make the streets on which it was focused almost as light as day.—Utica Dispatch.

LOSING POWER

The President's authority at the capital is crumbling. The list of his enemies there, open and secret, is ominously lengthening. The Democratic majority broke away from him last winter on the shipping bill. This year it has ignored his leadership on the Philippines bill and on army reorganization. It will probably break away from him again on the shipping bill, on taxation and on other measures on which he counted on having his way unopposed. He took dangerous risks with his prestige when he demanded that the two houses should depart from the safe precedent of non-interference with foreign relations and declare themselves on a diplomatic programme still in the making. He wanted to show, he said, that he was speaking for a united country in his negotiations with Germany. But it was obvious that he was still more interested in being able to speak for a united party (a party clubbed into unity) at the next Democratic national convention. The fact that Mr. Wilson was absolutely right on the issue on which he challenged the insurgents in Congress cannot obscure the fact that he has come out of his first skirmish with them with little glory. What happened yesterday leaves his control of party in Congress as tenuous and uncertain as ever.—New York Tribune.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROW

This is the time to put in orders for trees. The State supplies seedlings and transplants at cost and has a stock of 10,000,000 on hand. The figures sound large, but they are not apt to be large enough to supply the demand. The ten million is sufficient to reforest only about 10,000 acres.

If there is any one who wants to see his money grow, there are few methods better than planting trees. Based on a stand of white pine planted in Oneida county 44 years ago, the Conservation Commission finds that any man who should plant an acre of pine trees today at a cost of $10 would find his acre of trees worth $370 at the end of 44 years. That is 292 per cent more than the maximum investment would amount to at compound interest for the same period and 1.016 per cent more if at simple interest. The Conservation Department considers the Oneida county experiment conclusive evidence of what can actually be done.

The average diameter of the trees four feet and a half from the ground is at 13 inches. The largest tree measures 19 inches and contains 400 board feet of lumber. The acre bears 37,000 feet, valued at $370. The soil is poor sandy loam and not adapted to agriculture.

The Conservation Department does not mention it, but the chances are that 44 years from now lumber will be worth a grea deal more than it is today, in which case one acre of trees will be worth more than an acre at present.

The State sells its trees for $1.50 per 1,000 for two-year seedlings up to $4.50 for 1,000 four-year transplants. When there is so much land lying idle in the State, when little trees can be had so cheaply and planted with such small labor cost, when the planted trees immediately begin to increase the value of the land, it is a wonder that owners of waste land do not switch it into productive land.

Ten acres or 100 acres of planted forest land is a pretty good form of an insurance policy. One of its advantages is that annual payments need not be made on it, if it is far enough away from towns to take advantage of the law which makes such lands non-taxable. One hundred dollars or $1,000 invested this spring will be worth $3,700 or $37,000 44 years hence. Moreover, the man who plants a few acres to trees helps a little bit to stem the evils that follows the train of forest destruction.— Utica Observer.

DOES ADVERTISING IN THE NEWSPAPERS PAY?

Does advertising in the newspapers pay? is a question asked by thousands upon thousands of small business men who allow themselves to believe that their fame is established; that they are so well-known that to spend real money for real advertising is little short of appearing as candidates for funny foundries. To all such men we give this advice, get under ground. There are many who choose to live underground and they are entitled to that privilege. They are persons whose minds are lighted only by prejudices and jealousies, as they see nothing clearly—least of all the value of newspaper advertising.

The man who tells you that he need not advertise is the man who does not keep up with the times. That is all there is to it. He does not see that times as well as winds change, and business ways must be improved or everything gets on the down grade. A manufacturer of dentifrice has closed a campaign of advertising in Boston papers. The experiment was short lived but the result is lasting and elastic, for it increased sales, in Boston alone, 400 per cent over the entire sales in all the New England states for the entire year of 1915.

Does newspaper advertising pay?

Here is one more reply:

The B. F. Goodrich Company of Akron, Ohio, has used large newspaper space to advertise its tires. Last year seventeen per cent dividends were paid on the common stock. The capital is $60,000,000 and the dividend for the previous year was less than six per cent.

Does advertising in the newspapers pay?

A certain talking machine company began using newspaper space several years ago. The result was a recent extra dividend of ten per cent on the common stock; this in addition to a regular quarterly dividend of five per cent.

Just one more proof that newspaper advertising does pay, and handsomely —

The portrait of a maker of safety razors decorated almost every magazine in the country a few years ago. About a year ago the maker discontinued to use the magazines, switching over to the newspapers. Result: Eight million of his razors were sold last year, against ninety thousand the first year of his magazine campaign, and in 1915 the net earnings were $2,427,173, against $1,673,435—some increase.

Does advertising in the newspapers pay?

Handsomely in contrast with cheaply gotten up and cheaply printed circulars and post cards and sign boards. It means prosperity for those who have the nerve and foresight to bank on it, but it must be judicious, consistent and continuous.

IN THE FIRST EQUAL SUFFRAGE STATE

Instead of being threatened with excessive taxation as in the case in many states, Wyoming is threatened with no taxation at all, and is likely to be the first state in the Union where taxes are not levied for the support of the state government.

The income of the state derived from fees, lands, leases royalties and interest in investment last year was $808,241.02, while the amount received from direct taxation was $568,497.51. There was a cash balance on hand at the beginning of the year of $718,425.80. The actual expenses of Wyoming were $1,305,588.21 After paying all expenses and making some investments in permanent funds, there is carried over a cash balance of $680,993.61. With the balance and the income which will be derived this year from oil and mining development, royalties on state lands, leases and fees, the state will easily be able to get along a year at least without direct taxation.—Anaconda Standard.

HODCARRIERS BETTER PAID THAN TEACHERS

New York—"The hodcarrier gets more wages than you do. Your professional spirit perhaps puts you above the hodcarrier, and apparently gives you a feeling of superiority. You are the poorest paid and least considered of all our public servants."

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, made this declaration yesterday to a meeting of teachers in the DeWitt Clinton High School. They were gathered to make the first defininte move to form a union.

The labor leader came from Wilkes Barre, Pa., to aid in organizing the 20,00 0school teachers of New York.

Yesterday every teacher in Greater New York received a pamphlet appealing for support of the purposed organization. The book explains the antagonism of the Board of Estimate to teachers, and urges immediate action in forming the union. It has been proposed that the new union affiliate itself with the American Federation of Labor. The name suggested is American Teachers' Protective Association.

President Gompers took exception to a statement that if the teachers organized they would be subject to sympathetic strikes to help metal workers and other organized labor unions.

GRAND OPERA, "CARMEN," AT OSWEGO TOMORROW

The engagement of the Manhattan English Grand Opera company, "Carmen," at the Richardson Theatre, Thursday night, March 9th, is eagerly looked forward to by the music loving public of Oswego. The praise of this organization has already reached Oswego from different cities of the United States. The Company is composed of such well known artists as Ethyl Peters, Claire Bell, Edith Carematori, Elaine Castle, Henri Barron, Forrest LaMont, Homer Burress, Richard Park, Alan Turner and Guiseppe Interante. The chorus has been selected from the Metropolitan and Boston Grand Opera Companies. A feature that has proved nothing less than a sensation is the classic dancing of Orchidee who has been proclaimed through Europe the symphonic Poem of Motion.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"The Final Curtain," a George Kleine photoplay, released through Kleine-Edison Features, to be shown at the Quirk theatre today, deals, as it's title implies with the stage. A child actress, attracts the interest and awakens the affections of an awkard youth, who, in later years becomes rich and powerful but cherishing the secret ideal of his boyhood days, has never married.

By a strange chain of circumstances the former child actress arrives in New York where she quickly becomes a star. Her former youthful admirer, meets and finally marries her.

When a powerful climax is finally reached, the chief character, the boy and the pretty little child actress, now grown up, have learned that even love's proverbial "rosy poth" is beset with thorns. Of course everything is eventually straightened out and there is a happy finale.

Arthur Hoops and Alma Hanlon are featured in "The Final Curtain" and receive splendid support from a company of unusual excellence which includes Frank Belcher, the versatile Kleine film favorite and Crimmins & Gore of international fame as comedians. Four Universal reels make a nine-reel show.

TALKS ON BANKING

SAVINGS BANK CENTENNIAL SERIES

No. 5.---HOW THE BANK "MAKES" MONEY

It would seem that after the bank takes your money, protects it, pays it back on demand or as your order, lends you money, discounts your neighbor's note for you, it would have nothing else to offer in your behalf. But it has—it "makes" money for you, and incidentally makes money for itself.

When you see the president or the cashier of a bank signing his name to a row of four crisp new bills (they always come in sheets of four), you may wonder what he is doing, and what is behind it all. We will suppose you want to borrow a thousand dollars and offer your note to your banker. He knows you, knows that you will pay, and wants to accommodate you. He looks at his books and says: "I can't spare the money. The law says I must have fifteen cents out of every dollar I owe my depositors in cash, or where I can get it on demand; and I have just what the law requires. If I give you credit for the note and let you check against it. I increase my debts and make my condition worse, for if I do not pay you in cash I must stand ready to do so."

But being a resourceful banker, and knowing how, he asks you to wait a minute while he goes to his strong box. He finds a government bond which he bought a year ago when he had plenty of spare money, for cash, and comes back smiling and says: "Very well, in three days you can have your money. I will turn this bond into bank notes for you." So he sends the bond to Washington, and in return the Government sends him 200 crisp new five-dollar bills, to be signed by two officers of the bank, cut and handed out to you.

The Government keeps the bond as security that he will redeem the notes in "lawful money" on demand—that is, pay greenbacks, or gold for them if demanded (but this is seldom done) pays him interest on the bond and you pay him interest on your note for the use of his notes, and both are satisfied.

You see, by this proposition, he has turned your note into bank notes, with himself behind it, and the Government behind him. Your promise wouldn't go very far from home, these promises will. Every body knows them. They are "money" and circulate as such.

Now what has the banker done by this process? He has furnished the community as well as you with circulating medium, handy to carry, cheap to create, and satisfactory to all. He has taken your credit and turned it into bank credit. He makes money and you take the money he has made and make some money for yourself. It is a very simple proposition, understood by few, but practiced by many. If you don't fully understand it, ask your banker to tell you more about it. This feature of banking, however, is performed in this country only by banks under control of the Federal Government, namely, the national banks and Federal Reserve Banks, but is a common banking practice the world over, differing in form but not in substance, it being a universal function of the bank to turn credit which is unknown into that which is known and will therefore be freely taken, and bank note credit is the most common and useful form.—American Bankers Association.

BUSY BEES IN WINTER.

How They Generate Heat to Keep the Colony Warm.

The bee upholds his reputation for industry throughout the winter months as well as during the summer. Being susceptible to cold, the bee must turn to his colony for warmth. Communism, which in bees is so highly developed in the storing of food and caring for the young, is also the basis for the heating system.

It was found by experiment that only the shell of the cluster made by the bees in cold weather is compact. This is formed by one to several layers of bees all solidly arranged with their heads inward, their hairs interlacing. This arrangement is perfect for conservation of the heat within. Except for an occasional shifting of position the bees forming the shell are quiet. But within the shell strange things are going on.

It is here that the heat is generated. And the antics are not unlike our own when we are cold. The bees are packed loosely within the shell so that there is plenty of space for many bees to be exercising at a time. Rapid fanning of the wings, shaking the body from side to side, rapid breathing and other movements are all part of the scheme for raising the temperature. In one particular instance, when a bee had been rapidly fanning with his wings for seven and a half minutes, the thermometer nearest him rose half a degree F.—Pearson's Weekly.

FIXING UP A PLAY.

The Method Charles Hoyt Used to Develop His Dramatic Plots.

Charles Hoyt wrote seventeen plays. He would sit in the Pullman with the shade drawn down over his head and looking out of the window at nothing—thinking, studying over situations for that new play.

He would not begin work on a new play until he had its arrangement laid out in his mind. Then he would write it, longhand, in two or three days.

He developed his situations by telling over and over and over again his scheme for a new play. He would come to me. "Otie," he would say, "have you heard my idea for a new play?"

I would say that I had not. Then he would launch into it, elaborating as he went along. He would see me, later in the day perhaps, with some one. He would come up to us with the same question. "Otie, have you heard my idea for a new play?" knowing mighty well I had. He wouldn't wait for me to answer, but he would tell it to my companion, elaborating upon the version he had given me. For each new play I probably would hear that same question twenty times and listen to twenty different versions, each succeeding one more developed and elaborate.—Green Book Magazine.

Dangers of Draft

Drafts feel best when we are hot and perspiring, just when they are most dangerous and the result is Neuralgia, Stiff Neck, Sore Muscles or sometimes an attack of Rheumatism. In such cases apply Sloan's Liniment. It stimulates circulation to the sore and painful part. The blood flows freely and in a short time the stiffness and pain leaves. Those suffering from Neuralgia or Neuralgic Headache will find one or two applications of Sloan's Liniment will give grateful relief. The agonizing pain gives way to a tingling sensation of comfort and warmth and quiet rest and sleep is possible. Good for Neuritis too. Price 25c. at your Druggist.

M'CORMACK, THE TENOR, COMING

Seats May Be Sold Here---Special Return Train Night of Concert a Probability.

The coming of John McCormack to Oswego under the auspices of the citizens there, on March 23rd, is arousing interest in this city ,not only among those persons who have heard the great rish tenor, but also in the minds of the persons who know the singer by reputation.

McCormack has a way of touching the heart strings of the American people . He won that distinction by persistent hard work and he is now reaping his reward. A big boost will be given him by the people of this city ,so much sa that it is felt imperative by his management to provide a special agent here for the sale of tickets, and also a special return train at the conclusion of the performance.

His Rapid Rise

Associated with Mr. McCormack is Edwin Schneider, who has become a pronounced favorite with the audiences everywhere and whose artistic and conscientious work has justly earned for him the distinction of being called one of the three great accompanists of America.

The musical career of Mr. McCormack is not unusual. A college boy, he arrived in London with the hope of obtaining work with a well known firm of Dublin lawyers. A young doctor, with whom he was stopping, appreciated the beautiful quality of his voice and arranged for a meeting with Vincent O'Brien, a music teacher of the city. As a result he did not enter the law firm, but joined the Marlborough choir and the Dublin Oratorio Society and in a comparatively short time had won the gold medal (first prize) at the Dublin music festival in a competition open to tenors from all parts of the British Isles.

McCormack was born in Athlone, Ireland, by the banks of the lordly Shannon, on the 14th day of June, 1884. Attended school in his native town until he reached the age of twelve and then was transferred to the Summer Hill College Sligo. His college career was a particularly brilliant one. It is a matter of record that he won a sufficient number of prizes to pay his tuition for four or five years. He made his debut in grand opera in London in October, 1907.

The Chicago Tribune says : John McCormack has become an institution with the music-loving public of America. His song recitals, like the laws and customs of the time, as Webster would say, "are persistent elements in the country's social order."

SCHOOL DATA IS DESIRED

The Evening Times is in receipt of the following communication:

At the request of the State Education Department, I am preparing an historical review of the origin and development of the public school system of Oswego Falls and Fulton — which fourteen years ago united to become the school system of the city of Fulton.

I desire to get as much of the early history of the establishment, growth, and development of the schools of Oswego Falls and the village oof Fulton as may be possible.

In this connection I would like to have the date of the establishment of the first school in each of the villages and facts regarding these organizations and other information which may be given me to make the review ,as thorough an accurate as possible.

Any one possessing such information and date will confer a great favor by communicating with me by mail or otherwise.

J. R. Fairgrieve,
Supt. of Schools.

CITY HALL COURT WILL CLOSE SOON

This Will Wind Up the Most Successful Season Since Project Was Launched.

The Cit yHall basketball court will be closed fo rthe season on March 24th, prior to which time the High school team will have the floor on two successive Friday nights for games with out of town teams. The High School team will then close what has been one of the most successful seasons in the past five years. After O'Brien and Webb were lost to the team, these two men being the only regulars from last season, there seemed to be but slim chance of developing a quintet which would stand a chance of scoring victories on of the high school teams with which games were to be played after these two men left school, but the quintet which is now representing the school is considered much better than the team which started the season.

While the High school team had the use of the City Hall Court on three nights a week, the gym was nevertheless in use at all times except during school hours by teams representing the churches, boy scouts, and juvenile clubs. In fact, there were more teams scheduled top ractice on the court this year than has ever been recorded. Most of these teams have engaged in games on their practice nights. There have been a number of out-of-town teams brought here, principally from Oswego, with whom stirring contests have been waged:

For the first time in o number of years, girls have occupied the floor for practice, Miss Dickerman of the high school having out a squad of more than twenty candidates for her representative team. In the past two weeks another group of girls from one of the church Sunday school classes has been making use of the court.

CROCKETT MAY SUCCEED IVES AS CAPTAIN

"Bob" Crockett will captain the Maccabee basketball team, tonight, in the game with the A. C. U. of Syracuse .Crockett may lead the team for the rest of the season as Ives, the regular captain, is not likely to again join the squad on account of his injured ankle.

Reynolds, of the high school squad, will play the forward tonight. The Maccabees held a hard practice last night in preparation fo rthe A. C. U. game.

FELDMAN HELD FOR FORGERY

Mr. L. C. Foster, cashier of the First National Bank was called on the telephone this morning by John W. Stevenson, and informed that the person alleged to be responsible for issuing a number of checks in New York city, and other places, has been taken into custody by the Manhattan police. Mr. Stevenson informed Mr. Foster that Max J. Feldmann, until recently a merchant tailor of this city, is charged with the crimes. His stock was recently sold in bankruptcy proceedings. He left town more than a month ago, but failed to inform friends of his destination.

Cashier Foster states that a check amounting to about $200, with John W. Stevenson's signature had been presented at the bank, was a forgery. It is alleged also that a number of checks on the First National Bank have been forged and passed in New York city.

Mr. Stevenson could not be located in the city this afternoon, it being stated that he is still in New York city.

PER CAPITA COST OF STATE WARDS

Albany—New York State spent $6,885,385.98 last year for the care of its insane in institutions, according to the annual report of the State Hospital Commission which was submitted to the Legislature yesterday. The per capita expenditure for maintenance was $210.89. or only 57 3-4 cents per day. This included every item outside of buildings and permanent improvements.

Patients under treatment in all institutions, October 1, 1915, numbered 36,664. Of these 34.308 were cared for in civic State hospitals; 1351 in hospitals for the criminal insane, and 1005 in licensed, private institutions.

The capacity of the fourteen civil hospitals at the close of the year was 27,872. The institutions were thus over-crowded to the extent of 6.436 patients, or approximately 23 per tent.

The average daily population of the State hospitals during the year, excluding paroles, was 32,555. The average daily number of patients on parole was 1280. The increase in daily population over 1914 was 698 including thep aroles, and 559 excluding paroles. There was a total of 7,934 admissions to the civil hospitals during the year.

Mr. Bowser's Bombs

He Decides Not to Avoid Them

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Bowser had to go over to the family drug store after dinner, and when he came back half an hour later he was laboring under great excitement.

"Has any one tried to hold you up?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Worse than that," he replied. "Mrs. Bowser, have we got a couple of cots in the house?"

"Cots, cots?" she repeated. "What on earth do you want with a couple of cots? I think there may be a couple in the storeroom."

"Mrs. Bowser," answered Mr. Bowser in impressive tones as he held up a warning finger, "we are in direct peril, and we must dodge it if we can. I want those cots to put down cellar. We shall sleep down there tonight and probably for many nights to come!"

"What is this?" she demanded, as she turned on him. "Did the druggist spin you a yarn that has got you half scared to death?"

"Mrs. Bowser, it is not the time for such talk. The druggist has spun me no yarn. He is not the man to spin yarns in the face of peril. There were eight men in the store, and they were agreed with me that it was a situation full of the direst menace. I want those cots at once!"

As he started to go upstairs Mrs. Bowser caught him and pushed him into a chair, and, holding him there, she said:

"You have evidently heard something that threatens me as well as you. I want to know what it is before you go any further. You talk about cots and sleeping down cellar, and I want to know what such bosh means."

Mr. Bowser gulped three or four times and then explained:

"Mrs. Bowser, you know what a Zeppelin is, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"And you know what a bomb is?"

"I do, and what of it?"

"This of it!" he exclaimed in irritation. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city within the last hour. Thousands of people have been alarmed, and there are great crowds in the streets."

"I don't see what there is to be scared about," said Mrs. Bowser. "If a Zeppelin is hovering over the city let her hover the same as we would let a crow hover."

"Zounds, woman! Can't you understand that a Zeppelin is probably here to drop bombs down on us? And that is the peril I referred to!"

"Nobody knows that that is her object. And suppose it was. Suppose she dropped a hundred bombs as she flew over the city. At least ninety of those bombs would fall into the streets and do no damage. Nine more would fall into the back yards and, like enough, destroy the clotheslines, and the other one might fall on a barn and demolish a horse. I don't see why you should get excited about that. I'm sure I shan't."

Mr. Bowser said no more. He was so mad he couldn't talk. He rushed up to the storeroom and there found an old cot with a broken leg. He came downstairs with it on his head and disappeared down cellar. When he came up again, puffing and blowing, he found Mrs. Bowser calmly reading the evening papers, and she looked up to ask:

"If you fear the house will be struck with a bomb during the night why don't you go to a brewery vault somewhere? They are so deep under ground that no missile can reach you."

It was amazing that Mr. Bowser did not jump up and down and wave his arms about, but he didn't. He brushed a cobweb out of his hair and sat down and quietly said:

"Mrs. Bowser, let me explain the situation, for I see that you don't understand it. A bomb from a Zeppelin will penetrate the roof of a house and go through to the first floor. There it stops to explode and to make the awfulest racket you ever heard. One in the cellar is safe, but nowhere else in the house. Therefore I propose to sleep down cellar."

"And I don't," she replied.

"Then you can get busted into so many fragments that it would take a police force a week to pick them all up up! Woman, I can't understand you, and I won't try to understand you. From this time on I sleep down cellar. You can sleep up here or sit on the front steps all night long."

"It is because I have a better plan than you have, Mr. Bowser," she explained after a minute's silence. "I have thought of this Zeppelin matter for the last fortnight and planned out what to do of what to have you do in case things come to a climax. Your coming home from the store the way you did, with your hair standing up and your eyes bulging out, was no surprise to me."

"Mrs. Bowser, this is no time for insults!" he warned her.

"And no one is using them," she answered. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city. No one knows what she wants, but all suspect that she is going to drop bombs. She may drop one on this house, but if she does it will be by mistake. Mr. Bowser, you are a well known character. You have won your way up the ladder of fame. You have never said or done anything that Mrs. Zeppelin could take umbrage at. I don't think she would willingly harm a hair of your head."

"Woman, what does this talk mean?" was demanded.

"Don't be impatient, Mr. Bowser. You are to go out on the streets and watch with the rest of the crowds. If that Zeppelin every one is talking of has got tired of hovering she will fly around for a change. You will see her flying this way and that and dropping those terrible bombs as she does so. By and by, as you watch with mouth agape, you will see her head in the direction of our house. She has one bomb left, and that may be for us. When she comes near enough you will hold up your hand and shout:

"Ho, there, Mrs. Zeppelin, starboard your helm! You're headed for Bowser's house. Sheer off to the left a rod or two more and drop your old bombs on the butcher shop."

"They will hear you aboard that craft," continued Mrs. Bowser," and it will swerve from its course, and when the bomb drops it will strike plumb on the butcher shop, and the butcher will never send us any more bones. I will help you on with your overcoat and muffle you up, and you go right out and be ready for the crisis."

"Woman, I am tempted to say that you ought to be blown up," said Mr. Bowser as he walked to and fro. "You would be sarcastic with your foot on the edge of your grave. As I cannot convince you of this great peril, I shall leave you to suffer for your obstinacy. I did intend to pass the night in the cellar, but I have changed my mind. I do not want to be awakened by your screams and shrieks as a bomb strikes the roof. I shall therefore pass the night in some other place and come around early in the morning to view the awful wreck."

"If I am alive your breakfast will be ready at the usual hour," remarked Mrs. Bowser as he rose up. "If I have been blown into a thousand fragments you will have to get your breakfast somewhere else. They say that new place two blocks down is going to be a success. Its specialty is fried pork sausages, and you know how dearly you love them."

Mr. Bowser glared at her—just glared.

"I wish you would take the cat with you," Mrs. Bowser pleaded. "You know he has been one of the family for eight long years, and he does not want to be blown to atoms any more than you do. He loves you dearly, and he looks to you for protection in this emergency."

Mr. Bowser walked three steps toward the hall tree, and then over his shoulder gave her another glare.

"And you have some of your speeches in manuscript. They should not be lost to future generations. Hold on a minute, and I will get them for you."

But Mr. Bowser did not hold on. He put on his hat and overcoat and muffler and passed out, and if he uttered any swear words as he did so Mrs. Bowser did not hear them.

It was a cold evening, and the streets were deserted. Mr. Bowser walked about until his ears were red as paint and his nose was as cold as a chunk of ice and then returned to the house.

"You will need two quilts and a pillow down there," quietly observed Mrs. Bowser, "and you had better provide yourself with a rope to tie on something in place of that missing leg. You will sleep in peace in spite of the rats and spiders and cockroaches. Good night, Mr. Bowser!"

But Mr. Bowser warmed himself, read his evening paper and smoked his usual cigar, and when the time came he headed for his usual bed, and though the Zeppelin continued to hover and hover, he was soon snoring as though one did not exist.

Real Strategy.

"Mother, if a poor, hungry little boy was to come to the back door and ask for something to eat would you give him that piece of pie that was left over from dinner?"

"Yes, Willie, I think I would."

"Well, just wait a minute till I run around to the back door."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Vexed Question.

There was a wise old botanist, and he was known to fame.
Linnaeus Cincinnatus Hocus Pocus was name.
His knowledge was stupendous; his wisdom was profound;
His learning in botanic fields was something to astound.
But there was one deep question this wiseacre could not solve,
And round its puzzling mysteries his mind would e'er revolve.
He'd sit within his study, and he'd ponder by the hour
Muttering, "Is a cabbage rose what we may cauliflower?"

A Forgotten Existence

By ELEANOR MARSH

I was traveling on a railway train. Suddenly I felt a sharp pain in my head. Then I lost consciousness. When I came to myself I saw several persons standing about me, one, a woman, with a bottle of smelling salts in her hand. I tried to recall where I was going. I could not. Then I tried to recall from where I had come. I failed in this too. Doubtless I appeared dazed to those about me, for a woman said:

"She'll come all right presently. Give her a chance to collect her faculties."

After I had been asked a few questions I gave those about me to understand that I wished to be left alone, and one after the other they went to their seats. Then to my horror I found that I didn't know my own name. I didn't know my parents' name nor who they were. Everything beyond the present was lost in oblivion.

Would it all come back? I believed it would. But it did not. I looked in my purse and found tickets to a city and bank bills to the amount of $24, besides some silver. I searched among a few slips of paper hoping to see my name. There was not a word to suggest who I was.

Not caring to go into a large city in such a condition I got off at a suburban station. It was springtime. I passed a snug cottage, in the grounds of which were two little girls playing. I craved some one to speak to and preferred these innocents to any one else. The gate was open, and I entered the yard, calling to them to come to me. They did so, and I put an arm about each of them. I talked to them and they to me. I cared not what was said, I felt comfort in their company.

"Papa!"

One of the children looked up at some one entering the gateway. I followed the direction of her glance and saw a man about to enter. There was something so kindly in his face that I felt impelled to tell him my trouble and ask his advice as to what I should do. He listened to me, asked me a few questions, then said:

"Come into the house and we will see what can be done for you."

His household was run by an elderly woman. There was also a nurse for the children. He told the former to give me a room for the night, and he and I and the children dined together. After dinner he informed me of steps he proposed to take on the morrow to discover my identity, suggesting that I examine my clothing to discover if there was a mark that would help us. After dinner I went to my room and made the examination. There was nothing to give any clew.

Mr. Seagrave, the gentleman, telephoned an advertisement to a newspaper in the city describing me and the incident connected with me. He said he thought my relatives would be on the lookout for such a notice and I would hear from them very soon. He also gave me permission to remain in his house till I was claimed or my memory returned. I had enough money to pay my board for two or three weeks, but after that I would be penniless.

Time passed and no one claimed me. I wondered if I had any relatives. I judged that I was about twenty-one years old. Had I been married? If so my husband would doubtless move heaven and earth to find me.

When three weeks had gone by I tendered Mr. Seagrave my $24 for my keep and told him that it was all I had. He offered to discharge the nurse and make me the governess of his children. I gladly accepted.

A doctor who was called in to see me said that he was of the opinion my loss of memory had been occasioned either by a former sickness or trouble. I showed no sign of having been ill, and there was no evidence of a past trouble.

What I had been I knew not. I knew that I was very happy in Mr. Seagrave's home. I loved the two little girls, and I grew to love him. A widower, he naturally pined for a woman's companionship. I had not been in his house a year before he asked me to marry him.

Alas! I knew not whether or no I was free to marry any one. There was a long struggle between my desire to be his wife and to mother his two dear little girls. He seemed to have made up his mind to take the chances himself, and at last I consented. We were married. He, I and the children were happy.

About two years after my marriage I awoke one morning after a long sleep my former self. It was a horrible awakening. I had married a man who had treated me brutally, and after a terrible scene I had caught up what money there was in the house and left him. He had married me in opposition to his parents' will and had thus given up a fortune.

I told Mr. Seagrave that my memory had returned, that our marriage was not legal. He bade me be comforted, that all would come out right. I gave him information to guide him, and he proceeded to look up the case.

One day soon after this he came home and took me in his arms, evidently very happy. He told me that my former husband had died and that his father had advertised for me. I went to see him, and he said he had sought me that he might make amends for his son's cruelty. He was very rich and at once settled a part of his fortune on me. When he died I received the rest.

SPRING SPORT SUIT.

For Young Ladies Is This Smart Suit of Toweling.

A 1916 MODEL.

This texture is one of the season's novelties, a polka dotted cotton toweling in blue and white. The skirt is cut with a wide inverted plait to give fullness, while the coat is yoked as well as paneled in front, this portion being buttoned on with novelty pearl buttons. The trim little black straw turban is also smart.

YOUR RUGS.

How Bright Ones May Cheer Up Dark Rooms.

One may select a very bright rug of the oriental order to gladden a room from which the sun is excluded, and according to the colors of the cloth cushions the wall paper is tempered, as are also the mural decorations and the hangings. For the room where repose is sought subdued colors are recommended, and these are to be had in some of the beautiful Persian patterns that go very well with reproductions of eighteenth century English furniture.

When one cannot afford the large rugs and there is doubt of any kind as to the proper carpet it is well to have the floor laid with a perfectly plain color in good quality domestic weave, and thereon spread here and there the small oriental rugs. For an informal room the effect is infinitely more pleasing than when one large rug is used.

The Most Feminine Texture.

The other day a woman said, "If I had a lot of money I'd wear silk all the time." The richness of the material makes it one to be greatly desired and admired, and this season there are so many varieties of silks on the market that one could find a different kind for every day in the week.

Crepe meteor is among the many silks to be obtained. It was used in a soft shade of gray for a gown seen a short while ago. Heavily padded embroidery in blue and gray wool was added effectively to ornament the blouse and the skirt.

A novel feature of the skirt was the use of chiffon panels, which were so full that they added extra width to the skirt, which was not very scant before their appearance.

The waist line was very nicely defined by silver rosebuds. The crocheted rings and tassels suspended from the belt were gray. Sealskin formed the hem of the skirt and the abbreviated collar of the blouse.

Timely Tips.

If the dainty crepe de chine blouse shrinks a bit after its first laundering and—as many of these ready made blouses do—becomes just a trifle too scant to cross the bust, the edges at the front may be faced all the way down with similar material and the blouse worn open over a chemisette of organdie. These chemisettes in all manner of pretty styles come ready to slip under the bodice, and for the purpose just described the best model is one which opens slightly at the back, kept crisply in position by a bit of stiffening.

Knickerbocker Figs.

Wash half a pound of figs and stuff each with a mixture of pecan nuts and Maraschino cherries, two cherries to three nut meats. Mix a teaspoonful of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a cupful of sherry in a small saucepan, add the figs, cover and cook slowly until the figs are tender. Let them drain, roll in powdered sugar and put into paper cases if you like.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Guard the Heart.

That heart disease kills more people in the United States than tuberculosis, pneumonia or any other disease is the statement given out by Director Sam L. Rogers of the bureau of the census, Washington. But the greatest significance attached to the fact that heart disease is now causing more deaths than any other disease is the necessity for regulating daily living habits. Overeating, overdrinking, overplaying and overworking are pointed out as the chief causes of this disease. In other words, heart disease is the result of improper living and is, after all, very largely a matter of personal hygiene. Health experts declare heart disease to be merely the effects of fast and improper living and the inconsiderate treatment given the human body.

A CLASSICAL POSER.

It Made a Deep Dent In One Juvenile Brain Box.

Children and classic poetry should be kept apart if one has much respect for the classics.

I remember that when I was a relatively speaking innocent child I used to hear the older pupils in McGuffey's justly celebrated Fourth Reader singsong the first lines of Bryant's beautiful "To a Waterfowl."

Those who remember the lines will recall the stately "Whither, mid falling dew."

But they will also remember how the average school pupil read it—in a manner calculated to keep the late Mr. W. C. B. revolving, swiftly as a whirling dervish, in his family vault.

I used to listen to it and wonder what on earth a "whithermid" was and why it was always falling due.

I wondered if it was anything like a mortgage, a promissory note or an insurance premium. I also wondered why in the world the person involved in the matter didn't pay his whithermids when they fell due instead of letting them run on and maybe get him into trouble at the bank.

I sat there in my little jackknife engraved seat and nobly resolved that when I grew up I should meet my whithermids promptly and take them up the very moment they fell due. I was going to have no whithermid falling due without my being right there to attend to it and foil the villain who was anxious to foreclose!—Strickland Gillilan in Judge.

Consistency.

The statesman, with a pleasant smile,
Remarked in accents pleasant:
"It may seem hard to reconcile
My past views with my present.
Consistency's a jewel fine,
But fashion's information
Says jewelry should never shine
With too much ostentation."
—Washington Star.

Cat.

He—Your sister seems to have a wonderful constitution.

She—Indeed she has! Why, she eats everything she cooks.—Wisconsin State

With horse meat to fall back upon New Yorkers keep right on paying 20 cents and upward for common cuts of beef.

Some Nautical Facts.

A knot is 6,080 feet long. The distance from New York to Liverpool is 3,064 nautical miles by the northern track and 3,139 by the southern track. The former course is taken by vessels bound for New York, the latter by vessels bound for Liverpool. From Liverpool to New York the distances are respectively 3,089 and 3,169 miles.

In estimating records the points taken on either side are Sandy Hook and Daunt's rock, Queenstown harbor. The first light sighted on the British coast is the Bull, Cow and Calf, Ireland, and on the American coast either Nantucket or Fire island.—New York Globe.

Managing John.

"You really must impress upon John the folly of his line of action."

"What's the use? He won't pay the least attention to me. He'll only listen to fools now." (After a short pause.) "You speak to him."—Exchange.

Watch Child for Worms

The Hiker's Costume For Spring

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

THIS smart sport suit comes in green or old rose, with a checked skirt to match either color. Wide box plaits give the skirt's fullness, and the plaid is also used to pipe the belt, front and cuffs of the coat, as well as to line the roll collar. Novelty buttons serve as trimming, and the bottom of the coat is stitched three times as a finish. The tilted straw hat is simply faced and banded with white satin.

In the Light of Fashion.

Belted and buckled most smartly is this tailored costume in blue men's wear serge. The coat fastens up to the neck which is finished with a high turn-down collar.

Omitting the shield, Dame Fashion has added to this stylish tailor made the gird and buckler, and these details play a prominent part in producing a smart effect for the costume. The jacket closes to the neck, where it is finished with a high turn-down collar. The fronts may be rolled back to form revers, and the belt extends all the way around the waist-line, slightly elevated. The ends are released at either side and ornamented with fancy buckles.

The skirt worn with the coat is a circular affair finished with a deep hem. In medium size the suit requires 5 yards 54-inch serge.

The cutting of the coat is a most important part in the development of this design. As the serge is quite wide, no piecing will be necessary. The back of the coat is laid on the fold of the serge because it is seamless. Next comes the underfacing, then the belt, these two pieces near the fold, but not directly on it. The last on this row is the collar.

Opposite the back comes the front section, with the straight edge along the selvage. Next in order come the collar, sleeve sections, strap and skirt section. All of these are placed on a lengthwise thread of the serge.

As a variation from the waist finish illustrated, the coat may be held in at either side, leaving the back and front panels free.

About Wedded Bliss

The old fashioned diagnosis of rheumatism is coming into disfavor. Too many distinctly different types of ailments have been classed under rheumatism.

The old fashioned verdict of incompatibility is bound, too, in time, to come into disfavor. Too much of marital infelicity that is caused by selfishness or unrest or unpreparedness for marriage or unpropitious circumstances in marriage is laid at the door of incompatibility.

Of course incompatibility exists. It is present in every marriage in a greater or lesser degree. It is an inevitable concomitant of every marriage. But unless it is pronounced, as in some cases where a man and woman marry in haste, without any community of thought and interest, it does not cause serious trouble.

The average couple are attracted before marriage not only by the call of sex, but by many attributes of mental and spiritual affinity. After marriage it is apparent that they are not as completely in unison as they were before marriage. Traits that were hidden by the glamour of courtship come into the foreground. For husband and wife are each the product of dissimilar environment and heredity, and, being so, many of their ideas, tastes and habits are bound to clash. Then, too, as they are man and woman, their inclinations and emotional natures are fundamentally different. Thus it is to be expected that at times the unlike natures of man and wife should cause discord.

The couple who are idlers or one of whom is an idler find incompatibility a bugbear in their lives. With real work—with something serious to think about and something worth while to do—they would find little time to worry about their discrepancies in opinion and taste.

To those who are unready for marriage, who are bad tempered, eccentric and shiftless in habit and management—to this type of people incompatibility is a scapegoat for all their misdemeanors.

box combines writing paper with all the necessary sewing utensils, thread, thimble, needles and scissors, with a pocket on the lid for odds and ends. It is compact, pretty, covered with leather and therefore durable.

Conventionality.

Woman is much less conventional than man. She does all the conventional things and attacks other women savagely for breaches of convention. But you will generally find that where a man may with impunity break a convention he will not do so, while if secrecy is guaranteed a woman will please herself first and repent only if necessary. It follows that a man is conventional because he respects convention, women conventional because she is afraid of what may happen if she does not obey convention. The typical Englishman of the world wrecked upon a desert island would get into his evening clothes as long as his shirts lasted; his wife alone in such circumstances would wear a low cut dress to take her meal of cocoanuts, even if her frock did up in front.—Atlantic.

A Good Family Liniment

No preparation is more often needed in the household than a good family liniment. Mrs. Helen Pett, of Mohawk, N. Y., says; "I am willing at all times to say a word in praise of Chamberlain's Liniment. I have found it splendid for pains in the chest and rheumatic pains in the joints and muscles. I do not hesitate to endorse it." This remedy is put up in two sizes and retails at 25c and 50c per bottle.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE CAKE BOX.

MARSHMALLOW CAKE.—Beat two-thirds of a cupful of butter to a cream; gradually beat in one and three-quarters of a cupful of fine granulated sugar; sift together three and one-third cupfuls of pastry flour and two tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Add to the first mixture alternately with half a cupful each of milk and water. Add the whites of five eggs, beaten dry, and a teaspoonful of vanilla or the grated rind of half a lemon. Bake in two layers or a large round poundcake dish. Bake in a slow oven.

Yum Yum Cake.—One package of raisins, two tablespoonfuls of lard, one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful each of cassia and nutmeg, two and one-half cupfuls of hot water. Boil five minutes and then cool. Add three level cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one teaspoonful of salt. Bake in a moderate oven. This is good for a pudding by omitting lard and steaming two hours.

Pound Cake.—One-quarter pound of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of baking powder, pinch of salt together, five eggs, leave out one white for frosting; one and one-half cupfuls of powdered sugar, eggs and sugar together; flour worked into batter. Flavor with vanilla.

Chocolate Jelly Cake.—One-half cupful of butter, two cupfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, four eggs. Cream butter, sugar, eggs and milk, then sift in flour and two tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in jelly cake tins.

Pork Cake.—One pound of pork (lean and fat), chopped fine; three cupfuls of boiling water, three cupfuls of molasses, two cupfuls of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of soda, two pounds of raisins, two teaspoonfuls each of cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon. Make quite stiff with flour. Makes three large loaves of fine grained cake.

Cream Cake.—Break two eggs in a cup, fill with cream; one cupful of sugar; beat until the sugar is dissolved; one and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour, sifted, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt and flavoring to suit the taste. Bake twenty minutes in a hot oven.

The effect is picturesque and individual.

FACE POWDER.

Some Cruel Facts About the Cult of Powder Puffs.

Many women whose faces are blotchy and unclean looking can trace the trouble to the powder they use. Even the best powders on the market will clog the pores if applied too heavily and too often.

Powder was not meant to cover the face till it looks as if the flour barrel had been visited head first. It was intended as a means of removing shine from the skin, giving it a velvety look and to protect the skin. What have we done with powder?

Too much powder is unsightly and only focuses attention to blemishes.

The tint of the powder used must depend on the coloring of the user. Blonds must use one color, brunettes another, and according to the degree of fairness or darkness; also for evening use there are certain shades of powder which are much more becoming than the tints most attractive to the daylight.

The kind of powder? Any pure powder. In cheap powders there will be some sort of adulteration that will harm the skin. The best is the cheapest.

The best powder to use is a powder that is very soft and light with clinging qualities—one that does not seem to "pack."

The powder should be used in the morning. If during the day the face shines gently rub over it the powder puff wrapped in a fresh handkerchief.

Nougat Cake.

Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one cupful of sugar and beat until very light. Sift two cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and add alternately with one-half cupful of milk. Flavor with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, beat thoroughly, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and bake half an hour in a shallow tin. Cool and spread with nougat frosting.

Nougat Frosting.—Chop one cupful of almonds and brown them in the oven. Melt one-third cupful of sugar to a caramel, add the almonds, cool and pound to a powder. Boil one cupful of sugar and one-quarter cupful of water until the sirup will thread, add the almond powder, pour slowly into the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and beat until stiff enough to spread.

Stewed Raisins.

A package of seeded raisins, two tablespoonfuls finely shaved orange skin, a level teaspoonful salt, one-quarter cupful sugar, three cups water. Wash the raisins through several waters, put in saucepan with three cupfuls boiling water. Bring to boil quickly, and boil five minutes. Add sugar, salt. When ready to take from fire add the yellow from the orange peel cut very fine or lemon will do.

Evening Fabrics.

For evening wear gowns of metallic tissues, cloudlike tulles, chiffons, mousselines and diaphanous silks abound. For youth and slender lines there are girlish frocks inspired by old time crinolines, while the older matrons appear in handsome gowns with clinging foundations of silk or satin veiled with layers of gossamer tulle.

WHAT WAR COSTS ALLIES.

England, France and Canada Spend Over $40,000,000 a Day.

Following are some of the facts about war costs revealed at the sessions of the British, French and Canadian parliaments:

Daily Expenditures.—Great Britain, $25,000,000; France, $15,000,000; Canada, $683,000.

Total Expenditures Since War Began.—France, $8,883,000,000; Canada, $408,000,000.

Interest on French debt is $640,000,000.

Pension and soldiers' family allowances by France amount to over $1,000,000,000.

French estimate of artillery and munition costs for second quarter of 1916 is $490,000,000, an increase of $90,000,000 over first quarter.

Canada's appropriation for maintenance of 400,000 men during 1916 is $250,000,000.

Johnny Roche's Tower.

Standing on the banks of the river Awberg, between Mallow and Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, is a remarkable edifice known as "Johnny Roche's Tower." The whole tower was built by the labor of one man, who subsequently resided in it. This individual, who received no education whatever, also erected a mill, constructing the water wheel after a special design of his own. Long before the introduction of the bicycle he went about the country in a wheeled vehicle of his own construction propelled by foot power. His last feat was to build his tomb in the middle of the river bed. John Roche died, but was not interred in the strange burying place which he selected for himself, his less original relatives deeming such a mode of sepulture unchristian.—London Strand Magazine.

The Horseshoe Legend.

Here is an explanation of the old horseshoe superstition: St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dunstan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of a house where the horseshoe was displayed.

A Charming Voile Frock.

Superbly simple and effective frock in floral printed cotton voile, with the details carried out in soutached silk.

The design illustrated today has a background of pale lavender, while the flowers are in a dark reddish purple, with brownish green leaves. The dress has revers, collar and cuffs of plain silk stitched with narrow soutache braid. In medium size the costume requires 5¾ yards 36-inch material, with 1 yard 27-inch silk for the trimming.

The preliminary step in making the waist is to stitch the shoulder tuck into place, creasing on line of slot perforations. Next underface front edge of front to one inch inside of line of small "o" perforations, roll the front over on outside on line of small "o" perforations and stitch to position. Close under-arm and shoulder seams and gather lower edge of waist to fit the figure. Adjust stay to position.

Face and sew the collar to neck edge, notches and center-backs even, and under the folded edge of front matching single large "O" perforations.

To make the sleeve, pleat, bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforation. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations, close seam as notched, leaving extensions free; turn under extension on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations. For short sleeve, see cutting directions. Close cuff seam as notched, face and roll upper part over on outside, on small "o" perforations, sew to sleeve, seams even. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

Turn under edges of front and back gores of skirt on slot perforations, lap folded edges to lines of small "o" perforations in side gores, notches even; stitch to position as illustrated, leaving edges to left of center-front free above large "O" perforation in front gore for placket; press pleats, close seams underneath. Close side seam as notched. Adjust skirt to waist.

Trim with the braid, stitched on in simple design.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FOR WINTER DINNERS.

CHICKEN PIE FOR TWO.—Pick meat from bones, add chicken broth (the water it was cooked in) to cover whole, salt and pepper; heat to boiling point, turn into a small earthenware dish. In the meanwhile sift together one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour, three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a scant half teaspoonful of salt. With the tip of the fingers work in a third cupful of shortening; then with a knife work into a dough with milk, roll into a sheet little larger than dish, make two slits in crust, butter edge of dish and set the crust in place; brush over top with melted butter and bake half an hour. If any of the broth remains use it making sauce for pie.

Lamb Curry.—Cut the meat in small pieces (and inferior portions, such as the neck, can be utilized in a curry), dip in flour and fry in hot olive oil, pork fat or butter until a rich brown. Mince or slice an onion and fry in the same way. Then put into a saucepan, cover with boiling water and simmer until the bones and gristly pieces will slip out. When the meat is sufficiently tender add a cup each of strained tomato and rice, then a little celery cut fine or celery salt to season, with salt, paprika and a little curry powder. Cook ten minutes longer and serve.

Cecils.—Chop enough cold cooked beef or mutton to make a quart, add one-half cupful of dry breadcrumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of salt, one-third teaspoonful black pepper. Dissolve one-half teaspoonful of extract of beef in one-half cupful of boiling water; when thoroughly dissolved add to the meat, and then two well beaten eggs. Mold into small balls, dip in egg and cracker and fry in hot fat.

Meat Roll.—Two pounds stew beef, one onion, one egg, two slices of fat pork, four slices dried bread, salt and pepper. Grind beef through meat chopper, grind onion, soak bread, add to meat and onion, add egg; mix together in loaf, put the pork on top, salt and pepper. Bake one-half hour.

Flight of the Locust.

Locusts in South Africa are very tiny creatures, at most two or three inches long, yet giant jawed and shelled in a grim brown mail so hard that as they strike it causes a sharp smart. They travel in such numbers that it takes them four or five days to pass over. The scouts alone, hovering in patches like red dust clouds, are numerous enough to destroy the vegetation of a district, while the main body, high up in the air, a host of little black specks, stretches out into an interminable screen between heaven and earth. The fanning of their wings brings a fresh coolness over the hot earth even in the depth of summer. There seems to be a fresh breath of ozone as of the sea.

Animals and Flesh Eating.

Arguing against the eating of meat, an English writer remarks: "Almost any animal can be made to eat flesh. The kangaroo has canine teeth. Horses, oxen and sheep may be taught to eat flesh. Norwegian cows have been known to eat flesh. Goldsmith saw a sheep eat flesh. Spallanzani has shown that a pigeon may be made to live on flesh and an eagle on bread."

"Marrying For a Home."

Marrying for a home or any sort of marriage as a means of support may be considered by some as a part of the business of marriage, but generally speaking it is a risky business—a wild speculation in which the girl pays very dearly for something she is not likely to want when she gets it and in many cases will rid herself of on short notice. And the price she pays is not only her youth and whatever charm and ambition she may possess, but a poor, miserable, broken life.—Bailey Millard in Woman's World.

crops. Mr. Wilkinson explained the causes of blights, giving a rainy season for one, adding that a raindrop falling on a spore would scatter the disease to all portions of the tract, a fact with which, very few people are acquainted.

The blights could have been controlled in many instances, he continued, by an early use of disinfectant. The potato crop, especially, could have been an ideal one in this section if the blight had been attacked early. It was his opinion that a grower istaking a chance by not spraying lettuce. If there appears to be a chance of blight, commence early spraying, even in the seed bed. Copper sulphate is a good substance to use for the purpose.

Many Causes of Blights

A troublesome disease which has lately come to the attention of the State Agricultural Department, according to Mr. Wilkinson, is that caused by carrot maggots which have a tendency to attack the root of celery. The egg of the maggot is laid by a fly. A poison made up of arsenate of lead, molasses and water, will kill the fly.

E. V. Underwood, manager of the Oswego County Farm Bureau closed the meeting with a few remarks along the lines of cooperation. He requested those present to interest their neighbors in the work which will be carried out jointly by the farm bureau and State annd requested that the meetings in the future be largely attended.

MRS. ADLE'S CASE IN JURY'S HANDS

It Is for Alleged Negligence, and Asks $25,000 Damages from Lighting Co.

The March Grand Jury was in receipt this morning of the case of Mrs. Isabel Adle, widow of Fireman Floyd Adle, whose death occurred December 4, 1914, while the young man was engaged in attaching wires in connection with the fire alarm system. The accident occurred near the Chocolate Works.

The case was started yesterday. It charges the Fulton Light, Heat & Power company with negligence in maintaining a high-power tension line, and is to recover from the company $25,000 damages. Originally the suit involved the City of Fulton, but the charge against the city was dropped some time ago.

Olmstead, Van Gergen & Sear of Syracuse appear for the plaintiff and Francis E. Cullen and H. D. Bailey for the defendant.

A verdict for $500 in favor of the plaintiff was returned today by the jury in the case of Howard Hayes against Thomas Lacy of Mexico for damages for malicious prosecution. The case was tried yesterday and went to the jury at 10 o'clock this morning. The plaintiff alleged that he was arrested on complaint of Mr. Lacy, it being claimed that he stole milk tickets valued at $100 and a cow worth $60. The defendant contended that there was no malice in the prosecution. George W. Davis of this city appeared for the plaintiff and Ross L. Simons for the defendant.

MISSING 23 YEARS, HE RETURNS RICH

FALL INJURED HIS MEMORY

On Recovering He Was Ashamed to Write, but Prospered and at Last Decided to Return—Found Wife and Two Grown Children—Happy Family Reunion Results.

Frederick C. Prange was reunited with his family at Stamford, Conn., the other day after having been given up as dead for twenty-three years. When he went away he was poor. He comes back rich and with a story as strange as a moving picture scenario.

Prange was in business in a small way in Stamford in 1893. He had lived there all his life and was well known and highly respected. Prange lived with his wife and two children—Elita, eighteen, and Charles, twenty—at that time in a comfortable home.

In the fall of that year the wanderlust seized him. He believed a fortune awaited him in the west. Finally he answered the call, telling his family that he would communicate with them later.

Months passed and they heard nothing. The months lengthened into years, and still no tidings came. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers all over the country without avail. Then the conclusion was forced upon the family that Prange was dead. He was mourned as such.

Suffered Partial Aphasia.

Meantime Prange was encountering strange experiences. He went first to Chicago, then to Denver. In Colorado he became interested in gold mining and started to prospect. He was so engrossed in his surroundings that he forgot to write home.

One day while riding along a lonely trail his horse stumbled and threw him on his head. For weeks he was in a hospital with brain fever. When he finally emerged he suffered from partial aphasia. His mind for months was a blank.

It was a long time before Prange fully recovered. Then, ashamed to write home, he plunged farther into the west. He took up mining in California and prospered.

Within the past few years his activities have centered about Los Angeles, where he made a fortune. Still he delayed writing to his family. He believed his wife and children dead. Then came a longing to know. He decided to go east.

Prange arrived in New York. So sure was he that his family was dead that he went at once to the family burying plot in the Hackensack (N. J.) cemetery. No new graves were there. He then visited a brother-in-law, William Huyler, in New York and from him learned that his wife and children were still in Stamford. The daughter is Mrs. Henry J. Flick, wife of a photographer there. She now has a daughter as old as was Prange's daughter when he went away. The son is Dr. Charles Prange, a prosperous dentist.

The wife, son and daughter were communicated with, and all three hurried to New York. Prange met them, and the reunited family went to Stamford.

Prange is sixty-nine years old, and his hair is white. He proposes to dispose of all his interests in California and will spend the remainder of his days in Stamford, which he left so long ago.

ELECTRICITY FROM THE AIR.

Kansas Man Gets It, but What Is He Going to Do With It?

For two years Harry Perrigo of Kansas City, Mo., has been striving to draw electricity out of the air. He can get the currents all right. The trouble is that he can't take care of the power after he gets it.

The other day the inventor was knocked unconscious twice by the strong current and both times a pulmotor brought him to. Later he took the count again. But Dr. James I. Tyree and the pulmotor soon were on hand and in an hour Perrigo was at work again.

Perrigo's device resembles a wireless tower connected with a mysterious bread box and numerous wires. He says his machine already has furnished enough power to light an eight room house.

FINDS HEIR TO $400,000.

Son of Oil Man Located After Search of Nine Years.

Keith Edwin Dalrymple, twenty-five years old, who has been sought for nine years as heir to about $400,000 left by his father, a Pennsylvania oil operator, was taken to Charles City, Ia., from the south by Dr. C. M. Palmer.

Dalrymple is a nephew of Mrs. Palmer and when a small boy made his home with the Palmers, but later ran away.

"The boy was located in a southern hospital in February," Dr. Palmer said. "He was in need of attention, and I went to his relief and brought him to our home, where he will be cared for and where he will make his future home."

GERMAN TELLS WONDERS OF AN ARTIFICIAL ARM

Invention of American Enables Wounded to Write and Do Other Things.

Dr. Max Kohn of Berlin, who lost his left arm in battle, recently delivered a lecture in Vienna before a large gathering of physicians to demonstrate the wonders of the Carnes artificial arm. This ingenious invention is named after its inventor, an American.

Dr. Kohn showed the physicians how the Carnes arm took the place of the lost member in most wonderful fashion. He showed how the arm can turn and twist, how it can reach in any direction and take hold of any object with the same facility as any natural arm and hand. The physician also demonstrated to his audience how readily he could open and close an umbrella, the facility with which he could write with the artificial member, put the hand in his pocket and take out loose change, put his gloves on, etc. He could take off his coat or put it on without assistance.

Dr. Kohn showed the simplicity of the mechanism which controlled the movements of the hand and fingers and said with an artificial arm of this type no inconvenience or annoyance was experienced. The invention is being used to replace amputated arms and hands in the German hospitals, and the results have been remarkable. Men who otherwise would have been afflicted for life now can attend to the work and business as before and can even return to the front if need be.

FULFILLS LINCOLN'S PROMISE

Navy Department to Take Moniter Survivor Through Canal.

President Lincoln's promise, made more than a half century ago to John Driscoll of Hampton, Va., said to be the oldest living survivor of the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac during the civil war, is about to be carried out by the navy department.

After the naval engagement President Lincoln summoned the crew of the Moniter, of which Driscoll was a member, to Washington. He thanked them for their valor and said if any of them ever wanted a favor it would be only necessary to ask for it.

It was not until recently, however, that Driscoll decided to ask the proffered favor. He requested to be taken aboard a battleship going through the Panama canal, which, he said, he longed to see before he died. Arrangements for the trip have been completed, and the next warship that passes through the great waterway will carry the aged veteran as a passenger.

Say Street Car Is Haunted.

Because they believe car 137 is haunted motormen and conductors of a Huntington (W. Va.) street railway company refuse to work on that car, and it will likely be sold or reduced to kindling wood. Jefferson Ray, the motorman, says it gives a hop, skip and jump every time it passes a mule and that it has become unmanageable.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

The automobile owners are again going to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. These meetings are not only very interesting, but will please you, because matters of real importance to both the auto owner and the public are discussed and ways and means are sought to solve the many problems.

We received a very gratifying letter this morning about the first concert of the FULTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

* * *

You will always find out that a knocker will get it in the neck sooner or later; and then he wonders why his business is all shot to pieces.

A merchant who is FOOL enough to talk about FULTON in a bad way in public, like happened the other evening, will find out in a few months from now that he LOST a few very good customers on account of this knocking.

Of course one can hardly blame a bonehead for doing a thing like that, but it is so silly that even a child would refuse to talk that way about the town in which it lives. We often wonder, if a merchant, like the one we mean here, realizes that it was FULTON MONEY that kept him and his family alive; that it was the good spirit of the FULTON citizens that made him do business and that if it had not been for FULTON he probably would have been STARVING to death.

* * *

A merchant without brains or a merchant who speaks AGAINST his town is worse than a lamppost without a light.

Have you given those flowers consideration? We mean have you bought your seeds to be ready when the weather changes. We want lots of flowers in FULTON this summer and spring.

* * *

Look that vacant lot over and ask the man who owns it, if you may plant flowers on it. Let's make FULTON a city beautiful.

Are you going to help us make FULTON the cleanest city in the State of New York?

Are you willing to call our attention to certain things, so that we may be able to have them changed, if they ought to be changed?

* * *

Look out for the fellow who is knocking the town; he may start knocking you the next time. Steer away from him.

There is an awakening in FULTON that is highly refreshing. Thank you!

* * *

Community spirit is one of the greatest assets a city can have.

FULTON the city of a thousand wonders.

FULTON the city of remarkable citizens.

FULTON the city of many achievements.

FULTON the city of music loving people.

FULTON the city of industrial fame.

FULTON the personification of combination.

G. A. R. and Allies Will Attend Church

"Good Citizenship" is the sermon theme chosen by the Rev. H. D. Holmes, who will preach to the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Sons of Veterans and the Ladies of the G. A. R., at the Sunday evening service in the State St. church. The worshipers will meet at G. A. R. headquarters in East 1st st. at 7 o'clock, proceeding to the church in a body.

In addition to the sermon appropriate to the occasion, the musical features of the service will partake of patriotic hymns and songs, which will be strengthened by the church orchestra.

MASONIC CLUB TO ENTERTAIN THE LADIES

The wives and families of members of Fulton's Masonic Club are promised a treat rare in the annals of events in that or any other club in this city. It will occur Wednesday, March 22nd, and will embrace one of tse finest literary programs of the season. Light refreshments will be served during the evening.

COUNCILMEN REFUSE TO REDUCE LICENSE FEE FOR TAXICABS

The Common Council at its monthly meeting last night made no changes or modifications in the pool room ordiance, nor was any action taken towards changing the taxicab license fee. The opposition to the pool room ordinance did not materialize as expected. In the taxicab license matter, objection was offered by one automobile owner who claimed that the new fee is excessive. Mayor Lewis said that the Board would consider rescinding the orginal motion fixing the fee if one of the aldermen who voted for it cared to present a resolution which would make the proceding motion void, but no member responded.

Resolutions were offered in connection with the abandoned canal lands at Oneida and 1st sts., and it became evident that the plot located south of Oneida st., adjoining the Waldhorn block, may be sold to business interests, as the sentiment of the Board that the land is not suitable for park purposes and it would be for the best interests of the city to sell it.

Tax Reductions Allowed

Following the remark of City Attorney Hillick, in effect that a former resolution did not contain accurate figures on the size of the market site, a corrected resolution was passed.

Attorney Hillick called the Board's attention to three property assessments, two of which he stated were partially exempt from tax on account of having been purchased with pension money. A person who resides in a house which he has purchased with pension money is exempt from taxation. If only a part of the total cost of the house was paid with pension money, only this portion is exempt from taxation. Mr. Hillick, therefore, recommended that the tax assessments of Louise Brown and Olive LaPorte be reduced. The board took action on the two cases as well as ordering a refund of money for taxes paid by the family of the late Charles T. Currier. The city attorney stated that the lots had been turned over to J. W. Stevenson several years ago, but that both Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Currier's family had been paying the tax assessments thereon.

System to Be Introduced

The following resolutions were passed in rapid order: Acceptance of City Chamberlain's report; recommendation of Mr. Adkins to install a purchasing system, by which all departments would be obliged to make purchases on forms; permission to the Evangelistic Association to construct a tabernacle on the Paddock property; that, in accordance with the request of Mr. Stephens of Washington, the site of the old canal bridge at Oneida st. be in the future called "The Plaza"; payment of salaries; payment of audited bills; payment of interest on bonds; and acceptance of Commissioner of Charities Somers' report.

Mr. Somers stated that at present there are no public charges on his list; that ten of his charges have disappeared from the list, but that ten had immediately taken their places; that everything possible was being done to curtail the expenses of the Department; and that a number of people who had for years drawn funds from the city have been refused money, it being found on investigation that these people were simply imposing on the city.

A communication was received from former City Clerk Scudder that he be released from his bond. It was stated by the present City Clerk, C. Milton Allen, that the books have not been audited and that action would have to be deferred until this is accomplished. Former Chamberlain Washburn asked for his discharge papers too.

The meeting was adjourned until Friday night when the proposed police and firemen's pension fund will be taken up.

CAR SERVICE TIED UP THIS MORNING

Interburban service on the Empire United Railways was tied up for three hours this morning when five cars became stalled in a high snow drift at the northern extremity of the city near Fulton avenue. The snow was six feet deep on the tracks and eight to ten feet deep in the lots adjoining.

The first car tied up was the 8 o'clock car from Oswego, southbound. At 11 o'clock the cars were able to reac hthis city after a snow plow had cut through the drift from the south.

WEATHER FORECAST

Unsettled weather tonight and Friday, probably warmer; fresh northwest winds.

Feldman's Hearing Occurs in New York Tomorrow Morning

Max J. Feldman, former tailor of this city, who was arrested in New York city Tuesday on a charge of having forged checks on the First National Bank of this city, will be arraigned in the Jefferson St. Police Court, New York, tomorrow morning. Saks & Company of New York will press the charges against Feldmann, according to John W. Stevenson, whose name was forged to one check which Feldmann is accused of having offered Saks & Company in payment of goods to the amount of $158.30.

According to Mr. Stevenson, Feldmann went to Saks & Company's store Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock and asked to open an account with the firm. He ordered a bill of goods, mostly men's furnishings, amounting to $158.30, and a trunk. He stated that he was John W. Stevenson, agent of the American Woolen Company, Fulton, N. Y., and asked to have the initials J. W. S. placed on the trunk. The firm sent the check to the First National Bank of this city, requesting that the bank wire as to the value of the check. In affixing Mr. Stevenson's name to the check, Feldmann spelled it "Stephenson," hence the check was declared a forgery.

Saks & Company carried out Feldmann's request to have the goods delivered to a room in the Hotel McAlpin on Tuesday. The goods were delivered and Feldmann signed for them whereupon he was immediately placed in custody. The First National Bank, in informing the Saks & Company that the check was N. G., also advised the firm that Mr. Stevenson was in New York. Mr. Stevenson was located at the branch office of the American Woolen Company at 18th st. and 4th Avenue and was requested to appear at the Hotel McAlpin to identify Feldmann.

A number of shady transactions which Feldmann worked prior to his sudden departure from the city are coming into the limelight, some of which are instances of persons who left at his shop clothing for renovation. These articles, it is said, are mourned for their absence. One young man, with offices at the City Hall, had given Feldmann a deposit of $20 on a suit of clothes. Neither clothes or money is in his fonnd embrace. Feldmann is accussed also of borrowing sums of money and running into debt, but few records exist of returns made.

FRENCH REPULSE WEDGE AT VERDUN'S GATES

London—The battle of Verdun will reach its climax today.

A period of comparative clam still continues in the operations around the city. The Germans are devoting their energies to consolidating and strengthening the positions won by them last week within and on the verge of the fortress line.

The French after series of desperate attempts to regain the village of Douaumont, apparently have paused for the moment to take breath and gather strength before renewing their effort to crush back the German wedge, which has been biting its way into the vitals of the proud fortress.

The village of Douaumont was for a time the centre of these efforts to crowd back the unwelcome neighbors to a less dangerous distance, since a successful offensive here would have made German tenure of the captured fort extremely insecure and relieved the most pressing menace to the fortress. But the correspondent, who went to this vicinity as ths most promising place to see an interesting phase of the battle, found his sojourn timed either too late or too early.

The viewing point of the battle from which the correspondent has just returned is the Chaumes forest—a tangled thicket of saplings and second growth trees—which offers the nearest possible sheltered point of observation of the village and fort of Douaumont. The fort itself was barely two and one-half miles distant from the

STORE OR STAGE?

A Word to Ambitious Young People Seeking a Future.

There is just as much demand among store owners and managers for high class salesmen, buyers and managers as there is among the theatrical and movie producers for actors. Merchants want to employ ambitious young men and women who can raise themselves above the ranks of the ordinary. The work is no harder, hours no longer and pay quite as good in the stores for help of all classes as it is in film or stage productions.

The "stars" in business are just as well paid as are those whose names grace the billboard. Where there is one film favorite who is paid $1,000 a month there are half a dozen mercantile managers who receive as much or more. There are hundreds who receive $200 a month to where there are five movie actors who receive the same. And there are ten dollar a week places among the members of the mob scenes, as there are ten dollar a week jobs among the "mobs" in the stores. Once a year or so some one graduates from the chorus or the "supes" to a place as an understudy or star, while in business many are promoted from the ranks to positions of trust and good salaries.

There are better opportunities for ambitious people in mercantile fields than as actors. The demand is many times greater. Owners are always on the watch for some one who will justify a promotion. But positions can not be had without effort. They must be won by hard work, study and an overwhelming desire to get ahead. At all events we say, Stick to the store.—Farm Machinery.

DUELS OVER TRIFLES.

At One Time Almost Any Incident Was an Excuse For a Meeting.

Duels at one time were fought for the merest trifles. Colonel Montgomery was shot in a duel about a dog. Colonel Ramsey, in one about a servant. Mr. Featherstone in one about a recruit. Sterne's father in one about a goose, and another gentleman in one about a bottle of anchovies. One officer was challenged for merely asking his opponent to pass him a goblet. Another was compelled to fight about a pinch of snuff. General Barry was challenged by a Captain Smith for declining wine at a dinner on a steamboat, although the general pleaded as an excuse that wine invariably made him sick, and Lieutenant Cowther lost his life in a duel because he was refused admittance to a club of pigeon shooters.

In 1777 a duel occurred in New York between Lieutenant Featherstonhaugh of the Seventy-fifth and Captain McPherson of the Forty-second British regiment in regard to the manner of eating an ear of corn, one contending that the eating was from the cob and the other contending that the grain should be cut off from the cob before eating. Lieutenant Featherstonhaugh lost his right arm, the ball from his antagonist's pistol shattering the limb fearfully, so much so that it had to be amputated. Major Noah lost his life in 1827 at the dueling ground at Hoboken in a simple dispute about what was trumps in a game of cards.—London Chronicle.

A Story of Old Ironsides.

One of the most famous of the Constitution's exploits was during the war of 1812, when she escaped from Broke's squadron, among which she had accidentally fallen. The sea was almost a dead calm, so Captain Hull had to resort to towing. All her boats were lowered, with long lines attached, and in addition Hull had ropes spliced together to make a line half a mile long, to which he attached a kedge anchor. This was carried in a boat half a mile ahead and dropped, when the crew hauled the ship rapidly forward. The commodore of the English squadron soon adopted the same tactics, and if it had not been for a breeze springing up the Constitution would have been captured.

A Barnum Story.

A story is told of the meeting of Matthew Arnold with P. T. Barnum, the great showman, in America. Mr. Arnold when introduced said how proud he felt at making the acquaintance of a man with a worldwide reputation. "Ah, Mr. Arnold," said Barnum, "we are both public men, but the difference between you and me is that you are a notability, while I am only a notoriety."

AN INNOVATION IN COUNTY FAIR MANAGEMENT

Many a good county fair exhibit has been spoiled by the restrictions placed upon it while the management was trying to pile up revenue. The counties want good fairs, and the farmers want them too. As a rule conditions are made anything but favorable to increasing the interest of farmers in these late-summer institutions. That something radical must be done, and done quickly, to restore former conditions is coming to be recognized by persons who can and will allow themselves to see ahead of the present time. Men are beginning to realize that the county fair should become something more than a display of midway features and aeronautic stunts. To this end Mr. Arthur H. Crist, of Cooperstown, comes boldly to the front with a new method of popularising county fairs. He announces that all entry fees, except those on horse-racing, will be removed at the Otsego County Agricultural Society's exhibit this fall.

Mr. Crist is joined by any number of persons who fail to see why a farmer should be made to pay for showing his produce. He says the purpose of the agricultural societies is to bring out large exhibits and so to educate and stimulate by comparison. That is not all. It is better to have a good fair than a poor circus. It should be the purpose of a county fair to entertain the persons who enjoy seeing the results produced by the people who work in the fields, earning their reward by the sweat of their brow and the brain with which they have been endowed.

It is apparent to the most obtuse person that unless there comes a reversal of policy the average county fair will cease to be known as anything more than a fair in name only—principally because of the practice of making the farmer gamble on winning a prize. It is pretty tough sledding for the farmer who works all summer to produce a good exhibit, and takes it to the fair where he finds that his neighbor has outstripped him. The neighbor walks off with the premium and Mr. A. has to pay in cash for having added real life to the fair's attractions.

Mr. Crist's idea of overthrowing the old idea as false procedure is bound to merit the approval of everybody who would have the county fairs kept alive to tradition, and to it he adds his protest against the entry fee as an added expense of administration—all for a small revenue. His radical innovation will be watched with a lot of interest—and, perhaps, profit.

SPECIES OF TREASON TO THE COUNTRY

On board the British ship Canopic when she sailed last Friday were a man and wife from Brooklyn.

They knew that the ship would mount guns at Gibraltar and that she was therefore apt to be sunk on sight by a hostile submarine. The man declared that this possibly made the voyage all the more pleasantly exciting, and that they looked forward to having an adventure.

These people had no pressing errand in Europe. They did not have to leave their Brooklyn home at all. And if their errand had been imperative they could have as easily sailed on any one of a dozen unarmed and therefore safe steamers.

These two Americans deliberately thrust themselves into peril, yet if they do happen to be drowned there will be fresh complications and there might be war.

The man in question devotes his time and fortune to the hobby of collecting old bottles, from which fact it is easy to estimate his immense usefulness to the nation. But valuable to the nation as is such an intelligent and productive career, we think that it is asking rather too much to sacrifice many thousands of American boys and many millions of American wealth to avenge the loss of this eminent citizen if he happens to be lost while on a foolhardy and absolutely unnecessary errand.

The plain truth is that these Americans and all other Americans who risk their lives and their country's peace and security for the sake of morbid excitement are unpatriotic citizens, are very bad citizens.

They are emphatically, as Senator Stone said the other day guilty of a species of moral treason against their own people.

It is monstrous that the safety of the whole nation should be permitted to be put in constant jeopardy by such persons.—N. Y. American.

Opinions

A DIFFERENCE

James W. Wadsworth, junior United States Senator from New York, was elected to that office by the direct vote of the people. When an occasion arose in which the patriotism of the State might be represented as standing behind the principle that the rights of American citizens shall not be abridged, he voted right, although by that vote he sustained a President not chosen by his party.

James A. O'Gorman was chosen United States Senator from New York by a legislature that was controlled by a Boss, and he will serve but one term, as never by any manner of chance could he be re-elected by the people. He is supposed to be a member of the President's party. Upon this occasion, O'Gorman voted in favor of a resolution which, if carried, would have given notice to all foreign countries, whether Germany, England or Japan, that we no longer meet the foreigner with a united front, but have among us many who would not hesitate to scuttle the ship. —Utica Observer.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE TRIBUNE

The New York Tribune criticised Governor Whitman as governor. To New York from Albany went the governor's secretary and informed The Tribune that, because of its sins, it could not expect to be treated as a Republican newspaper when the election advertising was being distributed.

In that matter the president of the Republican County Committee refused to obey the orders of the Man Higher Up, and The Tribune got the advertising. But The Tribune has not escaped punishment. The Public Service Commission has quarters in the Tribune Building. The lease expires this year, and the Public Service Commission is to be more expensively housed elsewhere. The Tribune is not finding fault, but it is telling the facts.

If that is the kind of man Governor Whitman is, he is not the kind of man for governor, to say nothing of the presidency. Only a very small man would attempt to suppress legitimate criticism by such methods.—Boston Traveler.

VERY REMARKABLE AND USEFUL DISCOVERY

Professor Willis L. Moore's announcement that W. F. Carothers has discovered the law of weather is extraordinarily interesting.

Mr. Carothers, it seems, is a private student of meteorology, with an observatory of his own in Houston, Texas. He has demonstrated to Professor Moore's satisfaction that the cause of weather variations is pulsations in solar intensity, and that these pulsations can be accurately measured and the weather accurately forecast for many days in advance.

Professor Moore is a high authority not apt to be deceived. We shall assume that Mr. Carothers has discovered the law of weather. And we are sure that no greater service has been rendered to civilization in a century.

It would be hard to overguess the enormous amount of loss to crops, shipping and land transportation which will be saved annually if our observers do prove able to say with accuracy what the weather will be for two or three weeks ahead.

An element of safety would then be introduced into commerce and production which would be cheap at the price of many hundreds of millions.

Such a man as this Mr. Carothers is of more value to mankind than all the Kings, Kaisers, Prime Ministers and Generals who are butchering Europe put in one basket together.—N. Y. American.

THE END OF IT - N. Y. TIMES

The courage and the wisdom of the President have their reward. The last stronghold of sedition, of alien intrigue and factional conspiracy, has surrendered. The Senate last week by a vote of 68 to 14 and the House of Representatives yesterday by a vote of 276 to 142 have put out of the way the cowardly proposal to contract the sphere of American rights to make room for the expansion of Germany's sphere of lawlessness. The Stars and Stripes float over the Capitol.

From the moment when Mr. Wilson put forth his challenge to his foes and the country's unfaithful servants in Congress there was never a doubt of the result. The President is sustained, the plotters against him are overthrown. No sophistication either of the offensive resolutions or of the vote as taken can conceal or dim his triumph. The one thing needful to free his arm, to avert the disgrace which Congress threatened to put upon the country, was to make an end of the Gore and McLemore resolutions. That has been done, and Berlin is on notice that it has to deal with an American President, not with Bryanized Senators and hyphenated Congressmen.

The decision had to be taken. False tongues had magnified the work of disloyal minds until Berlin was deluded into the belief that we could be made to submit to any degree of injury and outrage, that the venom of the propaganda had done its work in Congress, that the President was powerless. Ambassador Dumba was sent home to cure the mischief wrought by Secretary Bryan's evil talking— the sharp and sure way. President Wilson dared Congress to set limits to the exercise of his constitutional powers, and it capitulated. He is now in a position to do what he said he would do—protect the rights of Americans and the honor of the nation.

The significant fact in the House vote yesterday is that only 33 Democrats voted against the President. The Republican vote of 102 against tabling the resolution is not creditable to that party. It shows that many Republicans were guided by no higher motive than partisanship; they voted "No" because that was the way that promised to give the most trouble to the Democrats. But the majority total of nearly two to one cheats them of their desire and is a sufficient disproof of the earlier falsehoods about the readiness of the House to force the President to obey Germany's orders as Sweden, alone among neutral nations, has obeyed them.

Already announcements are made of refusals to accept renominations by Democrats who disagree with the President. Nothing could be more becoming, perhaps nothing more prudent. The country is taking note of these matters at the capital.

THE VICTORY - - - N. Y. SUN

The principle of non-interference with the Executive in the performance of its function with respect of diplomatic negotiations was upheld by the House of Representatives yesterday. A victory was won for sanity, for good faith and for good sense. The detestable influences that have sought to hamstring the President in the management of foreign affairs were exposed and crushed. The sentimental weakness that mistook a virtuous longing for a statesman's mandate was suppressed. The ignorance of well intentioned but uninformed minds was conquered. It was affirmatively decided that this country should not commit its transactions with foreign Powers to the hands of a town meeting, but should continue them in the control of that department of its Government to which the Constitution confides them.

As Woodrow Wilson occupies the office of President, the success of the opposition to proposed innovation may be called a victory for him. But the accident of his presence in the White House alone entitles him to this distinction. The triumph is actually for the cause of orderly and rational administration. Against this a conspiracy of cowardice, simplicity and corruption was directed. It was fed by malice and supported by private hatreds. It masqueraded in the garment of humanitarianism, seeking to hide its purpose under a cloak of respectable intent; but its design was at all times apparent, and the chaos its success would precipitate was never hidden from sight.

We do not say that conscientious men did not believe that matters would be bettered by the intrusion of the Legislature in the domain of Executive activity. These were misled by the falsehoods that were told," to the acceptance of which their infirmities of intelfect inclined them. But the greater number of the marplots in Congress, in the Senate and in the House, cannot escape indictment for their conduct. They sought in a national crisis to overturn the American contention and enfeeble the American agent, to gratify their malice, to wreak vengeance for real or fancied wrongs which they cherished against an individual.

Knowing, as all men have known for months, and as the documents printed in the World of yesterday conclusively prove, that an organization partisan in its inception and abhorrent in its methods urged them in their course, they persisted in their hunt with the cry of "neutrality" on their lips. Recognizing that their intervention could be interpreted only as the revelation of serious dissensions in the Government they had sworn to support and defend, they pushed their plans in the hope of achieving a success that would have brought calamity to their country. In an hour when the advantages their conduct conferred on a foreign Power were made manifest by the inexorable progress of history, they saw no reason to withhold their hands, to curb their animosity or to retrace their steps.

So much at present of those who betrayed the trust reposed in them. Another day will bring the settlement of their account with the American people. They may safely be left to the electors who, throughout this wretched and humiliating controversy, have kept their heads and consistently refused to be led astray. The false cries, the false charges, the false reasoning, have at no time deceived the great body of American citizens with whom rests the ultimate decision of every issue that is raised. The excuses that have been put forward to account for the conduct of some of the leaders of the design that collapsed yesterday may conceivably have duped some in official place. They were without effect on the man in the street.

The message that was written in the journal of the House yesterday was the same that was recorded in the Senate four days before. It gave notice to the world, to every Power, belligerent or peaceful, that the attempt to cut the ground from beneath the feet of the President had failed; that the Congress of the United States would not forge a weapon against America, and that proforeign propaganda, selfishness and the shortsightedness of timorous dispositions do not rule the nation's councils. That message was more explicitly stated, its terms were more exactly defined, its phrases were more satisfactorily composed, by the Representatives than by the Senators, but in each case the essential sentiment was conveyed that the American republic has not been delivered into the hands of conspirators, of weaklings, of sentimentalists, or to the mercies of a combination of these unwholesome elements.

MRS. ADLE GETS HEAVY VERDICT

Perhaps the Largest Award for Damages Ever Given In This County---Company May Appeal.

One of the largest verdicts for damages was handed down by the jury sitting in Supreme Court yesterday at 3:30 o'clock when Mrs. Isabel Adle was awarded $8,500 for the loss of her husband, Floyd Adle, who was electrocuted on December 14, 1914.

Olmsted, Van Bergen & Searl of Syracuse represented Mrs. Adle in the trial of the case.

The Fulton Light, Heat and Power company denied liability on the ground that Adle was employed by the city of Fulton, and at the time he was killed he was repairing a wire owned by the city which was supported by the company's poles. Their contention was that the city was responsible.

The second trial of the action of R. James Cunningham vs. the D. L. & W. Railroad company is before Justice Andrews.

Mr. Cunningham sues for $25,000 damages as administrator of the estate of his wife, who was killed at the Loftus Crossing, south of Minetto, in the spring of 1909. She was driving in a buggy across the tracks on the morning of the day in question and did not see the approaching train. The buggy was struck and demolished and Mrs. Cunningham was thrown fifty feet. She was instantly killed. The horse was not injured.

Shortly after the accident Mr. Cunningham brought suit, alleging negligence against the company and claiming that the warning bell at the crossing was not rung or the whistle of the engine sounded. It was also alleged that owing to trees along the track the train could not be seen approaching.

The case was tried before Justice P. C. J. DeAngelis and a non-suit granted on the ground that it was not shown that Mrs. Cunningham was free from contributory negligence. The case was appealed but the non-suit was affirmed. A short time later another action was commenced but owing to the fact that certain papers were not served the issue was not joined until recently. The costs of the first trial amounting to $300 were paid by thed efendant.

GRAND JURY MADE REPORT YESTERDAY

The Grand Jury yesterday handed up its report, Ten indictments were reported, of which eight were sealed. The open indictments were against Fred Mahar, charged with abandoning minor children, and William Goman of Central Square, burglary and grand larceny. Mahar was held for the Grand Jury by Judge Gill of Oswego. Goman is charged with breaking into the O. & W. station at Central Square Sunday and stealing $30.

Justice Andrews remitted all indictments to County Court and it is expected that arraignments will be made Monday next at 2 o'clock.

TENANTS FAIL TO PLEASE OWNERS

Residents Object to Privilege Exercised By One Who Held Vacant Property in West First St.

Residents and property owners in West 1st st., between Phillips and Kellogg sts., are up in arms—yes, worse than that—they are saying things about a certain Polish family and a city property owner in that vicinity in particular. The cause of the commotion is the action of a property owner in leasing to foreigners a house which stands in the midst of a row of houses whose denizens are all Americans.One family in a house, say the neighbors, would be objectionable enough, but when two are saddled upon the section, they feel like writing letters about their troubles to the newspapers, which one of them has done, as will be seen later on.

According to The Evening Times' informant. Mr. Paul Kowalski is the agent in this especial case. When the neighbors made known to him their objections he approached one of them, offering to sell the house and lot at a figure which the disgusted gentleman thought out of proportion to the real value, and he refused to buy. Mr. Kowalski refused to accept a lower price, consequently the objectionable persons remain where they have a right to think they belong, and the furore heightens as time goes on.

Yesterday's mail brought to The Evening Times a letter written by one o fthed isgusted neighbors. It reads as follows:

"It is commonly known that in Fulton there is a "Little Poland."

"The whole West Side of the city is often by the East Side confounded with Poland.

"Something happened recently which is helping on the erroneous idea of the 'snippy' East Side.

"A supposedly loyal West Sider leased a house, in the midst of an exclusively American neighborhood, to a number of Polish families (the number unknown as usual). This means a decrease in valuation of all the property, including some fine residences. Civil law, however, cannot reach this incident, but when the neighbors saw loads of household goods going into the house ,and gangs of undesirable persons going in and out of the house, and monopolizinz the street, they planned to hold a tar and feather party, to be concluded by a fence-rail matinee."

"LOYAL."

GOMPERS WINS GLORY FROM SCHOOL TEACHERS

New York—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, continued last night his arguments to show why New York's school teachers should accept membership in a national union. He spoke at a dinner given by the Teachers Union at the Longacre Hotel, 157 West Forty-seventh street, and his words had sufficient effect to induce the teachers to call a meeting for next Friday at the Washington Irving High school, at which plans for a permanent organization will be discussed.

"My main purpose in addressing you is to secure the organization of the teachers in every city and town of the country," Mr. Gompers announced. "Organizing locally should not be the main object. By organizing nationally you will not only help yourselves, but the school children as well. Affiliation with the American Federation of Labor I urge as a necessity and a wise course."

Mr. Gompers pointed out that the teacher's union will have the same rights when affiliated with the national body as it has under autonomous control.

State Banks Unite to Guard Interests

As a result of recent agitation a new organization has been formed by the State banks of discount. It is similar to the Trust Company Association, the Savings Bank Association and the Private Bankers Association. Elliot C. McDougal of Buffalo has been elected president, John H. Gregory of Rochester vice president and Paul E. Bonner secretary-treasurer. The organization has no connection with the New York State Bankers Association, but will not interfere with that association in any way.

The principal purpose of the State banks in organizing is to use the power and influence of a unified body in working for the betterment of the positiion of State banks, particularly in legislation. It has been complained for some time that the interest of the banks of discount of the State has been neglected. It was felt that a united organization was needed bescause of the possibility of conflict of interest of the State banks and the national ones under the Federal reserve system.

The new organization will not have headquarters, paid officers, conventions or annual trips. It is said that the guarantee that it will refrain from interfering with the work of the State Bankers Association was a condition on which Mr. McDougal accepted the presidency.

SING SING STORE MAKES HEAVY PROFIT

Ossining—A profit of 22 per cent was made on sales of the co-operative store of the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing prison during the last year.

Sales made to men and to callers amounted to $12,506. A total of $11,932 was expended in the purchase of merchandise. Inventory shows merchandise on hand worth $3,917. The total profits for the year are estimated at $2,180 or 22 per cent. which, the auditors consider, proves the inmate managers are shrewd business men.

WAR GAINS CLEAR AMERICAN'S DEFICIT

William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, in his report to stockholders says that the domestic orders of the company during the year 1915 were the heaviest in its history. In addition to this, he says, a valuable export trade has been established with Canada and South America. But the company has been hard pressed to find an adequate supply of dyestuffs. The report of the company for the year ending December 31, 1915, shows net profits amounting to $5,160,294, as against $2,788,602 in the preceding year. The surplus after the preferred dividend was $2,360,295, which is equivalent to 11.8 per cent earned on the $20,000,000 common stock, as compared with a deficit of $11,398 after the payment of preferred dividends last year. The profit and loss surplus for the year was $9,305,121, as compared with $8,024,436 in 1914.

Continuing Mr. Wood says:

"The directors of the company since the last annual meeting have acquired a valuable group of mills in Maine—the Pioneer, Waverly, Newport and Oakland mills—at favorable prices aggregating about $300,000, and in the year 1916 have also purchased for $250,000 one of the most celebrated American mills engaged in the manufacture of fine woolen and worsted fabrics—the Globe Woolen Mills of Utica, N. Y."

EDISON GIVES OUT U. S. NAVY SECRETS

Washington—Considerable surprise is being expressed in Navy Department circles over the publication in catalogue form of detailed information concerning the Edison submarine batteries now being tried out by the United States navy. It is published by Thomas A. Edison, the inventor of the battery.

Secretary Daniels when asked concerning the publication declared he knew nothing about it. No official of the Department could be found who knew of Mr. Edison ever having asked permission to make public the details of the batteries. While it was declared that there is no law to prevent such publication officials expressed surprise that it should have been published without consulting the Department.

Attention was called to the fact that, although Mr. Edison has already sold three of the batteries to the Russian Government, the information that appears in the catalogue is not of a kind which other Governments are accustomed to make known.

MILK TRUST CONTROLS NEW YORK, IS CHARGE

Albany—Charges that a milk trust is operating in New York city to the detriment of consumers and independent dealers were made by John J. Dillon, superintendent of the Department of Foods and Markets, at a hearing before the Assembly Agriculture Committee today, on Assemblyman Louis M. Martin's measure, which would give the Commissioner of Agriculture the right to regulate the price and sale of milk.

correspondent's position and the village only a short two miles away. Closer inspection would have been impossible, unless the trip were made by night, for the intervening country is open and in full view ta several places of the French observers,

The wood itself had been swept and torn by a hail of shrappel which the French launched earlier in the day while searching the thickets for concealed batteries, and it had also been under a heavy shell and rifle fire in the earlier phases of the offensive. The tops of thousands of sapplings had been whipped off under fire like daisy heads under a switching stick.

Suffragists Confident of Winning Assembly

Albany—Advocates of votes for women are going to make record breaking connections between Albany and New York within the next twenty-four hours in a determined effort to thwart any possible juggling with their constitutional amendment.

It was one of the most strenuous days the suffragists ever had and even the opponents of the suffrage propositions betore the Legislature admired the activity of the women. Encouraged by the advancement today of the Whitney-Brereton constitutional amendment to the order of third reading in the Assembly, the suffragists hung closely to the rooms of the Senate Judiciary Committee, in the hope that the amendment would be favorably acted upon by that body.

The suffragists insisted they have a substantial majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee pledged to them. The Cuter bill, proposing to give the women the "half loaf," or the right to vote only for Presidential and Vice Presidential electors, will not be reported.

SEES LONDON'S END AS MONEY CENTER

New York—After saying that London has already lost its pre-eminence as the financial hub of the world, S. R. He says that dollar exchange is here and will stay.

RING NECK BIRD FROM CHINA HUNTERS' HOPE

In a little while there will not be many game birds left in the State for hunters to shoot, said Harry T. Rogers of Sherburne, N. Y., yesterday unless some way is found of raising birds in large numbers. He said New York State would have to depend on the Chinese ring neck for such a supply.

"The Chinese ring neck is the only game bird that can be reared in large numbers at the least possible expense," he said. "They are hardy, prolific, and will thrive, under the most adverse conditions. This is the bird the State will have to raise if we are to have much shooting. Where huntsmen used to have good shooting, today they cannot find a single bird."

E. A. Quaries, second vice president of the association, told of the work the Department of Agriculture has been doing for two years in domesticating fur bearing animals to determine if they will live and produce good fur in captivity.

The township of Chesterfield, Essex county, has been selected, he announced.

The conservation officials adopted a resolution calling for the establishment of a State police in all States for the purpose of protecting game, fish and forests.

If you can't be thankful for much,
Be thankful for what you've got,
For these little thanks are a crutch
To help on your own poor lot.

If you can honestly say
That you've helped on somebody else

For the Children

Two Playmates Out Having Fun on Roller Skates.

Children who live in the city often miss much of the fun that country youngsters enjoy. Soon as snow falls in big towns hundreds of men are sent out to shovel it into piles quite inconvenient for sliding downhill and snow men. So city children have to plan a bit, and one of the best loved sports is roller skating in the parks, where asphalt walks are good and smooth. The picture shows Helen Maxwell, daughter of Mr. Howard Maxwell, and her playmate, Virginia Smathers, roller skating in Central park, New York, just after the last snowstorm.

The Daisy.

Did you ever hear the story of the daisy which looks like a star? Once upon a time there was a little star up in the sky that belonged in no group of stars at all, but just had to wander around by itself all the time. Every evening it watched the evening star tow the new moon over the edge of the dark and envied it. It heard much talk among the other stars, some of them of less magnitude envying those of greater magnitude, and the little lone star thought to itself that no one saw it even to envy it. Down on the earth it looked so much easier to get into a group and have companions, so one day when the earth was swinging over from dark to daylight the little star did not try to preserve its equilibrium, but just dropped down, down, until it came to earth. It fell so far that it fell deep down into the earth, but some star seeds at its heart shot up from the earth, changed through the influence of the soil, and there stood a beautiful star flower, and never is it lacking for companions of its own kind.

About Matches.

Every boy and girl in the west knows who Lewis and Clark were and what great work they accomplished for the country, but they may not know that when they were starting on their great journey of discovery Dr. Saugrain of St. Louis made them what was called at that time chemical matches. He showed them how they could make phosphorus for themselves, and you no doubt know the story of how these matches affected the Indians, who would not sell the "wapato" until they saw the miracle of the matches, and then they gladly gave it.

Before these chemical matches were made it was necessary to draw fire by means of flint and steel, and it was often a very hard task to do it, so fires seldom went out, but were fed constantly or covered so that they could blaze up in a short time.

Pencil and Notebook.

There is a satisfaction and a very certain educational value as well in being able to record one's impressions by rough notes and sketches and to show others one's ideas in the same manner. Every boy, even though he possesses no talent whatever for drawing, may learn to roughly sketch an outline if he properly develops a simple sense of proportions. The noting of interesting facts, read over often more than once later, fixes them in the memory and is good practice in expression if one tries constantly to set forth these notes clearly and correctly. Try it.

Frost Cracking Trees.

The traveler in the winter woods during extreme cold and especially after nightfall is sometimes startled by sounds like pistol shots and as loud, near and far away. It is not difficult to locate these sounds as coming from the larger trees around, the frost so shrinking the wood as to cause the fibers to separate in the weakest places, and they do this in such a hurry as to resemble an explosion.

Poverty of Language.

Travelers tell us that there is a very wild tribe near the upper Amazon that possesses a language singularly devoid of needed words. For instance, they have nothing to express a number greater than three, but this word is one of nine syllables.

A Misunderstanding.

ABOUT GOOD BUTTER.

How to Keep It In the Refrigerator Without Contamination.

Most persons nowadays are fastidious about the butter they eat. The woman who is content to do without fruit and vegetables out of season usually considers it no extravagance to buy the best butter. And the number of persons who pay a really high price for special butter, fresh butter or other butter with an especially sweet flavor increases every week.

But the best butter can be rendered unfit for eating with little difficulty. Good butter needs to be carefully kept and it is often so carelessly or ignorantly cared for in stores and houses that it loses its good qualities.

The intelligent dealer, of course, has proper refrigerators and usually keeps butter in a separate compartment. As an extra safeguard he buys butter in small prints or blocks, and these are wrapped in waxed paper. But now comes the task of preserving its freshness in the home refrigerator.

Butter absorbs odors very readily, and that is why it is so difficult to keep properly. Of course it is quite out of the question to have a separate compartment for butter in the ordinary home refrigerator. But it is possible to keep the butter separate from everything else by keeping it in a special covered dish. Glass jars with glass covers that clamp securely into place are sold for this purpose, and one of them is an economy. As soon as the butter comes into the house remove the pasteboard and paper wrappings and put it into one of these jars. It should be washed and scalded and thoroughly dried before receiving a new cake of butter. Any old butter remaining should be packed into another covered dish.

If the ice gives out and the butter is soft, try hardening it by putting it in a bowl under running cold water. This will do wonders with the butter. When it begins to harden around the outside cut it in smaller pieces so that the inside part will also harden.

CASSEROLE COOKING.

Appetizing Viands Depend Upon Dainty Serving of Them.

The cooking done in casseroles has several important advantages over that of the ordinary kitchen vessel. The dishes are without the metal taste which so often contaminates common pots and pans. As the cooking is slow and thorough the nutritive values of food are preserved, and the perfection of the flavor is therefore concentrated.

The ornamental appearance of the various dishes used permits serving the viands in the very utensils in which they were cooked, which is a tremendous point when the dish needs to be eaten very hot. Food can be put away in the casserole without danger of changing color or taste, as would happen if it were left to chill in a metal vessel. The earthenware of which the dishes are made is not open to the acid influences of fruit and therefore is without the possibility of any noxious change. The enamel of the inside does not scale off, it is easily kept clean, and so food prepared in the casserole is clean and sweet.

The pretty marmite for soupmaking, the larger and smaller pots and shallow pans and plates in every size can be bought. Among the many shades of brown there are some green tones (these vessels of French make), which are very effective on the table. Some don'ts are involved in the proper care of the charming utensils.

Before using them for the first time the dishes should be soaked in cold water for some hours, as this will help to keep them from cracking on their first exposure to heat. Never put the vessels on the hot stove or in the oven without first putting in water or fat. Do not put them roughly on a metal surface or set them when hot on a wet table. A fierce heat is never desirable, and so, even if the flame of the top of the stove is low, it is best to put an asbestos mat under the vessel used.

Many more things for the preservation of these toylike cooking vessels might be said, and for young housekeepers and girls who want to learn how to cook in a dainty and perfect manner they are certainly more inspiring than the common cook pot, pan and kettle.

One of Three Worst Wives.

St. Giles, Camberwell, is the burial place of Mrs. John Wesley, wife of the famous preacher. Southey grouped Mrs. Wesley with the partners of Socrates and Job among the three worst wives in history, and she seems to have deserved the distinction. One of Wesley's friends, says the London Mirror, records having seen him dragged round the room by his hair by the powerful virago, and she seems to have made the poor man's life a misery for twenty years. At last, to his great relief, she decamped, carrying away many of his papers simply to annoy him, and he saw her no more. She died in October, 1781.

Sport Scarfs and Ties.

Sport scarfs are made in all of the bright sweater colors, and many are in a combination of colors. Rose, green and white and black combinations, white with black stripe borders and rose or green with white or black striped borders are all popular. Sport ties are made of inch wide grosgrain silk ribbon and are a yard in length. They are made in bright color combinations. Many are in roman stripe colors and black and white stripe combinations in bayadere effect. The ends are finished with fancy bead ornaments, and many have slides of the same.

THE TALE OF A BOBCAT

By M. QUAD

"Friends and naybuurs," began old Joe Grimm as he took a seat on a cracker barrel at the crossroads store, "you all know that up to five y'ars ago I lived over in Joe Davis county. I had a squat over thar by the big Blue Gum swamp. Thar was forty acres of land in the squat, and it was mighty pore land. It was all I could do to raise nuff co'n and taters fur me and the ole woman. If it hadn't been that the Blue Gum was full of varmints that I could trap in the winter and sell their furs I reckon we should have starved out.

"One winter, for some reason or other, most of the varmints left the swamp, and it was mighty poor trappin'. I got just enough fur to keep us goin', and as a consequence when spring and summer cum along we was powerful hard up and like to go hungry in another month.

"One night arter the ole woman had given me three or four hints about laziness we went to bed feelin' that Providence was to blame for it all. Along about midnight she nodged me awake and said:

"'Joe, I have got a bright idea. It's fur you to go in the swamp tomorrer and set a deadfall to catch a bobcat. If you kin ketch a big bobcat mebbe you kin sell him at Mud Flats or the Bend to some one fur a pet. He orter bring at least $5.'

"It was worth thinkin' about," said Joe, "and next day I reckoned it might pay to try it. I went out and set a deadfall, and while I was doin' it a bouncin' big bobcat ran up a tree clus beside me and gin a screech that riz my ha'r up.

"That night about 12 o'clock we was awoke by the durndest screamin' and screechin' that a man ever heard of. It come from a bobcat who had meddled with that deadfall.

"We got her caged, and next mawnin' I set out for the town of Mud Flats. I went thar kase thar was two or three rich men in the place who might buy the cat and kase thar was to be lecshun thar that day.

"Eight miles below Mud Flats was Walnut Bend, a town of about 1,500 people, without any mud in front of it. The Benders wanted the county seat moved over thar, and after a lot of hard feelin's about it it was agreed to hold a lecshun. It was to be held in Mud Flats, and that is what brung about 250 Benders over thar the day I drove in with the cat. I hadn't driv inter the town yit when I met old Jim Darby in the road. Arter he had nodded to me and took a look at the cage he says:

"'What ye got thar, Joe?'

"'A big bobcat,' I says.

"'What ye goin' to do with him?'

"'Sell him if I kin.'

"Ole Jim steps aroun' to the back of the wagon and peeks in and the cat gives a scream and spits in his face. With that, old Jim backs up and walks the road a few feet. When he cums back to me he says:

"'Joe, these Mud Flatters are a tricky lot. They have formed in line in front of the polls and are goin' to vote so slow that us Benders won't stand no show to git the county seat. I wonders'—

"'What ye wonderin' about, Jim?' says I.

"'I think we might make use o' that cat—I think so. If he was turned loose down by the votin' place what would he do?'

"'Why, he would bite and claw until you could smell sulphur.'

"'I reckon he would, Joe. What I want of him is to drive these Flatters away from the poles and gin my men a chance to hold the land. If you think he kin do this there is $10 in it fur you.'

"'I want jest four times that, Jim,' says I, seein' my advantage.

"Jim sticks fur awhile, strokin' his red chin whiskers, and he finally cums to my terms. He tells me what to do as he passes up the money and starts back to the town and gives his men the wink, and they all draws off to an old barn farther down the street. Then I drives in and stand up in my wagon and shouts out that I have a big bobcat for sale. The street was full of men, but no one minds me. I shouts out that I will take $5 fur the varmint. Then I lowers the price to $4—and $3—and $2, and arter about ten minutes of this hollerin' I gits the signal from Jim, and I pretends to git mighty mad, and I yells out:

"'If nobody will buy this bob of me then I am goin' to turn him loose and let him find his way back to his lovin' home in Blue Gum!'

"What I did took the crowd by surprise. I turned to the cage and tore off a couple of slats, and the cat cum out like a bullet. He clawed my cap off as he cum and then bit the ole mule on his way to the ground, and a fiend was let loose in Mud Flats.

"He broke up that votin' line in thirty seconds, and he drove men inter stores and shops and houses. Lawd, but he was a fury! He was as mad as six b'ars rolled inter one.

"It was when the cat started fur home that Old Jim appeared with his men and formed a solid line befo' the polls. They kept that line all day in spite of many fouts, and when the closin' hour came they had the county seat by 150 majority. And when I got home and showed the ole woman the money and told her we could live a life of luxury fur the rest of our lives she jest up and fainted away."

BATTLE OF VERDUN MAY GO DOWN AS BLOODIEST IN WORLD'S HISTORY

Great German Offensive Resulted In Loss of Thousands of Lives on Both Sides.

Eyewitnesses Describe Scenes Behind the Lines of Teuton and French Trenches.

THE German offensive, resulting in the battle of Verdun, has been called by competent military critics the bloodiest battle in the history of all the world. Whether this be an exaggeration or not, certainly as many men were employed as in any other struggle. The methods of slaughter were more highly developed, and the issue at stake was all important.

The Germans, after having leveled the French trenches by hours of artillery fire in which the great 42 centimeter siege guns played an important part, sent regiment after regiment of their best troops into the mouths of the French seventy-fives. The French, unable to withstand the force of the great Teuton drive, executed under the supervision of the German crown prince, cautiously withdrew several miles and established new positions nearer the city of Verdun, which apparently was the objective of this offensive movement.

For days the fighting continued with unabated fury. The kaiser himself went to the front for several days. The full story of this battle will never be told. After the war perhaps we shall know the total number of men lost but how they died, what their sufferings were, the fate of their bodies, will never be known. Those heart touching little details have all been buried by the continual rain of millions of shells and bullets. But some idea of the intensity of the struggle may be had from the stories told by those who took part and who have returned to Germany and France from the battle front.

One Shell Wrecks Fort.

The Berlin Tageblatt correspondent gave the following account of the reduction of Fort Douaumont:

"The giant block of cement and steel armor plate that was Douaumont lies in ruins. A second fort not far off blew up, just as did Fort Loncin at Liege, as the result of a single large calibered shell crashing through to the ammunition magazine.

"The organization of the attack on the north front of Verdun was a masterpiece in itself. Preparations of vast extent had first to be carried out in complete concealment from the enemy if the fight against the invincible fortress was to succeed.

"To the great distances over which heavy artillery had to be taken without using railways were superadded the great difficulties resulting from continuously bad weather and the consequent condition of roads. Hundreds of men had first to build good roads.

"Another of the difficulties was the proper laying of the beds on which the great guns rest and on whose firmness depends in the first line the accuracy of our heavy gunfire. How unbelievably accurate was their fire is now known.

"Prisoners said that the effect of our artillery was indescribably frightful. Nobody could hold out long against it."

Battle In the Lake.

Another correspondent at the German headquarters says:

"The Meuse valley in many places had been transformed into a lake by floods. The woods on the rolling Meuse heights, everywhere sown with barbed wire entanglements, are mown down by artillery. The battleground is distorted by explosions. The captured French trenches, which had undergone a severe bombardment, had been very extensively developed, but showed signs of less secure construction than ours.

"Contrary to assertions which have been made, the heavy snowstorm did not stop the progress of the battle in the slightest degree. Our artillery continued to fire uninterruptedly through the veil of snow. Toward midday the sky cleared. From my high vantage point I saw before me the entire row of heights, from Fort Douaumont to the Cote de Froide, the main fortress line north of Verdun.

"Here the principal battle raged. Our heavy fire lay upon it. One could see the giant black clouds of the big calibered guns rise like enormous trees. The firing and fall of our heavy shells could be clearly followed. The masses of smoke that developed showed where fires had been caused. Behind Fort Douaumont, too, pillars of smoke seemed to signify the advance of the battle beyond this height that was now firmly in our hands.

"On the front ridge of the heights west of Douaumont numerous flashes caused by the enemy's shrapnel were observable, leading to the deduction that one of our infantry attacks was proceeding.

"Guns of all calibers roared about me. The firing also extended toward the southwest, over the fortifications on the opposite side of the Meuse. In the direction of Vacherauville the artillery fire of the enemy appeared to occupy itself almost exclusively with the foremost line and seemed powerless against the German artillery firing from the rear. During my long stay in the neighborhood not a single shell fell there. I could see Verdun with the naked eye. A large church was the most prominent feature. By means of glasses fires could be discerned in the town.

"I talked with some of our men who, after several days of attacking, had been withdrawn to the rear to get rest. They laughingly related how they had always gone farther than they had been ordered to go. On one occasion they had been told to take one hill, but instead they carried three in succession. They had now had a welcome wash, eaten well and slept well and were ready to get at it again.

"The fresh appearance of the troops and their splendid spirits astounded me in the face of the signs of such terrible fighting, and especially the calm, clear, almost unmoving sureness with which this titanic undertaking was being carried through, almost like maneuvers."

Stories of French Wounded.

Graphic narratives of the greatest and most terrible battle in history were told in Paris. Officers who had been to the front, most of them wounded, shuddered as they recalled the sights.

"They came in a flood, in an endless wave, those Teuton hordes," said one officer.

"The French guns mowed them down in heaps, but still they came, pouring across the slopes in a ceaseless tide of humanity.

"The German infantry began their attack on Monday, Feb. 21. The first symptom of the battle favorable to the French was the inability of the Germans to silence the French artillery. The offensive opened with strong reconnoitering parties advancing, wherein were noted a large proportion of officers.

French Work New Maneuver.

"Then came the infantry in great numbers. During the next two days the fighting waxed fiercer and fiercer.

"At first fourteen German corps were engaged, then sixteen and finally seventeen corps (340,000 men). The French command at this point carried out a maneuver which will be recorded as a masterpiece in military history. The German movements had been made under the cover of woods, in ravines and patiently prepared communicating trenches. If the French had tried to keep in torch with the enemy they would have been more or less in the dark and the operation of their own artillery greatly hampered.

"If the Germans had been only fifteen yards away the French could have been submerged by the attack, provided the attacking forces were prepared to make any sacrifice, but the distance being 1,500 yards there was little chance against the opposing artillery. The French troops were accordingly swung back to positions from which they could see the Germans approaching over exposed ground.

Front Reduced to Nine Miles.

"The effect was that the immediate front of the attack, which was originally twenty-five miles in extent, was reduced to nine miles, but even this soon proved too wide. The German losses were so great that the attack could not be kept up at all points.

"On Friday, the critical day, the front was reduced to six miles and then to five. On Monday, Feb. 28, the offensive dwindled to fragmentary attacks."

The following description of the French retreat from Ornes, six miles northeast of Verdun, was given by a wounded French soldier who was in the engagement:

On the 21st we started giving ground with the Germans at our heels. No sooner had we traversed Ornes, firing as we went, and taken the road to Moncourt than our artillery opened on the advancing Germans. I've seen some bloody fighting in this war, but they were only sham battles compared with this conflict. Shell after shell ripped gaps in the German lines.

Advanced Twenty Lines Deep.

"As our seventy-fives flamed death against the oncoming, close packed battalions, twenty lines deep, the corpses were piled up in mounds. We were so near them that fragments of bloody flesh, from human bodies torn asunder by exploding shells, fell among us.

"That night we spent in Moncourt under the ghastly radiance of star shells, which the Germans fired continuously.

"Under the lurid glow of these bombs the bloody battlefield was shown with its carnage. I saw long lines of German dead, where machine gun volleys or shells had torn through the ranks.

"All the while the guns in the Verdun forts kept up a continuous bombardment against the German posi tions. So terrific was the cannonade that the blood poured from our ears and noses from the concussion.

"Far away was heard the continuous crash of exploding projectiles as they fell upon the German lines, and still farther away in the distance the big German guns were replying with a steady roar of thunder."

Great Gaps In Ranks.

A soldier who was in the ranks fighting at Ornes told this harrowing story:

"I fought since the beginning of the war. I saw the shambles at Suippes and Souain. They were nothing to what I saw at Verdun.

"The Germans advanced, and we retired under orders, but we killed them by the dozen. It was so terrible that I, who have watched my comrades fall around me almost with indifference, shudder as my memory recalls those scenes.

"Eventually we reached Moncourt and took shelter for a time in the wood. Although it was 3 o'clock in the morning, the bursting shells made it as clear as day, giving the battlefield the aspect of a fairy scene.

Dead Stood In Groups.

"From behind us the French artillery fired into the German masses, the German shells flying over our heads toward the Douaumont section. Then our machine guns, placed in batteries every five yards, began to play, and we saw the dead in groups. From Moncourt I followed the supply road to Fleury, where I took the light railway toward Verdun. The heavy guns near Douaumont and Damloup were firing as fast as they could be loaded.

"When we passed between the two points the air pressure produced by the continuous discharges was so terrific that blood rushed from our ears and our lungs almost ceased working."

A combatant, who was in one of the most advanced trenches early in the battle of Verdun and who has returned to Paris wounded, says:

"At dawn we received orders to leave the trench and to retire to a strong position in the Vaux woods, in front of Douaumont. Bending low, we retired the three or four kilometers through the snow without much loss.

"Once in the new trenches we could not hear one another speak, so great was the noise of the cannonading, and when we looked through the periscopes we could only see heavy clouds of smoke shutting out the sky with jets of fire flashing through the snowflakes."

Among all the film actors playing historical characters in "The Birth of a Nation" spectacle to be seen at the Quirk theater, Sunday, matinee and night, March 19, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp have received the most compliments on the faithfulness of their work, the one as General Robert E. Lee and the other as General U. S. Grant.

The picture shows General Lee surrendering to General Grant in the Wilmer-McLean Mansion at Appomattox Court House, Va., April 9, 1865.

It is well-known that many supporters of the defeated Confederacy wished to prolong the struggle by means of a guerilla warfare similar to that used by the Boers towards the close of the Anglo-Boer war. In fact John Wilkes Booth supposed that in killing President Lincoln he would have the support of the South in a new struggle. But General Lee was of a different temper. He realized that the South had been beaten in a fair struggle on the fields of battle and that prolonging the fighting would merely add to the horrors and miseries endured by his people. Therefore after the Battle of Five Forks, he opened negotiations with Grant and on the morning of April 9th under the budding apple trees of an Appomattox orchard were determined the terms of peace which were formally written down at the Wilmer-McLean house in the afternoon.

Lee had dressed for his last public occasion with great care. Grant on the contrary lacked his full dress and appeared in the "fatigue" and dusty jack boots of the hard campaign. Strangely enough General Lee had no pencil to write with. A pocket ink stand and pen were lent by an officer of the general staff, and it was with these that the historic document of surrender was written. Afterwards an effort was made to arrest and indict Lee for treason but Grant, who knew Lee's nobility of character and how he had fulfilled to the letter all the surrender obligations, prevented any such disgraceful sequel to the great event.

Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality, which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

A. C. U.'S DEFEATED THE MACCABEES LAST NIGHT

Thoroughly outclassing the home team in every department of the game the A. C. U. basketball quintet of Syracuse, administered a decisive defeat to the Maccabees last night at Church's hall by a score of 58 to 8. The visiting team put up a stonewall defence and the locals secured but three field baskets. Crockett obtained the first basket in the opening period.

The Maccabees made several shifts in their lineup in an endeavor to score more frequently. Several substitutions were also made, Martin of the High school team was sent in in the second half, but even with Martin and Reynolds in the forward positions, the guards of the visiting team could not be evaded. Practically all of the baskets scored by the A. C. U. team were made by the two forwards, Waidelle and Hooker. The latter made 11 baskets.

In the preliminary game, the High School second team defeated the Baptist Boy Scouts, 17 to 7.

LOCAL BUFFALO GRADS TO ATTEND BANQUET

Drs. Schlappi and Conklin, and R. W. Englehardt, of the KlineWood Drug Company, alumni of the University of Buffalo, will attend the banquet of the Central New York Alumnus Association of the University which is to be held in Syracuse tonight at Endree's restaurant in S. Warren st.

The affair will be a stag party and will be attended by graduates from the different departments of the university. Formally it was the custom for each department to hold a banquet separately, which has been changed this year to include all the department graduates.

CORT DUTTON GAVE PARTY FOR BROTHER

Cort Dutton gave a stag party last night at his home on the W. River road, in honor of his brother Ralph, of lion, who is visiting here for several days. The Bachelor A. C. attended in a body. The evening was spent in card playing. Refreshments were served and a musical program furnished by the Messrs. Bert Painter, Edward Rugg and Cort Dutton.

ODD FELLOWS TO HAVE LADIES NIGHT

Tentative preparations were made at the regular weekly meeting of the Odd Fellows last night to have a "ladies night" sometime during the latter part of this month. Prominent speakers will be invited from neighboring cities and towns.

A large number of condidates were initiated; following the business session the members enjoyed a supper t

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

MEN WHO HARM A TOWN

1. Those who oppose improvements.
2. Those who "knock" strangers and who "knock" the town to strangers.
3. Those who show hospitality to no one.
4. Those who hate to see others succeed.
5. Those who distrust public-spirited men.
6. Those who oppose every movement which does not originate with themselves.
7. Those who oppose every enterprise that does not appear to benefit themselves.
8. Those who enjoy the benefits that come from the work of public-spirited, broad-minded men, but men who give nothing but criticism in return.

Do you b'long? Why not reform?

The Chamber of Commerce will hold the first annual meeting since the reorganization on March 31st, 1916. Please prepare yourself for a splendid affair.

Have you ever given it thought that the trade of the farmers is a stable one, if you treat them right and that there is hardly anything better to be found than that trade?

If every citizen was just like me,
What kind of a city FULTON would be? —(Ensign Fitzgerald).

If one makes a mistake and the other fellow knows about it, it immediately becomes the duty of the other fellow to put him wise. If he neglects to do that, he destroys instead of building up.

* * *

Have you traded at home lately? The merchants in FULTON have a good stock of goods on hand and are willing at any time to SERVE you.

There is never any disappointment to the fellow who is looking for TROUBLE—he ALWAYS finds it.

* * *

There have been many definitions given for the booster, but the following seems to come very closely to a correct one: A BOOSTER IS A PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZEN WHO FORGETS OR OVERLOOKS THE FRAILTIES, ERRORS AND WEAKNESSES IN HIS FELLOW TOWNSMEN AND IN HIS CITY, BUT WHO DOES ALL THE GOOD HE CAN, TO ALL THE PEOPLE HE CAN, AND THEN LEAVES THE REST TO GOD.

* * *

Do YOU do what you say the other fellow ought to do?

PASSENGERS MUST NOT TRAVEL ON FREIGHTERS

Detroit—Great Lakes marine interests put an end to thep ractice of carrying passengeds on lake freighters in a recent order of the department of commerce ,requiring boats carrying passengers to be especially constructed. The order was given according to the provisions of the seaman's act. It is understood that this rule will be strictly enforced by the local inspectors of steam vessels.

POISONED BY MEAT, WIFE SUES PACKERS

Watertown— Charging that her husband, John Sixbury, late of this city, died as a result of poisoning contracted in handling treated meot, Mrs. Minnie L. Sixbury, of 616 Lansing street, has brought suits in supreme court against John Sulzberger & Son Co., of Chicago, and Horace E. Tyler, of this city, to recover $25,000 for his death.

PHILADELPHIA TO HAVE AVIATION SCHOOL

Philadelphia—An ordinance passed unanimously by the City Councils leasing to the Philadelphia School of Aviation for a period of ten years the property on the Delaware River used years ago as a quarantine station was signed today by Mayor Smith. Wealthy public spirited citizens will finance the erection of hangers and the construction of aeroplanes.

U. S. STEEL PLANS BIG DEVELOPMENT

Announcement made by the United States Steel Corporation of its intention to build one of the largest plants which it has erected in years. The new works will be a tube plant to cost about $25,000,000.

The construction is in line with the corporation's extensive programme of development mapped out several months ago to meet not only the enormous demands on the concern through the business now being brought to these shores by the European war, but, also the immense trade which the directors see opening to the corporation has received huge orders foor manufactures to be turned over to consumers in Europe when the hostilities are ended, and has begun a big campaign of salesmanship in South American to capture trade with that continent which formerly went to European manufacturers.

Elbert H. Gary. chairman of the corporation, in making the announcement of the new works, said:—"We have decided to build and will promptly commence the construction of a first class tube plant at Gary, Ind. It is estimated the improvements, including ore docks, ore yards, blast furnaces, converting mills, blooming mills, powder station, water works, sheared plate mill, universal plate mills, butt mills, job shops and all auxiliary departments, will cost $25,000,000. It is probable the plant will be built in two units, the first of which it is hoped will be completed in about fourteen months."

The appropriation for the tube plant, together with others for extension work, brings the total sum set aside by the corporation during the last six monts for new plants up to about $53,000,000. A large part of the expenditures is for new coke works. The amount is exclusive of the $3,000,000 to be expended in the construction of the big zinc works at Donora, Pa.

REV. MR. DARLING IS CALLED HERE

Baptists Hold 28th Annual Meeting, Calling Popular Cazenovia Man As Pastor

At the adjourned corporate meeting held in the Baptist church yesterday a call was extended to the Rev. Floyd Darling, of Cazenovia, to become pastor of the church. A large majority voted in its favor. Reports for the year were also received from the officers of the different organizations within the church showing that a healthy growth has been made.

Rev. J. L. Coote of Baldwinsville, was the guest of honor and acted as moderator for both afternoon and night sessions.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

Church clerk, Clara G. Wilson; Superintendent of unday school, Edward O. Hart; chairman usher committee, Frank Cordonnier; treasurer of benevolences, C. W. Streeter; assistant superintendents, F. B. Trask, Maynard Goodfellow; deacons, Chas. H. Dockstader, 3 years; John Morto, 3 years; deaconess, Mrs. C. W. Streeter, 3 years; secretary and treasurer Sunday school, Lena Gardner; music committee, E. E. Hart, Mrs. H. S. Orchard; benevolence Committee, C. W. Streeter, John Morton, Ada M. Wright, Hannah Jones, Floyd Cox, Mrs. F. Scholz.

FEDERATION WILL PUT UP BARS ON SUBJECTS

Antwerp—A movement inaugurated by the Antwerp Saturday club to keep suffrage and other topics out of discussion before the June meeting of the Northern Federation of Women's Clubs is meeting with success, according to announcement today.

Of 20 replies received by the local club to letters, asking that members of the federation pledge themselves to keep resolutions on certain subjects out of the meeting in Watertown in June, the majority have been favorable. The Antwerp club believes that the movement will have practically unanimous endorsement of the clubs in the Northern Federation. Letters asked that clubs pledge themselves not to discuss politics, religion suffrage and anti-suffrage at the June meeting, when the election of officers takes place.

SPRING ROBIN STORIES PALL BEFORE THIS FLY STORY

While Mr. James H. Brooks's claim as the first annual discoverer of spring robins goes undisputed by a majority of persons, there are quite a number of his neighbors and friends remaining a little bit skeptical about the assertion that he captured, recently, a fine specimen of butterfly in the diningroom of his home. This skepticism does not worry Mr. Brooks in the least for he is able to substantiate his claim by exhibiting the fly in the place where sweet ointment once prevailed—an empty preserve can.

WEATHER FORECAST

Partly cloudy and colder tonight and Saturday fair. Strong west to northwest winds.

GERMANS CONTROL ALL VERDUN HIGHWAYS

Paris—The Germans have added to yesterday's gains by rolling up two French wings west of the Mense.

The French by a strong counter attack succeeded today in driving the Germans from the greater part of the Corbeaux Wood, which they occupied yesterday, and, according to the official statement issued by the War Office tonight, the Germans now hold only the eastern extremity of this wood. The Germans, however, have reoccupied the Hardaumont redoubt. Douaumont, to the north of Verdun, is again being heavily bombarded. The text of the communication reads:

"To the north of the Aisne destructive fires have been carried out against the enemy works on the Plateau of Craonne and the environs of Pasly, north of Soissons.e

"In the Argonne we concentrated our fire on the German organizations at Haute Chevauchee and the Cheppy Wood.

"West on the Meuse the enemy attempted to make a fresh advance during the course of the day. Under cover of an intense bombardment an attack by heavy effectives was directed against our positions at Bethincourt, but was repulsed.

"A counter attack launched by us on the Bois des Corbeaux, where the Germans penetrated yesterday, drove the enemy from the greater part of that wood, of which he occupies no more than the eastern extremity.

"On the right bank of the Meuse the bombardment again has become very violent in the region of Douaumont, where the Germans attempted unsuccessfully to attack our lines. East of the fort, after an infantry action, the enemy succeeded in reoccupying the Hardaumount redoubt which we took possession of yesterday.

"In the Woevre a very spirited artillery action has been maintained. Our batteries on the Meuse hills have energetically countershelled the German artillery."

France awaits anxiously but confidently the issue of the battle

NITRATES ENGAGING EDISON 21 HOURS DAILY

New York—Urging upon the Secretary of the Navy that he request the President to appoint a commission to handle the subject, the Naval Consulting Board at its meeting in the Engineers' Club, yesterday, put into practical shape suggestions for supplying this country with nitrogen products for which it now depends on Chili. This is deemed one of the most important measures of preparedness, and agricultural interests are equally dependent on the product in times of peace. If the Chilian supply were to be cut off this country would find it impossible to manufacture munitions until plants were provided for the manufacture of nitrates from the air.

All but five of the members were present at the meeting. T. A. Edison, chairman of the Board, was absent, and William L. Saunders, vice chairman, presided. Miller Roose Hutchinson, Mr. Edison's chief engineer, said that Mr. Edison had been working foor several weeks on something new, and that for a week he has been in his laboratory continuously for twenty-one hours a day.

It was said there were three ways to prepare—by storing up enough nitrates to last through a war; by providing for its manufacture by public and private plants, or to establish a plant where the manufacture might be carried on and a force of skilled workmen trained.

Dr. W. L. Whitney, chairman of the Committee on Physics and Chemistry, and Hudson Maxim, chairman of the Committee on Explosives, made reports covering conditions in the United States. They referred to two important financial interests that are ready to embark in the manufacture of nitrates provided they received some encouragement from the government. The effect of a shortag of nitrates on the army and navy would be vital in the event of war, but the agricultural situation with the present tendencies toward intensification of the use of the soil demands more than ever cheap nitrates.

WHAT ARE WE?

There is much force in the Lenten letter of Bishop Olmstead to the members of the Episcopal church of his diocese, in which he cites the present horrible war conditions that sing the hymn of hate as opposed to the precepts of Christ. "Are we wild beasts, essentially selfish, barbarous, cruel, hating one another and delighting in the destruction of our enemies." says the good bishop, "or are we human beings with consciences capable of being influenced by tender feelings?" That is really the question of the hour and the Lenten season is a good time to consider it. The world had fondly hoped that the barbarian days had passed but Christain civilization was suddenly overturned in a day and the barbarian appeared through the thin coating of civilized men. Perhaps it is the divine purpose of the war, made more horrible than any other wars, to kill the barbarian and allow a new birth of a better human kind. Peace on earth to men of good will must yet be triumphant or the Christian faith is mocked. —Watertown Times.

WAS THE GAME WORTH THE CANDLE?

Students of our system of government express surprise that the has worked as well as it has. That we have somehow "muddled through" is attributed to our undeveloped resources and the adaptability of our people. These factors, it is suggested, have enabled us to weather storms which would have wrecked more densely populated, industrially more highly developed, countries.

What we have lost, individually and collectively, from sudden changes in fiscal policy, extravagance in public expenditure; sheer, reckless, criminal waste of national bounty would startle us if it could be measured. Of course, we are paying for it and others will pay.

Furthermore, the demands of increased population and the use and misuse of the country's natural wealth have tended to diminish our ability to resist industrial stress. We cannot always have our cake and eat it, too. Bounteous as are our gifts of nature they can be exhausted

True, there are a few trees standing. We have streams still capable of turning a wheel. Reluctantly, almost, we have given heed to the necessity of making two blades of wheat grow where heretofore one has been deemed sufficient. But this is not enough.

Unless we, as a people, have learned something which shall compensate for past neglect our position certainly has not improved.

The real question is: Have we developed any strong national sentiment against waste and in favor of the just application of public funds to the public needs as distinguished from the "pork barrel?" If so we may be forgiven our orgy.

But have we?—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

TRADING STAMPS DECISION

Although its immediate effect is to sustain the Washington and Florida tax laws, and the misdemeanor law of the former State, the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, that a State may constitutionally tax out of existence or prohibit dealing in which trading stamps are given away, is one that must have far-reaching effects on the retail business methods of all our cities and villages. Most of the coupons are redeemable outside the State where issued. This was claimed to constitute interstate commerce. It was also asserted that the State legislation ran athwart of the "equal proection" clauses of the Nation's fundamental law. Justice McKenna, who writes the opinion, brushes away these contentions. He says

The schemes of the complainants have no directness and effect. They rely upon something else than the article sold. They tempt by a promise of value greater than the article and apparently not represented in its price, and it hence may be thought that thus by an appeal to cupidity lure to improvidence. This may not be called "gaming;" it may, however, be considered as having the seduction and evil of such and whether it has may be a matter of inquiry and judgment that is finally within the power of the Legislature to make.

Under the decision of the Supreme Court, the Legislature of a State may pass what laws it pleases relative to trading stamps. The way is thus left open for strike bills. Of course, the Court did not intend to facilitate grafting; but it acted in accordance with a series of precedents since the Civil War, enlarging or refusing to curb State legislatures, which close students of constitutional development have regarded as pernicious.—Utica Dispatch.

IT'S TIME FOR KNOCKERS TO DREAM

Julius Caesar on his way to Rome with his army hearing that the Senate and people had fled from it, said: "They that will not fight for their city, what city will they fight for?"

Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco are famous for the praiseful way their citizens speak for their cities. What city will Fulton people stand up for, if not the city of their homes?

Notwithstanding the knocks the knockers have been receiving of late, and the defeats they have suffered by things coming out all right, they still refuse to profit by the lessons. They knock because they have no dreams of future achievement. It was always so. Any man with a dream of doing something great in this or any other city is likely to be laughed at, and some men with big ideas are squelched by ridicule.

But nearly every man who has accomplished anything worth while was once a dreamer and the reason his dreams came true was because he stuck to them and was not disheartened or turned aside by the ridicule of his intellectual inferiors.

When Disraeli, a young Jew, arose to make his first speech in the British Parliament he was hooted at and laughed at and howled down, but undismayed, he shouted: "The time will come when you will hear me!" Disraeli was a young man with a dream and he stuck to it and he made it come true.

Columns might be added of men who have stuck to their dreams. Benjamin Franklin, Thomas A. Edison and a host of other men could be named who hitched their wagons to a star, never allowing anything to dismay them, but nothing would be gained in the mentioning, save the one point—that it might pay all of us to dream of building up a city clean and beautiful rather than flee from the responsibilities of citizenship.

If the knocker cannot be trusted to stand up for the people who are dreaming of better things in the community, what will he stand up for?

NO TAINTED MONEY

In line with the remarks of a speaker at the Chamber of Commerce dinner, there are still evidences that spiritual life survives, and that in the most inhospitable surroundings. Not far from Wall Street in New York, hardly out of hearing of Broadway's day and night life, Edith Kitching, spinster philosopher, has proved that the spirit can be unwilling and the flesh strong. She has rejected a legacy of $40,000 due and awaiting her from the estate of an uncle who, as she is said to have told the reporters who found her living in a little hall bedroom, in an old brick house, was "a very wicked man. He made his money by foreclosing mortgages and grinding the faces of the poor. Every dollar of the fortune he saved was tainted money. I could not take it and preserve my self-respect."

This may be only a reporter's "human interest yarn"; yet sublime self-abnegation such as that of spurning money in a city where Mammon is chief certainly serves to point a moral to the tale. As for the reporters, they were incredulous and cynical to the point of asking: "Then you really and truly prefer to go on living on $300 a year to having enough money to live nicely on and to help carry out your mission?" That reporter who put this question may have felt that he had given this strange woman a poser in turn, a Roland for her Oliver. But she answered without hesitation:

"I prefer it to taking his money. Don't think I am afraid of money decently and honestly earned. But all the best things in life can be got without money and none of the best things can be got with it. There are only three things in life that have intrinsic value—intelligence, love and will. To acquire these I have all the money I need."

Ah! blessed contentment, that cannot be purchased; uprightness that spurns money that is honestly acquired; a heart for the things in life that are really worth while!—Auburn Citizen.

THEY WILL STAY

There seems a disposition in the legislature for a new attack on the direct primary law, so as to restore state conventions for the making of state tickets and the nomination of governor and senators. It will not be a popular movement. At first, even among the friends of the direct primary law, there was a good deal of doubt that it would work well when applied to the state ticket and a good deal of sentiment for the preservation of the state convention. The proof of the pudding is in the eating and the direct primary has worked well, even in the selection of candidates for these higher offices. It was tried at the last state election, and resulted in a good ticket, and no voter found any difficulty whatever in marking the name of the man he wanted to vote for on election day. All difficulties disappeared when the voter went into the booth and the people nominated their choice for all state officers and the ticket was a good one, a representative one, and the republican ticket was elected and the administration of Governor Whitman has justified their choice. It did upset the slate of the politicians and perhaps that is why they are opposed to it. In the case of Mr. Hugo, for instance, the organization, after having promised that they would support him, threw him down in favor of another, and he took the field and appealed directly to the people and was nominated in spite of the organization. Under the convention system he would have had no chance whatever. His record in the office of secretary of state has proved that the choice of the people was a better one and a more representative one than the choice of the political organization.

The direct primary has come to stay, for the people have tried it and they will not let it go. The law is not a perfect one and could be amended in some respects to simplify it and make its operation less expensive, but the main principle, the direct nomination of candidates by the voters, has proved itself to be practicable, to be representative, to produce the best results, and to be the only real method of determining the will of the people, which in a republic ought to be supreme.—Watertown Times.

MOST FEMININE OF TREES.

The Birch Seems to Take a Delight In Theatrical Effects.

The birch, above all our American trees, delights in theatrical effects And if that sentence is objected to on the ground of "pathetic fallacy," we will commit the whole sin at once and add that it is the most feminine of trees.

In earliest spring, when the hepaticas are pushing up last year's leaves and our Berkshire mountain sides are donning their frail, delicate veils of color, the young birches are conspicuous for the startling brightness of their new foliage, a green so much [illegible]er and more vivid than all the other greens that it would arrest attention even if it were not borne on a snow white stem.

Your young birch has all the daring of a debutante.

Later, when the summer thunderstorms come, the birch has another trick up its sleeve. Some afternoon a dark, gunmetal thunder head will mass behind the crest of a hill, and suddenly an old birch on the summit will leap into startling prominence, so that it focuses the entire attention, like a single splendid streak of chalk white lightning.

Again, in midwinter, when the birch by rights should be protectively colored and inconspicuous, it is the other trees we do not notice, and the birch tree rises by the edge of the frozen stream, perhaps, or against the dark wall of the pines and displays all its snowy limbs to best advantage against evergreen or sky. — Walter Prichard Eaton in Century Magazine.

Homeliness Explained.

Mr. Fitznoodle was asked the other day how he could account for nature's forming him so ugly.

"Nature was not to blame," said he. "When I was two months old I was considered the handsomest child in the neighborhood, but my nurse swapped me away for another boy just to please a friend of hers whose child was rather ungainly looking."—Kansas City Star.

THREE GRADES

The dreamer sees the vision clear,
  Though other eyes are blinded,
And as he feasts pon the sight
  To capture it is minded.

The sleeper is oblivious
  And naught disturbs his slumbers;
He rocks not of the magic shapes
  That throng in countless numbers.

The snorer feels that something stirs
  And nobody can doubt it,
But since he cannot understand
  Just makes a noise about it.

ONE DAY ADVERTISING DEPLORED BY PUBLISHER

At a recent meeting of the Auburn Ad Club, says The Citizen of that city, Mr. Herbert J. Fowler spoke on the publishing business in general and Friday advertising in particular.

Mr. Fowler asserted that a larger percentage of the gross receipts of the daily newspaper publishing business went into the channels of local trade than from any other manufacturing industry. In the first place, he said, the profits were smaller; and he described how close is the margin in publishing daily newspapers the country over, declaring itd id not range much above five per cent. A very large proportion of the remainder, he said, went to pay wages, maintenance, repairs and for other purely local expenses. Only a small proportion was diverted to out-of-town houses for stock, although paper and ink bills were heavy.

One interesting statement made by the speaker was that the actual cost of the average daily newspaper is from five to eight times what the subscriber pays for it, and he frankly admitted that it is the advertiser who pays the long end of the charges.

The quest for free publicity received considerable attention, and Mr. Fowler declared it to be one of the main abuses of the trade. He cited the churches, by way of illustration, as one of the most confirmed seekers for free publicity. They expected columns upon columns of free reading notices, but when they hired a plumber, a carpenter or a steam fitter to repair their buildings they did not expect to get the work done for nothing. Even the Chamber of Commerce, he declared, had never so far as he knew expended a dollar for advertising, but had always "sponged" its advertising. He said he did not mean to speak hypercritically of the Chamber; he merely cited it as a shining example of a bad habit.

"All these things that you see in print cost something," he said. "Somebody has to foot the bill. Paper, ink, labor, rent and the like cost money, somebody must pay. It seems that many people expect the publisher to pay it."

Someone would say, he suggested, that "all the stuff you print is news." But he declared that a very large proportion of it—columns upon columns, he said, could be classed as "special interest matter," really designed to further some personal or private or only quasi-public end.

With regard to Friday advertising the speaker said in part:

"The main objection to Friday advertising, in my opinion is that it is the most costly kind of advertising. This is the main objection to stuffing your daily papers once a week with ads. Friday advertising must inevitably result in an advance in rates, if perpetuated. Why? Because it is more expensive to the publisher than daily advertising in the same amount. When a week's advertising is crammed into a single day, the publisher has to pay overtime, which at the union scale costs time and a half. It represents for the specific occasion a 50 per cent. increase in payroll. And a very large proportion of once-a-week advertising, gentleman, is composed on this basis.

"But there are other and even stronger reasons, from your standpoint, and this time having not so much interest for the publisher except psychologically, why Friday advertising, carried to extremes, is a bad thing. It is bad for you as merchandisers because it sets aside Saturday, one day in the week, for people to do their trading. You actually invite them to stay at home only on Saturday, if they live outside the city, or if they reside in the city to burrow in their houses five days of the week. The confirmed Friday advertiser might as well devote Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to the proverbial pursuits of one Solomon Grundy and close up his shop till fete day. Think it over, gentlemen. People eat, sleep, drink, wear clothes and shoes, read newspapers, the same on these other days as on Saturday. Why not educate them to the big city idea that one day is as good as another and that you sell honest goods at honest prices every day in the week?

"There is one other strong factor against one day advertising which suggests itself to me. It is the little matter of weather. If you have observed closely as I have you will recall that for four Saturdays running Friday advertising was knocked galley West, so to speak, by a gentleman who is no respector of men or events, Mr. J. Pluvius. Each Friday for four Fridays running the merchants of this town courageously came to the front with their advertising.

Each Saturday for four Saturdays running the weather man put a crimp in their worthy aspirations to do business.

"We do not believe in Friday advertising more than we believe in any other form of sporadic advertising. We do not believe any truly successful merchant can hide his head in the sand like an ostrich for five or six weeks waiting for a dull season to pass and tacitly notifying the general public that he has locked the door and gone home to bed. For several weeks this Winter people of neighboring towns thought mercantile Auburn had gone away on a vacation. All the experience of the largest and most successful advertisers is against this practice."

In closing he said:

"The merchants of Auburn, and the Ad Club members in particular, have nothing of which they need to be ashamed, in my opinion. They are progressive beyond most towns of the size, generous to a fault, eager to advance the city's interests and possessed of great courage and fortitude, almost uniformly I never saw a set of merchants so uniformly courageous, and so ready to take hard knocks. If they spend a lot of money for advertising and run up against a spell of tough weather, they invariably philosophize and go right back at it the next time. Such men deserve to win, and they will win. But what we want to see, gentlemen, is men of such splendid courage and fortitude getting the full worth of their money."

URGE BILL TO STOP KILLING BOBOLINK

Asserting that the once popular song bird, the bobolink, has been called the reed bird so it could be "slaughtered by alleged sportsmen," the New Jersey Audubon Society has sent out a circular appealing for support of a bill now in the New Jersey Legislature to protect that bird.

The society contends that besides being a wonderful songster the bobolink, "alias reed bird," is one of the most valuable insect destroyers of nature. Through being classed by the State Game and Fish Commission as a reed bird, gunners have been permitted to kill the bobolink during September, October, November and December, although recently the federal Migratory Bird law has limited the killing to two months.

A bill to prohibit the killing of the bobolink, or the reed bird, has been buried in the Assembly Committee on Game and Fisheries, the society states, and is likely to die there unless the people demand its passage.

RAILROAD MEN WENT ON STRIKE YESTERDAY

All laborers on the Ontario & Western railway, including freight handlers, section men and car knockers in Oswego and along the entire system, walked out at noon yesterday on account of the reported refusal of the company to recognize a newly formed union, organized for the purpose of securing an increase in salary of three cents an hour. It is claimed the railway will grant the increase in salary but will not stand for a union.

CROSSING BELLS NOT OBLIGATORY

Oswego—Justice Andrews, in Supreme Court holds that the failure of a railroad company to maintain a bell at a railroad crossing or its failure to keep it in repair if one was maintained was not an act of negligence and that this in itself was not sufficient to warrant a verdict against the railroad company in case an accident occurred.

The only obligation of a railroad, Judge Andrews said, was to blow for a crossing, in accordance with the rules laid down in the statutes.

The point came up in the trial of the action of R. James Cunningham as administrator of the estate of his wife, against the D. L. & W. Railroad company.

When D. P. Morehouse, for the plaintiff, started to prove that the bell at the crossing was out of order on the day of the accident, and that this in itself was an act of negligence, C. P. Byrne, for the Lackawanna, objected on the ground that this allegation was not contained in the pleadings. Mr. Morehouse made a motion to amend the complaint, but before this was passed upon, Judge Andrews said that while the question the ringing of the bell was not competent as to the question of the negligence of the company, it might be material on the question of contributory negligence. With this ruling Mr. Morehouse withdrew his motion to amend the complaint and the case proceded.

The next action to come to trial will be No. 24, that of Charles Monta against the Eureka Paper Company, of Fulton, for personal injuries.

A formal motion was made yesterday afternoon to have the $8.500 verdict in the case of Isabel Adle, etc., against the Fulton Light, Heat and Poweer Company, set aside on the ground that it was excessive. The motion was denied.

Following is the court calendar, No. 4 reserved until Monday: 12, 50, 73, 45, 25, 62, 83.

LAWYER QUESTIONS RIGHTS OF OFFICERS

According to the Oswego Times, John R. Pidgeon, Esq., of that city, has raised a novel question by objecting to the service of legal papers by an out of town constable. The two are both ill and unable to perform their duties.

The question developed at the trial of Harry Scslow against R. G. Cullivan, an action to recover in Justice J. J. Mahaney's court. The papers in the case were served by Charles Snyder, constable of the town of Scriba, who, it is said, has been arriving in the city daily during the illness of the local officials and has been serving summonses. Mr. Pidgeon, as attorney for Cullivan, questioned the jurisdiction of the court to try the case on the ground that the papers had not been served by a duly deputized constable and pending an investigation to determine the right, Judge Mahaney adjourned the case for one week.

Mr. Pidgeon, in his argument this morning, declared that the justice's courts of the city of Oswego were governed by charter law and that an outsider had no right to come into the city and serve papers without being deputized. Should this interpretation be upheld by Justice Mahaney the city courts will have to suspend operations temporarily until Standtke is again on the job.

DIGNITARIES OF WAR DON'T WORRY GIRLS

Test In Current Events Brings Forth Many Errors.

Cambridge, Mass.—An examination to determine whether Radcliffe girls stand in need of a course in current events has just been completed with startling results.

Sixteen girls were chosen for the experiment—four from each class, and all members of the Civic club. The questions dealt with names and places connected with the war.

The name of Secretary of State Robert Lansing may be a household word, but two of the sixteen never had heard of him. Three had a hazy idea that he was secretary of war, while another said that he was "an American ambassador of some sort."

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg was given every title in the German service except his own. One miss designated him as a "resigned Dutch cabinet minister."

The name of General Gallieni, French minister of war, was unknown, and all but two of the girls called him an Italian. Premier Aristide Briand was almost similarly neglected, only two giving him his proper office.

Gallipoli was placed in Greece or in Italy by the majority of the writers. Not a single girl knew that Sir Ian Hamilton had ever come within speaking distance of the Dardanelles.

Asked to name three German generals six papers cited only Von Hindenburg. Von Buelow and Von Mackensen were known by one girl each. Von Kluck was entirely forgotten.

PAYS $2.50 DEBT IN 40 YEARS.

Son of Original Creditor Receives Money Order For $9.

Indianapolis.—Homer Taggart, a real estate man of South Bend, has received a letter with a postoffice money order in it calling for $9. More than forty years ago Mr. Taggart's father, long since dead, sold a second hand buggy to F. D. Airgood, a country blacksmith, at Servia, Ind. A note was given in payment.

Part payment had been made on the small original sum. A balance of $2.50 remained unpaid. The note was later destroyed in a fire and the unpaid part was forgotten. Mr. Airgood, now an old man, had just thought of the money and mailed the South Bend man $9, which is the unpaid part of the debt and the interest on it.

DURLING VAN ALSTYNE SUSTAINS INJURED LEG

Mr. Darling Van Alstyne, of 306 Gansevoort street, sustained an injured leg at the Victoria Mills at 1 o'clock this morning, and as a result it was found by Dr. Fox that an X-Ray examination should be made. Mr. Van Alstyne was injured when a heavy set of "falls" dropped upon him.

According to Mr. James Van Alstyne, father of the injured man, his son was permitted to lie on a pile of paper in a suffering condition from the time of the accident until 7 o'clock this morning. The elder, Van Alstyne, who is employed at the L. P. Smith hardware store was on his way to work this morning when a boy employed in the mill on the night shift informed him of the accident.

Upon Mr. Van Alstyne's arrival at the mill, he was informed that one of the men had gone out to get a cab to have the injured man taken away. The father, however, called up a local livery and secured a hack and removed the son to his home.

FARMERS SHOULD ADVERTISE, TOO

Columbia, N. Y. — Charles P. Brown of this town has written a letter to the press with reference to farmers and the need for organization among them. Mr. Brown believes in the work done by the State Agricultural Department, but believes that farmers must organize to get the best prices for their products. Mr. Brown does not entirely agree with the statement that farmers do not manage their affairs right. He states that there has been a vast improvement in the last few years, but is willing to concede that there is room for more improvement.

Mr. Brown also believes that farmers should advertise their products and in advertising them see to it that they are advertising as pure. He expressed the belief that much could be done if the milk of Herkimer County should be pooled and all handled by the Farm Bureau. In closing his letter Mr. Brown says

"There are 3,020 farms in this county and if 2,000 farmers would join the Farm Bureau and instead of giving 1 each would give $5, that would mean $10,00 0to run the Farm Bureau It seems to me them anager would be prepared to get farmers together and there are 60 counties in this state and 36 have farm bureaus, so perhaps our association could get all other farm bureau associations interested in the same way, so in the near future the farmers in this State would be ready to decide if they had a right to defend the prices on their farm more for their milk would pay the farmers several dollars more than this cost, so he could well afford to pay the manager enough so that no milk company could touch him. All organizations pay their managers well and then he has no desire to work elsewhere. Now, farmers, I hope you will not let the farm agent be supported by other elements. If you do, he may favor the elements that pay him best and the farmers will have to supoprt the other elements, too. Why should the United States Government, the railroad companies, etc. support an organization for their own good alone as the Farm Bureau is: If the Borden's have taken out of the farmers this year $150,000 by the low price they pay, I say get after the farm bureau and make it your own organization at once and tell us you are ready to support the cause. The Farm Bureau is here for the purpose of helping us farmers, and if you ask the manager. I think he will do everything that he can do and will find a way to boost the price of milk, and as long as you sustain him, he will sustain you.

THE QUIRK TODAY

The siren's song can easily be recommended as a masterpiece. It has in it many scenes that are hair-raising, the most prominent of which is the fight on board an ocean-going steamer, at the climax of which the villian throws the hero from the deck, the latter falling a distance of over seventy-five feet into the raging ocean.

The wrecking of a bank by the duped depositors is another strong scene that equals the mob scene that made such a tremendous hit it "The Pit." It is at this point of the story where love element, which is one of rural simplicity and appealing to all, starts its ever entwining way to the finish.

Four reels of Universal photoplays and 4 acts of vaudeville will round out an excellent program of interest.

FRIENDLY NINE HAD FINE TIMES YESTERDAY

Mrs. Carrie Sanford opened her home on the Emery road, yesterday, to a number of intimate friends who made the trip in the Seymour Shaff sled. The entire afternoon and evening were spent in music by Mrs. CcCoy, some recitations and readings. A roast duck supper was served, and a jolly good time is the vote of the guests.

SCHOOLGIRL ENDS LIFE.

Reading of Innocent Note to Boy Before Class Causes Suicide.

Hartford, Conn.—Gladys Stone, fourteen years old, committed suicide by drinking poison because her schoolteacher had read to the class in a grammar school an intercepted note in which the girl had invited a boy friend to attend a social party at a church.

The girl took the affair to heart, purchased poison at a drug store and then swallowed it at her home. She wrote a note to her mother asking forgiveness.

Waited For Bride Twenty-five Years.

Denver.—Twenty-five years ago her parents told Lillian Nesser she was too young at twenty to marry Levi Clifford, then forty-five. Recently they were married, after world travels and her marriage to a younger man had intervened. The widow's hair is as white as that of her second husband. Clifford had never married

UNCLE JOSH HAS 493 LIVING DESCENDANTS

Youngest Child Fifteen, Oldest Great-Great-Grandfather.

Birmingham, Ala.—The little town of Oneonta, tucked away in the foothills of Alabama's mineral district, has discovered why there are so many Smiths in this region.

Uncle Josh Smith, who lives near that town, is hale and hearty at ninety-nine, and he has 493 children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren and great-great-great-grandchildren. They are all still alive and will soon have a family reunion. Uncle Josh's youngest child is fifteen, his oldest is a great-great-grandfather.

Here is the way it runs: Uncle Josh's son, Sam Smith; his son, James Smith; his son, Robert Smith; his son, John Smith, and the latter's daughter, aged eight. There is still a younger son of Uncle Josh, William Smith. There is John's son, Sam; a daughter of Sam and her child, Sam, who is a grandfather at the age of thirty-four.

Uncle Josh is a parson and still preaches in the Primitive Baptist churches of his section. He is active, walks five miles any time, has a fine appetite, reads several hours a day and is still a good horseman and rifle shot.

He came to Alabama shortly after it was admitted to the Union. His advent was thrilling. A cyclone overtook him, and he sought refuge in a field where a hay pole stood. According to his story, he held to the pole and was blown around it like a whirligig. Finally the pole was uprooted, but he hung on, and he and the pole were landed 300 yards away on the hillside. He's living within a stone's throw of the place now.

POWER OF PRAYER.

Mother Will Mortgage Home to Go to Her Kidnaped Children.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Eager to see her two children, kidnaped from her fifteen years ago and just found after a search she never abandoned, Mrs. Ella Barnhart declared that she would mortgage her little home and go to them at once.

"It was the power of prayer," she said, in telling how, after inquiring from house to house in the cities of many states, she at last discovered the whereabouts of her boy and girl in Oklahoma.

Mrs. Barnhart was living with her husband at Mount Vernon, Mo., when her husband kidnaped the children while she was sick. As soon as she recovered she started the search which lasted for sixteen years.

Stork Visits Business Partners.

Haddonfield, N. J.—A peculiar coincidence in births occurred here. J. C. Remington and Winfield Vosbury constitute the firm of Remington & Vosbury, engineers, of Camden. Both families live here. Mrs. Remington gave birth to a son, and a few hours later Mrs. Vosbury gave birth to two daughters.

Cow's Tongue Caught.

Kelso, Wash.—A cow belonging to J. F. Stidham lost about two inches of her tongue by having it caught in a steel trap. When the cow was found her tongue was in bad shape, and Stidham could not figure out what had happened until he found the trap with the missing tongue.

A Touch of Inspiration.

"My wife," said the celebrated purveyor of indifferent sellers, "can't be made to understand that a writer has his off days."

"No?"

"She thinks I ought to be able to write freely as long as there is ink in the fountain pen."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CROP RESERVES ON FARMS ARE LARGEST KNOWN

Washington—The amount of wheat on farms March 1 was about 241,717,000 bushels, or 23.9 per cent of the 1915 crop, according to the estimates issued today by the Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Crop Estimates. That total compares with 152,930,000 bushels, of 17.2 per cent of the 1914 crop on farms March 1, 1916, and 151,795,000 bushels, of 19.9 per cent of the 1913 crop on farms March 1, 1914. It is the largest reserve ever reported.

About 61.7 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, against 60.7 per cent of the 1914 crop and 53.9 per cent of the 1913 crop so shipped.

The board estimates that the amount of corn on farms March 1 was about 1,138,773,000 bushels or 37.3 per cent of the 1915 crop, as compared with 910,894,000 bushels, or 34.1 per cent of the 1914 crop on farms March 1, 1915, and $66,352,000 bushels or 35.4 per cent of the 1913 cropon farms March 1, 1914.

About 18.6 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, as compared with 18.6 per cent of the 1914 crop and 17.2 per cent. of the 1913 crop so shipped. Tre proportion of the 1915 crop which is merchantable is about 71.3 per cent (equivalent to 2,178,943,000 bushels) as compared with 84.5 per cent (2,259,755,000 bushels) of the the 1914 crop and 80.1 per cent (1,961,508,000 bushel) of the 1913 crop.

The amount of oats on farms March 1 was about 596,600,000 bushel, or 38.7 per cent of the 1915 crop, as compared with 379,369,000 bushels, or 33.2 per cent of the 1914 crop on farms March 1, 1915, and 419,481,000 bushels, or 37.5 per cent of the 1913 crop on farms March 1, 1914. About 30 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, against 29.4 per cent of the 1914 crop and 26.5 of the 1913 crop so shipped.

The amount of barley on farms March 1 was about 60,511,000 bushels, or 25.5 per cent of the 1915 crop, against 42,889,000 bushel or 22 per cent of the 1914 crop on farms March 1, 1915, and 44,126,000 bushels, or 24.8 per cent of the 1913 crop on farms March 1, 1914. About 43.1 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties.

HIS NEW FIDDLE BOW A THREE FOOT LATH

With It Uncle John Graves Scrapes Out Old Melodies.

Centralia, Kan.—John Graves, eighty-two years old, a veteran stage driver, has invented a new violin bow. At a dance for which he "fiddled" his bow broke in the middle of a barn dance melody. It looked as if the festivities were at an end, but Uncle John hobbled to the woodshed, cut a three foot length of lath, rounded its edges with his knife, explored with his thumb for slivers, spat on his palm to provide a polish and took up the strains of "Mornin', Si," where he had left them. The new bow quirked out the jigful notes so well that Uncle John still uses it.

When dances are infrequent Uncle John gives impromptu recitals in the kitchen of his two room home, where he lives alone. With his fiddle tucked against the collar of his blue flannel shirt and his rheumatic leg beating time, he jerks out with his unique bow his repertoire of "Turkey In the Straw," "Pop Goes the Weasel," "Irish Washerwoman" and "There's Honey In the Rock For Me" while the youngsters do jig steps on the porch.

Uncle John bought his fiddle fifty-four years ago from a soldier at Fort Kearny whose regiment had been ordered to the front. Uncle John was then driving the Overland stage on the government trail from Atchison to Fort Laramie. He says he made back the $10 he paid for it by one night's work.

FOUND DEAD ON BIRTHDAY.

Preparations Had Been Made For Party For Young Woman.

Westmont, N. J.—Invitations were out and preparations had been made for a party in celebration of the twenty-sixth birthday of Miss Hannah, daughter of Joseph Bentley of Walnut avenue. Miss Bentley had not appeared at breakfast time, and her mother went to her room to call her. She lay dead in her bed.

Dr. E. B. Rogers was hastily summoned, and he said death had been caused by acute indigestion. The Camden county coroner, after investigating the case, coincided with the physician and gave a certificate accordingly.

A Foolish Notion.

"The critics say the last act of our play falls flat," remarked the manager.

"Hum," said the "angel," "can't you put in a few of those 'props' I hear you theatrical people talking so much about?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Joy of a Dog

Ma says no, it's too much care,
An' it will scatter germs an' hair,
An' it's a nuisance through and through
An' barks when you don't want it to,
An' carries dirt from off the street
An' tracks the carpets with its feet,
But it's a sign he's growin' up
When he is longin' for a pup.

Most every night he comes to me
An' climbs astraddle of my knee
An' starts to fondle me an' pet,
Then asks me if I've found one yet.
An' ma says: "Now, don't tell him yes.
You know they make an awful mess,"
An' starts their faults to catalog,
But every boy should have a dog.

An' some night when he comes to me,
Deep in my pocket there will be
The pup he's hungry to possess
Or else I sadly miss my guess.
For I remember all the joy
A dog meant to a little boy
Who loved it in the long ago,
The joy that's now his right to know.

TO USE BATTLESHIPS AS SUMMER TRAINING CAMPS

Men Who Make Cruise Expected to Enlist In Navy if War Comes.

Secretary Daniels and his advisers have decided to inaugurate a system of civilian naval training similar in general outline to that on which military training camps have been established at Plattsburg and elsewhere. It is planned to use six battleships to take those who present themselves for training for a month's cruise, beginning about Aug. 15.

The vessels to be utilized as training ships will take on their student personnel along the Atlantic coast, probably at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Portland and Charleston. It is estimated that the six battleships will make possible the training of 2,500 men. A similar program, it is expected, will be prepared for next year for development of the plan on the Pacific coast.

The only compulsory requirement is that each volunteer declare his intention of giving his service to the navy in case of war.

Some rudimentary knowledge of seamanship, machinery, radio, electricity or navigation will be required of each applicant. Each man will receive at the end of the cruise a certificate showing exactly what he has done during his service.

The expense per man is not expected to exceed $20, which would pay for his food and provide the necessary clothing, making it possible for the navy to carry out the plan virtually without expense.

CIGAR SHAPED SHIPS NEXT.

Type of Vessel Designed In England to Carry Oil Across the Atlantic.

Cigar shaped ships, carrying each 20,000 tons of oil, will probably be used to transport oil to England from America in the near future.

They will travel under water, or, at least, in an almost submerged position, and be towed across the ocean by steamers. It has been found that a submerged vessel can be towed much more easily than an ordinary vessel of the same size, this being due to the fact that the vessel is, even in its surface position, almost entirely submerged, and the discovery has been made use of in the design of the new gigantic oil carriers.

Another novelty will be the permanent storage of large quantities of oil under water. Ordinary oil storage tanks are splendid marks for big guns and are also vulnerable to attack from the air. The new method consists in sinking large steel cylinders filled with oil in an artificial lake, the oil being pumped in or out as required. An air chamber in each cylinder provides means for raising it to the surface of the water.

NEW GUN FOR GERMANS.

Revolver Cannon Designed For Use Against Allies In France.

The neutral correspondent who worked for a time in the Krupp factory at Essen and who is describing his observations in a series of articles in the London Daily Express gives in his second article details of the new Krupp revolver gun, obtained from a fellow workman employed in the shop where these new and powerful weapons are being made.

The caliber of the new gun is 3.5 centimeters, and it far outranges the English machine guns. It has no wheels, but is mounted on a tripod which can be carried by two men. Fifty of these guns already have been completed, and 200 more are to follow. They are designed, he says, to break the defense on the Yser.

The writer admits that he was speedily discharged from the Krupp works for lack of skill.

Some Queer English Names.

We may puzzle our brains over the tongue twisting names which France and Russia have given to some of their towns, but England furnishes a few quite as dazzling as that of Przemysl. Hurstmonceaux, for instance, is pronounced Her-so; Kirkcudbright, Kircoo-bree; Daventry, Dantry; Leominster, Lemster, and Evesham is called E-sham.

Twins Born In Different Years.

Mrs. Louise Barron and Henry Brinker of Easton, Pa., though twins, were born in different years, months and days. Mr. Brinker was born a few minutes before midnight Dec. 31, 1840, and Mrs. Barron was born shortly after 12 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 1, 1841.

ROCKING CHAIRS.

At First They Were Crude Affairs, Just Patched Up Armchairs.

"The history of the rocking chair is yet to be written," says Walter A. Dyer in "Early American Craftsmen." "According to some writers, rockers began to appear in this country before 1750, and Windsor rockers soon after the Revolution. Others assert that Windsor rockers were not made until about 1810 and that most of the so called Windsor rocking chairs are simply old armchairs cut down and fitted with rockers. Certainly none of the early advertisements or inventories included any mention of rocking chairs.

"The first rockers were merely short boards cut straight across the top and rounded on the bottom. Then the top side was shaped, and later the rocker was fashioned much as that of today, except that it extended only four or five inches back of the rear legs. It was not until 1820 or so that the discovery was made that rockers lengthened behind increased the safety and comfort of the chair. During the decade following that astonishing discovery the popularity of the rocking chair spread rapidly."

An English lady visiting the United States a few years ago declared that one of the most curious sights to her upon her landing was the rocking chair, to which at first she feared to intrust herself, but later learned to enjoy most thoroughly.

EARLY RAILROADING.

The First American Made Locomotive Was Built In 1830.

The first locomotives in the United States were brought over from England by Horatio Allen of New York in the fall of 1829 or the spring of 1830, and one of them was set up on the Delaware and Hudson railroad at Carbondale, Pa.; but, being found too heavy for the track, its use was abandoned.

The first locomotive constructed in this country was built by the West Point foundry at New York in 1830 for the South Carolina railroad and named the Phoenix. A second engine was built the same year by the same establishment and for the same railroad and named the West Point.

In the spring of 1831 a third engine was built by the same establishment for the Mohawk and Hudson railroad from Albany to Schenectady and called the De Witt Clinton. This was the first locomotive run in the state of New York.

The first Stephenson locomotive ever imported into this country was the Robert Fulton. This engine was brought out in the summer of 1831 for the Mohawk and Hudson railroad. It was subsequently rebuilt and named the John Bull.

The Mystery of a Duel.

Having fought his duel and saved his honor by firing a shot in the air, the editor of a French provincial newspaper went back to his desk, and the incident had quite left his mind when he felt something strange in his thigh. He looked and found that he was bleeding profusely. A doctor was called, who discovered that a bullet was imbedded in the editor's thigh some two inches deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place?" he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air, and his adversary also took a distracted sort of aim. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

Projecting Your Personality.

Can any man's life be held to be incomplete if it is continued in the life of a friend? Was Arthur Hallam's life incomplete when Tennyson prolonged it forever by "In Memoriam" or the life of Socrates when Plato continued it in his immortal dialogues? Confucius said wisely, "Have no friends not equal to yourself." By that he must have meant, "Make your friends equal to yourself by giving them freely of your best." Thus you make sure of a continued life whatever happens to yourself, as a manufacturer intrusts the secrets of his manipulations to his younger partners.—Christian Herald.

Soldiers In Napoleon's Day.

There are five things that a soldier should never be without—his gun, his cartridge, his knapsack, rations for four days and his pioneer tools. The knapsack should be reduced to the smallest possible weight and size and contain only a shirt, a pair of shoes, a collar, a handkerchief and a flint of steel. This is not much, but he should never part from them, for when once lost they cannot be recovered.—Napoleon.

One Way.

"Now, Johnny," said the teacher, "suppose you wanted to build a $1,000 house and had only $700 what would you do?"

"I 'spose I'd have to marry a girl worth $300," answered the young financier.—Kansas City Star.

Two Finds.

"I found a ten dollar bill this morning."

"That shows you are lucky. Have a gift for finding things?"

"My gift stuck by me too long. Next I found the owner."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is good discretion not to take too much of any man at the first, because one cannot hold out that proportion.—Bacon.

A Misapprehension

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Being delayed in the town of Acland, where I had gone on business, on account of the absence of the man I had gone there to see, I asked the clerk of the hotel where I stopped if there was a free library in the place. He directed me to one of the most attractive little buildings I ever saw, in the center of a grove. I went there and nosed over the fiction shelves for awhile and finally took down a novel.

On turning the leaves a bit of paper flitted to the floor. I picked it up and, seeing some words written on it in pencil, read them:

> Ten years today since Frank left us, and I am no more reconciled to his absence than the day after his departure. Oh, the long, long, weary day!
> ALICE.

Now, there was something in this that fitted me. My name is Frank Tisdale. Twelve years before I had accepted a position in a commission house in Hongkong and gone out there to make my fortune. I returned on a visit after eight years' sojourn in China and never went back. I was twenty years old when I left home, and among the girls to whom I said goodby was one Alice Ringold. But I was not aware that I was any more to her than any other young man.

I took the book and the paper to the librarian, telling her that I had found the one in the other. She said that returned books were apt to have a variety of articles in them, usually put there in lieu of a book mark. I asked her if such articles were returned, and her reply was, "Sometimes." I requested that if she returned the paper I had left with her to the person who had written it she would let me know. I left with her a postage stamp and my address.

Not very long after my return to my home I received a letter from the librarian announcing that she had found the Alice whose name was appended to the writing on the paper I had discovered. The lady had dropped it into the book which was lying open on a table, some one else had closed the book, and it had been returned to the library with the slip in it. The librarian gave the name, Alice Ringold.

Now, I had passed the age of thirty, supposing that no woman had shown any predisposition toward me. I was on the verge of middle age, with no one to care for me, and now accidentally I had discovered that a girl from whom I had parted a dozen years before had been mine for the asking during the whole of that period. I remembered Alice Ringold, a shy little thing, so young that I would not have believed she could love any man. She could not at the time have been more than fifteen.

Here was a chance to break away from the bachelorhood into which fate seemed to have thrown me. I would renew my acquaintance with Alice Ringold, and if she was of the same mind—and from the recent date of what she had written it was likely that she was—I might settle myself in a home under the same advantages as pertained to youth. But I must contrive to make the meeting appear accidental.

She had removed from the town where she had lived to Acland, and there I went. Having learned where her home was situated, I set out to find her, proposing to make up a story as to how I had come to know of her being in Acland. Just before reaching the house a young woman came out of the front door and in another moment met me face to face.

She was Alice Ringold. Between sixteen and twenty-six there is not so great a difference in one's appearance as between twenty-six and thirty-six. At any rate, there was enough left of the girl I had known for me to recognize her. I stopped, lifted my hat and spoke to her. She looked at me, and I saw at once that she knew me.

"Alice Ringold?" I asked.

"Yes; and you are Frank Tisdale."

"Singular that you should know me after so many years' absence."

"No more singular than that you should know me."

"I have been wondering what had become of you since my return to America. I have been hunting you for months."

She cast her eyes down just as she did when she was little more than a child. She was going to the village, and I walked beside her. I told her of the many times I had thought of her during my absence in the east and how I had longed that fate should have brought us together again.

With that slip of paper in my possession I had all the boldness of a grenadier. I made rapid progress, speaking more and more plainly in my lovemaking as I advanced. When I parted with her I told her I would see her in the evening, and when the evening came, having gone through the preliminaries, I proposed to her.

She said it was very sudden and a great surprise to her. I smiled inwardly at this, thinking of the paper I had found. However, after a little coyness she yielded and accepted me. Just before I left her she said:

"Do you remember my brother Frank?"

"Frank? I believe I do."

"He died soon after you left for China. I have never got over his loss."

Great heavens! It was her brother she had loved all these years.

Nevertheless we are very happy.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Black stands in a class by itself for elegance and this costume is most effective in chiffon taffeta. The full skirt is plaited at the sides, but boasts no other trimming. The blouse owes its extreme style to its delightful simplicity, having no decoration save a little braid stitched about the high collar and cuffs. Seven yards 36-inch taffeta are needed for the costume. Pictorial Review Blouse No. 6621. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6512. Sizes, 22 to 34 inches waist. Price, 15 cents. Braiding design No. 11290. Transfer in yellow only. Price 10 cents.

Pictoriay Review Patterns may be procured at the J. R. Sullivan and M Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Origin of Pajamas.

Pajamas are garments which Europeans adopted from the Mohammedans of India. The name means simply leg garments, and earlier generations in India knew them as "long drawers" and "mogul breeches." It is only of recent years that they have sprung into almost universal use in England in place of nightshirts which some one characterized as equivalent to adopting trousers in place of frock coats—but references to the garments have been traced as early as 1828.

"Peejams," "pigammahs" and "pitjammah" were some of former variants in use, and Thackeray wrote of them as "peljammahs." The standard spelling is only a recent agreement.

What She Made Him.

The head of the house glanced at a bill from his wife's dressmaker.

"When I proposed to you, less than two years ago," he said, "I was rather wild, and you said you considered it your duty to marry me for the purpose of making something of me, did you not?"

"Yes, Henry," answered his wife.

"Well," he continued, "your efforts have not been in vain. You have succeeded."

"I'm so glad," she said. "What have I made of you, dear?"

Once more he glanced at the bill.

"A bankrupt," he replied, with a deep sigh.

She Is Always to Blame.

Of what use is it discussing whether men or women will do the sillier things to maintain a pose? We all know—or ought to, perhaps—that when the woman buys a twelve dollar pair of white kid boots that are unsuitable to wear with anything else that she can afford she is herself to blame; and when a man mortgages his farm to buy an automobile that he cannot afford to run it is the women of the family who are to blame; and there you are!—"As She Sees It," in Lowell Courier-Citizen.

This Little Frock Is a Favorite.

Copied from the Empire period is this little frock of embroidered voile trimmed with wide and narrow bands of taffeta.

There are lovely cotton materials from which frocks for girls and juniors may be made. Not all are inexpensive, but there are so many that are within the allowance of the average budget for dress that variety is not lacking. Voile, with daintily embroidered figures makes up effectively, as shown here. The dress is of Empire style, and the lower edge of the skirt is trimmed with taffeta, with three bias folds of the same silk above. The surplice waist is gathered at the top about a V shaped neck, filled in with all-over lace. In medium size the dress requires 3¾ yards 36-inch voile, with ⅞ yard lining for the waist.

To make the lining, begin with the yoke, facing the front and back from neck edges to ½ inch below lower line of small "o" perforations. Close under-arm and shoulder seams and hem the back. Gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay to position under gathers.

Next, close the under-arm and shoulder seams of the outer front and back. Underface the upper edge about 1½ inches deep. Hem the back and gather along line of small "o" perforations near upper edge. Gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Arrange on lining, center-fronts and center-backs even

Close sleeve seams as notched. Gather puff sleeve along crossline of small "o" perforations and ½ inch above. Draw gathers to the required size. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam; and bring seam of short puff sleeve to under-arm seam, easing fulness. If desired, the sleeves may be sewed in the lining alone, and the armhole of outer waist left free.

Close back seam of skirt from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for an opening. Turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations; gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Adjust skirt to position, stitching upper edge over upper row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even, small "o" perforation at under-arm seam.

The dress is also pretty made of all-over embroidery. For average size 4½ yards 27 inches wide, with 1⅝ yard of plain material 36 inches wide are required.

Pictorial Review Dress No. 6636. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 15 and 16 years. Price, 15 cents.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SALAD BOWL.

FANCY SALAD.—Prepare a pineapple by cutting slices straight across and removing the core with a core cutter, or purchase canned pineapple which will be cut in this manner. As this is to be served on individual dishes, chill bleached lettuce and place a large leaf or several small ones on each plate. Lay a slice of pineapple upon the leaf and fill the cavity with thick mayonnaise. Use English walnut halves to garnish the pineapple around the edge. On the extreme edge lay broken bunches of Malaga grapes.

Nut Salad.—Blanch peanuts and place in a hot oven to brown, with a bit of butter. Chop when cold and to each cupful of nuts add two cupfuls of finely chopped celery and an equal amount of apples. Mix well and serve with mayonnaise. Toasted buttered baking powder biscut, cut in thin slices before toasting, make a nice accompaniment to any salad.

Red Cabbage and Celery Salad.—Have a fine and firm red cabbage, trim off all outside leaves, cut the inner portion into quarters and remove the stalks. Cut the rest into fine shreds and add to it in the salad bowl a head of celery cut into inch pieces. Make a dressing by beating one egg, stirring into it gradually a tablespoonful of salad oil, a tablespoonful of red wine vinegar, a pinch of sugar and mustard, salt and pepper. Pour over the cabbage and celery, garnish with sliced gherkins and capers. A grating of cheese adds to the finish.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Take fresh cottage cheese and add a few broken nut meats and a little sweet green pepper chopped finely. Make the mixture into balls after adding salt to taste. Roll the balls in some finely chopped parsley until completely covered. They may then be used as a garnish for some salad or placed on lettuce leaves covered with salad dressing and served with wafers. If desired some wet molds may be lined with the cheese and the centers of the molds filled with salad, nuts and celery. When cold the molds may be turned out on lettuce leaves and served with salad dressing

Flemish Sausages.

These sausages are different from other kinds, and they are made in the following way: Take a pound of beef, a pound of pork, a pound of back fat (pork), half an ounce of brown sugar, a pinch of saltpeter, an ounce of salt, an eighth of an ounce of ground pimento and a quarter of an ounce of pepper. Mince the meat up finely, also the fat, add the seasoning, let it stand for a few hours, then add a pint of water in which a quarter of an ounce of strong tea has been infused, mix up well and fill into skins, or, it can be made into little balls as large as walnuts. They are cooked on the stove and served for tea.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

By Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D.

It is impossible to witness the drama, "The Birth of a Nation" coming to the Quirk theatre Sunday, matinee and night, March 19, and not want to say something about it.

Everybody who has seen it is saying something about it, When one has been crowded upon, pressed down and run over, it is against Nature not to make some kind of an outcry.

That is the way one feels when coming out of the theater. The thing is vast. It is overwhelming. Nothing like it has ever before been put upon the stage.

The tension of the performance is but a single feature of it—but it is that which one feels most poignantly after three straight hours. It begins in an easy way but commences soon to find its muscle and goes on to the end pounding upon one's senses with blows that come heavier and heavier, more and more rapid.

It is not apparent what are the grounds of the objections urged against it, nor what is the animus of those who are scheming to have the exhibition prohibited by court proceedings.

The National Board of Censorship has approved it and when popular endorsement which the play has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudices or moral eccentricities to disturb. In the meantime efforts to suppress it are thus far successful in nothing so much as in giving it wider and more remunerative publicity.

The intimate familiarity which Mr. David W. Griffith has shown with the events of the Reconstruction Period along with the detailed scholarly study which he has made of the wider territory of events which the play covers renders the production one of surprising educational value to those who were either young children still or even unborn in the stirring years of '60 to '70. A boy can learn more true history and get more of the atmosphere of the period by sitting down for three hours before the film which Mr. Griffith has produced with such artistic skill, than by weeks and months of study in the class room.

This drama is a telling illustration of the possibilitie of motion pictures as an instrument of instruction in history.

The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial anomosity, is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him, and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of a liberty ,so new and untried, that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it. It is in this respect exactly true to history and if it reflects upon the Negro as he was then it is a compliment to the black man of today. An exhibition of lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties change with the passing of time.

BABY WEEK

is being featured throughout our country this week, March 5th to 12th. The United States Government is promoting it with the intention of enlightening and instructing mothers in the care and health of the baby.

As you will see in our windows and on our counters we are displaying such articles as are essential for the welfare of babies. A few of them will bear mentioning here:

CASTILE SOAP — VASELINE
TALCUM POWDER — ABSORBENT COTTON
LIME WATER — MILK SUGAR
BORACIC ACID — BATH THEMOMETERS
BABY TOOTH BRUSHES — OLIVE OIL

We have two interesting and instructive booklets which may be had for the asking. They are, "Making Motherhood Easy" (including a Baby Record), and "Nestle's Mother Book," about the care and feeding of babies.

Sebastopol, Cal.—Probably a unique political announcement has been presented to the electors of Sebastopol in connection with the approaching election.

Gyp is a Scotch collie, a magnificent specimen of his race, a canine aristocrat and a politician, being by far the most popular dog in town. He owns as master John Saunders, town clerk, and is very frequently alluded to as assistant town clerk. A placard issued bears Gyp's portrait instead of that of his master, and he is shown "bringing home the bacon for his boss."

The placard bears the announcement, "Gyp announces that his boss is aspirant for re-election to the office of town clerk."

Gyp's influence is not to be sneered at, as everybody is his friend.

San Francisco.—Robert Burns, twenty-eight years of age, of Eureka, Cal., whose credentials credit him with being the world's champion hiker, arrived here on his way to Eureka after traversing the Lincoln highway both ways, covering 7,842 miles on foot.

He left here May 24 last and arrived in New York Sept. 23, leaving Oct. 1 and arriving here Feb. 25.

According to attested records in his possession, Burns beat Weston's record to New York thirty-two days and beat it from New York twenty-three days. Burns claims to have covered the round trip in 103 days. Weston accomplished it in 217 days.

Burns is the first man to cover the Lincoln highway both ways on foot. He made his expenses by advertising stunts. He was employed by the Eureka Development association.

ELKS MAY DINE THIS MONTH—DECISION LATER

No definite date for the Elks' banquet was named last night, but is believed it will take place on Monday, March 20th.

Word has been received that the Exalted Ruler of New York city, who was to be the honor guest and principal speaker, would not be able to attend because of illness. An effort is to be made to secure the Exalted Ruler of Albany to appear in his place.

A decision relative to holding the customary St. Patrick's Day ball will be made early next week.

WATER POWER BILL PASSES THE SENATE

Washington—The Senate last night after four weeks of debate passed the Shields bil ltop rovide for development of water power in navigable waters by private capitol. The vote was 46 to 22. Conservation champions fought hard to amend the measure, but without avail.

As adopted, the bill permits the construction of dams in navigable waters under licenses issued by the Secretary of War, and gives guarantees the right to operate power plants for 50 years, after which time the United States Governnemt may take over the plant after giving two years' notice and paying a fair value to be determined by the Secretary of War and the owner or by proceedings in United States courts.

Regulations of rates and services is placed with the State in which the plants are situated, or, if interstate commerce is involved, with the Interstate Commerce Commission, on appeals when the States involved are unable to agree on reasonable rates and adequate service.

The bill also provides that no works shall be operated in any combination to limit the output of electric power or in restraint of trade.

west of the Meuse. The Germans thus far, at the cost of large losses, have obtained command of the approaches to the main French positions beyond the west bank. The real struggle will begin when German masses hurl themselves again on the four mile line of heights extending from Bethincourt to Cumieres.

Corbeaux Wood, to the eastern side of which the Germans succeeded in clinging late this afternoon, is within a hollow between Dead Man and Goose Hills, and as neither position is endangered the German success is of little strategic import.

It is known here that the Germans set aside 300,000 men to capture Verdun. Only 200,00 having been employed up to yesterday, it was a question whether the remaining 100,000 would be used to make a sudden descent on some other part of the French line in developing the offensive against the fortress. The heavy attack west of the river, however, leaves that question no longer to be settled.

The impression of members of Parliament, who are kept regularly informed as to the progress of the battle, is that the defence will be able to resist all onslaughts the Germans are able to make, and that Goose Hill on the left bank, will play a role similar to Douaumont on the right. It is expected the battle will reach its climax tomorrow or Friday. Not until then will it be possible to judge which way the battle will go.

It is possible now to outline the successive steps by which the Germans made their advance through Forges on Monday and Tuesday. The battle for Verdun developed both in intensity and in extent all yesterday, and is now raging along the line from Cheppy, in the Argonne, to Fresnes, in the Woevre, showing that the second attack for the stronghold is to be made on a larger scale than the first,

A very remarkable book has been published. Everywhere we hear about the great opportunities the United States of America has in South America. No man knows more about conditions in South America than Charles H. Sherrill, former U. S. Minister to Argentina. It is therefor that we recommand highly the reading of Modernising the Monroe Doctrine by Charles H. Sherrill, former U. S. Minister to Argentina with an introduction by President Nicholas Murray Butler. This important book is the result of years of successful experience in the handling of our commercial and diplomatic interests in Latin-America.

The author, who is Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Chamber of Commerce of the U. S. —explains the economic situation in the South American republics, describes our opportunities for trade expansion, and shows from experience just what policies will foster that friendship so vital to the development of our commerce. Business men will find the book invaluable for its concise, practical, an thoroughly up-to-date study of the whole South American situation; to those interested in world politics it will appeal as a well-considered plan for making Pan-Americanism a living reality, thus securing peace and prosperity throughout the western hemisphere. The publishers of this book, Houghton Mifflin Company, 4 Park street, Boston, certainly have done the business men a great favor by giving them a chance to get acquainted with South American conditions.

Pension Department Gets Councilmanic Stamp of Approval

By the unanimous approval of the Common Council pension bills, which establish permanent pension funds in the Fire and Police departments, were passed at last night's meeting of the Board. The city clerk was instructed to transmit a copy of the resolution to Speaker Sweet for presentation to the Legislature. The funds are to become effective January 1, 1917.

The board made a number of changes in the provisions of the resolutions in order to guard the city against impositions. As the resolutions now stand a member of the department after serving 20 years and is 50 years old may be retired and receive $50 per month. Originally the section provided that a member of the department could retire and become eligible to draw from the pension fund after 20 years of service. It was the opinion that such ruling would be unfair in the event that a man joined one of the departments at the age of 21, as he would be in the prime of life at the end of 20 years of service; and could retire from service, draw the full pension and engage in some other pursuit.

Instead of permitting five per cent of the excise receipts to be applied to the police fund. the Board decided to make an appropriation of $400 annually to the fund. The pension fund of the Fire Department will not receive any money from foreign insurance but will be given $275 annually in an appropriation by the board.

Patrolman Pare has been in the service 14 years. He is therefore the first man in line to rceeive a pension.

The Police Pension Fund already contains about $1,000 which represents money realized on dances, rewards, etc. In addition to the appropriations which the Council will make annually the funds will be increased by receipts from fines, sale of condemned articles belonging to the city, money paid for special permits, etc. Call men and special policemen are restricted. John Youngs, city carshal, it was decided, cannot participate in the police fund, as his position is not a permanent one.

The Mayor will be chairman of the board of trustees in charge of the funds and the finances will be in the keeping of the City Chamberlain. The board of trustees have power to invest money in securities, bonds, etc. Members of the Police and Fire Departments will be required to pay monthly dues of $1. In the event that a member of either force is killed while on duty, his heirs will receive $300 annually, but the right to draw this money is forfeited in the event that a widow remarries, or when a child reaches the age of 16. A member disabled or injured in the performance of duty may be retired and receive ..600 per year, if totally disabled, or not more than 25 per cent of this amount in the event of partial disability. The pension money will be exempt from levy for indebtedness.

Common Council's Jurisdiction Ceases to Operate to Prevent Construction of Dyeing Establishment

In making an assertion that the construction of a dyeing establishment by the Fulton French Cleaning Company in Seneca st. will result in neighboring property owners paying higher insurance rates; and that odors of gasoline which might emanate from the building will prove offensive, Attorney James R. Somers, representing P. Ward, asked the Common Council last night to investigate the proposition thoroughly before the building operations are commenced.

Mr. Somers request was heeded by the Councilmen. His client, Mr. Ward, presented his grievance and H. Parks and H. Youmans who reside near the present plant of the company, stated that their insurance had been raised on account of thep roximity of the plant and that the odor of gasoline is perceptible whe nthep lant is in operation. Mayor Lewis appointed a committee of three members of the board, requesting that they, with Chief Waugh and the Board of Health, investigate the matter and make a report at the next meeting. He also requested that the City Clerk advise the dyeing company to postpone building operations until the investigation is made.

While recognizing the seriousness of the complaints, the complainants were advised that the Board has no authority to prevent the construction of the building. If the building after construction, proves to be a fire hazard, then it devolves upon the Fire Department to take action, it was stated; and if a menace to the public health, it is a matter for the Board of Health to investigate. Alderman Mc Kay said that inasmuch as the building permit has been granted, with the proviso that the structure is to be fireproof and constructed under the spervision of the fire department, it will be time to determine whether any violations exist upon the completion of the building.

Chief Waugh, expressed the opinion that the main complaint which could be lodged against the plant would be the odor of gasoline rather than the possibility of its being a fire hazard. The City Charter was consulted in regard to the storage of combustibles and it was found that not more than one barrel of combustible material (a barrel of gasoline would contain about 50 gallons) can be kept in a building within the city limits. If it is desired to store more than this quantity, the Superintendent of Public Works is authorized to grant permission.

Department Will Cooperate With the Company to Prevent Accidents

A communication signed by Manager Jordan of the Electric company was read to the Common Council last night in which the Board was requested to recognize the desire of the company to be first notified when the necessity arises to perform any work in proximity to the company's wires. He asks that in the event of employes of the city having to climb poles which carry electric wires; or if they are otherwise obliged to work where there is danger of coming in contact with heavily charged wires, that his company shall be notified. Precautions will then be taken to prevent accidents.

Chief Waugh was called upon to make a few remarks in regard to the communication. He stated that while the fire department is privileged to have a member work on poles carrying fire alarm wires, regardless of whether other wires are carried on the same poles, he would see that the company's wishes were respected. The Board passed a resolution tha tthe notice of the lighting company be communicated to the heads of the Fire and Police departments as well as to the Department of Public Works.

FRENCH CHECK GERMAN ADVANCE

Paris—The Germans, in infantry attacks launched with huge effectives, but with losses described as beyond all proportions to the objective they sought, have reoccupied a part of the Corbeaux Wood, to the west of the Meuse and northwest of Verdun, according to the French official communication issued tonight. German attacks to the west of the village of Douaumont and against the village of Vaux were put down by the French.

An official note was issued today categorically denying the statement made in the German official communication of March 9 that "the village

THE REPUBLICAN SPLIT IN THE HOUSE

By far the most significant feature of the voting in the House yesterday was the sharp division disclosed in the ranks of the Republicans. On the final roll call 93 of them voted to sustain the president, while 102 of them voted against him. We know, of course, that there was pretence of the issue not being clear-cut; that some Republicans professed one reason for voting not to table the McLemore resolution, and some another; but all this will not appeal to the common sense of the country. What ordinary people will say is that after all the sparring and manoeuvring, the vote was on the question whether the president ought to be upheld, both in his general right to conduct the foreign policy of the government, and in the specific matter of his insistence that no American right must be abridged by another nation, and that the Republicans made a sorry display. Despite the fact that a great Republican campaign is under way to attack Wilson for hesitation and weakness in his attitude towards Germany, on the first occasion to support him in a firm position, the majority of the Republicans in the House ran away

The split was, in part, sectional. Republicans from the Eastern States were, as a rule, for the resolution: western Republicans were generally against it. The result is, first of all, a pretty serious reflection upon Republican leadership in the House. Representative Mann is an alert parliamentarian, a ready debater, a man keen to score for his party on small points. Even before yesterday it was doubtful if he had grasp and foresight in matters of large policy; and now the country knows that he has not. To run off, as he did, on petty side issues, when the big question was staring him and everybody else in the face, was the mark of an incapable leader. Half of his following deserted him on the spot. The whole was a political blunder of the hugest kind. No one could have believed that the "party fit to rule" would fall into it.

Another aspect of the matter is of deep political import. Republican leaders like Root and Burton and Borah — not to mention Colonel Roosevelt—have been raising a great cry against the "hyphenates" in our public life. And the Republican press has been having hysterics over the Democrats afraid of the German-American vote, wearing the kaiser's coat, and running up the German flag over the Capitol. But on the first test vote the Republican hyphenates are found to outnumber the Democrats more than three to one. If it is a question of cowardly fear of the German-American vote, look at what was done by the Republican Representatives from the states of Wisconsin and Illinois. In the delegation from the former, all of the Republicans—eight in number—voted against backing up the president in his unyielding attitude towards Germany. Of the 15 Republican representatives from Illinois, all but one—Mr. Foss—voted the same way. What would Roosevelt say to his beloved Illinois thus taking up with the "Wisconsin idea?" The Wisconsin idea is, as explained by the German-American Alliance, to get up a Republican agreement whereby the voters of German descent will be given a satisfactory candidate against Wilson. Will not the events of yesterday be seized upon as proof that such a movement is on foot? We do not say that it is, or believe that it is serious but the mere report and suspicion of such a thing are enough to show how badly the Republicans played their cards yesterday. Setting out to prove that the Democratic Party was divided and un-American, they exhibited themselves to the country as far more torn apart and still less ready to stand up for American rights unabridged.

President Wilson, being only a professor, innocent of the wiles of politics, cannot be thought to have set a trap for the Republicans by demanding a vote in Congress. But as he observes them actually caught in the trap, he may be pardoned one of his wintry smiles. Certainly, a lot of Republican campaign material was spoiled yesterday. Explanations will, of course, be forthcoming and long speeches will be made to prove that the Republicans acted in a truly patriotic spirit; but an incredulous people will take a deal of persuading on this point. So far as Mr. Wilson himself is concerned, he has secured his two main objects. He has reasserted his authority as leader of the Democratic Party. Only a beggarly rump in either House ventured to oppose him. And the president has also secured an emphatic approval of his demand that he be left unfettered in going on with his diplomatic negotiations. If the German Government had any doubts about his having a free hand, they must now be dispelled. And it is to be hoped that the clearing of the air, caused by the vote in Congress, and the better understanding of the administration's position on the subject or armed merchantmen, may lead to a peaceful settlement of the points in dispute between the two governments—N. Y. Evening Post.

THE WISE ONES

"A little group of wise hearts is better than a wilderness full of fools."—Ruskin.

A handful of thinking, unselfish persons in a community is a medium of unquenchable force. Numbers do not spell power, neither does extent of possessions. We constantly assume a "great" army means strength yet, as one of the foremost writers puts it, numbers may become strength if those numbers can be made of one mind; but how are we sure they can stay of one mind, and keep from having north and south minds. Granting they be unanimous will they be unanimous in right. If they are unanimous in wrong, the more they are, essentially the weaker they are. Dangerous enough for their neighbors, certainly, but not "powerful."

So, a right purpose, when it has become the star to which individuals, communities or nations hitch their wagon means achievement, real and lasting. No matter how few stout hearted individuals plan a course and then run their race with patience, the end must mean victc y. The race today is not to the swift, neither to the crafty; but to the dominance of a supreme mentality. If thought expression fails to win our battles, and we resort to the weapons of the really weak, muscularity or verbal abuse, the reason of defeat is self explained. Battle is the opportunity to win, and not the excuse to lose. And, by-the-way, to win may mean in reality to have lost, for "success in error is defeat in truth."

If a person or group of persons cannot be impressed with the justice and fairness of a cause presented them, usually it is the fault of the person propounding the issue. Until a principle is absolutely clear to the instructor he cannot impart it to others. Attempt to instruct in art, music, mathematics, without an understanding of their underlying principle and mark the failure.

So, in Fulton if we fail to impress others with the fairness and justice and value of a cause, be it civic pride or what not, let us not be too harsh on the other fellow but search first our own ways. Let us see if we ourselves actually understand instead of believe the principles we advocate. Research is better for one than condemning. Pride may suffer during the operation, but it was "wise hearts" we were speaking of and not the "wilderness of fools."

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

In Philadelphia the school authorities have decided that a teacher in love is more efficient in consekuence. In Brooklyn last year the question was decided adversely.

In Chicago Mayor Thompson defeated at the primaries three of the nine alderman endorsed by the Municipal Voter's League. "Just the proportion," comments the New York Post, "that any man or machine would have against the better element in Chicago which the League represents.

If this is true, then woman suffrage has reinforced, and not demoralized, the grip of the "better element" in Chicago."

The legislature of thep rovince of Quebec celebrated February 29 by turning down in committee the proposal of Quebec women that women be permitted to practice law.

These law makers did not waste time discussing the ability of women to enter the legal profession. They merely cited the fact that a woman who wished to be a lawyer might also happen to be a wife; that, in that case, she would be legally incompetent to make a contract and could not therefore even collect her fees. Then they gravely voted thep roposition down by a vote of seven to two.

In Oklahoma the Senate most inappropriately celebrated the birthday of George Washington by indefinitely postponing the suffrage bill which had passed the lower house.

In Maryland also the House defeated the suffrage bill which had passed the Senate. Democracy lagged a bit in the birthmonth of Washington and Lincoln, great advocates of self government.

The isolated fact that only 32 per cent of the registered women voters voted at the recent Chicago primary world seem to give a very black eye to the claims of the suffragists. But the associated fact that only 30 per cent of the registered men voters voted would indicate that women are at least a little in the lead of men in wanting to vote.

Lawrence Housman, English playwright now in this country, said in an interview that Lloyd George had not made good his pledge to women to the effect that their wages in government controlled munition factories should equal those paid to men; that, while women were given at first equal wages, men were at once paid by the piece and enabled to earn twice as much as the women.

* * *

Suffragists recall a statement made by Lloyd George at a suffrage meeting to the effect, that if women had the vote, the government would find it impossible to pay women less for work than it paid men.

THE WIZARD HELPS BOY INVENTOR

New York—Thomas A. Edison has interested himself in an invention of Orlando R. Angelillo, a sixteen-year-old West Orange high school student. It is an instrument by which submarines may be detected while under water. The noted inventor advised the lad to place his idea before the Naval Consulting Board.

If this country does not take advantage of his invention, Angelillo proposes placing it before the British Government.

Experts who have closely followed the details of warfare in Europe assert that the lesson is obvious that infantry and cavalry are doing less execution than artillery. Cannon are represented as literally blasting roads through every manner of obstacle for the line to get forward. This being the case, our problem of preparedness is simplified. No matter what plan may be devised, the building up of an efficient force of 500,000 to 1,000,000 arms bearing soldiers will prove to be a colossal task. But with our facilities for construction the vitals of an immense cannon power are chiefly matters of money, metal and mechanical skill. Cannon will keep, and unloaded shells will keep. With the up to date appliances for getting range the production of an efficient artillery man is as easy as that of training an efficient cavalry or infantry soldier The artillery arm of service never goes begging for recruits and gets the best Army experts say that our artillery has not only been slighted in the past, is weaker today than it should be, but that plans for army increase do not call for adequate strength in artillery.

That there should be reported a heavy falling off in immigration was to be expected. The slump for the six month period ending Dec. 31, 1915, was very marked. It is of interest to note the classes affected. In the last half of 1915 the greatest falling off was in Hebrew and southern Italian immigrants. England, Holland, France, Germany, Ireland, Scandinavia and Scotland furnished upward of 50 per cent of the newcomers in the last six months of 1915 and 43 per cent of the fiscal year of 1915. This fiscal year practically covered the first year of the European war, in which five of these countries were engaged. Germany furnished over 20,000 during the year, but probably many of them were in other countries than their own when the war broke out.

Until recently the immigrant arriving in New York has been left to acquire American ideals and standards of citizenship by his own unaided efforts. Night naturalization courts have been opened in that city to make easier and less expensive the alien's road to citizenship. The national Americanization committee has been organized on a permanent basis to educate the immigrant in the language, the traditions and the ideals of his adopted country. The League of Foreign Born Citizens, which for several years has been recruiting good citizens by means of free classes and lectures, has begun to increase its membership and extend its activities. All of these agencies are needed in the work of Americanizing the foreigner.

ON TWO FIFTEEN PER DAY

By I. E. HYDE.

I pay five cents for morning news,
A cup of coffee next;
My toast is burned quite to a crisp,
But no use getting vexed.
And next I'll have a slice of steak;
Fresh fruit is ten cents more—
I'll have to check my appetite,
And show myself the door.
A car to town is five cents fee;
Cheroots are three for ten.
I hit the office, mount my stool
To work five hours, and then—
I'm hungry as a dog, By jove!
It's lunch time, Gee, I'm glad.
Three sandwich cost me twenty-five;
My chocolate ten—that's sad.
And if I take a glass of milk
'Twill cost five cents; but now
The chef shouts out, "Fresh milk? Why, sir;
You'll have to suck the cow."
I buy a nose-gay for my coat,
To help a little kid.
He has to live as well as I,
His dad is 'neath the lid.
And as I give a five cent tip
You ought to see him smile.
He's lonesome, so I stand with him
And talk a little while.
I find that he is hungry too,
Poor homeless little lad,
I'll have to blow him up a lunch;
It's small but he is glad.
If I could swat some millionaire,
And pinch his precious dough,
I'd treat the lads to socks and shoes
Whose feet are on the snow.
I would not buy a plated car,
Nor wear a cocked silk hat.
Too often time the glint of gold
Will blind men as a bat,
And as I delve the afternoon
My thoughts are with my work;
My boss says he is satisfied
That I am no blamed shirk
BUT—
From two-fifteen I've little left,
And dinner yet to come;
Augh H——, it's either can the eats
Or hit the ties toward home.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

One of the most comprehensive definitions of thrift does not say what thrift is, but tells what it does. Industry earns, economy manages, prudence plans, frugality saves, but thrift earns, plans, manages and saves.

When the schools teach the pupils how to save money, time and health as they teach other branches of learning, when the subject becomes a regular part of the school course, we shall have started right.

Some one has said that when the American people become as efficient in saving money as they are in making it, then indeed will this become pre-eminently the richest nation, per capita, on the face of the earth.

Nothing would so benefit the whole country as to bring up a generation of thrifty workers and savers. The future then would take care of itself. A beginning has been made in this direction through the school savings banks. School children in sixty-four schools of Chicago have saved $36,389.20 in the last twenty months. Through these children the school savings bank system has been brought to a higher stage of development in Chicago than in any other city in the country. Since the first bank was established in April, 1914, until December 31, 1915, accounts have been opened by 17,726 pupils. There are now .,343 accounts, many pupils having graduated. As soon as they have saved $5 in the school banks they open a personal savings account in a local bank. They have transferred $16,061 from the school banks to regular banks in Chicago. These pupils, it is safe to predict, having been taught how to save, always will save.

It is difficult for those to save who have not been in the habit of saving. Perhaps the best way to teach thrift to such as these is to induce them to save for some special purpose. They thus acquire the habit of saving.

The population of continental United States is more than 100,- one year we should have $3,650,000,000. After the war we will probably be the money lending nation of the world. Therefore it will be wisdom on our part to get ready for the time when the rest of the world will come to borrow.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The Emporia (Kas). Gazette is authority for the story that the other day a tobacco manufacturer offered Walt Mason $1,500 to write some verses about cigarets. "Walt could have written the verses in two or three days," remarks the Gazette, "but he turned down the offer. He holds cigarets in low esteem. The cigaret is prohibited by law in several states, including Kansas. It is a vicious, death dealing nuisance, and Uncle Walt is standing on sure ground in turning his back on cigaret money."

The board of health of New York City has announced the inauguration of a temperance crusade in that city, and the clergymen of New York were asked to deliver temperance sermons on February 20.

As a part of the crusade, uniformed police officers of the health squad and sanitary inspectors will distribute in the saloons and clubs throughout the city, pamphlets setting forth the danger in alcoholic indulgence.

The New York Tribune has written the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church that after April 1, 1916, it will no longer accept advertisements of alcoholic liquors.

The Indianapolis News, said to be the leading paper of Indiana, and which has a circulation of 135,000 copies daily, has announced that it has accepted its last liquor advertisement.

FINANCIERS ORGANIZE FOR MARKSMANSHIP

New York—The campaign for military preparedness has spread to Wall street.

It is about to be taken up vigorously under the guidance of one of the largest banking institutions in the United States.

The Guaranty Club, which consists of the officers and employes of the Guaranty Trust Company, is organizing among its 700 clerks what its officers call a "sharpshooters' club" for practice with rifle and revolver.

Permission is to be obtained to use one of the armories in this city. To stimulate interest contests will be held and prizes given the best marksmen.

AMERICAN DYES NOT GOOD ENOUGH FOR JOHN

New York—England will not let Americans dye for the English flag. Only Germans can dye satisfactorily for John Bull. Brittania may rule the waves, but Germania rules the dye-vats.

This came oue yesterday in Federal District Court in a suit over 12,400 Union Jacks returned to the Syndicate Publishing Company, No. 9 East Thirty-seventh street, because they were colored with American dye. The British inspectors said German dye was guaranteed, and they'd accept no substitute.

The Syndicate Publishing Company secured a war order for Union Jacks to be shipped to England via Canada In Canada it was noticed that American dyes had been used, and the flags were sent back.

John C. Dettra & Co., flagmakers, sued for breach of contract, asserting there was a shortage of German dyes and that it was understood that if no German dyes could be obtained American "fast colors" might be used. American dyes, the Dettra company held, are as good as the German product.

ROOSEVELT REFUSES TO FIGHT FOR NOMINATION

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who is now at Trinidad, British West Indies, gave out yesterday, through the New York Evening Mail, the following statement:

"I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me and of the good will shown me by the gentlemen who have announced themselves as delegates to be elected in my interest in the Massachusetts Presidential primary. Nevertheless I must request, and now do request and insist, that my name be not brought into the Massachusetts primaries, and I emphatically decline to be a candidate in the primaries of that or any other State."

PHILADELPHIA'S SUGAR INDUSTRY REOPENS

Philadelphia— The Franklin sugar refinery, idle for more than a quarter of a century, will resume operations at once. It will give employment to eight hundred men at first.

No smoke has come out of the big smoke stacks since the days of Harrison, Frazer & Co., who disposed of their interests to the American Sugar Refining Company.

The output will be at least 3,000 barrels of granulated sugar a day to start.

Much of the raw sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico which has been going to other ports will now be diverted to Philadelphia.

ST. PAUL TEAM DIDN'T ARRIVE

But the Evening Was Not One of Disappointment, the Girls' Doing Their Part Well.

Two of Miss Dickerman's basket-ball squads engaged in a lively game at City Hall last night. The event was intended as a preliminary to the Fulton High-St. Paul's game, but on account of the failure of the Oswegonians to appear, the contests between the girls and those between Coach Merrill's first and second teams provided the amusement.

Miss Sarah Dickinson played a stellar game with Miss Elizabeth Howe, the regular center, as her opponent. Miss Ruth Nipper also played a good game, securing three baskets from the field and two baskets on fouls. Miss Margaret Howe made the only score by throwing a basket from the field.

Summary

AN EIGHT YEARS' RECORD

A Test That Must Impress Times' Readers.

Over eight years is a long time.
A rigid test of merit.
Mrs. Hill testified over eight years ago.
She now says the results were permanent.
Can Fulton ask for better evidence?
Mrs. George Hill, 372 S. First St., Fulton, says: "One of the family complained a good deal of pains through the small of the back and seemed to be all out of sorts. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills cured the sufferer of backache and restored this one to good health. Another of the family suffered from sciatica and had trouble with the back. Doan's Kidney Pills acted splendidly in that case, too. (Statement given Oct. 25, 1906).

LASTING RESULTS.
MORE THAN SIX YEARS LATER

Mrs. Hill said: "The benefit Doan's Kidney Pills gave in our family has been permanent."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hill has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MANY BELATED VISITORS TURNED TO STEAM TRAINS

The worst tie-up of the winter was experienced by the Empire United Service yesterday The entire line from Oswego to Syracuse was snowbound and cars were stalled within and without the city limits.

From noon until 4 o'clock, only one southbound car left Oswego, the next one reaching this city from Oswego at 9:30 o'clock, Which called for many explanations on the part of belated travelers from the capital. Most of the delayed persons forsoook the trolley service for steam trains.

EIGHTY-ONE DAYS OF SLEIGHING, SAYE BUREAU

Yesterday's Palladium quotes the Linsley weather bureau as follows:

Counting the snow that came on Thursday night there is on the ground at the present, 16 1-2 inches, not an unusual depth for this season. The greatest depth of snow on the ground the past Winter was 17 1-2 inches on December 3d.

With the exception of the first day of December the ground was well covered up to January 21st. The last ten days of January were practically without snow, also the first of February.

The first snow was recorded on November 15th, 16th and 17th, a trace each day on the first two days mentioned and on the last, the seventeenth, five inches were on the ground in the morning, but it was half gone that night, there being 3.5 inches on the ground. On the 18th it was still going and on the 19th it had disappeared. The next snow came on November 20th, 21th and 22d, and on the 29th.

Since the first of February there has been snow every day but two, February 22d and 28th.

CUNNINGHAM VERDICT TO BE PRESENTED MONDAY

Oswego—The case of R. James Cunningham, as admin., etc., vs. the D. L. & W. Railroad company for $25,000 for the death of his wife at the Loftus crossing, just South of Minetto, in 1909, went to the jury yesterday at noon with instructions to bring in a sealed verdict on Monday.

The first case to come up Monday before Justice Devendorf, who will succeed Justice Andrews then, will be No. 24, the action of Charles Monta vs. the Eureka Paper company. A jury has already been drawn for this. The next action will be the celebrated Gibbons will contest in which nephews and nieces of Fulton will attempt to have the will of Bridget Gibbons, under which most of her $50,000 estate is to be given to charity, declared invalid.

MILLIONS ADDED TO COST OF LIVING

New York—The cost of living will soar to greater heights within the next few weeks when more than $6-000,000 will be added to the annual coal bill of residents of New York. This was the statement made yesterday by a prominent coal dealer.

The advance in anthracite depends on the outcome of the conference which began yesterday afternoon at the Union League Club by the operators and representatives of the United Mine Works of America.

Dust In His Eyes.

200 MEXICANS INVADE ARIZONA

of Mexican bandits was between 200 and 500. In response to an appeal from the residents for help, sixty-five troopers of the Tenth United States cavalry at Naco, Ariz., were hurried to the scene.

Reports have been received here by Colonel Slocum, in command of the United States troops, that bandits had been seen about Huachita, N. M., and he at once despatched troops there and to iVctoria, where also bands of Mexicans areq reported to have crossed the border.

Villa in the Foothills

tI is apparent that Villa, with his main army of between 500 and 1,000 bandits, is in the boothills about fifteen miles across theb order from Columbus where he took refuge after 200 of his men had been killed in the battle in his town early yesterday morning.

Columbus is in wild excitement. Colonel Slocum has ordered the entire Thirteenth regiment of cavalry on duty circling the town and the troopers are reinforced by a corps of citizens in automobiles and on horseback, all heavily armed.

With the expected arrival of additional infantry and cavalry requested of the War Department by Colonel Slocum, this region of the border will be comparatively safe. Survivors of the battle of yesterday, including women and children, have been placed in the school house and town hall, and there the citizens and soldiers are guarding them. Many women and children were sent to Deming and El Paso for safety. Every man who was not wounded in the first battle is ready tonight for another meeting with theb andits. The Deming National Guard has arrived for duty and is assisting Colonel Slocum.

Three troops of calvary have been stationed at the south gate of the border, where Villa crossed in his first attack. A strong guard has been thrown foor five miles along the border, and the First Battalion of Twentieth infantry, stationed at Victoriano, has been notified that Villa raiders are approaching the border.

FULTON'S ALLOTMENT OF TICKETS NEARLY SOLD OUT

Mr. M. J. McDonald, under whose auspices John McCormack is to appear in Oswego on March 23rd, announces that the rush for tickets by residents of Fulton has exceeded his fondest hopes. He therefore advises those who would not suffer disappointment to ask for reservations at once by telephoning to, or calling at, the "New York Shop" in Oneida st., this city, where a plan of the State Armory is open for inspection and where selections may be made.

ORGANIZE TO DEVELOP POWER

New York—Representatives of leading manufacturers of hydro-electric appliances yesterday at the office of the I. P. Morris Company, manufacturers of water power wheels, at No. 100 Broadway, formed the Hater Power Development Association.

They hope to aid the adoption of Federal laws permitting the development of the nation's water power. They say such development since 1913 has been practically abandoned due to the conservation movement. The I. P. Morris Company is a subsidiary of William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building company, of Philadelphia.

Backing this movement are about 600 manufacturers interested in water power legislation now pending at Washington.

The new association will open a publicity bureau at Washington. It will conduct a campaign to eliminate objectionable to the final passage of relief measures to make it possible for capable to engage in hydro-electric development.

The association seeks the utilizing of the water power of the country in the development of electrical energy, not only for uses of transportation, manufacture and agriculture, but also to furnish the nation the fundamental raw material for all explosives —nitric acid. This chemical is now obtained by American manufacturers of explosives principally from the nitrate of soda beds of Chile.

Among the corporations identified with the association are: Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee, Wis.; American Rolling Mill Company, American Smelting & Refining Company, Anaconda Copper Mining Company, Archbold-Brady Company, Buffalo Foundry & Machine Company, Gould's Manufacturing Company, James Leffel & Co., Locke Insulator Manufacturing Company, General Electric Company, I. P. Morris company, Ohio Brass Company, Pelton Water Wheel Company, Pittsburgh High Voltage Insulator Company, Platt Iron Works, S. Morgan Smith Company, Standard Underground Cable Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, R. Thomas & Sons and Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company.

The following officers were elected: H. W. Hand, chairman, William Cramp & Sons, Philadelphia; Calvert Townley, vice chairman, Westinghouse Manufacturing Company, East Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. W. Nichols, treasurer, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee, Wis.; Chester W. Lerner Wellman,Seaver-Morgan Campany, Cleveland Ohio, and J. E. Way, R. and armored fort of Vaux were captured in a glorious night attack * * by Posen reserve regiments * * * under the leadership of * * General von Guretsky Cornitz." This assertion ,the note says, is in every way false.

The situation at Verdun is regarded as much bette rfrom the French view point as a result of Thursday's fighting. The public is greatly cheered by reports of successful resistance on the part of the defenders of the fortress. Notwithstanding an enormous expenditure of ammunition and unstinted sacrifice of life, the German have failed to bend, much less break, the blue line.

The inference drawn by the general public is that the German wave has advanced as far as is in its power without further wastage on a large scale, which the Perman General Staff hesitates to make, with four army corps already put out of action in the struggle of eighteen days.

Exhausted by three days of violent efforts ,the assailants called a half rest on Thursday to replenish the depleted ranks of infantry, and the French took advantage of the respite to sweep out the Germans still remaining in Corbeaux Wood, and in this effort were almost successful.

The renewal of heavy fighting east of the Meuse, attended by a series of assaults on Douaumont, has centred interest once more on this portion of the froint. A good road huns through the gently sloping ravins up to the plateau before Douaumont, possession of which would enable the attacking forces to take the defences in the flank. Massed infantry, well supported by artillery, struggled hard to win command of this easiest approach to the famous position, but the French were able to hold off the assailants and at the same time to deal with attacks from the village of Douaumont.

THE NERVE HABIT.

Doctors Agree That There Are Two Kinds of "Nerves."

LACK OF EMOTIONAL CONTROL

How Children Should Be Trained Early In Life to Avoid Easy Suggestibility and to Let Their Minds Get the Upper Hands of Emotions.

There would be far fewer nervous wrecks in the world today if it were generally recognized that nervousness often is at the bottom nothing more than bad habit.

Doctors divide nervous diseases into two great groups. The first group consists of maladies due to some physical disorder directly affecting the nervous system. Neuritis and locomotor ataxia are examples of nervous diseases of this sort.

The second group comprises diseases in which the nervous system, though originally sound, functions badly for various reasons. The principal maladies of this group are hysteria, neurasthenia and psychasthenia.

Technically these three maladies are known as the psycho-neuroses. They are the ones which frequently—one is tempted to say always—are grounded in bad mental habits.

When the history of the psycho-neurotic patient is carefully looked into it generally is found that as far back as early childhood the patient acquired the habit of allowing his conduct to be swayed entirely by his feelings.

If, as a child, he were crossed in any desire he probably reacted by throwing himself on the floor, beating the air with his fists and howling dismally.

Or, instead of venting his feelings thus violently, he may have sulked and brooded in silence, developing a sullenness which of itself was unmistakable proof of an excessive emotional reaction.

At this early stage it usually is easy, by wise educational methods, to break up this habit of allowing the feelings to dominate the mental life and bodily actions and to substitute a habit of emotional control.

The trouble is that many parents do not appreciate the importance of beginning to train their children in emotional control while the children still are very small. They may scold them and punish them, but they do not train them. So that, often without the parents' suspecting it, the habit of excessive emotionality grows until it becomes an ingrained personal trait.

Also, through parental ignorance and neglect, another disease breeding habit is allowed to become firmly rooted. This is the habit of undue suggestibility, by which is meant the habit of accepting and acting on ideas without stopping to examine their truth or falsity, their helpfulness or harmfulness.

All children are by nature exceedingly suggestible. Experience has proved that, unless steps are taken at an early age to awaken the critical faculty, this innate suggestibility, like the innate emotionality of childhood, may become both excessive and habitual.

When this occurs, and when the unduly suggestible person is at the same time a person who has never been properly trained in emotional control, then the soil is fully prepared for some psycho-neurotic malady.

Let things go badly with this person, let him experience business reverses, family troubles or a sudden emotional shock of any kind, and it is more than an even chance that he will have a hysterical attack or a "nervous breakdown."

Early training of the will power, with special reference to control of the emotions and suggestibility, is therefore the surest preventive known of the functional nervous diseases so much in evidence today.

Millinery Jottings.

Buttons have entered the realm of millinery and are used on sports hats, and by this are meant real buttons, buttons used for fastening purposes.

Hatpins, too, in either pearl, brass or nickel add an ornamental touch to many a hat for spring.

Ostrich novelties effectively change an ordinary hat into one of unusual effectiveness. Wing shaped are some of these ostrich novelties, which may be bent into any desired shape, for the quill is easily persuaded to assume any shape or position.

Many straw ornaments are used on the Paris creations, and most of them are formed of the modish shiny straw.

Appliques of fruit are most popular and all the small berries are to be had as well as the larger fruits. Quite as unusual are the flowers that are seen in profusion, and after a period when flowers were not considered smart we find that the designers have turned out more beautiful and original models than have ever been seen before.

Mint Sauce.

Pick all the leaves from a large mint stalk and mince as fine as possible. Place in a large bowl with six tablespoonfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a pint of vinegar, one-half pint of cold water and one tablespoonful of salt.

Mix thoroughly with a wooden spoon; then place in a large bottle, cover tightly; shake the bottle always before using.

Instead of the ordinary plebeian "apple sauce" the addition of mint turns it into a highly tempting dessert.

Johnny Roche's Tower.

Standing on the banks of the river Awberg, between Mallow and Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, is a remarkable edifice known as "Johnny Roche's Tower." The whole tower was built by the labor of one man, who subsequently resided in it. This individual, who received no education whatever, also erected a mill, constructing the water wheel after a special design of his own. Long before the introduction of the bicycle he went about the country in a wheeled vehicle of his own construction propelled by foot power. His last feat was to build his tomb in the middle of the river bed. John Roche died, but was not interred in the strange burying place which he selected for himself, his less original relatives deeming such a mode of sepulture unchristian.—London Strand Magazine.

The Horseshoe Legend.

Here is an explanation of the old horseshoe superstition: St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dunstan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of a house where the horseshoe was displayed.

The Coffee Plant's Friend.

In Colombia there is a tree highly esteemed as a shade for the coffee plant. It is found also in tropical Brazil and possesses qualities that make it peculiarly suited for this particular use. It will live on a stony, poor soil, and a tree only eighteen months old will shade 144 square yards of ground, while when full grown it may be fifty feet high and have a spread of fifty feet on every side.

Parchment Paper.

To make ordinary paper imitate parchment soak it in a basin of water mixed with sulphuric acid in the proportion of one to ten parts. Let it become thoroughly saturated, then remove gently and let dry. The paper should be strong unlined foolscap.

A FAMOUS VICTORY

By F. A. MITCHEL

A young man within the German lines in Alsace knocked at the door of a cottage. A girl came to the door, and he asked her if he might be accommodated for the night which was coming on. She called to her mother in the German tongue. The young man knitted his brows. He had expected to find French inmates.

The mother came and spoke to the stranger, speaking French with a German accent. He told her that he was traveling and since there was no other house near either she must admit him or he must bivouac for the night. She consented to admit him.

The young man was about twenty-two years old and handsome as a picture. A winning smile began to play about his lips the moment he spoke to the girl, and his eyes indicated his admiration for her. He said nothing about the terrible war that was going on nor did his hostess or her daughter. Nevertheless he assumed that they sympathized with the German cause. For France's lost province has at least as large a population of Germans as French. As to the young man, he was plainly French.

Now, though these persons did not talk about the war, it was evident that the visitor, being a Frenchman within the German lines, was living with a sword suspended over him. True, the country near about was not occupied by troops except in small bands, but any German soldier meeting a Frenchman there would require him to give an account of himself. At bedtime the stranger took a candle and went to the room that had been assigned him, locked the door after him and went to bed, but not to sleep. There was that on his mind that precluded sleep. Life was on the one hand, death on the other. He was liable to be clutched by death.

The girl about midnight, armed with a pair of pliers, went to the guest's door and, feeling with her implement for the end of the key, finally succeeded in turning it. Opening the door, she stole into the guest's room and to a chair beside the bed on which he had put his clothes. She was about to withdraw them when she felt a hand on her wrist.

"Let me go," she said in a low voice.

"Certainly," said the visitor. "You have doubtless made a mistake in the room."

He released her, and she withdrew. He knew well what her object had been in trying to take his clothes. She suspected he was a spy and that in his pockets would be found papers containing information he was taking to the entente allies.

In the morning when he came down to breakfast and bade the girl good morning his face wore that same winning smile. She did not respond, evidently steeling herself against him. When he started on his journey she had on her hat and coat and gloves.

"I am going with you," she said.

"I am delighted."

"You are a spy, and I intend to turn you over to the first German officer we meet."

"Oh, no, you won't!"

"Why not?"

"Because they would stand me up and shoot me."

"I have considered all that."

"But when it comes to seeing me shot down you will regret what you have done."

All this the Frenchman said with that same irresistible smile on his lips.

"Give me the papers you are bearing and you may go free for all me."

"It is beyond your power to free me."

"Why so?"

"You have made a prisoner of my heart, and my heart will not be released."

It was evident that the shot had hit. The girl was winged. But she was not ready to surrender.

"My feelings may drive me one way, but my duty is driving me another. I am capable of sacrificing my feelings to my duty."

"Then do so."

The only weapon he carried was a revolver. Taking it from its holster at his hip he tossed it to her. It fell at her feet. He folded his arms and stood looking at her with that smile which was having the same effect upon her that the eye of a serpent would have on a bird.

"Do your duty to your fatherland. The papers you wish are on my person, but you shall not have them without first killing me."

She was not yet conquered. Taking up the weapon she cocked it, advanced to within a few feet of him, put the muzzle against his breast and said:

"Give me the papers or I will sacrifice you to my duty."

"I love you," was his only response.

"Once more, give me the papers."

"Once more, I love you."

They stood, the eyes of each fixed on those of the other. The battle waxed hot, but not with weapons of death. It was a fight of love against duty. Without that smile duty might have won.

Presently he saw victory for himself, defeat for her. Disregarding the weapon pressed against his heart he extended his arms, her hand sank slowly, he encircled her, drew her to him and kissed her.

When he went his way with his papers she returned to the house. Her sense of duty had given place to an all absorbing love.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Draped skirts and fitted bodices, joined under deep girdles, are among the very successful modes of the season. Dark brown pongee, thick, soft and crepy, is used for this dress, trimmed with satin in a darker shade of brown. The vest is of cream white chiffon, surmounted by a turn-down collar. Fancy buttons appear on the revers, sleeves and girdle. In medium size the dress requires 5 yards 40-inch pongee and 2 yards 36-inch satin.

Rice Griddlecakes.

One cupful of boiled rice, a cupful of scalding milk, one and a half cupfuls of sifted flour, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of melted butter, two eggs, a little cold milk. Pour the scalding milk over the boiled rice cover closely and let stand overnight In the morning add the other ingredients in the order given, using enough cold milk to make a batter that will pour easily. Bake on a hot, lightly greased griddle and serve at once.

Crumb Cake.

Mix three cupfuls of flour, two cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of lard and half a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg together thoroughly, then take out half a cupful of these dry crumbs. Now add two cupfuls of sour milk with half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in it and put cake in pan. When cake is in pan sprinkle over the top the half cupful of dry crumbs which you took out in the beginning. Put in oven and bake slowly

Crab Meat, Terrapin Style.

A cupful of crab meat, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a small onion thinly sliced, two tablespoonfuls of sherry wine, a third cupful of heavy cream, the yolks of two eggs. Cook butter and onion until yellow, remove onion, add crab meat and wine. Cook three minutes, add cream, yolks of eggs, salt and cayenne.

Apples and Morality.

Coleridge would have been in sympathy with the prison governor who regarded a liking for apples as indicative of moral soundness. "No man can have a pure mind who refuses apple dumplings," he said, and Coleridge's friend, Charles Lamb, who reports this saying, adds: "I am not certain but he is right. With the decay of my first innocence, I confess a less and less relish daily for those innocuous cates. There is a physiognomical character in the tastes for food. The whole vegetable tribe has lost its bust with me. Only I still stick to asparagus, which still seems to inspire gentle thoughts."—London Mail.

A New Blouse For Spring.

A smart blouse with four-piece flare collar that may be rolled high or low. It is smart alike in crepe or linen.

Do not be deceived; this blouse is not a model for next mid-winter, but it is designed for late spring and summer. The choker collar is a bit of sartorial fiction, for it is fashioned of soft crepe de Chine, or it may be of gauze. Further information about the collar is to the effect that it is a four-piece affair that may be rolled high or low. The waist fastens at one side and has a shoulder yoke, while the long one-piece sleeves are gathered to shaped cuffs. In medium size the blouse requires 2¼ yards 36-inch material.

The construction of the blouse offers no difficulties that are insurmountable to the home dressmaker, as a study of the cutting guide will show. First, the shoulder edge is gathered to the front, after which the lower edge of the waist is gathered back and front. Next, close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Adjust shoulder strap to position on back, neck edges even, front edge of shoulder strap along shoulder seam. Sew waistband to lower edge of front and back, center-fronts and center-backs even, small "o" perforation in waistband of under-arm seam (large "O" perforation in waistband indicates center-front), fold through center; fell remaining edge over seam; insert elastic, or a drawstring.

Join front and back sections of collar as notched; small "o" perforation indicates center-front. Close back seam. Sew to neck edge as notched, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Finish the slashed edges of sleeves for a closing. Close seam as notched Gather entire lower edge of sleeve Sew turn-over to cuff as notched. Sew cuff to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve; in cuff, matching small "o" perforations when closing. Sew sleeve in armhole notches and small "o" perforation even, easing in any fulness.

Embroidery in self color may be added to the front of the blouse, especiall if it is fashioned of linen.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6608. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

TASTY LUNCHEONS.

SHEPHERD'S PIE.—One and a half pounds of lean stewing lamb, a quart of potatoes, a cupful of cut onions, half a cupful of cut carrot, two tablespoonfuls of cut parsley, two teaspoonfuls of salt and a dash of pepper, two tablespoonfuls of flour. Wipe and wash the meat, put on to boil in two quarts of boiling water, boil an hour, then add onions and carrots and seasoning and boil until tender. Remove four cupfuls of the stock for the soup, to the remainder add the flour, which has been mixed with a little cold water, boil five minutes. The potatoes are boiled and mashed and put around the edge of agate platter, the meat is put in the center, all is dusted with paprika, put in oven until potatoes are brown; sprinkle with parsley.

Beef Patties.—Take thick slices of bread—a week old if it can be obtained—make them the desired form and size with a tin cutter, scoop out the middle to receive the mince, dip each piece of bread into cream, and when drained brush them with the white of egg. Dredge breadcrumbs or bread raspings over them, fry in good fresh butter, then fill them with the following mince made hot: Shred one pound of undercooked beef, a little fat and lean together, season with pepper or cayenne, salt and a little onion.

Mock Venison Steak.—Buy a good sized leg and loin of lamb. Use chops for one meal, make this recipe from the leg and a stew from the remainder. Materials: Leg of lamb, glass of currant jelly, one-half cupful butter, one scant teaspoonful mustard, one-eighth teaspoonful salt and pepper, a wine glassful of sherry if possible. Utensils: Enameled pan for sauce, tablespoon cup, large frying pan. Directions: Make a sauce by softening the jelly in a pan over the fire, add the butter, mustard, salt and pepper. Bring to a scald and keep hot until the steaks are ready. Thick steaks are cut from the best part of the leg. Heat the frying pan hot, drop in a little butter, then put in steaks, sear quickly, turn and sear on the other side. Cook quickly, but do not burn. Pour over the sauce, let boil up, add sherry and put on a hot platter.

Rice Snowballs.

Wash two teaspoonfuls of rice and boil it in one teacupful of water and one of milk, with a little salt. If the rice is not tender when the milk and water are absorbed add a little more milk and water; when the rice is tender flavor with vanilla, form it into balls or mold into a compact form with little cups; place these rice balls around the inside of a deep dish, fill the dish with a rich, soft custard and serve either hot or cold. The custard and balls should be flavored alike.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Cooperation is the golden key which unlocks the door of success in community building.

No matter how keen the competition may be between rival firms or institutions ,there must be behind it all a spirit of cooperation for the general good of the community.

Each individual is an integral part of the community. His success adds just so much to the general prosperity of the community. And for the community, as a whole, to become truly prosperous it is necessary for the greater portion, at least, to enjoy prosperity. The more individuals who enjoy this, the greater the influence for good it exerts on the community at large. It is not only a very selfish motive but a very narrow and contracted view to take for the individual to consider only himself, and leave out the general welfare of the community in his business transactions and in his dealings with others. The same principles applies also to business firms.

A man with millions of dollars in his possession placed out on a bleak and barren island alone and beyond the help of others for his supply of the necessities and comforts of life, would be in a more helpless condition than the man in a thickly populated city. dependent upon the substance which he might obtain from the municipal garbage.

There is no escape from the interdependence between the several units composing society, and the truly successful man is he who realizes that to the fullest extent and shapes his actions, not only along the lines which may bring success to him, but which will contribute to the success of the community in which he lives.

In their greed for gain and desire for self-aggrandizement, many men overlook the "golden key which unlocks the door of success of community building"—cooperation, and do not attain to the highest ideals nor achieve the highest results.

If the people in FULTON would only wake up to that fact, they would NEVER allow this club to be closed. However, there are a certain number of good fighters left in the city and we hope that they will win the battle. Here is to a large and a very successful meeting of the Pathfinder Club tomorrow evening at the Citizens Club.

The good will of the people in Fulton towards the city is getting better every day, but it will take quite a long time yet, before we shall have convinced EVERYBODY that it is necessary to get in line.

We announce herewith a program of many good things for the second year of the Chamber and we already know that you will all agree that this program is an excellent one.

* * *

If you think you have something ON a fellow, then go tell him. Don't try to cut his throat, while smiling at him.

URBAN VILLAGES GROW FASTER

Albany—Twenty-nine incorporated villages in this State at the present time have each a population of 55,000 or better. Saddle Rock has the distinction of being the smallest of the 463 incorporated villages, its permanent residents numbering but 71. Peekskill tops the list with its population of 15,502. Figures compiled from the State census taken by Secretary of State Hugo last June show that there are 207 incorported villages in this State having a population under 1,000; 121 that range from 1,000 to 2,00 0residents 55 from 2,000 to 3,000; 29 from 3,000 to 4,000 and 22 with populations between 4,000 and 5,000.

There are today twenty more incorporated villages in the State than ten years ago. On June 1st last, the incorporated villages sheltered 863,894 residents. Saratoga Springs, Mechanicville and White Plains passed from thev illage to the city column following the June enumeration.

Villages in close proximity to the larger cities have in many instances enjoyed a marvelous growth since 1905, the fluctuations of industrial activities being strong factors in promoting or retarding growth.

Hearing Ordered In the Case Affecting Alleged Bankrupt

Another session in the case of John A. Bort, alleged bankrupt, was held before Judge Ray in Norwich last Saturday. At the same time and place Attorney Floyd Spangle of this city appeared for Mr. Bort ,filing affidavits and making a motion before the Judge to vacate the order of examination which had been secured by Attorney A. T. Jennings about one week ago. At that time Mr. Jennings, representing the receiver and creditors, secured an order from Judge Ray to examine Mr. Bort and other witnesses before the Referree in Bankruptcy last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Spangle's appearance did not produce results, as Judge Ray denied his motion and ordered the examination to proceed, saying that Mr. Bort must make full and complete disclosures of his business affairs to his creditors, and particularly, his acts and conduct leading up to the bankruptcy proceedings.

It will be remembered, in connection with the Bort troubles, that on February 7th an order was made appointing Leonard T. Haight of Syracuse, receiver over Mr. Bort, and restraining all of his creditors as well as those of the Simple-X Manufacturing company. Upon a latter date, or on February 17th, Attorney Spangle moved in the Federal Court at Albany, to vacate that order in part, which motion was also denied. The Court, however, at the suggestion of Attorney Jennings, for the receiver, made an order permitting the Simple-X Manufacturing company to continue its line of business.

REV. DR. SCHWARTZ AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

The Rev. Karl Schwartz, Ph. D., rector of the Church of the Saviour, in Syracuse, will be the preacher at All Saints' church, this city, at the evensong service tomorrow. Service will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock and the public are cordially invited to attend.

This is the first of the Tuesday evening Lenten services at All Saints' church. Visiting preachers have been secured for all the Tuesday evening services through Lent. Dr. Schwartz is a preacher of unusual power. He is well known in Fulton, and his friends will be glad of the opportunity to hear him again.

Barker Home Third to Burn on Same Site; Heavy Loss

The fire which visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Barker on the East river road, about three miles north of the city, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, is proof to some people that unfortunate events do at times come in cycles. Upon two previous occasions fire has visited the same site whereon the Barker home stood, and each time as on this last occasion the house was completely reduced to ashes.

Saturday's fire is mysterious in its origin, the only possible cause assigned being that an overheated furnace resulted in the complete destruction of nearly everything belonging to the family, including thew inter's supply of canned goods, vegetables, clothing and household appurtenances.

At the time the fire was discovered by Mrs. Charles Rowlee, a portion of the family was in this city and Mrs. Barker was visiting with a neighbor nearby. Immediately telephone alarms brought about 15 men to the scene and a bucket brigade was formed. The men did valient service, probably saving the various buildings surrounding the farmhouse as wel las the cheesefactory which stands directly across the road.

The house wasb uilt about ten years ago, costing $2,600 then, upon which there is insurance of $1,600. It was complete in every detail, having every modern convenience for comfort and convenience.

What Fate Awaits Pathfinder Island's Shaded Shores

Must it be that one of Fulton's breathing spots and, perhaps, choicest pleasure ground is to cease giving enjoyment to its frequenters?

This is the first question agitating the minds of the members of the famous Pathfinder Boat Club, just at present. The second query they make is, How many old and present members of the club expect to make their appearance at the Citizens Club tomorrow evening, to talk over the future of the Island. This will be the annual meeting of the Pathfinder Club, and it will be held in conjunction with the regular Tuesday evening dinner party.

While last year's Pathfinder season was the most successful for a number of years, it is apparent to those members who stand by the one-time famous boating club that something extraordinary must develop in order to maintain the beauty spot during this and remaining years, and to this end the people of the city are urged to come to the rescue of the club.

The business meeting will occur at 8 o'clock, to be followed by a free for all discussion upon the merits of the Island as a place for healthy recreation, and whether it shall be worth while to prepare the house and grounds for the coming season.

Pathfinder Island is so well known for its beautiful location as to make comment superfluous so those who have enjoyed its quiet, its beautiful shade trees, or its appetite-giving atmosphere. It has an area of 13 acres. It lies in one of the broadest reaches of the old Oswego river, about one mile north of the city; it is easy of access by boat, auto and team, etc.; it is laid out for athletics. In fact, it is a haven of rest for the busy man and woman during the long summer evenings when the river is glowing and purpling in the sunset.

JACOBOVITZ HALTED IN BUILDING PLANT; CLAIMS CAUSE UNJUST

An interview was held yesterday between Mayor Lewis, Health Officer Hall and Jacob Jacobovitz of the Fulton French Cleaning and Dyeing company relative to the latter's proposed construction of a plant in Seneca street. The grievances offered by owners of property whose lots are adjacent to the plot Mr. Jacobovitz proposes t use, were investigated. The permit for the construction has been granted.

Mr. Jacobovitz asserted that he expected no interference with the operation of the new plant at the time he purchased the property upon which the building is to be constructed. Concerning its being a fire hazard, he makes the claim that the building is to be fire proof, constructed under the supervision of the Chief of the Fire Department, and that gasoline will not be use in large enough quantities to excite any scare. On the other hand, the precautions taken at the plant will make it safer than the ordinary garage, where gasoline in many instances is very carelessly handled.

"The neighboring property owners claim that the odor of gasoline would make the plant obnoxious to the adjoining neighborhood," Mr. Jacobovitz stated to the city officers. "I will guarantee that the odors emanating from this building will not prove anywhere near as offensive as those perceived in passing by some of our downtown garages. In practically every city there are no objections offered to the construction of similar plants. The city authorities see that certain specifications for safety are carried out, and all of these requirements I am acquainted with and will incorporate in our new building."

GOING TO A DESERT FOR WATER

There is no place in Northern New York that is more dry or parched than the Pine Plains in Jefferson county. It is the Sahara Desert of "the Great North Country," where the wind kicks up the sand and piles it up like snow drifts.

The city of Watertown, nevertheless, is casting an eagle eye on the sands of the "Plains" for a water supply. It has been told by a scientific man that the parched sand merely presents an outward appearance which isn't to be trusted for what is underneath. This engineer declares that several feet under the sand there is a lake three miles long and a mile and a half wide, and all that Watertown has to do is to tap it and pipe it to the city.

Inasmuch as Watertown has been drinking thed rainage of Carthage and other villages along Black river for so many years, ac ustom which hasn't conduced to the increase of the city's population, the town has wisely decided to explore the subterranean lake and if it is successful it will have a naturally sand-filtered water supply that can't be beaten. Having died for so many years from typhoid, the folks in Watertown deserve it.—Utica Observer.

SHORTAGE OF PAPER MATERIAL

The attention of the Department of Commerce is called by the president of a large paper manufacturing company to the fact that there is a serious shortage of raw material for the manufacture of paper. He urges that the department should make it known that the collecting and saving of rags and old papers would greatly better existing conditions for American manufacurers.

Something like 15.000 tons of differ ent kinds of paper and paper board are manufactured every day in the United States and a large proportion of this, after it has served its purpose could be used over again in some class of paper. A large part of it, however, is either burned or otherwise wasted. This, of course, has to be replaced by new materials, In the early history of the paper industry publicity was given to the importance of saving rags. It is of scarcely less importance now. The Department of Commerce is glad to bring this matter to the attention of the public in the hope that practical results may flow from it. A little attention to the saving of rags and old papers will mean genuine relief to our paper industry and a diminishing drain upon our sources of supply for new materials. The Department of Commerce will be glad to put inquirers in touch with the manufacturers who are interested.—Utica Dispatch.

GOVERNOR WHITMAN AND PRACTICAL POLITICS

Governor Whitman is in what might be called either an unfortunate or an enviable position. The republican leaders do not intend to renominate him unless forced to do so. The Governor might as well reconcile him self to that now. He will achieve nothing by denouncing the newspapers, by complaining that the reporters do not treat him fairly, or by asserting that he has the "Old Guard" defeated. Newspaper reporters do not write "fake" interviews.fl They would not do it if they could get them printed, and the day is past when newspapers permit any such thing.

The Governor hasn't the "Old Guard" defeated. He has the "Old Guard" divided. One flank is with him. If he were more experienced in politics he would see how inevitable it is that the "Old Guard" will come together and leave him high and dry. The only Governors who, in recent times. were renominated were those who compelled their renominations—Mr. Odell ond Mr. Hughes. Mr. Odell made himself the State "boss;" Mr. Hughes became the leader of public opinion. There is not the ghost of a chance for the Governor to become the party "boss," but the other course is open to him. He cannot accomplish anything by whinning about the reporter's treatment of him. Neither can he wait too long before turning his attention to his real foes. The leaders have built a fire to consume him. His only chance to save himself is to build a back fire and a good substantial one. He has the fuel, and by taking advantage of the friendship of those practical politicians who are still adhering to him he can make a mighty big fire. The bosses know it.—N. Y. Herald.

GET AFTER THE BLIGHFERS

Few there be of the men who have served—figuratively and otherwise—as officers of the Chamber of Commerce during the year just closing who, if they take time to throw a searchlight back to the time when they looked to and depended upon this newspaper to conduct a propaganda, will not recall the little spring of good will that sprung from the heart by the wayside that helped them mightily to receive recognition from the men and women who voted them into their positions.

From the day that the movement began to rejuvenate the Chamber of Commerce until the present moment this newspaper has everlastingly and consistently kept up its job of flinging the slipper of good will to the organization, which means in plain English, to the dozen or so officers who in the life of the community are reckoned as the merchants of Fulton. In the months that have passed the Chamber of Commerce has made many unintentional blunders, but in spite of the facts in the case this newspaper has remained true blue. It remained among the friends of the Chamber who could be counted upon one's fingers while the opponents of the Chamber could not find any clothes-line long enough to get a hand-hold to put together against it.

The method behind this newspaper's loyalty was and is yet a knowledge that the principles and possibilities back of a Chamber of Commerce whose officers are unafraid would result in removing from Fulton its smugness, petty jealousies, cliques and other unbecoming features holding it in check. But these unafavorable elements of a so-called disease continue. Instead of finding harmony within the ranks of the officers of the Chamber, one sees the work of the wrecker, his prejudices and his conspiracies. It is unfortunate yes, it is sad for the Chamber that the blight of one, two or three men, officers of the organization, continues to affect the leadership of a man whose intentions are honest. As members of the board of directors, these men discredit and, in a measure boss; they are the enemies of almost every good movement originating in the Chamber of Commerce and, getting down to brass tacks, they have more to do with the continued growth of the mail order evil in this community than the mail order houses themselves.

Men of the calibre described, to us, seem smaller than the smallest specimens of humanity. They are nearly nil, for they are neutral persons. And the most infinitesimal of all diminutive creatures is the neutral man in the community. It is probable that these men may come before the people as candidates to succeed themselves; it may be that they have hopes of counting upon stampeding the people into nominating and electing them. They may be seeking to have a lot to say at the coming election, even though they have done practically nothing to reform the methods which have dragged this city into its plight as a supporter of the mail order houses and the big city stores.

In flinging the slipper of good will at the Chamber of Commerce today, we are reiterating all former expressions. But we cannot be counted upon to support men whose designs are selfish; who cannot and will not see beyond the ends of their noses; who have no heart in and sympathy for the principles and possibilities of a commercial organization; who are deceitful in the extreme, and who do nothing better than to fire the community with strife and dissension.

It ought to be comparatively easy to find in this city of 12,000 persons a directorate in sympathy with a cause whose supremacy must be understood and the signficance thereof made clear if the city is to rise to the level of its opportunity and draft a backing for an active Secretary.

A writer in Leslie's Weekly warns readers to beware of tipsters, who are now coming strongly to the front. He uses an argument of self evident truth when he says that a man who has valuable information will use it himself and a man doesn't pick up diamonds to give them away. The advice closes as follows:

"The tipster knows no more about Wall street than any one else. He doesn't even think he knows more, for he knows he does not. Any one can watch the trend of public events and the reports of the earnings of corporations. Any one can guess whether news dispatches indicate that we may be drawn into difficulties with foreign nations or whether great strikes will interfere with prosperity or whether the crops promise to be disappointing. There are only a few great essential factors to be considered, and you need no tipster to help you out if you are observant, careful and conservative. The greatest need is common sense, which means good judgment, caution and prudence combined with thrift."

One thing or two which ought not to be lost sight of in sizing up Germany's preparedness by way of an example for this country is the matter of roads. Germany has shown the world what part the railroads, stretching and crisscrossing from border to border, have to do with military efficiency. The war thus far has been outside, and mainly only through lines were called into use. But invasion and battle on the home soil are equally well provided for by a vast system of highways for vehicles. Any imitation of Germany's preparedness which can be depended upon in a crisis should include good roads bearing toward all points of the compass, with connecting lateral roads along the border and the coast. True, they might help forward invasion, but they surely would enable defenders to meet the foe half or three-quarters of the way in half the time that it would take by the town and county highways.

A bill before congress provides for the establishment of a national park service in the department of the interior. Aside from their possible value as a commercial asset to keep at home the cash formerly taken abroad by our globe trotters, the widely scattered park areas should have a higher and more important value as national playgrounds—to develop habits of outdoor life. Not alone physical vigor of the grosser sort, but moral and mental health and sanity spring from life in the open. Safeguarding and improving the parks for playgrounds for the people is a proper function for legislation and one not likely at present to be overdone.

Incompetence of drivers, recklessness and intoxication were proved the chief causes of the 86,000 automobile arrests in New York city in 1915. When conservative people declared against automobiles on much used thoroughfares the auto was defended as a business necessity. Yet, according to the New York showing, the greatest menace of the machines to life and limb is due to evils not at all necessary and for that reason inexcusable.

After the recognition of Carranza as the chief of the de facto government of Mexico the next important step is a national election to ratify that choice. Delay in calling this election is portentous unless the reason lies in an honest conviction that under present conditions a real declaration of the popular will is impossible.

The postoffice department proposes to have United States mails transported over certain difficult routes by aeroplanes. Carrying capacity of only 3.000 pounds is required, and this ought not to be difficult, since war air craft in Europe carry upward of 10,000 pounds, counting crew and armament.

By the way, what shall it profit the people to be safeguarded in life and limb by the newfangled street cars if they are to be poisoned by the foul air which prevails in some of these pens?

According to the Hobson theory, Japan must be anxiously watching Goethals' heroic attempts to make the Panama ditch keep open.

If whipping is restored to the schools the young idea of the nation will need no further incentive to teach itself how to shoot.

Nations may crawl out of obeying laws which they have never agreed to, but that won't go for the "man in the street."

By voting a bigger kindergarten for our navy congress shows that it is not too proud to get ready to fight.

Anyhow, what is a one term plank when your favorite "favorite son" happens to have been there?

The quicker Mexico settles down the sooner it will settle up and be counted as a world factor again.

Chicago itself concedes that Americans are about as safe in Mexico as they are in that city.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington— The Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., today gave out the following statement at its Washington Headquarters:

"The difference between Republican and Democratic management of the nation's finances is this: The Republicans made it a practice to put into the Treasury each month two million dollars more than they took out, while the Democratic practice is to take out each month two million dollars more than they put in.

"These figures have been determined by a study of the official reports of the Secretary of the Treasury for the period beginning with August, 1897, when the Dingley law went into effect, down to the first day of the present year. During that time, Republican revenue laws (the Dingley bill and the Payne bill) were in operation for 194 months; and a Democratic revenue law (the Underwood bill) was in operation for 27 months.

"The total ordinary receipts of the Treasury during the period of Republican management of the nation's finances reached the colossal sum of $9,677,952,080—an average of $49,886,351 per month.

"During the same time the total ordinary disbursements of the Government, as authorized by Republican legislation, amounted to $9,293,083,392—an average of $47,902,492 per month.

"The average monthly surplus under Republican control, therefore, was $1,983,859.

"During the twenty-seven months while Democratic legislation has controlled the revenue an expenditure the total Treasury receipts have been $1,579,648,049—a monthy average of $58,505,483.

"In the same time Democratic Congressmen have voted away $1,621,908,077—a monthly average of $60,070,670.

"Accordingly, the average monthly deficit under Democratic control has been $1,565,187.

'Moreover, the Rupublican revenue laws which produced these results were so drawn that $22,967,653 per month were customhouse receipts and were paid by foreigners, while $22,534,842 per month came from internal revenue receipts and were paid by our own people. Under the Democratic system only $19,023,760 per month were taken from the foreigner at the custom-houses, while the enormous sum of $34,116,302 per month werew rung from our own people by vexatious and oppressive taxes upon incomes, vocations, enterprise and thrift. Those American citizens who have recently been wrestling with the clumsy and confusing income-tax blanks or who have been constantly licking stamps for telegraph and telephone messages and for other necessary business transactions will be interested to know that, under Democratic revenue legislation, our own people contribute $1.79 to the National Treasury for every dollar that the foreigner pays, whereas, under Republican revenue laws, thef oreigner paid $1.02 as against each dollar contributed by American citizens.

"And yet there are those who think the tariff will not be an issue in the campaign of 1916."

VIEWS OF STATE EDITORS

The Glynn counterblast has been delivered but no seismic disturbance is reported as recorded by the delicate instruments of Georgetown university.—Rochester Post Express.

The Democrats at Washington have got to that confused state of mind and of action where the "short and ugly word" is being exchanged, or where that same word is being diplomatically amplified without losing any of its inherent offensiveness. Under the circumstances it takes a lot of nerve for Democratic conventions to indorse the national administration.—Troy Times.

Presumably Martin H. Glynn's speech—spread eagle and oratorical—was intended to offset the effect of Elihu Root's address to the Republican convention. It failed, not so much because of Mr. Glynn's failure to measure up to his task as to the fact that a dearth of argument did not give him the opportunity.— Buffalo News.

In the role of Ajax defying the lightning, Mr. Glynn did as well as could be expected. He came as near answering Mr. Root as any Democrat could have done. He simply got into too fast company and undertook a job beyond his own powers and beyond the intellectual capacity of most public men of the day. To start Mr. Glynn at "scratch" with Mr. Root was manifestly unfair. He ought to have had a handicap of a few miles.—Newburgh Journal.

* * *

And when all was said and done a highly respectable delegation to the National Convention was selected; Wilson's platform was adopted and the convention adjourned, without having contributed one new thought to the great controversy dividing the people of the country, and without having formulated a single issue that has not been better presented before —Brooklyn Times.

Some Queer Ones

A woman bank robber, who rides a horse and uses a sixshooter, is operating in Oklahoma.

"Send us a few frankfurters. We haven't seen one in months," writes a London girl to a New York friend.

Deaf nineteen years, a Hartford (Conn.) man put a telephone receiver to his ear as a joke and found he could hear.

A six-year-old girl was willed by her parents to a New York policeman and his wife, and the court has given her to them.

A girl mill hand won the honor of being "local artist" at a Paterson (N. J.) music festival in April over twenty-eight contestants.

That cows get drunk in Michigan on fermented ensilage and their milk gives babies a taste for alcohol is the complaint to the state dairy commissioner.

Decline of musical comedy due to new styles in women's dress, which make it unnecessary to attend theater to see a show, says Kansas City manager.

A Trick With an Egg.

Place two V shaped wineglasses of the same size near the edge of a table. In the right hand one put an egg, just fitting the rim of the glass. Hold the bases of the glasses firmly down, the top rims touching each other. Now with a quick, sharp breath blow upon the line where the egg and the glass meet. The egg will jump to the other glass. With a little practice this can be done every time. Be careful to blow in a line with the left hand glass, or the egg will jump in the wrong direction and land on the table.

WOULDN'T TRUST CORK LEG.

Committed Prisoner Would Not Leave and Wants a New One.

Leavenworth, Kan.—Afraid to trust his decaying cork leg over the bumps and pitfalls of the outside world, G. V. Stamey, prisoner of the Kansas state prison, declined the privilege of being with his parents. Stamey was sent up from Shawnee county in 1910 to serve a sentence of from five to ten years for arson. Governor Capper commuted his sentence.

As he was preparing to leave the prison to go to the home of his parents in Norton, Kan., he noticed that his cork leg, which he had brought with him when he entered a cell five years ago, was in bad shape.

Then he decided that he couldn't trust it any longer and turned back. He will wait until the prison board meets again, when he will ask that a new leg be bought for him, as he is without funds.

SORRY HE BOUGHT COFFIN.

At Seventy-nine, Civil War Veteran Thinks It Was a Waste of Money.

Red Bank, N. J.—William Reid's investment in an ornate coffin and an elaborately bricked in grave—both as a permanent resting place for his own body—looks like money thrown away. He celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday here recently by meeting all his old friends, going about town and proving by every known method that he might be accepted as a gilt edged risk by any life insurance company.

Mr. Reid, who was a soldier during the civil war, purchased the coffin after considerable shopping around. He dug his own grave and bricked it in at White River cemetery that he might not cause trouble to his friends after his death. He said that he didn't expect to compel anybody to haul his body out to the grave for another decade.

Cheering Him Up.

A professional boxer was badly beaten in a sparring match and carried to his bed exhausted and melancholy.

"I wish you'd say something to cheer him up, doctor," pleaded the defeated warrior's wife. "He's gettin' low in his mind, and when he's like that you've no idea how hard it is to wait on him. He's worse than a bear with a toothache."

"What can I say that will please him most?" asked the doctor.

"You might just tell him, in an offhand way, that the man as licked him is mighty bad in the 'orspital and that they may have to hold a post mortem on him any minute now," was the solemn suggestion.—London Telegraph.

USED TIPS TO MAKE FORTUNE

Checkroom Boy Saved Money and Invested in Real Estate.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Charles S. Bergquist was seventeen years old when he began his business career. He was a polite and accommodating checkroom boy at the Minneapolis club for five years, and all tips and money he saved went into the nest egg. He told his mother he was buying real estate, and she chided him for undertaking anything of the kind at his age. Thereafter he said nothing about it, but went on buying.

He died suddenly when he was twenty-three years old as the result of an accident. Four months ago friends of his began relating stories of property he had bought. His mother began a search at once. She found he had several lots in the city and forty acres of land near Sandy lake. She is seeking further information about his land and trying to locate the bank in which he had an account.

SHAVE BY AUTO LIGHT.

Son Put Machine Where Barber Could Work on His Father.

Clayton, Mo.—Heroic measures were resorted to in order that Frank Tegethoff, a real estate dealer, could be shaved in time to catch a train. Tegethoff had but a short time in which to make the train and rushed into one of Clayton's barber shops and demanded a hasty "once over."

While the barber was engaged in daubing Tegethoff's face with lather the electric lights failed, and the process had to be stopped. It was up to Tegethoff's son, Leo, to supply the light.

He drove his father's automobile on to the sidewalk in front of the shop and stopped in a position which threw the rays of the headlight on to the elder Tegethoff's face, and the shaving operation was completed. Tegethoff caught the train.

Showed Them How.

In "Welsh Humor" is this story "Sir Foulk Fitzwarren was recounting to his knights his exploits against the Saracen. These being calmly received, Sir Foulk said, 'But right here, the other day, I jumped from the ground to the top of my castle.' The knights being skeptical, Sir Foulk invited them to come the next day and see him perform the feat. When they assembled he jumped up one step of the stairway and continued jumping, step by step, till he was on the top of the tallest tower. 'But we could do that too,' chorused the knights. 'Not till I showed you how,' retorted the redoubtable warrior."

FUTURE OF THE AEROPLANE.

How the Lessons Learned New Will Be Applied After the War.

When the war is over the wings of the wind will have been harnessed so effectively that a splendid profit will be written on the balance sheet of peace. The air dreadnaughts of the day are the prototypes of the aeroplane de luxe of the morrow; the winged wains that carry a ton of explosives will be commandeered by commerce, and the safety devices that stand the gaff of shot and shell will find no very great test in the trade winds of the world.

The highways of the sky know no barriers and no frontiers. Besides being lord of its own element, the new aeroplane, driving through space at a hundred miles an hour, will outdistance the fastest ship and leave in a dilatory smudge of the horizon the smoke of the speediest railway train.

The sky is a universal roadbed that never needs repair. Spanning continents and bridging seas, hurdling cities, forests and the waste spaces of the world, the aeroplane, made safe, sound and speedy at the demands of war, will be trained to the minute for the greater service of peace and humanity.—Merle Crowell in American Magazine.

A Long Time Preaching.

The Rev. Ezra Campbell is said to be the oldest minister of the gospel in the United States, if not in the world. Recently he celebrated his one hundred and ninth birthday in Kentucky. He was born in what is now Wise county, Va., and lived there until he was past fifty years of age. He then moved to Kentucky. He is a member of the Baptist church and is now the pastor of three churches. He has been preaching for seventy-nine years.

Exquisite Iron Jewelry.

A Toronto jeweler has a set of earrings, necklace, locket and bracelets, all made of cast iron by a Prussian jeweler more than a hundred years ago. The Jewelers' Circular says they have a wonderfully fragile appearance, and their preservation is due entirely to the exquisite workmanship. They were made to replace gold jewelry given by women to the government when Prussia was crushed by Napo-

Medical Dilemma.

"What should one do," asks the young doctor, "when a patient comes in and diagnoses his own case exactly?"

"In such a situation," explains the experienced physician, "you must use your best judgment of human nature. If the patient is one kind of man he will appreciate your agreeing with his diagnosis as showing that he knows as much as you do; on the other hand, he may go about and say that you don't know any more than he does."—Chicago News.

Nowhere in this wide world are there such rainbow fish as in Hawaii, of every color and shade and hue. If there is any tint or grandeur of tints in the prism that is not reflected in the scales of the finny tribes in the waters around the islands I should like to see it. A visit to the Honolulu aquarium (far superior as it is to the world famous one in Naples), or to the Coral gardens, where we see the fish through a glass bottomed boat, disporting themselves in their own front yards, so to speak, is well worth while.—Christian Herald.

BABY'S COST IS $100 FIRST YEAR

Milwaukee — A community that wants to save the lives of its babies must first see that the babies' fathers have a living wage.

This solution of thep roblem of infant motality was one of those put forth at a meeting of the American Association for Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality.

Sherman C. Kingsley, Chicago, whi is connected with the McCormick Foundation, linked the wage problem with infant welfare in an address at a joint meeting of the association and the Philadelphia County Medical Society at the College of Physicians.

"The problef of saving babies is a question of a living wage, of housing and of food," he said. "In our campaign up to date we have tried to save the babies as individuals and by teaching the mother to take care of herself. Now the community as a whole must find a way of giving a living wage to the father."

In schowing how the health of babies depends upon the wages of the father, Kingsley cited several investigations which have been made in this country and in England in recent years. He showed that in Chicago it costs a family, at the most meagre estimate, from $40 to $60 each time a baby is born.

Added to this is the extra expense for feeding and clothing the infant, which the Juvenile Court of Chicago, Kingsley said, has estiimated at $5.75 a month as a minimum.

"If these figures are correst," he said, "they mean that the baby during the first year of its life costs the poor family from $100 to $1,255.50.The maximum costs run into thousands of dollars. Somewhere between these two extremes in the average.

"Investigations in England and in cities of this country where they have been made show that communities in which there is them ost poverty the infant death rate is highest. These investigations also show that the death rate is higher where families are crowded together in a few rooms. "In Fall River, Mass., statistics were obtained to show that where mothers are housekeepers the death rate among babies is 165 per 1,000; where mothers are employed, a maiority of them in mills, ther ate is 303.6 per 1,000.

"The real indictment, therefoore, against social maladiustment, bad housing conditions and low wages is that it hurts the babies."

WOMEN MAKE APPEAL FOR WAR SUFFERERS

We believe that every household could easily spare something that would be of great use to someone of the sufferers in Europe. Stories of intense poverty have come to the notice of all of us.

This Committee has decided upon a plan whereby anyone can give us even the smallest contribution of clothing, worn or new, with the assurance that it wil lreach someone in great need of it.

We are taking the responsibility of collecting and shipping the garments, and are confident that by simplifying the work in this way we will meet with a very large response—a response which will not in a material way decrease the contributions most of us will be called upon to make for home charities this winter.

We will have women engaged to mend garments; other to wash and iron garments, and cobblers to repair shoes.

Send to 346 West 84th st., New York city

REBEKAHS WILL PREPARE FOR LODGE DEGREE WORK

Rehearsal will form one of the principal features of the Nehasane Lodge of Rebekah meeting tomorrow evening, in preparation for conferring degrees upon a number of candidates for membership.

A social session will be held in the afternoon and supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

YOU SHOULD ASK FOR A SUPPLY OF SEEDS

Washington—Congressman Luther W. Mott wil be glad to send flower or vegetable seeds to any resident of Fulton who will write to Washington and ask for them. In former years he has made this distribution through the Chamber of Commerce but he has no record of where the seeds have gone and as the supply is somewhat limited he will send them direct from Washington to prevent duplication and to save the Chamber of Commerce the trouble of handling the seeds. It is desired that applicants state whether they prefer flower or vegetable seeds.

Last Revolutionary Survivor.

The last survivor of the Revolutionary war was John Gray, who died in Noble county, O., aged 104 years, on March 28, 1868. He came to the Buckeye State early in its existence. For some years before he died he drew an annual pension of $500 from the government. General John A. Bingham having got a special act through congress for this. Gray's father was killed at the battle of Stillwater, and he took his place in the army, being only sixteen years old then. He served through the remainder of the war. His military record is on file at the office of the state commissioner of soldiers' claims.—Columbus Dispatch.

The Question.

But here a delicate question arose.

"Will a very stylish hat make votes or alienate them?"

And that was a question that no mere man could answer.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THOMAS ALNUTT OLD IN SERVICE

Misinformation guided a statement to appear in The Evening Times—Saturday's issue—in effect that Officer Pare is the oldest in point of service of any man in the Police Department. It is now announced that since the organization of the department under the city charter, the appointments to the force have included: Melvin Blodgett, Fred Stewart, Fred Mosher, William Hinsdale, William Pare and Thomas Alnut. Officer Alnut served the city continuously for 19 years, he being the only man on the force who held over when a change was made from the village to the city form of government.

NO PLACE FOR THE MAN WHO DOESN'T LAUGH

The above caption is in substance the admonition of the persons in charge of the "crazy social" which will be held by the Epworth League of State Street church, tomorrow evening, in the church parlors. The committee is authority for the announcement, adding that should a nonlaugher arrive at the social he or she will surely get a job of holding the sides of the person who can and will laugh.

Another funny feature of the evening will be the free presentation of life-size portraits of everybody attending the social.

"MARTYRS OF ALAMO," A TRIANGLE FEATURE

A play of considerable educational value as well as of thrilling interest is "The Martyrs of the Alamo." It is a historical drama telling how in the early days the courageous but mucl outnumbered defenders of the Alamo were slaughtered and how other Americans avenged their death by de feating the Mexicans and winning the independence of Texas. Some of the historial characters that appear in this stirring border drama are: Silent Smith (Sam DeGrasse); Santa Anna (Walter Long); Sam Houston (Tom Wilson); David Crockett (A. D. Sears), and James Bowie (Alfred Paget). Sam DeGrasse is the cool crafty scout to the fore. He is the leading fight in the defense of the Alamo, and when its fall is imminent, he is chosen to take the hazardous trip through the innumerable Mexicans besieging the place. After warning Houston, DeGrasse is shown deceiving Santa Anna, the Mexican dictator, by a well-feigned imitation of a deaf and dumb man. His [illegible] tion leads to a successful attack on Santa Anna's forces by the Americans, under Houston. Walter Long gives a realistic portrayal of the cruel, vain, but cowardly dictator. The tragedy of the fall and massacre of the Alamo defenders is lightened by a love affair between Silent Smith and an old soldier's daughter (Juanita Hanson). At the Happy Hour on Saturday.

Magnitude of Arcturus.

The star Arcturus, which is known to be a sun for a faraway system of planets, is 11,500,000 times farther removed from us than is our solar luminary. His diameter is 71,000,000 and his circumference about 224,000,000 miles. Our sun is but 800,000 miles in diameter, a fact which proves that Arcturus is at least 551,000 times greater in bulk than is our sun

Housewives Warned Against Use of Soap and Gasoline Hazard

City Clerk Allen is in receipt of a communication from the In- housewives to a newspaper advertisement appearing throughout the State that recommends the use of soap dissolved in two gallons of gasoline for household dry cleaning purposes.

R. G. Potter, secretary of the association, makes the following comment:

"The general public does not seem to appreciate the danger to life and property, which is present in the handling of inflammable volatiles and we are issuing this circular to call your attention to the necessity of discouraging this hazardous practice.

"Gasoline at ordinary temperatures gives off an inflammable vapor, which will ignite on contact with an open flame or spark and which forms a highly explosive mixture when combined with the proper proportion of air. This vapor is heavier than air and thus will not readily escape through an open window as would a lighter gas, but will settle upon the floor and find its way to the lowerportions of the house where it is likely to be ignited by an open flame.

"The operation of laundering in an ordinary open vessel and the subsequent drying procss, increases the ordinary evaporation of gasoline to a marked degree and this vapor will travel a sonsiderable distance even in the open air, readily ignite and flash back to the source.

"Serious injuries, loss of life, and destructive fires from this cause are of almost daily occurrence throughout our territory, and we cannot urge too strongly the restriction and regulation of the use of such inflammable volatiles for household purposes.

"We would also advise you that the use of gasoline in this manner and quantity in a dwelling, is a violation of the requirements of the standard fire insurance policy of the State of New York, and will afford just grounds for the companies carrying the liability to avoid payment of a fire loss from this cause.

"We ask your cooperation in educating the general public to an appreciation of the danger to life and property existing in the use of gasoline in this manner and in urging the adoption of municipal ordinances properly regulating this hazard."

MARTIAL LAW ALONG BORDER IN FORCE

El Paso, Tex.—Martial law goes into effect along the border between the United States and Mexico today. American troops, entrained under secret orders, are moving along the frontier as fast as the railroads can supply facilities. They are ready for the word that wil lsend them on the red trail of Francisco Villa, and his outlaw hordes.

Early today in fact, a report reached El Paso that the Seventh cavalry, stationed at Douglas, Ariz., had crossed the line into the Sonora district. The American military authorities refuse dto confirm this.

CLOSE CALL FOR THE POTTERS

They Had One Strong Arm Who Held Down the Good Work of All-Fulton Bowlers

In Saturday night's game the All-Fulton quintet won from the Potters of Syracuse in an interesting bowling match The local team took first made a clean sweep but for the slump which Painter took when he knocked down but 125 pins, of about 70 below his average in the second stanza. But for the splendid showing of Casey of the visitors, the Fulton team might have won the second match notwithstanding the failure of Painter to hold up. Casey, in this set, rolled the highest score of the evening, 235. He also took honors for high total.

Painter took honors for high game on the Fulton team, rolling 202 pins in the first set Stauring made highest total, knocking down 536 in the three games.

The two teams will meet again next Sunday at Syracuse. The All-Fulton team is also scheduled to meet the All-Oswego outfit here tomorrow nigh.

HOME LIGHTING

The Home Light should be one that gives a soft, white steady glow, so placed as to not only light the room, but directed on to the table, desk, dressing table or cooking appliance so as to have li ht just where you need it. The RADIO-X is the only light that can be so placed. It gives 85 candlepower and one lamp will generally replace two of old style uprights or inverted lamps. It gives the very best light for reading or sewing and never wearies the eye or blurs the vision.

CHEAPER MILK BOTTLES SOON

The Rome Sentinel has the following anent an issue that has become a pressing oen in this city.

In the discussion that is in gropress between the Rome board of health and them ilk dealers relative to the bottling of milk for delivery much has been said of the danger of contamination where bottles pass from family to family and of the breakage and other losses to which the dairymen are subjected. Little if any mention has been made, however, of the possible use of single service bottles—that is, bottles that can not be used a second time and which are less expensive than the heavy glass bottles more or less employed in this city.

The New York Sun of Sunday contains a description of a new bottle of this sort which is said to have met the approval of one of the large metropolitan dairies after 30,000 have been put out. This bottle is "made of chemically pure white sulphite paper of theb est quality and is paraffined after it is shaped. It is conical with the top pressed together and closed with a positive metal seal which makes it impossible to tamper with the container or open it without destroying the package for further use."

Of course this is not the only bottle on the market or in use for this purpose, but an advantage claimed for the one in question is that it is translucent, permitting the housewife to see the cream line without difficulty.

There can be no question as to the dangers to which consumers are subjected through the use of milk exposed to dust from the street and of the wisdom of employing bottle closed at the dairy. But evidently there is a wide field for investigation and discussion as to the best method of bottling the milk.

WINTER TASTIES.

FRUIT PANCAKES. — Materials: One cupful of cooked fruit—peaches, apricots, apples; one egg, flavoring to suit fruit, one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one cupful of fruit juice or water, sugar to taste, butter or marmalade, lemon rind.

Directions: Pass the fruit through a sieve, add the egg, flavoring, flour, baking powder and fruit juice or water, also sugar to taste. Cook as pancakes. Spread with butter or with marmalade. Roll up, sift sugar and lemon rind over and serve hot.

Walnut Custard Pie.—Materials: Two eggs, a scant half cupful of sugar, salt, two cupfuls of hot milk, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one-half cupful finely ground English walnuts or pecans and almonds.

Directions: Beat the eggs, add the sugar and salt, pour on the hot milk, strain and add the vanilla and nuts. The nuts will rise to the top and form a tender crust to the custard. Bake in one crust.

Baked Clams, Hunter Style.—Materials: One dozen medium sized clams, finely chopped shallots, mushrooms and bacon, a little paprika, melted butter, parsley.

Directions: Open the clams, leave them on the half shell; besprinkle with finely chopped shallots, mushrooms and bacon; season with paprika pepper and cover the surface with breadcrumbs. Besprinkle with melted butter, place on a baking pan in a hot oven and cook about ten minutes and color nicely. When done arrange them on a folded napkin and garnish with parsley.

Baked Eggs With Cheese.—Materials: Four eggs, a tablespoonful cheese, cream sauce, hot water, seasoning.

Directions: Make a cream sauce, season and pour half into a baking dish. Break in the eggs, stir the cheese into remaining sauce. Pour over the top and bake, standing the dish in another containing hot water. Bake twelve minutes. Individual dishes are nice.

FETCHING SIMPLICITY.

One of the Spring Models That Promises to Be Very Popular.

SO CHIC.

This elongated peach basket comes in all the favorite spring straws and novelty weaves. This one is deep tan, with a satin rose set slightly one side of the center front. What gives style to this hat is the enveloping veil of coarse mesh bound with brown ribbon and "belted" at the neck with a slightly wider ribbon held by a rose matching the one on the hat.

Rice Griddlecakes.

One cupful of boiled rice, a cupful of scalding milk, one and a half cupfuls of sifted flour, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of melted butter, two eggs, a little cold milk. Pour the scalding milk over the boiled rice, cover closely and let stand overnight. In the morning add the other ingredients in the order given, using enough cold milk to make a batter that will pour easily. Bake on a hot, lightly greased griddle and serve at once.

Crumb Cake.

Mix three cupfuls of flour, two cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of lard and half a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg together thoroughly, then take out half a cupful of these dry crumbs. Now add two cupfuls of sour milk with half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in it and put cake in pan. When cake is in pan sprinkle over the top the half cupful of dry crumbs which you took out in the beginning. Put in oven and bake slowly.

Crab Meat, Terrapin Style.

A cupful of crab meat, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a small onion thinly sliced, two tablespoonfuls of sherry wine, a third cupful of heavy cream, the yolks of two eggs. Cook butter and onion until yellow, remove onion, add crab meat and wine. Cook three minutes, add cream, yolks of eggs, salt and cayenne

Mignonette.

Water in which mignonette has been placed should be changed often since it quickly becomes foul.

and faced with satin ribbon of a slightly deeper tone than the material. Any preferred material may be used; line is the thing.

GUESTROOM COMFORT.

Simple Things to Do to Make Guests Feel at Home.

A few dollars spent now and again in making our guestrooms comfortable are not spent amiss. Everybody knows how uncomfortable one can be in a badly furnished bedroom, and everybody knows how difficult it would be to complain to one's hostess that there were not bedclothes enough, that there was no soap, that the springs creaked, that the windows rattled or that anything else about the room one slept in as a guest was uncomfortable. It is up to the hostess herself to know that her guestrooms are comfortable.

At the country house of a fashionable hostess the guests were asked after a week end party to write criticisms of their rooms. The reading of the criticisms brought much entertainment to everybody concerned and suggested a custom that might bring advantages to guests, if not to hostesses. But so long as this custom is not in force, look to the comfort of the rooms you ask your guests to sleep in. The best way to do this is to sleep in each room, and then you will know whether or not it is really comfortable and if it is not what to do to make it so.

See to it that your beds are well supplied with covers. In each room have an extra supply of blankets in a box at the foot of the bed or on a closet shelf.

A cushion or two on the foot of the bed covered with washable covers that can be slipped under a hollow in a tired back or under an aching head should be in every guestroom.

Some sort of bedside light is a great convenience, so that the tired guest may go early to bed and read there or the wakeful one may have light in the night.

A box containing a few crackers is never amiss by the bedside. Many times wakefulness can be conquered with a slowly munched biscuit.

A hot water bag filled on a cold night when the guest retires also gives great comfort. There should always be cool drinking water at hand too. Writing materials should be offered either in the bedroom or in the library or living room. A screen to shield the bed from drafts is another thoughtful addition to the guestroom equipment.

Almond Chips.

Half a pound of sugar, half a pound of flour, quarter of a pound of butter. Work the ingredients together, as though making pie crust, and when well mixed add the yolk of one egg well beaten. Spread like batter in pans, making the layer as thin as possible and using a knife for the purpose. Paint the top with an egg yolk mixed with enough water and sugar to make a sirup. Strew the tops of the cakes with the following mixture: Half a pound of finely chopped candied peel, one-fourth pound of almonds blanched and chopped, one-fourth pound of cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven. Cut in squares while hot.

Baked Codfish Puffs.

One package shredded codfish, one quart mashed potatoes, one cup cream sauce, one-eighth teaspoonful paprika, one teaspoonful grated onion, one teaspoonful butter. Put the shredded codfish into bowl, cover with boiling water and let stand until cool, then press until dry and add to the hot mashed potatoes; mix well and add the cream sauce, onion, paprika; beat all well together. Brush bake dish with melted butter and put in the mixture rough the top with fork; place in oven and bake twenty-five minutes, or until brown.

On St. Patrick's Night

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Nora O'Rourke," said the postman on the morning of St. Patrick's day, handing a maid who answered his whistle two letters. "Any such person here?"

"That's myself," said the girl, taking the mail. The postman went on, and she returned to the kitchen. One of the missives bore a black border and a foreign stamp. She tore off the envelope and read the contents, from her sister in Ireland:

> Dear Nora—I have to tell you some bad news. Our uncle Patrick, who has been in the grocery business in Dublin, is dead. But there's some good news too. He made a lot of money, and, not having any wife or children, he has left it all to you and me. We will have about £2,000 apiece.
> Your loving sister, BRIDGET.

The bad part of the news had little effect on Nora, for she had never seen her uncle, and the legacy of $10,000 was a matter of great delight. She was so interested in the latter that she forgot for some time to open her other letter; then she turned her attention to the other letter. It was from Patrick Doolan, asking her to go with him to the ball to be given on the night of St. Patrick's day, and he hoped that she would give him an answer to a question that he would ask her.

She knew very well what that question would be, but was in doubt as to her answer. She held in her hand the letter advising her of her legacy and her lover's note, turning from one to the other back and forth. Pat Doolan was a money maker, owning a number of teams, with which he did hauling. Nora's poverty had constrained her to consider his proposition of marriage, remembering that he would be able to keep the wolf from his and her door. But inclinations rather led her to favor young Michael O'Connor, who was bright and active, but had not the faculty of holding on to what he made. She knew that both Pat and Mike would be at the ball on St. Patrick's evening, and she laid a plan to assist her in the matter between them. During the afternoon she went to see her friend, Kathleen Clancy, and said to her:

"Kath, I'm going to say something tonight to Pat Doolan that may make him get sweet on you."

"What are you going to tell him?"

"That your uncle in Ireland is dead and has left you $10,000."

"But I haven't any uncle in Ireland."

"Never mind that. Likely Pat won't mention the matter to you. If he does don't tell him the truth till tomorrow, and I'll give you something pretty."

Nora went to the ball with Pat and on the way told him that she knew a girl who that morning had received a legacy of £2,000 by the death of an uncle in Ireland. Pat asked who was the girl, and Nora gave him to understand that she was Kathleen Clancy.

During the evening Pat did not refer to the answer to his proposition. Kathleen, not being a very pretty girl, was something of a wall flower.

"I'm sorry for the poor girl," said Pat, "sittin' around with no one to ask her to dance. I'm minded to go and ask her myself."

"That's right," said Nora. "She'll appreciate the attention."

Pat asked Kathleen to dance and, having danced with her once, he concluded to ask her again. Meanwhile Mike O'Connor danced with Miss O'Rourke. He asked her to dance with him again, but she declined. To do so would not have accorded with her plan.

When Pat and Nora were going home from the ball, instead of pressing her for an answer to his proposal, he said to her:

"Nora, I don't like your dancing with that miserable fellow, O'Connor."

"I only danced with him once."

"That's enough. You shouldn't have danced with him at all."

"I'm sorry," said Nora, with apparent penitence.

When Pat left her at the door she said to him:

"I suppose you don't want the answer you said you were lookin' for?"

"Not tonight. I'm thinkin' about your dancing with that spalpeen O'Connor. Maybe I'll get over it in time."

"That won't do you any good, for I won't get over what you've done this night. It's not Kathleen, whose uncle in Ireland has died and left her $10,000, but my own uncle has left that money to me. I told you it was Kathleen to see if you could be switched off by a bait of a legacy, and I've found that you don't value me so much as the fortune. Good night and goodby."

"Nora"—he began in a supplicating tone, but he got no further, for she shut the door in his face.

When Nora and Kathleen met again Nora learned that Pat had not mentioned the legacy, but he had asked Kathleen to go to a ball with him to come off a week later. Then Nora told her friend that inasmuch as she had helped her to find out that the man she had thought of marrying could be so easily turned away from her she would keep her promise to give her something pretty. When she received her fortune she presented her friend with a set of furs.

Nora married Mike O'Connor, and under her tutelage in careful expenditure of moneys he became prosperous. Kathleen was dropped by Doolan, who was beside himself with chagrin when he learned how he had been tricked. He never forgave Nora O'Rourke for having fooled him, but what she had done made her really more desirable.

The Phrase "Mere Man."

In his book, "The Pulse of the World: Fleet Street Memories," Malcolm Stark gives what he believes is the origin of the expression "mere man." A Scottish doctor, he says, wrote as follows:

The earliest use of the phrase known to me is in the shorter catechism, where it is said. "No mere man since the fall is able in this life perfectly to keep the commandments." The phrase caught on in Scotland and was probably brought to England shortly after the union The only difficulty in the way of this theory is that it allows merely two centuries for the English mind to see the joke.

This last sentence is indeed carrying the war into the enemy's camp.

Jumper Frock In Blue Faille.

6647

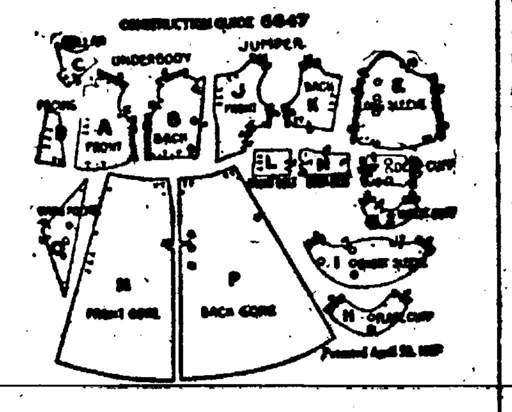
For informal wear this frock is charming, being adaptable to development in faille, taffeta or serge. A bit of braid on the belt is its only trimming.

The aeme of daintiness is expressed in this youthful costume of dark blue faille with an underbody of soft cream colored batiste. In medium size the frock calls for 5 yards of 36-inch faille, with 1 yard 27-inch material for underbody front and back.

The preliminary step in making the underbody is to pleat the front and back. Next, gather lower edge of facing and adjust on front. Stitch lower edges together between the two front pleats. Close seams as notched and hem the back. Face the collar and sew to neck edge as notched. Adjust pleating about 6 inches wide on collar; tack ribbon over pleating. Sew to neck edge as notched. Stitch 2-inch belting underneath underbody, lower edges even, laying the fulness in pleats to fit.

Now, gather the sleeve between double "TT" perforations; sew deep cuff to gathered edge as notched, close seam as notched. Close seam of wrist cuff as notched, sew to deep cuff as notched. For elbow sleeve, see cutting directions. Close seam of flare cuff as notched, sew to sleeve, seams even. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Next, fold wing pocket and arrange on front gore of the skirt, bringing corresponding notches and small "o" perforations together. Join gores as notched; close back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for a placket. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations.



Adjust skirt, stitching upper edge 2 inches above lower edge of waist, center-fronts and center-backs even, side seam about ½ inch forward of under-arm seam.

Pleat lower part of front of jumper, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Close right under-arm and shoulder seams as notched; finish the left edges for a closing. Gather upper edge of front, and lower edge of back between double "TT" perforations. Adjust front belt underneath front, notches even. Turn under edge of back belt on slot perforations, lap on right front, notches and edges even and stitch; finish the left side edges for a closing. Sew belt to lower edge of back, and to right front, notches and center-backs even, small "o" perforation in belt at under-arm seam. Adjust jumper as illustrated, drawing in gathers at upper edge of front to fit, and if desired, stitch tape under gathers.

Simplicity is the keynote of the dress, and the bit of braiding introduced on the belt does not violate any of the edicts of fashions, but gives instead indescribable cachet to the design.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6647. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

The Brown Thrasher.

The brown thrasher is one of our most useful birds He measures eleven and one-half inches in length. Perched upon the very top of a tree, which usually is not a very tall one, with head up and tail down, he pours out a flood of music—high notes and low notes, smooth notes and rough notes all jumbled together as if the singer were really beside himself.

Following are a few marks by which he can be distinguished from all the other thrushlike birds: The two white wing bars, the extraordinarily long tail, which is a bright reddish brown, and the long continued, bright and cheerful carol which is heard in the morning (his favorite time for singing), consisting of all sorts of musical sounds. While the farmer is planting the seed he cries, "Drop it, drop it—cover it up, cover it up—pull it up, pull it up, pull it up." His call is a clear whistled "wheuu."

Game of Cities.

In this game the players sit in a circle around a table, and each one is provided with a piece of paper and a pencil. The leader asks them to write at the head of the paper the name of a city, each being different. They are allowed five minutes to make up a sentence, each word of which must begin with the letters composing the name of the city. For example:

City—Chicago.

Sentence—Came home in carriage after going out.

If any one fails to have a correct sentence at the end of five minutes he must pay a forfeit.

Jumping Letters.

1. Jump a piece of marsh land and find part of Great Britain.
2. Jump able to endure hardship and find yourself held in moral obligation.
3. Jump to clean with a brush and find yourself in tears.
4. Jump articles of household furniture and find the most competent of men.
5. Jump a marsh plant and find borders.

Answers.—1, Swale—Wales; 2, tough—ought; 3, sweep—weeps; 4, tables—ablest; 5, sedge—edges.

Ideas About the Sun.

In ancient times the philosophers held very erroneous notions concerning the size of the sun. Anaximander thought that it might be nearly as large as the then known earth, including southern Europe, northern Africa and western Asia. Anaxagoras declared it could be no larger than Greece and her islands. Heraclitus convinced his hearers that it was about the size of a man's head

For the Children

Some Little Folks Who Go to School Out of Doors.

Every morning at 9 o'clock, winter or summer, a band of little children make their appearance in Morningside park, New York city. They are all suitably clothed and in age range from two to eight years. Weather does not bother these little scholars, for only a driving rain or a hard snow storm keeps them indoors. When an ordinary rainstorm makes its appearance they are not bothered, for the children are provided with raincoats. School sessions are opened with song; the selection usually being "So Very, Very Early in the Morning." The picture shows a couple of these healthy, happy little youngsters raising their voices in melody. The idea of the outdoor school is primarily the benefits of fresh air. These little folks are taught, besides the three "R's," modeling, mat weaving and all about plants and trees. All of them are pictures of health and think it is great fun to go to school in the park. When the weather is so very bad that even they cannot remain in the open they go to the home of their teacher, Mrs Calvert, who has provided sand piles, toys and games for their amusement and instruction. More than half a hundred of these little tots are under Mrs. Calvert's care. She and her assistants call each day for their pupils and marshal them to the park, which is near Columbia university.

GERMAN LINE DRIVEN BACK

French Artillery Delivers Smashing Blows on Enemy's Columns to the West of Village.

Paris · Gernian troops, after a heavy artillery bombardment, on Saturday afternoon attacked the French positions on the eastern front of the Verdun sector and successded in capturing a small trench to the north of Eix, according to the official statement given out today by the French War Department. Intense artillery engagements, the statement added, were in progress at other points along the western front. During the afternoon the artillery fire continued with great violence, but no infantry attacks occurred.

The bombardment continued violent east of Fort Douaumont and in the region of Fort Vaux, where the enemy since the day before yesterday has made no new attempt to reach the plateu which rises about the fort. A brilliant counter attack by French Chasseurs was responsible for the check which upset the carefully laid plans of the Germans for the capture of Verdun, according to an account of the battle the Journal says it has obtained from seven Prussian officers who were taken priconer while on special patrol duty

All these officers were brought back to France from the Serbian front Two of them, one belonging to the artillery, were wounded They declared the number of guns used in the Galician campaign wasn ot to be compared with theg reat batteries assembled for the assault upon Verdun. The tremendous French mitrailleuse fire surpassed anything he ever had known, the German is quoted as saying He asserted the French artillery at Douaumont was equal in trength at that point to the German, but that it was the gallant charge of the French chasseurs which finally drove them back. The patrols describe their progress to the front in its last stage as having been made over heaps oof dead comrades.

The Germans explained that their higher command had taken measures in advance to provide that all their artillery, comprising hundreds oof heavy guns, should advance in a compact mass, as though it were a sinble battery. The orders were to "fire without stopping until exhausted."

Shells were used in enormous quantities. When the French guns found their range, the Germans said, the batteries which had been concentrated had to be dispersed or they would have been put out of action.

General Joffre, the French commander in chief, presided over the concil of war of the Entente Allies which reassembled today at the French army headquarters

While the council is i n session Great Britain will be represented on General Sir Douglas Haig, commander in chief of the British forces in France; Russian by General Gilinsky, aide de camp to the Russian Emperor; Belgium by the Chief of the General Stafff, and Servia by Colonel Pachitch

RUSSIANS REACH POINT NEAR BAGDAD; OCCUPY STRATEGIC POSITIONS

London—Russia is rapidly advancing in Asia Minor toward Trebizond on the Black sea and toward Diarbekr on the northern boundary of Mespotamia. Meanwhile a column further south is moving through Persia directly on Bagdad and has arrived at Kirmid, beyond Kermanshah, near the Turkish frontier, according to an official communication issued in Petrogard and received here last night.

Since the capture oof Erzerum on February 16 the Russians have been pushing steadily forward in three main divisions. The first, along the Black Sea coast, supported by war ships, is moving toward Trebizond, capturing Isphir on February 24 and Riga on March 7, and have now passed the Kalapotamos, a river only about twenty miles from Trebizond. The second column, from the Lake Van region, captured Mush on February 18 and Bitlis on March 2. The third, fighting in Persia, captured Kermanshah on February 25 and are now at Kirmid, 130 miles from Bagdad.

Aided by theg uns of the Black Sea fleet, the Russian troops have succeeded in driving back the Turkirh Third army which is defending Trebizond, and it is expected that that city, the most important on the Turkish shore of the Black Sea, will have a similar fate to Erzerum and Bitlis and fall into Russian hands. Without the help of the fleet the Russian army of invasion would have a difficult time. As it is, theg uns of the ships are [illegible] to batter the Turkish flanks and cut the lines of supply.

An agreement has been [illegible] between Roumania and Russia which is believed to indicate the definite, decision of Roumania to adhere to the cause of the Entente Allies, according to a Bucharest despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The agreement permits Roumania to purchase war materials in Russia and to transport through Russia war materials purchased elsewhere.

It is reported that Russia has agreed further to give to Roumania part of Bessarabia.

Increase In City Noises.

The motor horn and the taxi whistle have banished the rather surprising reputation for quiet which London held among many foreign visitors a decade or two ago. In 1896, again, the London of the early nineteenth century was described in John Ashton's "When William IV. was King" as "a very noisy city"—evidently in contrast with the comparative silence of his own time But the noises he conjured up from the past—the watchman's call, the shrieks of the milkwoman, the chimney sweep, the newsboy and the vendors of fish and cat's meat, the bells of the muffin man and the footman—were as nothing to the piercing mechanical noises of today.—London Opinion.

The Planet Mars.

Earth's astronomers know nothing of Mars beyond the fact that if the planet is of a formation more recent than the formation of the terrestrial globe its evolutions must have been more rapid, because it is so small. Mars is an older world than the earth—a world that represents the intermediate state between that of the earth and that of the moon. The phenomena on Mars now under the observation of earth's astronomers are the last manifestations of a dying life. Slowly, very slowly, time is doing its work. Mars is dying of cold, the anesthetic that benumbs the worlds and steeps them in the sleep in which they die.—Exchange.

CARRANZA WILL BLOCK CROSSING OF TROOPS; FUNSTON IS PATIENT

Mexico City, Sunday.—General Carranza tonight issued a manifesto to the nation declaring that in no circumstances would the Mexican government grant the right to the United States to violate Mexican territory by sending in an armed force.

Major General Frederick Funston, fearing an uprising of Carranziatas, halted yesterday the actual advance on Mexican soil in pursuit of Villa until reinforcements arrive.

The Twenty-third infantry is hurried to El Paso, Texas, when rumors reach Washington that Mexican uprising on the border is threatened.

Villa bandits attacked a train out of Chihuahua and killed several passengers.

Villa has ripped up section of the Mexico Northwestern Railway line, trapping the five hundred American Mormon colonists in the Casas Grandes Valley.

Americans in Mexica City are believed to be in grave peril. News of the Villa attack on Columbus, N. M., has just been made public in the capital. The official organ, El Pueblo, publishes the text of the Mexican government's request that Washington permit the passage of Mexican soldiers into American territory.

KENTUCKY COLONELS.

In the Nature of Things They Simply Can't Help Being Numerous.

In the south especially and in Kentucky more especially a man becomes a colonel at about forty-seven unless he is of a willful, rebellious, obstreperous disposition and inclined to stand up for an admitted but rarely exercised right not to become known as "colonel." A man who is not sudden and quick in quarrels and who can be put upon cannot escape becoming "colonel." Many men whose courage is unquestioned prefer not to engage in street fights in opposition to an established custom. It is the rule rather than the exception to submit good naturedly or with concealed impatience when the first three gray hairs appear at the temples and the use of the title begins by popular consent.

There are, of course, many colonels under forty. When a governor is inaugurated he has the power to appoint staff colonels. A governor who does not appoint as colonels such of his constituents as he knows by name is lacking in the punctiliousness which distinguishes the practical politician. Thus many young men who would have been "leftenants" if they had adopted a military career are made colonels in civil life. Another predisposing cause of premature coloneley is the tendency of some men to become fat early in life. A man who measures as much as forty inches at the waist line and has not been convicted of felony is entitled, even obliged, to be called "colonel" before he is forty.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HER BORROWED ROBE.

It Brought an Actress the Most Perilous Moment of Her Life.

"The only time I ever was a thief saved my life," said Rose Coghlan once. "My sister-in-law, Louisa Thornton, was playing in 'Colleen Bawn' in Scotland. I was Anne Chute, one of the bridesmaids, and I always dressed in Louisa's room with her.

"This particular night she was ill, and her understudy went on. Now, it happened that I had longed and longed to wear a certain costume of Louisa's. It wasn't one bit suitable for a girl of my age in a bridesmaid part, being made of heavy white corded silk with a long court train and all the fixings, but I adored it.

"I dressed up in it and went out to wait for the cue with the other girls. Just as we were ready to go on some one behind me said, 'Rose, your dress is on fire!'

"I think that is the most fearful word that can sound in a theater—'Fire!' My train had caught fire from one of the little gas footlights, unprotected then.

"The girls in their light dresses were trying to get away from me, and the nearest man, Hardress, was handcuffed. I crushed my train in my hands to smother the creeping flame and backed off down the steps under the stage. A man down there threw a heavy cloak over me, and I fainted. I was burned badly around my hands and arms and neck, but the heavy silk dress saved me."—New York World.

WAR NOT A BAR TO COLLEGE ACTIVITY

American College In Constantinople Continues Course.

GIRLS BRAVELY FACE TASKS

Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, President of College, Declares American Embassy Was Refuge For Help and For Social Enjoyment—Part of Property Was Seized For Soldiers.

New York.—How an American college in a belligerent country has followed its normal course in wartime is told in the annual report of Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, president of Constantinople college, who has under her instruction girls representing ten nationalities.

These girls have quietly performed their college work in the face of frequent rumors of famine and the absence of fuel. At one time part of the college property was seized for the housing of soldiers. During the winter many of the trees on the spacious college grounds were cut down for fuel to heat the classrooms, and before the Dardanelles campaign was abandoned food prices constantly increased.

Ambassador Morgenthau has been in close touch with the college since the outbreak of the war, according to the report, and has frequently given talks to the students.

"The American embassy was our refuge during the whole year for help of all kinds and for social enjoyment," Dr. Patrick says in her report.

"Ambassador and Mrs. Morgenthau have shown themselves untiringly devoted to the welfare of the college and of the entire American colony. Dr.

DR. MARY MILLS PATRICK.

Morgenthau has spoken frequently at the college and has taken many opportunities to invite the students to the embassy. In February Mrs. Morgenthau rented one of the public halls for moving pictures, and a private program was given for the benefit of the students, all of whom were afterward entertained at the embassy."

At the close of the college year in June, 1915, there were 236 students enrolled in the college. The peoples represented were Albanian, American, Armenian, Bulgarian, English, French, Greek, Hebrew, Swiss and Turkish.

These students followed their customary plan of the year's work, giving plays and entering into every form of student activity, in spite of the difficulties and anxieties incident to war conditions.

"Constantinople without its European colonies and its stream of tourists is like an isolated city cut off from the rest of the world," the report continues. "Colleges in Constantinople have usually enjoyed the great advantage of lectures and addresses from distinguished visitors and social occasions graced by friends of the British and other foreign colonies. A few lectures were given during the year, supplied wholly by local talent, and a short series of concerts greatly relieved the monotony."

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Ambassador Morgenthau by the college at the commencement exercises in June, 1915. At the same time Dr. Patrick received the order of the Shea Kap, a decoration by the sultan for meritorious work at the college.

LOVED THIRTY YEARS.

Second Suit, When Woman Was a Widow, Proved Successful.

Alden, Ia.—A romance of thirty years ago was concluded here lately when Robert H. Lucas of Chicago married Mrs. Ada B. Dewey of Milford, Ia., his boyhood sweetheart.

The romance began when both were youngsters at Verona, Ill., but Mr. Lucas was not successful then. Some years ago Mrs. Dewey's husband died, and Mr. Lucas heard she was a widow. He renewed his courtship and won the second time.

They were married by the Rev. W. G. Muhleman, a Methodist minister, who is the husband of one of Mrs. Dewey's daughters. The Rev. Mr. Muhleman has also performed the weddings of two other of Mrs. Dewey's daughters and her two sons.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

It looks as if the editor of the Evening Times and the writer of the articles for the Chamber of Commerce, shall have to get into a scrap, on account of the editorial that appeared in last evening's issue. We have sharpened our swords, my dear Sir, so you may go to it.

Everybody in the city of FULTON should appreciate what has been done in Cayuga street yesterday, namely by the street department, in commencing to take the snow away. That's about the best thing that happened yet and will help materially to take that famous record away from Old Cayuga; that there is snow on that street, when all the snow in the state of New York has gone.

* * *

We are living in an age of enlightenment and not of darkness. The fellow who continuously works in the dark and behind the other fellow's back, ought to have lived in the age of the Huns and Gothans.

* * *

It is refreshing to note what OTHER cities are doing in the way of getting cooperation between the citizens. We often wonder, when we will accomplish this in FULTON to the fullest extent of the word.

* * *

What can be done in other cities, can be done in FULTON and our fighting blood is up. We are going to conquer.

* * *

It looks as if every once in a while something comes out of the skies to roar and thunder all over the city of FULTON.

Let us have peace. It is so ridiculous to see men, who are supposed to have brains, get mad about a mere nothing. It goes only to show that we sometimes make a mistake and take a muttonhead for a brainy man.

* * *

If all the petty arguments between the different men in the city of FULTON could be eliminated, FULTON WOULD BE THE MOST IDEAL SPOT ON EARTH IN WHICH TO LIVE.

If two men do not like each other that does not mean that they can not work for the common good of the city in which they live. If they try to pass each other up, then they show lack of "ginger;" if they meet on common ground for the good of all they are GENTLEMEN.

* * *

Even if we do not like each other very well, we always have a chance to speak a good word about the other fellow; that shows the bigness in the man.

If certain men do not get it always THEIR way, they get mad. How narrow minded and small they are; it sure will be their downfall some day and then those famous words come true again; "IT IS TOO LATE," and these words are the worst ones in life.

There is a marked difference between the fellow who is willing to give the other fellow some praise when he is entitled to it and the fellow who insists upon trying to take the laurels himself, even if he has not done anything at all, but just having his hands in his pockets and looking on.

* * *

It has happened in this world before that a general in an army was man enough to shake the hand of the other general who won the battle and admit that he was beaten. That's the spirit of the big man.

* * *

If you have made a mistake, don't think that you are an outcast right away; just merely lift that head a little higher and show the masses that you are still there and that you may be able to do more good yet than all the so-called good ones combined.

* * *

We believe in fair play and hope that all people in FULTON will be willing in the future to "put the other fellow wise" when they have heard something about him, instead of sticking the heads together to gossip about those things.

* * *

It is remarkable that certain men in FULTON are continually being criticised for what they have done and still when it comes to a show-down they win in public battles all the time. Oh, consistency, Oh, consistency.

* * *

We believe in doing a thing right, no matter what it is. If we can't do that, let's not do anything at all.

* **

Men who are passing the other fellow up, because they "have something on him" are lower than any animal in creation. They show that famous and much talked of yellow streak on every turn of the road.

London Looks to Fate of Verdun to Decide Result of Tragedy

London—The glorious fighting of the French at Verdun and the victories of the Russians in the east have inspired an undeniable feeling throughout Great Britain that events now are foreshadowing a triumphant end of the war for the Allies within a period which only a few weeks ago would have seemed impossible. At Lloyd's there is some betting at odds of one or two that the war will be over in July or August, but the conscusus of the responsible membership is that the end of the year will see the end of the war.

In the big houses of the West End optimism is wisely tempered with caution the prevailing note. Arrangements for the summer and autumn are being made on what is termed a "modified peace scale." The head of a great house in Regent street, asked if he expected peace in the autumn replied:—"No, but I think that the end will be in sight then. Even France, with the terrible conflict raging on her soil, is extraordinarily confident the end will come much sooner than the most sanguine dared to hope three monthsago. Our Paris clients are eagerly preparing for autumn—so much so that London houses are unable to accept all the orders offered to them."

The German losses In the fighting around Fort Vaux on last Friday and Saturday are said to surpass all previous records in this war, according to officers who have returned from Verdun. Time and time again, and with extraordinary courage, the Germans, in columns four deep, dashed from their trenches, only to melt away under the fire of the French 75, 150 and 210 millimetre guns, which rained shells with deadly accuracy into the marching companies. When the smoke and dust cleared nothing was to be seen but heaps of bodies.

GERMANS REINFORCE LINE WITH 100,000 MORE MEN

Paris—One hundred thousand additional troops have arrived behind the German front. It is believed they have been brought up for a terrific assault scheduled to follow the unprecedented artillery bombardment of the Verdun words now under way.

The re-enforcements include the Imperial Guard, the corp d'elite of the German army, as well as boys of twenty of the classes of 1916.

Under the eye of the Kaiser, who has rejoined the Crown Prince the greatest effort against the fortress is expected within the next forty-eight hours.

Thousands of guns tonight are engaged on the fifty-mile curving front around Verdun in a duel so terrific that the deep reverberations are heard almost in the environs of Paris itself.

Every available German howitzer is being brought to bear against the great fortress against which for twenty-two days the Germans have been launching the full strength of their armies. The French, supplied with mountains of shells, are replying gun for gun.

BUY VEHICLES FOR THE ARMY TODAY

New York—Bids on fifty-four automobile trucks and fifteen motorcycles, to be used by the troops in the pursuit of Villa, will be received at eleven o'clock this forenoon by Colonel A. L. Smith, depot quartermaster, at the Army Building, White hall street.

"No other supplies will be sent," said Colonel Smith. "The troops on the border can obtain almost everything they need in the localities where they are stationed. The men stationed at Columbus, N. M., have been supplied with everything except these motorcycles and automobile trucks for months."

"Was this done in anticipation of an outbreak?"Colonel Smith was asked.

"The supplies are in anticipation of anything that might turn up," he replied. "The automobile trucks will probably be used to transport to the troops whatever they need at the front. Soldiers can march about twenty miles a day. An automobile con cover this distance in a little more than an hour. Thus the soldiers can always be kept in close touch with their base without the necessity of carrying their stores."

It is expected thot the automobiles and motorcycles wil be ready for shipment within less than two weeks The outfit will cost the government about $125,000 and will be sent in two trains of twenty-seven trucks each. The motorcycles will be the kind that accommodates two riders.

HINT DIAZ WILL OPPOSE AMERICANS

New York—Adherents of General Felix Diaz refused yesterday to discuss his probable attitude toward the United States after American troops have entered Mexico in pursuit of Villa. It was indicated, however, that General Diaz will be strongly in favor of Mexicans standing shoulder to shoulder against the invaders.

General Funston Will Drain the Country of Troops for Mexico

San Antonio, Texas—A sufficient force is now gathered at the Mexican border under the command of Brigadier-General John J. Pershing, to begin the pursuit of Francisco Villa. This was announced tonight by Major-General Frederick Funston.

General Funston said that only the completion of plans for backing up the expeditionary force now was needed. He was noncommital, however, as to the time necessary to accomplish this.

General Funston declared reports that American troops had been ordered to cross the border in pursuit of Villa were untrue. Reiterating previous statements, he said it would be useless to send anything but a strong, well prepared force into Mexico.

That the force will be as trong one was indicated by a statement of the General that when the expedition was organized there would be only six or eight regiments other than those on the border let in the United States.

This did not take into account troops in the Canal Zone and the Philippines. Outside of mentioning two or three scattered movements the General refused to give any definite idea of the size of the expedition.

He said the Twenty-third infantry, stationed at Galveston, was expected to leave for the West tonight.

Part of the First Cavalry, he said, had left San Francisco for the East, and owuld pick up ther est of the detail at San Diego.

The second squadron of the Twelfth Cavalry at Fort Robinson, Neb., he declared, had been ordered to start, but was being delayed by lack of rolling stock.

To General Pershing will be left the final disposition of the expeditionary force. Orders will be issued for thef orward movement by General Funston at Fort Sam Houston, but the hour when they will be decided by the General in the field.

Villa Reported In Trap Set By Carranza Men

El Paso—General Gabrail Gavira, military commandant in Juarez and commander of the Carranza forces on the border, declared today that Francisco Villa had been trapped in the bandit's mountain retreat in the Guerrero district. He asserted that the Carranza troops had the elusive "Pancho" hemmed in on every side.

In the first interview that the Carranza leader has granted since the Columbus raid, he professed confidence that Villa would soon be captured or killed. He said that he was thoroughly satisfied with the border situation since his conference with General Pershing, but whether his forces would co-operate with the American troops was a question that he could not answer He stated that orders had not been received from First Chief Carranza as to what action should be taken

AERO CLUB AVIATORS TO BE IN READINESS

New York —The Aero Club of America, which on Saturday placed its entire staff and equipment at the disposal of the War Department for service in Mexico, yesterday completed arrangements for the mobilization of a squadron of experienced aviations pilots to be held in readiness for a call from theg overnment. In explanation of this action, Alan R. Hawley ,president of the club, said yesterday:—

"To prepare to meet a need does not mean to wait until hundreds of men have lost their lives. We ought to prepare to preserve the lives of our soldiers. An aeroplone is undoubtedly worth a thousand soldiers in such a campaign as the American forces are about to undertake. A hundred aeroplanes could easily round up Villa and his band in a very short time, where it might take thousands of men a long time, with considerable losses ,to attain the same end."

OBREGON SAID TO BE FORCE BEHIND CARRANZA

New York—General Alvaro Obregon, commander in chief of the constitutionalist army in the north of Mexico and the greatest fighter in the neighboring republic, is generally considered by men who know Mexico and the real condition there as the man with whom the United States will have to deal—not with Venustiano Carranza. Whether General Obregon has come out openly against Carranza is not known, although there have been rumors and reports that he has done so, but it is certain that the fighting general is in a position to dictate to the civilian nominal head of the government and no one who knows Obregon will doubt for an instant that he will do so in the present crisis.

DEFICITS

Democratic administrations, both State and National, have a way of acquiring deficits. When John Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury he said: "I can manage a surplus, but I'll be hanged if I can manage a deficit." When Governor Whitman succeeded Governor Glynn, he found a deficit that he had to manage and whoever succeeds President Wilson is likely to find a deficit.

Deficits are acquired by spending more than you have. Governor Glynn made one by vetoing a direct tax bill that was needed to keep the State treasury in good working order. President Wilson made a good start on one by forcing through Congress a free trade tariff bill that caused a big droy in the Government's revenue receipts.

A deficit in the Treasury affects everybody, because, sooner or later, everybody must put his hand into his pocket to contribute his share toward paying it off.—Utica Dispatch.

MR. BAKER'S PROBLEMS AND HIS OPPORTUNITY

It is sincerely to be hoped that Mr. Lindley M. Garrison's prophecy concerning his successor will prove as justified as is his tribute to that gentleman's ability. The country is prepared to give to Mr. Baker its cordial support. His "passion for flowers" will be accepted as no handicap provided he confines it to the real thing and does not include flowers of rhetoric, already too much in evidence at Washington.

Even approval by the anti-preparedness league and the Jane Addams school of thought can be lived down. Anything that Mr. Baker has in the past said in support of a policy designed to make of the United States a thing wabbling, weak and enfeebled, and in consequence a thing despised among nations, may well be regarded as offset by his illuminating telegram to Senator Pomerene describing the democratic party as "a dismal failure" for the way it has so far failed to grasp the nation's demand for an adequate preparedness.

Mr. Baker is a politician. The one real problem confronting him is political. It is not Mexico. That is no problem for him at all, since everything to be done in that direction will be done by the army along lines laid down by the General Staff. He need have no worries concerning the field in which Francisco Villa operates; the field where his activities must be exerted is that held by a democratic majority in the halls of Congress.

Sa far appeals to patriotism have failed to bring practical response from democratic committee rooms and democratic cloakrooms on Capitol hill. The fate of this nation seems an inconsequent thing to democrats in Congress so long as the squeal of prospective "pork" falls as sweet music upon their ever receptive ears. They would not listen to Mr. Garrison, because he was no politician; perhaps they will listen to Mr. Baker, whose political judgment they should respect.

It is not an easy thing to save the democratic party from suicide. This, however, is Mr. Baker's first and paramount problem. It is a duty he owes his country, for what the country needs is preparedness, and it is demanding preparedness action now.—N. Y. Herald.

Go Light on Buckshot.

Buckshot should be relegated to the past along with the buffalo gun and the market hunter's "cannon." It will inflict a painful wound upon deer and yet will not kill except at very close quarters. Even the poorest shot can usually score a hit with buckshot, and he will in nine cases out of ten be tempted into "letting her have it" when the game is absolutely out of effective range. About the only useful purpose for which buckshot can be recommended is in self defense against a human enemy at close range.—Outing.

PUBLIC SPIRIT THAT NO DIFFICULTY DAUNTS

It isn't community conceit to be conscious of the valuable things this city really has, but on the contrary a reason for proper pride—and Fulton feels that way about the public spirit which has dodged no difficulty when there was a need to be met. For instance, the city expects once more to be entertained by the talent of the Chautauqua Redpath System. It has been entertained by the Symphony Orchestra under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, both of which are the means in sight to reach, but with the former it must be planned to realize only through hard and continuous work. But thank goodness, the city is fortunate in having men and women able and willing to try to captain the task. They do not say "It would be a good thing but ——" and continue with ninety-nine reasons why it is impossible to produce here entertainments such as are provided by the Chautauqua System. They do not say "We ought to have it." and let the matter drop. They do say "We ought to have good things in Fulton, and so we will." That is the spirit which has brought to this city the Chautauqua System in other years, and which made a success of the first public recital of the Symphony Orchestra.

The Chautauqua System of entertainments have been bravely supported by a number of persons who believed in it as an institution of proved value to the entire community. For those whose time and means will not permit of seeing and hearing high class entertainers, it is a veritable god-send; and right here it might be added, that no community stands in sorer need of good entertainment than the city of Fulton, New York.

But it cannot be reasonably expected that such an institution as the Chautauqua entertainments will be wholly self-supporting through its work, like a business institution which demands its price on all it offers. Yet if we value it and sympathize with the men who have undertaken the responsibility of bringing the System here, we shall do all in our power to aid them in their work for support for one of the finest lines of community life in our reach. The members of the committee who have not failed in understanding, and sympathy, and effort, where these things were needed, well know the conditions of their enlistment, for they are far from untried in service. All the finer is their courage.

Let us do all we can as individuals, then the project cannot help advancing—and while it advances we will know it is on the way to a successful conclusion. It is not a whit too soon to whoop things up for the Chautauqua of 1916.

A CHARMING STORY WELL TRANSLATED

"Gertrude and I," from the German of Herman Hesse, by Adele Lewisohn, is a delightful story, beautiful in its simplicity, and a translation that with delicate touch makes plain to him who reads the soul of him who wrote. A story of genius, in youth shy, egotistic, sensitive and self-centred, but genius which through love and suffering and renunciation broadens into a fuller conception of the true philosophy of life, embodied in the writer's closing words:

"We can be stronger than Nature and Fate. And we can draw near to one another when we are needed, and can look at one another with understanding eyes, and we can love one another and live to comfort one another. And many times when the dark depths are silent we can do more. Then for an instant we can be gods, stretch out our commanding hands and create things which before were not, and which, when they are created, will live without us. From tones and from words, and from other fragile, futile things, we can build music and wisdom and songs, full of thought and comfort and of more beautiful and imperishable things than can the harsh play of chance and destiny. We can bear God in our hearts, and at times, when we are filled with understanding, He will shine from our eyes and in our words and speak to others who do not know Him or would not recognize Him. We cannot withdraw our hearts from life, but we can so mould and teach them that they are above chance and can look on grief and pain without breaking.

"As a man grows older he is more at peace than in his youth. But I will not on that account slander youth, for it sings to me in all my dreams like a master-song, and rings clearer and purer than ever it did in truth."—N. Y. American.

5000 SCENES IN PLACE OF FOUR

Are Features That Enthrall Thousands of Spectators Who Witness "Birth of a Nation," Coming Sunday.

After more extensive and sensational publicity than has fallen to the lot of any other theatrical enterprise, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the Quirk theater the afternoon and evening of March 19. The first class metropolitan production is guaranteed to be the one shown here, carrying two baggage cars of equipment, a symphonic orchestra of musical experts, and a complete traveling organization of 50 people.

Many circumstances have conspired to make "The Birth of a Nation" the most widely discussed play in the world. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's Southern novels, it embraces a far wider scope than "The Clansman" play, Mr. Griffith's new art covers a 150 years of history and pictorializes the greatest events of the War between the States as well as those of Reconstruction. Lincoln, Lee and Grant; the early glories of the Confederacy; the devastation of Gen. Sherman's march to the sea; the awful siege of Petersburg; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of the President in Ford's Theatre, and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the south—these personage and incidents pass rapidly before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climaxes of Part II, which is devoted to what has been styled "the second struggle between the North and the South," a struggle caused by the attempt to impose carpetbagger rule upon the conquered States. The wild adventures and achievements of the KuKlux Klan dominate the final scenes, which yield a happy ending of a double romance of Southern and Northern sweethearts.

Mr. Griffith's treatment of the magnificent theme is so much greater and grander than the original play that there can be no comparison. For example, he presents 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses instead of the tiny "armies" of the theatric boards. He shows 5,000 scenes in place of four or five; farflung battle lines of many, many miles, and Ku Klux "rides" right out in the open, which surpass in thrills any Vanderbilt cup race. Yet the individual acting is as fine and artistic as in a "short cast" drama, the work of Henry Walthall as the Clansman and of Mae Marsh as Flora, in particular, rising to heights of genius. Other marvels of the work are the 200,000 faithfully accurate historical details; the musical score synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes; the wonderful reproduction of crowded interiors like the theatre performance where Lincoln was shot and the South Carolino legislature session of 1870; the taking of battle scenes at night by a secret new process; the use of 25,000 yards of cloth for Ku Klux costumes, and 12,000 yards for women's dresses; the master's embrandt-like management of light and shade; the depiction of the glorious beauty of out-door Nature; his marvelous quiet yet effective playing the entire gamut of Romance from lightest comedy to deepest tragedy; finally and supremely, the union of all the stage arts (except conversational speech) into a new art form of drama-spectacle-with-music.

MILITARY INSTRUCTION FOR 15,000 SCHOOL BOYS

New York—No less than 15,000 New York City school boys will have military training under the eyes of big guns of the regular army; at least this is one of the coming summer plans of the National School Camp Association, and the beauty of it is the training at the camp is going to make a boy fit for a regular job, as well as for defending his country in a crisis. The first step at organization is to be taken next Saturday. Boys over twelve, are invited to report at 10 o'clock at the following armories: Twenty-third Regiment, Bedford and Atlantic avenues, Brooklyn; Forty-seventh Regiment, Marcey avenue, Brooklyn; Seventy-first Regiment Thirty fourth street and Fourth avenue, Manhattan; Eighth Coast Artillery, Ninety-sixth street and Madison avenue; Twenty-second Engineers, One Hundred and Sixty-eighth street and Fort Washington avenue.

At each armory officers of the staff of General Wood will tell the boys what is expected of them and what is to be done for them. National Guard officers and men of the Plattsburg training camp will be there to help enroll the embryo soldiers.

Until the Summer vacation opens the boys are to be drilled in the armories after school hours one or two days a week.

Boys of 1916—Watertown Times

That was an interesting and inspiring address which Jerome B. Cooper delivered before the Parent-Teachers' Association at Chaumont Thursday evening. The address was given in Friday evening's Times. It was a call to action for the boys and young men, an appeal to them to realize their responsibilities. The speaker harked back to the old-fashioned village boy, who split kindlings, filled the wood box, went after the cow, delivered the milk, got a pail of fresh water, fed the hens and went uptown after a gallon of kerosene, all before school in the morning. Those were piping days and although it made the boy hustle to get around, the experience of that routine, day after day, made a man of him, and inculcated the instinct of work and the desirability and necessity of punctuality.

Mr. Cooper sounds a warning which is properly pessimistic in its tone. He warns the boy against deterioration, and he expressed the fear that the boy of today is becoming soft in that life is made too easy for him. It was a proper address to give before a Parent-Teacher Association, not particularly in Chaumont, but anywhere in the country, for it is the parent who is to be blamed, not the boy. The boy has the same instincts he has always had. He is unchanged and unchangeable, except as evolution through time will change him. But the parents have let up on their discipline. Life has become easier for them in town, village and city. There are not the chores for the boy that there once were. Again, too much is being done for him in way of amusements. He is given expensive gymnasiums, recreational houses, and many other accessories, all of which is good, perhaps, but there is such a thing as the restruction worked by multitude of riches with a growing boy as with the more mature individual.

That the address is one of suggestion rather than one of criticisms Mr. Cooper emphasizes. He wants it understood that he is not condemning the boy, but he is properly sounding a note of warning to the parent and child against a trend of the times. Teach the boy to know the value of good books, the value of religion, the value of economy, the value of a full realization that all men and all boys are created equal. These are some of the things which Mr. Cooper emphasizes in a most interesting and valuable address.

Conscience Money - - Watertown Standard

In paying $30,000 as a last instalment of $80,000 conscience money, the Philadelphia contributor asserted that the total sum was fourfold the amount he had felt he abstracted from Uncle Sam. He was complying with the idea of Zaccheus of whom it is said in Luke XIX, 8:

"And Zaccheus stood and said unto the Lord: Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold."

It is a good sign to find a man in the twentieth century who is willing to go back to the Roman days for his standard in an affair of restitution. The few contributors to conscience fund have not impelled to add interest or penalties. What a lot of money would reach public treasuries if all who tapped the till were to declare a good dividend as conscience money.

Stealing the government's money is not the greatest offense against the public. Money can be put back. The lawyer who gets a big fee because he can secure legislation or kill it cannot restore to a conscience fund. Corruption in government is rarely till tapping. When the people's money actually reaches the treasury it is handled without loss. Public employes are bonded, but the surety companies are never called upon to pay shortages. Private enterprise from banks to retail stores lose a lot of money and supplies through dishonesty, as the bonding companies report. Just ordinary thieves, cheap employes having access to money, get nothing from the till beyond their wages. The profit of government which is not always called corruption is monopolized by those who think that Zaccheus was hysterical.

The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publication

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder.

HER MOTHER'S STORY

THE District Attorney stood at the window of his private office adjoining the court and stared down at the hurrying throngs while one nervous hand beat a devil's tattoo again the somewhat grimy pane.

It had been raining, and the identity, even the sex of the crowd was submerged beneath a sea of bobbing black umbrellas between which the wet and shining tops of the motor cars darted like huge black beetles. But the prosecutor saw neither the crowd nor the traffic—he saw only Mary Page! She had become almost an obsession with him now, and though it was not yet time for court and there were other clients besides the State whose business claimed his attention in his other office, he had drifted here, as he had drifted unwittingly each morning to mentally test the links in the chain of his evidence against her.

It SHOULD be strong enough to bind her upon the merciless wheel of the law, and yet he was conscious that more than one of its links was weak—so weak, in fact, that not even his masterly summing up for the jury had been entirely able to gloss it over. He did not doubt for a moment that Mary Page was guilty of the murder of James Pollock, but he had not PROVED her so to his own satisfaction.

He had shown that Pollock was in her eyes an enemy; he had proved that the dead man was a wooer whose pursuit was unwelcome; he had shown that twice during the recent years Pollock had forced Mary to promise to be his wife, but that once the necessity for that step was removed she had claimed her freedom again. She had everything to gain by his death, which was surely motive enough; added to which, if she were not guilty he felt she would not have fled that night after the murder.

Time after time as he went back to the testimony—to the fact that Mary had had the revolver in her bag, HAD gone into the room and HAD been found beside Pollock's body, he strove to glimpse some faint clue that would give a chance for "fresh evidence." In the meantime, it was Langdon's turn, and the keen-eyed District Attorney wondered curiously just what defense he would bring. Langdon's continual refusal to cross-examine the witnesses for the State had naturally kept his defense wonderfully well hidden.

The newspapers were, however, full of theories as to what the defence would be. Several claimed that it would be the "unwritten law," the guarding of Mary Page's honor; another that it would be proved that Pollock shot himself when he found that not even his support of her stardom could make Mary marry him; while still a third said that the real criminal would "confess" when put upon the stand. Absurd, all of them, and yet the third theory brought a frown to the lawyer's face. Suppose Langdon himself confessed to the murder!

"Hello, Chief!" A voice from the door interrupted his revery and he turned quickly.

"Hello, Sheenan. Have you got anything?"

"No," he said, "not a thing along the lines you spoke of. Slade doesn't know anything except what he told, and I've traced Langdon's movements for three days before the murder, down to each minute, and there's nothing to hang a dog's hair to."

"Did you find out about the automobiles parked on that night?"

"Yep; but Casey was on the job at that corner, and there wasn't as much as a ghost of a motor went into the street back of the hotel. The back gates of the houses were locked—had been tried by the watchman just a few minutes earlier, and the police were on the job anyway, on account of the club there. The Page woman must have gone down the fire-escape and climbed into the hotel at another floor—that's the only answer."

The prosecutor turned again to the window. "All right," he said curtly. But the detective lingered.

"Say, Chief," he suggested hesitatingly, "have you talked to Daniels? Little fat guy that runs the Covington? I saw him yesterday and he looks—well, sick."

The prosecutor laughed.

"He doesn't know anything. I've pumped him dry as powder."

A discreet knock sounded, and the bailiff put his head in at the door.

"His Honor is ready to go into Court, sir," he said; and with a nod of relief the prosecutor gathered up his papers.

"Defence begins today, don't it?" asked the detective as he left. "What do you guess it's going to be?"

"I'm not guessing anything," said the District Attorney grimly, "except that his witnesses are going to have a bad time when they get into my hands."

"Tell me something I don't know!" chuckled the detective with honest admiration, though, after a moment's pause he added behind his superior's back, "But Mary Page has got the sympathy of the crowd at that, by glory!"

She HAD won the the sympathy of the spectators now—there was no doubt of it, and the hostility that was writ so large on the faces for her at the beginning now greeted the prosecutor instead, and it was a hostility that somehow was the more acute because the faces were so oddly familiar—so familiar, in fact, that he had almost spoken to one of the men who sat in the front row when he had passed him in the corridor the day before.

"His witnesses are going to have a bad time when they get into my hands."

The reporters seemed like old friends, too, and he noticed with a grim little smile that one of the "sob sisters" had on a new and very becoming hat, and he wondered ironically whether it was in honor of the defence or because the day before one of the star writers on a big daily had changed his seat in order to sit beside her.

There was an extra briskness about the newspaper group today, for today the defence of Mary Page would begin. Today Langdon must strip off the mask of a smiling confidence and show what lay behind it.

The mask, or at any rate the smile, was still there when he came into court, not with Mary, this time, but with her mother. His hand was tucked protectingly under the arm of the little gray-haired woman, and his lips were close to her ear as if he were murmuring a final encouragement—or a final instruction!

Mary, too, was smiling, and silently repeating:

"Today we will begin my defence. Today Philip will start to set me free!" And not even in her own heart would she let herself contemplate the thorny path that must be traveled before that elusive freedom had struck the invisible gyves from off her wrists and heart. Suddenly she heard the first witness of the day called.

"Mrs. Annie Page!"

The frail little woman seemed to have visibly shrunk when she took her place in the witness-stand.

"Mrs. Page, how long ago was it that you met the man who later became your husband?"

"Thirty-one years ago at Christmas."

"But it was some years before you were married, was it not?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because of—of Mr. Page's habits. My parents insisted upon my breaking the engagement."

"But it was later renewed?"

"Yes. He promised me that he would stop drinking, and I believed. God knows, a woman always believes that—from a man."

"Will you tell us, please," Langdon's voice was warning in its sharpness "as concisely as you can what happened after your marriage?"

"What happened," she said wearily, "is what happens to thousands of women. We hadn't been married very long before my husband began to drink again. The—the—night that the certainty that Mary was coming to us from God came to me—he was out till dawn and had to be brought home too drunk to even know where he was. And all the while that I was making ready for her, he made my inability to go out with him an excuse for debauch. And oh, your Honor—" she added, turning to the Judge with a catch in her voice, "night after night I used to walk the floor, praying like a wicked woman that my baby might die before it came into the world—because I was afraid it would bear the taint—would be born with that awful devastating thirst."

"Did your husband ever strike you when he was drunk?" Again Langdon's voice held that warning note, but now the prosecutor broke in sharply:

"May it please the court, I protest against this evidence, as irrelevant. As being a palpable effort to arouse sympathy towards the prisoner and her mother and therefore a menace to the progress of justice."

"On the contrary, your Honor," Langdon took an eager step forward and there was a sharp thrill almost of triumph in his voice as he spoke, "it is my intention to prove by this testimony that Mary Page, through prenatal influence, was born with so great a horror of drink, as to induce, in her moments of temporary insanity even when she was a little child. And if Mary Page fired the shot that killed James Pollock she did so while suffering from an attack of 'repressed psychosis' to which she has been subject all her life."

The words spread like a flame through the tinder of curiosity and leapt from lip to lip not only through the court itself, but spread by some telepathic means to those hovering in the corridor without. The defence was known at last. It was temporary insanity under a new and delightfully erudite title!

It caught the prosecutor unawares. He appreciated its cleverness, even though he doubted its honesty. It offered an excuse for everything—the shooting, the flight, Mary's repeated and hysterical assertions that she remembered nothing except Pollock's endeavor to make her drink—but it was so unexpected that he had no quick parry for Langdon's appeal, and he was not surprised when the Judge bade the latter continue his questioning.

"Mrs. Page, I will repeat my former question to you. Did your husband ever strike you when he was drunk?"

"Yes." The word was no more than a whisper.

"Did he ever strike you just before your child was born?"

"Yes." The answer came more quickly now, fiercely, the mother dominant above the wife.

"Will you tell us of the circumstance, please?"

"It was one night when I had been sitting up sewing. My husband came home very drunk. He—he frightened me and I ran from him. That infuriated him—he ran after me—and seized me by the shoulder! Then—he—he struck me. But he held me so tight that my shoulder for days bore the imprint of his fingers in a great bruise on the flesh."

"Have you ever seen another bruise like that?"

"Yes."

"Where?" The question snapped out brutally, and Mary, leaning forward, stretched out one shaking hand toward

"Did your husband ever strike you when he was drunk?"

her mother—in appeal or encouragement, it was hard to say which.

"Upon the shoulder of my baby! When Mary was born the imprint of five fingers, like purple bruises, showed on her shoulder."

"Did they remain there?"

"No. They faded as she grew older."

"Did they ever recur?"

"Yes. The first time was when Mary was five years old. Mr. Page had come home—intoxicated—and was sitting in the library. Mary ran to him and he took her on his knee. Suddenly she began screaming and striking at him, and he pushed her off his lap. Then—" she faltered a little, but went bravely on, "Mr. Page took a flask of whiskey out of his pocket, and half in fun, half in anger, grabbed Mary and tried to force the liquor on her. She—she seemed to go mad, and when I snatched her away from him her little nightgown had slipped off her shoulder and there—plainly—could be seen the marks of the hand!"

A murmur of excitement crept about the reporter's table as well as among the spectators. This was "great stuff," and when Mary's trembling hand came back from its impotent reaching toward her mother, and went sharply to her left shoulder, there was no one in the room who needed the answer to Langdon's question.

"Which shoulder was that mark upon, Mrs. Page?"

"How long was it before the child stopped screaming?"

"Several hours, and she was feverish and ill for days."

Langdon's voice now changed abruptly, and the prosecutor's eyes narrowed to the watchfulness of a cat's, as the former asked:

"On the night when your daughter repudiated her engagement to James Pollock, were you sitting up waiting for their return from a dance?"

"Yes."

"Will you tell the court as briefly as possible what occurred?"

"It was very late. I had been waiting what seemed to me hours before they came in. Mr. Page, who was very much under the influence of liquor, was berating Mary, and once he started to strike her, but Mr. Pollock interfered, telling me that Mary and I had better go and try and get some rest. Once in her own room, however, my daughter broke down and sobbed and said, 'Your grief and father's danger made me accept Mr. Pollock. Tonight I tried to run away with Philip, because he is the man I love—but I am helpless in your hands.'"

"Did you still urge Miss Page to marry Mr. Pollock?"

"No. My daughter's happiness was too great a price to pay to save my husband from the penalty of his crime, and I told Mary that she and I together would go to James that very day and plead with him to set her free. It was dawn then, and finally she went to sleep."

"Did you make that plea to Mr. Pollock?"

"No. We went to the office—but—but—we didn't see Mr. Pollock."

"Will you tell the Court why? Not me, Mrs. Page, but the court—as if I were not present."

"Well, your Honor," she said, turning to the Judge, "when my daughter and I reached Mr. Pollock's office the door was open and Mr. Langdon was in there. As we came up we heard Mr. Pollock say, 'Give me a fair chance—that's all I ask, and I've never had it. You leave town for two weeks, and if on your return Mary Page still prefers you—I will withdraw and give her up to you.' Mr. Langdon demurred at first. Then he said he would go that day and hurried out without seeing either Mary or me. I felt we ought to see Mr. Pollock, anyway, but before we could go into the office we heard a door creak, and my husband's voice." She broke off with a smothered sob, and Langdon prompted her quickly:

"What did your husband say, Mrs. Page?"

"He said, 'With Langdon out of the way, our little scheme should work nicely.' Then—then Mary pulled at my sleeve and said, 'Come away without seeing them, Mother. We must warn Philip—and they mustn't know we have been here.' So we went to Mr. Langdon's office, and he arranged to come to the house late that night in the hope that we would have learned by that time what the scheme was."

"Did you learn?"

"Yes. Shortly after Mr. Langdon had come, my husband and Mr. Pollock came in and Mr. Pollock told us that he had bought the mortgage on our home. He said that if Mary would marry him within a week he would give her the mortgage and the forged check as a wedding gift. If she didn't—he would foreclose and put the check into the hands of the police."

"Did Miss Page agree?"

"She said she would answer him the next day, and he said he would wait, though my husband was angry that there should be any delay. Then Mr. Pollock went, and Mary joined Mr. Langdon, and they started for a walk."

"Did you see them go?"

"No. I went to the kitchen to fix the fire for the night. But I was drawn to the window by hearing angry words and saw my husband berating Mr. Langdon. I was so terrified over it all and—and—so heartbroken at the thought of losing my home, that I hurried out and begged Mary to come in—to do anything to quiet her father. So she said goodnight to Mr. Langdon and, coming in, went straight to her room."

"Did you go to your room also?" Langdon's voice shook ever so little as he spoke, for her words brought back so vividly that time of horror when he had stood silently in the little garden waiting for the quiet of night to settle over the house that held the girl he loved so well and seemed so likely to lose—the girl whom he was next to see in so terrible a guise!

"No. I—I—went to my husband, who was in the kitchen, and tried to make him stop drinking and go to bed. But he—he was violent. He accused me of—of urging Mary not to marry Pollock, and when I said that she shouldn't if it would make her unhappy he—he struck me. The blow knocked me down. Mary, who was partially undressed, heard us—and came down, and he turned on her. He—struck her, and then he caught her by the shoulder and forced her to her knees."

Sobs caught in her throat. She could not go on for a moment, and the tears rolled unheeded down her cheeks, as, stammering a little and speaking almost incoherently, she cried, "And then, your Honor—Mary screamed! Screamed the way she had before, and I—I—saw her go mad before my very eyes! Mr. Langdon, who had been waiting in the garden—to be sure all was right with us—heard the scream too, and came running in. My husband saw him—and he snatched the poker out of the fire where in my haste I had left it, and swung it at Mr. Langdon. But it was Mary he hit. I heard the sound of it—I smelt the burnt flesh, and as Mr. Langdon flung my husband to the floor I ran to her. But before I could reach her—or stop her—she ran, still screaming, out of the house and disappeared!"

A passion of tears shook her as she finished, tears that were mirrored in all the eyes in the room. Even Langdon's voice was unsteady as he said gently:

"That is all, Mrs. Page."

Mary was sobbing too, but they were the tears of sad memories rather than present [illegible]

"I—I—saw her go mad before my very eyes!"

grateful glance from beneath her wet lashes towards the prosecutor when his curt,

"No questions," released Mrs. Page from the stand and set her at liberty to drag herself back to her quiet corner.

She had laid bare all the tragedy of her married life for the sake of her child; and what it had cost her to tell so calmly the story of shame and want and suffering and of the efforts of the drunken father to sell his daughter to a man she did not love—only she herself knew. There was more than one woman among the spectators who could and did guess what it cost her, and whose heart went out to her in pity.

It was, however, an unfinished story that she had told, and the room was vibrant with the unspoken query, "Where did Mary go?" when Langdon called his next witness:

"Alexander MacPherson!"

The burly Scotchman, with his deeply tanned face, his heavy beard and rough clothes, was a striking contrast to the delicate little witness who had gone before him, and he surveyed the Judge and jury with a wary hostility that under less tragic circumstances would have won a smile from the spectators.

"MacPherson, you are a woodsman, are you not?"

"I am, sir."

"Where were you employed six years ago?"

"I was wurkin' to the Paisley estate, clearin' out the auld timber in the woods." There was a hint of a Scottish accent in his speech, though long years in America had left it no more than a burr, pleasantly suggestive of the wide woodland spaces among which his life was spent.

"Did you ever see Miss Page?"

"Yes, sir. She came tae the woods often. She had a luve of the wild things in her heart, and I'd coom across her many times, sittin' wie a book, or just dreamin' in the woods."

"MacPherson, can you remember the last time that you saw Mary Page in the woods of the Paisley estate?"

"I've a gude memory," he answered rebukingly, "and it was a time to set in anyone's mind. 'Twas on the night of the party Jim Hanley give, up to the ridge."

"Will you tell us, please, what occurred on that night?"

"I had been tae the party and was comin' home. We had sat sae lang it were pretty late, and I says to myself, 'I'll na go way round by the road, but straight through the woods.' I knew them too well to lose my way, even in the dark. I had coom almost to the Hollow, which is like a bowl in the middle of the wood, when I heard somebody singin'. It came strange like in the night, and I am nae ashamed to say I was scared, so I stood—not hidin', mind ye, but waitin' tae see what it was. Then I seen a figure on the other side of the hollow coomin' through the trees—all in white—and wavin' its arms, daft-like, and singin' and laughin' and cryin' all in one."

"Could you see who it was?"

"Not at first, it were too far away, but I says to mysel', 'It's nae a ghost, or a fairy. 'Tis some puir daftie got away from its keeper. I'll wait till it gets nearer, then try and stop it.'"

"Could you hear what she was singing?"

"Nae. But presently I heard another voice—a voice shoutin', and I knew it were someone after her. I was minded to shout back, but I was afraid of scarin' the poor daft thing, so I stood watchin' till suddenly she coom out into a patch of moonlight and I saw her face. It was Mary Page!"

A little gust of whispering comment rippled through the room, and the Judge, leaning forward, broke in sharply:

"How far distant was this figure when you first thought you recognised it as Mary Page?"

"I dinna ken, exactly," said the woodsman thoughtfully, "'twas no more than maybe twice the width of the space of yon door," nodding towards the entrance into court, "but to get to her I would have had to skirt the lip of the hollow, so I stood still, watchin'."

"Will you tell us how Miss Page looked?"

"Her dress or her petticoats was all torn and muddy, her hair was hangin' down onto her shoulders, and her face and arms were scratched and bloody and there was something that looked like a great sore on her forehead. She moved like a blind person, stumblin' over stumps and bumpin' into the trees, and yet she kep' on that strange croonin' song—laughin', too, at times."

"Could you hear any other sound?"

"Aye, I heard a voice callin', 'Mary! Mary!' And I could hear the smashin' of the underbrush as somebody came runnin', but she didna look around."

"Did she pass you?"

"No; she skirted the hollow round the other side, but I could see her. I wouldna let her out of my sight, till she were safe, but I didna want to lay hands on a daftie mysel'. Then suddenly I saw a man come runnin' through the woods, and when he saw her, he gave a great cry and shouted 'Thank God!' Then he called again, 'Mary, Mary—wait for me—wait for me, dear!' The echo in the hollow caught it up so that the whole woods were full of the cry, and at that she turned, and stood swayin'—like a young sapling cut at the root. Then she gave a cry, and fell all crumpled in a little heap."

"Did you go forward then?"

"I started, but before I could get around to them, the man had pickit the lassie up and carried her down by by the brook in the hollow."

"Could you still see them?"

"Aye, like in a theatre, for the moon shone down there, while I stood above them in the trees. The man, who was Mr. Langdon, here, kep' wettin' his handkerchief and bathin' her poor face till she opened her eyes and said, 'Philip, Philip!' And at that, he held her close and sobbed like a child, and said, 'Mary, Mary, are you all right now, dear?' And she said, 'I'm tired—where have I been?' And he said, 'Never mind, dear, you can rest now—you are safe in my arms.' Then suddenly she gives a scream and cries, 'Don't let father touch me—don't let him touch me! Oh, Philip, I can feel it on my shoulder—it burns—it burns!' And he kissed her and said, 'There is nothin' on your shoulder except my kisses, Mary. Put the fear out of your head; nothin' can harm you while I have you safe.' And she says, 'Not even James?' And he says, 'Not even James, d—— him!' Then she gives a little sigh like a bairn that is tired, and holds up her lips to be kissed, and then snuggles her puir head in his shoulder, and he knelt there holdin' her."

"Mr. Langdon flung my husband to the floor."

"You went up to them then, did you not?"

"Well, you know that," answered the Scotchman with some scorn. "I went up and I said, 'Can I help you carry the puir lassie home?' And he said, 'No, I shall not move her till she has rested a bit.' Then he wraps her in his coat and sits watchin' her, but after a bit he says, 'She's been sleepin' sound, I can carry her now,' and he picks her up in his arms and starts off."

"Did Miss Page speak when she was moved?"

"Yes; she said 'Am I still safe with you, Phil?' And he says, 'Yes.' And she says, 'Oh, I wish I was dead—except for you, dear.' And he said, 'I wish those who torture you were dead, my darling, but I'm going to guard you myself in the future.' Then, still holdin' her in his arms and carryin' her careful like, he went off through the trees."

Taxpayers May Swap Accounts Until Act Passes Legislature

Upon the recommendation of City Attorney Hillick the Board of Works withholds payment of the Electric Company's bill for furnishing current to the ornamental street lights. The action was taken at last night's meeting, Manager Jordan requesting the granting of a certificate of indebtedness, which is of course an acknowledgement of the account against the city for the month of December. It was the sense of the City Attorney and the Board that inasmuch as the previous administration failed to set aside an appropriation for this purpose, justice demanded the action of last night.

Mr. Jordon informed the Board of the company's desire to meet the city's tax bill on or before April amounting to $2500, and thus avoid the usual penalty, it was his pleasure to wash one hand with the other, figuratively speaking, by swapping accounts as suggested by him and recommended by Attorney Hillick. Such action would result in one of the banks recognizing the certificate and permti cash to be drawn against the item for payment of taxes.

It is the intention of the city administration to accord to all creditors of the city whose accounts antedate January 1st a similar privilege, and to continue the practice until such time as the Legislature shall pass the city enabling act which will permit of a bond issue to cover the hold over deficits and indebtedness. Speaker Sweet has advised Mr. Hillick that this will occur at a very early date.

SURROGATE HAD MUCH BUSINESS

The Palladium of yesterday gives the following record of events in Surrogate's Court:

Letters were asked in Surrogate's Court today on the estate of Augusta F. Earl, who died March 5th, and was buried in this city. She left $10,000 personal and 3,000 real. She gives his brother, Walter B. Joslyn, of Rochester, a diamond ring and dishes, and her nephew's wife, Lillian F. Joslyn, of Rochester, her gold watch and chain. Of the remainder of her property she gives three-quarters to her Walter B. Joslyn, and one-quarter to Nettie E. Sleight of East Bloomfield N. Y., a daughter of her late husband, Frederick Earl. Had Mrs. Sleight been dead, this quarter would have gone to her brother also, as she said in her will: "In no case shall any part of my property go to the heirs of the said Nettie E. Sleight." E. F. Wiltsie and John M. Farrell were named as appraisers of the estate.

Kate Gantz asked for letters on the estate of Catherin Fletcher, who died in this city March 6th, leaving $1,800 personal and $3,500 real property. She disposes of her property as follows: A nephew, John Sheridan, $500; to Father Hopkins for building fund of new St. Mary's church, $500; to the Rev. T. F. Howard, St. Paul's church $100 for masses, and balance to Kate Gantz, niece, "who for many years has befriended me and aided me in many ways." The latter is named as executrix.

The appraisal of the estate of David Wright shows a gross property of $4,584.25 and expenses of $899.11, leaving a net of $3,694.14, which is divided among a large number of nephews and nieces. All of the assets were cash, 1,100 shares of Thunder Mountain mining stock being listed as valueless.

Joseph W. Huie asked for letters on the estate of Josephine N. Huie, who died in Volney February 26th, leaving $800 personal property. Her husband gets the use of the entire estate and if any remains at his death it will go to brothers and sisters or their heirs.

Clara Wiltsie asked for letters on the estate of her aunt, Cynthia M. Mc Afes, who died in Hannibal January 18th, leaving $650 personal property.

COURIERS TO GIVE ENTERTAINMENT MARCH 15

The Couriers of the State street church will give a literary and musical entertainment at the church parlors on Wednesday evening.

An orchestra will provide music and readings and impersonations will be given by Mr. Lewis Parmenter of Syracuse University.

RESIGNS AFTER LONG SERVICE

The meeting of the Home Missionary Department of the Baptist Sunday school, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Trask, was a pleasurable and interesting occasion in more ways than one. In the first place it was the annual meeting for the transaction of routine business, then came the election of officers, and last but not least, was the presence there of the retiring secretary, Mrs. Dell Reed, who has served the society for ten consecutive years. Ill health compels Mrs. Reed to relinquish the position, greatly to the regret of the entire membership.

Mr. Trask added to the afternoon's pleasure by carrying the guests to and from their homes in a sleigh, and Mrs. Trask gave the homey touch by serving delicious refreshments.

The officers chosen were as follows Mrs. Hopkins, superintendent; Miss Hattie Chandler, secretary; Mrs. W. H. Merriam, class president; Mrs. Lyman Bargey, vice president; Miss Mattie Vant, secretary-treasurer.

SPEAKER SWEET WILL ATTEND ELKS' DINNER

It is the determination of the committee of arrangements for the Elks' dinner to be held next Monday, to provide one of the most successful events of the kind in the history of the city; and to that end they have invited Speaker Sweet as honor guest. The City Market has contracted to furnish 150 pounds of turkey. Waiters will be brought here from the Onondaga and Pontiac hotels.

ICE CUTTING NEARLY CLOSED FOR THE SEASON

Housewives should be interested to know that Sharp Ice company has not only been able to secure a full harvest of ice, but that on account of favorable weather the firm will succeed in placing an oversupply in stock. Cutting and storing would be completed in most instances tomorrow.

JEWS WILL CELEBRATE FEAST OF PURIM

Purim, a minor feast in the Jewish calendar, falls this year on 19th of March. The reading of the Book of Esther from a parchment scroll on that day constitutes the principal feature in the synagogue service. The feast recalls the deliverance of the Jews of Persia thro the intervention of Queen Esther and her kinsman Mordecai from a threatened massacre planned by Haman, the king's vizier. In the words of the Book of Esther it commemorates "the day wherein the Jews had rest from their enemies and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to gladness and from mourning unto a good day." It was decreed that the day be observed in a joyous spirit that finds expression in sending portions to one another and gifts to the poor. (Esther Chap. 9, verse 20.) "Purim" because it is recorded that Haman, the arch enemy of the Jews, sought to fix the day of their destruction by casting "Purim" which, according to a popular etymology given in the Book of Esther, means "Lots." The feast is more social in character than religious. It does not require ceremony other than the reading of the Book of Esther and the reciting of a few special prayers inspired by the event commemorated.

In former times the celebration in some places partook of the nature of a carnival. At present the story of the Book of Esther is not unfrequently presented in dramatized form. The injunction to remember the poor was and is observed faithfully. During the centuries of persecution, the feast of Purim was quite popular, due, perhaps, to the fact that the story of deliverance from the plottings of the tyrants, which the day recalled, brought hope of a similar deliverance from the evil designs of existing Hanmans.

An active advertising campaign will be started at once, it is stated, by the publicity committee, whose plans are to place in prominent display large overhanging street banners, window cards, etc.

Imitative Monkeys.

Monkeys never wash or bathe, though they have, as a rule, every chance to do so. Possibly experience has taught them to be afraid of crocodiles, which are pretty generally distributed on monkey haunted rivers. It is said that a number of Indian monkeys watched a party of Europeans in a boat who washed their hands and brushed their teeth. Next day the monkeys were seen to come to the river side and go through the form of washing their hands and of brushing their teeth with bits of stick.

CONVICTS SWEAR AGAINST OSBORNE

First Witness Tells of Hearings in Death House at Sing Sing---Pickpocket Warned Against Talking.

White Plains—Despite predictions of a long struggle, astonishing progress was made on the first day of the trial on a charge of perjury of Thomas Mott Osborne, erstwhile warden of Sing Sing Prison, which was begun here today before Justice Arthur S. Tompkins and a jury.

It had been expected that the entire special panel of talesmen, consisting of 20 names, drawn for the occassion would have to be exhausted before filling the jury box. So general a willingness to serve was prevalent, however, that the traditional "twelve good men and true" were found to the apparent satisfaction alike of the State and the defence within one hour and fifty-five minutes after Justice Tompkins called the court to order at ten o'clock in the morning. Only thirty-three of the 200 talesmen were called to the witness chair and examined on their eligibility. In the process of selection the defence expended ten of its available peremptory challenges, the people nine and two talesmen were excused for cause or by consent.

With the opening of the afternoon noon recess of one hour, the case moved along with such expedition that before the adjournment at five o'clock the prosecution had finished with two of its most important witnesses and their cross-examination by the defence had been completed.

Swear Warden Knew the Details

One of the witnesses was James Harvey, the youthful pickpocket and Sing Sing prisoner, whose confession directly inculpated as his partners in the felonious crimes of a pervert twenty-one of his fellow convicts, all but three of whom, according to the testimony adduced, subsequently confessed their guilt. The other was William Willett, the Queens county attorney who was sentenced to Sing Sing for having attempted, in collusion with "Curley Joe" Cassidy, to buy a nomination as Justice of the State Supreme Court. It was Willett who presided over the deliberations of the Judiciary Board of the Mutual Welfare League which tried the accused men and sentenced them, at the suggestion of Warden Osborne, to suspension from the privileges of league membership.

Both Willett and Harvey testified emphatically that Warden Osborne had been present during most, if not all of the time while the accused men were being examined and was perfectly familiar with all the details. The charge of perjury against Mr. Osborne rests upon the assertion made in the indictment that, only a few days thereafter, when Dr. Rudolph F. Diedling, a member of the State Prison Commission, went to Sing Sing to make an investigation the Warden denied knowledge of these cases, sought to mislead the inquisitor and that he had previously cautioned the accused men not to tell what they knew when called before the Commissioner, assuring them that he considered the confessions made in confidence and that he "would go to prison before he would reveal" what they had told him.

Throughout the day the famous prison reformer, whose reputation is staked on the issue of the jury's verdict, sat, stolid and imperturbable, just behind his array of counsel. These included George Gordon Battle, Deacon Murphy, a one-time Assistant District Attorney; N. J. Tierney, of Huntington, formerly a judge, and W. Merchant, Mr. Osborne's personal attorney. Among those who elbowed their way through the crowded courtroom to grasp the hand of the defendant and assure him of their confidence were several women. Three of these were Mrs. Ralston H. Brown, daughter of the late Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll; Mrs. William Wadhams, wife of the General Sessions Judge, and Mrs. Clara P. White, of New York. They remained only during the morning session and were not present when James Harvey gave his revolting testimony.

BISHOP BURT ON EXTENSION WORK

Bishop William Burt explained that the additional giving of an extra two cents each week by Methodist Episcopals in Buffalo, would aid in the accomplishment of a needed spiritual work here, in an address made at a rally of the Methodist Episcopal Union yesterday in Delaware Avenue M. E. Church.

His message was built upon the neglected opportunities to do work in Buffalo districts where religion is now being neglected. He held that more funds would enable the Methodist Union to seize these opportunities. The Union consists of the clergy and laity of Buffalo and community. It was formed 33 years ago.

BRYAN IS STRONG FOR CLEANING UP MEXICO

Buffalo—William J. Bryan in a statement issued today at the Statler Hotel, where he registered after arriving in Buffalo, declared he is strong for preparedness, and advocates sending the United States army into Mexico to clean up the Villista bandits.

"Some people seem to think that I oppose the President's views on preparedness," said Mr. Bryan. "Nothing could be so unutterably untrue.

"I am one of the strongest advocates of preparedness. Indeed, I think the administration should go farther than it has. We should have a much bigger army and navy and should have a more systematic method of training the ablebodied men of our country for the military.

"As to the present Mexican situation, you can quote me as saying that I believe the administration should send troops into Mexico and put a stop to these outrages."

ZIONIST BRANCH IS ORGANIZED

Girl Members at Present, But Soon All Jewish Adults Will Be Enrolled---To Raise Money.

Following a visit here in February by Miss Jennie Copinsky, president of the Young Ladies' Zionist society of Syracuse, who was the guest of Miss Lena Kaplan, of Utica street, tentative arrangements for the organization of a branch of the society in this city were completed and Sunday an election of officers took place in which Miss Kaplan was chosen president; Helen Waldhorn, vice president; Claudia Waldhorn, secretary; Bessie Mirsky, treasurer; and Jennie Cominkowitz, critic.

The local organization will be known as the Artiferas Zion Society and will meet each Sunday afternoon at the Artiferas Israel synagogue. At present there are eleven charter members, all girls, enrolled in the society but the membership will at once be extended to include most of the Jewish adults of the city. A series of social events is planned in order to raise money which will be contributed to a general national fund, the first of these events taking place next Sunday when a package party and entertainment will be offered. As next Sunday is Purim, a holiday devoted to festivities and celebrations, the affair which is to be given that day is to be termed a Purim party and invitations will be extended to Oswego friends to participate.

In speaking of the purposes and plans of the local branch, Miss Kaplan stated that the organization would become affiliated at once with the parent organization and thereby heceive the publication "Young Judea", which is published for the purpose of stimulating the interest of the Jewish younger set in thew ork which the national organization is pursuing, viz: promoting the causes of Judaism and Zionism. Sometime this month a dance will be given, which will be followed at frequent intervals with events of a similar nature.

"DESTRUCTION" APPEARS AT THE QUIRK TODAY

The sweat, the grime, the heartaches, the stifled ambitions, the never-ending woes of Labor,—these are the dominant notes of "Destruction," a William Fox photoplay production starring Theda Bara. Of all the sermons preached by clergymen, of all the tirades launched by agitators, none more graphically sets forth the evil of the underpayment of labor, and none suggests saner remedial measures therefor, than "Destruction."

This photoplay, which was written by Ixola Daniels and directed by W. S. Davis, deals with the soul-consuming miseries of the worker's exploited by a certain capitalist class. And yet the production is not depressing or anti-capital in its tone, for it is lightened by subtle comedy touches and it heralds the dawn of a greater spirit of consciencousness between employer and employee.

"Destruction" is an educational photoplay; educational from the artisan's viewpoint as well as from that of the student of economics. Were it not for the dramatic story woven throughout its many scenes, it might pass for one of theg reatest of industrial films, for much of its action takes place in one of thel argest steel mills in the country. The blending of the industrial and the narrative sides of the picture, however, is exceptionally well done and neither suffers thereby.

LOCAL WOMEN AT RECEPTION

Mrs. Mac Nair, Royal Matron of New York State Order of Amaranth, to Visit Syracuse Tonight.

This evening a delegation of women representing the local order, Mary Paterson Court of Amaranth, will go to Syracuse. The occasion being the official visit to be made by Mrs. Amelia E. MacNair of New York, royal matron of the New York State order, and the members of her official staff.

The Syracuse Court, No. 35 will entertain at headquarters in the Greyhound building. This will be Mrs. Nair's first visit to Syracuse since the convention last June, when she was placed at the head of the state order.

Mrs. MacNair is making her state visits, and members from Fulton, Cortland, Rochester and Oneida courts will be present at the reception which will follow the meeting.

Mrs. Lillian Mardin, royal matron of the Syracuse court, and her staff will receive the state officers, who, besides Mrs. MacNair, visiting Syracuse are Mrs. Fredericka De Wolf of New York, grand conductress; Mrs. Mabel Sidway of Buffalo, assistant grand conductress; Mrs. Elizabeth Scholtz of Fulton, grand historian; Frederick Horn, of Rochester, grand marshall; Mrs. Ella Earwicker of New Rochelle, marshal in the East.

Mrs. MacNair will be the guest of Mrs. Charles B. Schenninger of Highland street during her stay in Syracuse.

The entertainment has been arranged by Mrs. Elizabeth Grieb, associate royal matron of the Syracuse court and her assistants, including Mrs. E. A. Crampton, Mrs. Minnie Moore, Mrs. Bertha Grannis, Mrs. Barbara Williams, Mrs. Mae Egerther, Mrs. Ida Johnson, Mrs. Margaret Havener, Mrs. Bess Millard, Mrs. Mary Mahlerwein, Mrs. Edith Bauer, Mrs. Anna Hobbs, Mrs. Carrie Keese, Mrs. Elizabeth Battey, Mrs. Emma Stekels, Mrs. Gertrude Le Richeaux and Mrs. Margaret Stevens.

An employe of the city engaged in removing the accumulation of snow in the downtown section by means of a plow, unintentionally performed an acrobatic feat when the plow struck an obstacle and caused the man at the helm to turn a complete somersault. Fortunately the 190 pounds ((by estimate) of humanity landed in a soft bed of the beautiful which had not as yet been trimmed down.

The work of removing snow has been going on for several days, it being deposited on the east bank of the river.

"AS A THING IS USED SO IT BRIGHTENS"

Newspapers are brightened by the advertising patronage of the merchants, and the merchants' stores are brightened by the use they make of the newspapers to bring to their counters buyers for the merchandise they have bought to sell—NOT TO KEEP.

THE NON-ADVERTISER, OR THE SPORADIC ADVERTISER

Is not a brightener of anything. He is the man who hides his head in the sand like an ostrich, expecting good times to knock at his door. He is in the same class as the man who hangs from his store a BUSINESS-IS-BUM sign, expecting people to fall all over themselves to relieve the congested condition of his shelves, counters and showcases.

SUCH A MAN MIGHT AS WELL LOCK HIS DOOR AND GO TO BED

For all the good he is to the mercantile life of the community. His way is not the way of the experienced and successful advertiser who never at any season of the year hides his merchandise behind a B.-I.-B. sign.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING TO LET PEOPLE KNOW THAT YOU ARE NOT TAKING A VACATION?

Nothing? Then begin now to advertise, keeping it up SIX DAYS EACH WEEK. It will brighten the community in which you live, and you will feel happy.

For the Children

A Two-year-old Who Plays Outdoors All Winter Long.

This delightful roly poly is the two-year-old newest baby in Mrs. Calvert's outdoor kindergarten at One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Morningside park, New York city. Most schools stop in June, but this outdoor one goes all the year, and the children play even in snowstorms. When it rains very hard Mrs. Calvert takes them home with her and buries fishes and charming seashells in her sand pile for them to dig out with little red and blue shovels. When Jack Frost takes charge of the park the children run and skip and do ring games like "Yes, I know the muffin man," and "Once there was a princess" to keep from getting cold toes. This also gives them red cheeks and happy dispositions. In the spring the park commissioner lets the children have four benches for a "house," and their teacher tells them lovely stories about the park flowers and leaves. Hot days they braid mats and learn to count by doing examples on the asphalt walks with pretty colored crayons. In the fall their teacher tells them all about seed babies and autumn leaves. Outdoors from 9 till 6 every day but Sundays is much nicer than going to school indoors. Don't you think so, too?

About Magnets.

The natural magnet, or loadstone, is an ore of iron, every molecule of which is composed of three atoms of iron and four atoms of oxygen gas.

This loadstone has the power of attracting small pieces of iron and if balanced and suspended will point nearly north and south.

Artificial magnets are pieces of iron or steel which have been under the action of either the loadstone or other magnets or of an electric current, or have been subjected to percussion while in certain positions.

Permanent magnets are those which retain their magnetic properties permanently. They are made of hard steel, in bars or bent in the form of a horseshoe.

Temporary magnets are those which retain their magnetic properties only as long as they are under the influence of other magnets or an electric current. They are bars of soft iron, either straight or bent like a horseshoe.

The poles of a magnet are the two points of greatest attraction and repulsion. They are near the two ends.

Beheadings.

Behead what falls in winter and leave the present time.

Behead a boys' toy and leave everything.

Behead that which is rowed and leave a cereal.

Behead the entire and leave a tear.

Behead a testament and leave not well.

Behead a part of a window and leave a Scotch maiden.

Behead a piece of furniture and leave an exclamation of pain.

Behead a low seat and leave a carpenter's necessity.

Behead a hurt and leave a part of the human body.

"Weezy Deezy."

The "weezy deezy" game is played as follows: Any number of boys and girls can participate.

Two players are chosen. One is named Weezy and the other Deezy. They are then blindfolded and supposed to be helpless. Weezy shouts, "Won't somebody here please help me and take this Deezy away?" Deezy shouts out: "There is somebody here annoying me. Won't somebody take him away from me?"

One player then pulls Weezy away, and another pulls Deezy away. Weezy and Deezy must then guess who pulled them away. If they can't guess correctly, then the players who pulled them away become Weezy and Deezy.

Boy Scout Movement.

The boy scout movement is not anti-military. The boy scout movement neither promotes nor discourages military training, its one concern being the development of character and personal efficiency of growing boys.

For Breakfasts.

NUT BREAD.—Three cupfuls sifted flour, two level teaspoonfuls baking powder, one scant cupful sugar, one scant cupful milk, one egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one cupful chopped nuts. Put into a baking tin and let rise fifteen minutes. Bake forty-five minutes in moderate oven.

Fig Popovers.—Sift one cupful of flour with one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat the yolk of one egg slightly, add one cupful of milk, pour the mixture slowly into the flour, beat until very smooth and finally fold in the stiffly beaten white. Butter hot gem pans, half fill them with the batter, drop a small steamed fig in each and bake in a hot oven. Serve with maple sirup.

French Rolls.—One pint milk, two eggs, one teaspoonful salt, three pints flour, three tablespoonfuls butter, one yeast cake and two teaspoonfuls sugar. Have the milk lukewarm; add to it the well beaten eggs and salt. Sift the flour and rub the butter into it. Mix the yeast and sugar together, working them with the back of a teaspoon until the yeast liquefies, then pour it into the milk and egg and add all these to the flour. Knead to a dough as for bread. Let it rise three hours, having the dough covered, that a crust may not form on the top, and keep it in a warm room free from drafts. Form into rolls and let these rise again about half an hour or until they are very light. The length of time will depend somewhat on the temperature of the room. Bake the rolls in a quick oven, brushing over with butter before baking to brown them more.

Raisin Bread.—Scald a pint of milk and beat into it a teaspoonful of melted butter and one of salt. When the mixture is lukewarm add half a yeast cake, dissolve in a half cupful of warm water, and beat in enough flour to make a good batter. Set in a warm room to rise for eight hours. Beat hard, add a cupful of flour and work in a cupful of halved raisins plentifully dredged with flour. Set to rise until light, then bake.

The Kauri Gum Diggings.

Kauri gum, found underground in New Zealand and dug to the amount of a million and a half pounds yearly, is used for furniture polishes and varnishes, and most of it is exported to America. The industry of digging it is unlike any other in the world. A kauri forest is a beautiful sight, but kauri gum country is treeless, barren and desolate, even and swampy very often, with singularly heavy, cloggy soil, out of which the gum formed on kauri pines of ancient and long vanished forests is dug or speared. There are whole stretches of this treeless kauri country with nothing but a little scrub and fern growing on it.

Marriage in France.

In France a man under twenty-five and a girl under twenty-one cannot marry without the consent of their parents if they are alive or of the survivor if one is dead. If both are dead the grandparents must be consulted if living. Even the would be bridegroom over twenty-five and the bride over twenty-one must ask the parental benediction. Over thirty and twenty-five they must give their parents or their representatives a month's clear notice of their intention to marry.

Bells.

Bells have been employed in association with religious worship since the early days of Egypt. Cymbals and hand bells and small crotals served for the festival of Isis. Aaron and other Jewish high priests wore bells of gold upon their raiment. In camp and garrison the Greeks employed bells. The Romans announced the hour of bathing by their melody. Copper and tin, the old composition, is still regarded as the best bell metal. Steel has been tried, but does not make a successful bell. Glass bells are mellow and beautiful in tone, but the material is too fragile. The one metal which is impossible is that which everybody imagines makes the best bell—silver.

OPPORTUNITIES.

Make the most of the opportunities within your reach. Is your present experience hard to bear? Yet remember that never again, perhaps, in all your days will you have another chance of the same. Do not fly the lesson, but have a care that you master it while you have the opportunity.—Edward Carpenter.

Woman's World

A Prima Donna Gives Her Home For War Sufferers.

MME. MELBA.

After sixteen months of personal service to war victims Mme. Melba recently gave the use of her apartment in Paris for an army hospital. Dr. Jane Wells Craven of Pittsburgh is superintendent in charge. The apartment will be known as the Melba Home hospital and will be used for the benefit of all soldiers of whatever nationality.

The gift of the hospital came as a surprise, topping the singer's systematic economies in dress, food and personal comforts.

"See my tight skirt," she said, pointing to a much worn serge. "I have bought neither gowns, hats nor blouses since the war began. I can't afford new garments until every suffering man, woman and child has food and shelter.

"This war was declared without consulting women, but our jobs as women seem to be well laid out for us, and where there is a will there's a way. I have lost all my men folk in this war, either by shot or insanity."

Mme. Melba said her apartment at 91 Avenue Henri Martin has large, airy rooms, with solarium and roof garden, and will accommodate 200 beds. Equipment for each bed will cost $25.

Mme. Melba has pledged even the maintenance of the majority of these, in memory of Arnold Quilter of the Grenadier guards, who fell at the Dardanelles.

TRAYS FOR EVERY USE.

A Variety of These Useful Articles For Every Household.

One of the most interesting details of the modern china closet is the tray. Trays for muffins, for sweets and services for tea and after dinner coffee are as popular as the breakfast tray. Whether or not the present status of breakfast as a movable feast is the result of the hectic existence mankind leads today it is hard to say.

If this meal is to be served in bed a delightful individual tray would be one with folding legs. Such a tray naturally contains only service for one. A variety of designs, however, may be found in this style of tray with individual sets of china suited to every purse.

For the member of the family who wishes only a cup of black coffee or tea with a dash of cream perhaps a small tray containing three pieces of silver to which is added the cup is a convenient service.

The after dinner coffee set has its own tray and is easily carried into the drawing room or library. At the country house, where all sorts of impromptu meals are served in the garden, the pantry must be supplied with trays of every description—black or white painted ones to accord with old furniture and quaint cottons, glass covered chintz ones set in wicker; even perfectly plain white enameled trays may be used. The housekeeper's soul will delight in the variety and beauty of this practical adjunct to housekeeping, and her only difficulty will be in selecting.

Eggplant Straws.

Cut into one-fourth inch slices an unpeeled eggplant. Salt each slice and press them for an hour or so under a heavy weight. Now cut the slices into equal lengths, about a fourth of an inch wide, discarding the skin; dry in a cloth and roll them in a mixture of equal parts of fine cornmeal and flour; season with pepper, salt and a slight dash of nutmeg. Drop a few at a time into salad oil (hot) and fry them until they are a delicate brown. Dry on a soft paper as you would French fried potatoes and serve at once while they are crisp and tender.

Attractive Blotters.

Guest room blotters are covered with stiff chintz covers, the blotter leaves inside being held in place by narrow satin ribbons. The chintz is the same as that used in the hangings of the room. On the outside cover of the blotter a picture, clipped from a magazine or Sunday paper, is pasted, and then the entire cover is shellacked. These blotters are very handy for guest room use and may be renewed cheaply and often enough to keep them fresh and inviting in appearance.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

One of the most charming of the season's evening gowns is shown here. It is fashioned from delicate pink chiffon mounted on rose satin, the two tones blending exquisitely. Overbodice and skirt foundation are of satin, with the draped tunic, underblouse and flowing sleeves of chiffon. The costume requires 4 yards 36-inch satin and 5 yards 44-inch chiffon

FIXING UP A PLAY.

The Method Charles Hoyt Used to Develop His Dramatic Plots.

Charles Hoyt wrote seventeen plays He would sit in the Pullman with the shade drawn down over his head and looking out of the window at nothing—thinking, studying over situations for some new play

He would not begin work on a new play until be had its arrangement laid out in his mind Then he would write it, longhand, in two or three days

He developed his situations by telling over and over and over again his scheme for a new play He would come to me. "Otie," he would say "have you heard my idea for a new play"

I would say that I had not. Then he would launch into it, elaborating as he went along He would see me, later in the day perhaps, with some one He would come up to us with the same question. "Otie, have you heard my idea for a new play?" knowing mighty well I had. He wouldn't wait for me to answer, but he would tell it to my companion, elaborating upon the version he had given me For each new play I probably would hear that same question twenty times and listen to twenty different versions, each succeeding one more developed and elaborate.—Green Book Magazine

Conscience.

"On what grounds do you desire to withdraw the plea of 'not guilty?' "

A Fetching Spring Frock

Design by Maison Maurice, New York.

A COMBINATION of organdie, lace and pussy willow taffeta is this pretty gown, so suitable for wear in warm climates. The taffeta jacket, which is cornflower blue, has a very frilly collar and cuffs and a box plaited peplum. The contrast between this and the belaced organdie skirt is most attractive. A surplice vest is also organdie, and the broad brimmed hat is topped with cornflowers.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

Re-enter, the Raglan Sleeve.

Spring coat of blue silk serge with raglan sleeves and wing pockets. The front is belted, while the back hangs loose and full.

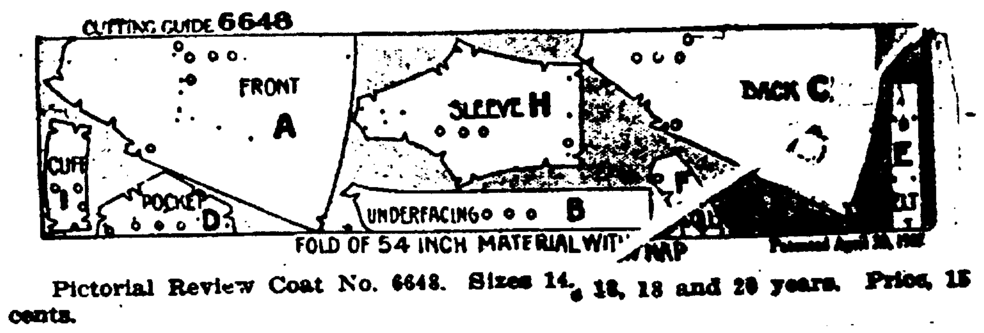
The raglan sleeve cannot truthfully be termed a "has been." Rather it has appeared less frequently on the stage of fashion during the past season. But it has assumed a leading role again, being shown on smart coats for spring wear. This design for juniors and misses is carried out in blue silk serge, trimmed with crochet buttons. In medium size the coat requires 3¼ yards 54-inch material.

There are no unsurmountable obstacles for the home dressmaker who attempts to cut this model. The serge is first carefully folded, after which the cuff is laid into position, as shown on the cutting guide. Next comes the pocket, placed very near the fold, then the underfacing, collar and belt. The two latter are laid directly on the lengthwise fold. On the upper row are the front, sleeve and back, all on a lengthwise thread of the serge.

The coat is an extremely practical as well as stylish model. The front may be closed to the neck and finished with a high chin collar, or rolled back to form revers, with rolling collar. The belt is slipped through the under-arm seam and laps at the center-front as the back hangs loose and full. The wing pocket strikes a note that is sounded in many smart outer garments for spring and summer.

If desired the cuffs and collar may be made of silk or satin. Just now silk seems to be the favorite coat trimming, for the corded effects such as faille, gros de Londres, etc., are not only beautiful but possess wearing qualities that the woman who must economize cannot afford to disregard.

Silks of all kinds—taffeta, faille, poplin and satin—will be seen in the spring coats.



Pictorial Review Coat No. 6648. Sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

CHINESE RULER IS LOVER OF MOVIES

Serial Installment Delay Causes Disappointment.

ENJOYS LITTLE LIBERTY.

Life in the Forbidden City Affords Few Diversions, Especially Since There Have Been Some Evidences of Disloyalty—President Takes Exercise in Drilling Section of Army.

YUAN SHIH KAI.

Peking.—Yuan Shih Kai is very fond of moving pictures, and he and all the members of his family attend a performance in the theater in the Forbidden City every week, when the films brought to the leading picture theater in Peking are shown for the entertainment of the Yuan household.

Recently Yuan Shih Kai, together with thousands of other interested movie patrons in Peking, has suffered a great disappointment. A mystery film to run for twelve weeks completed six installments of the story, but the seventh installment got lost somewhere in Sweden on its way over from London, and Peking was anxiously awaiting the unraveling of the plot. The young heroine of the film drama was seized by bandits when Peking last saw her, and residents of both the Forbidden City and the outer city are anxious to know more of her fate.

Life in the Forbidden City affords few diversions, especially since there have been some evidences of disloyalty among trusted employees. Consequently Yuan Shih Kai and his family enjoy little liberty.

The president takes his exercise chiefly in drilling a section of the modern army in the Forbidden City, while several of his sons play football and skate on the frozen lakes within the great walls inclosing the palace grounds.

Skating is also affording recreation for legation staffs and legation guards in Peking, which has been more or less isolated as a result of the bitter feeling growing out of the European war. Practically all of the legations have their own temporary skating rinks built in their compounds. These rinks are covered with bamboo matting to protect the ice from the sun and dust.

The American legation rink is practically the only rink in Peking where visitors of all European powers are entertained. However, the legation officers have set apart certain days for the entertainment of visitors belonging to the entente powers and different days for the German and Austrian guests.

IDEAL MAN FEARS NOTES.

News of Harvard Student's Perfect Figure Brings Scented Proposals.

Boston.—Harvard's "perfect man" is now worried over scented notes that now reach him through the mails. Other students say that as 1916 is leap year he may find much more sex problems than requests for photographs, indorsements and cast off clothes.

Bradford M. Fullerton, the ideal man, is reticent regarding the notes, but is ready to admit that being a "perfect man" has its disadvantages. This young athlete, captain of the Harvard varsity swimming team, whose measurements and posture dovetail with the specifications prescribed by the National Association of Merchant Tailors, has discovered that a young man with appropriate physique must withstand an avalanche of mail containing all sorts of proposals, queries and congratulations.

Everlasting Bricks.

Once made a brick is practically indestructible. Nearly every brick that has ever been made by man from the beginning of time is still in existence on this earth. The men who made and laid them and who directed these operations have long since been gathered into dust. Some of them have doubtless contributed in their bodies to the making of more bricks. But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.—Exchange.

ACROBATIC SQUIRREL KILLED

Schoolgirls See "Tight Rope Walking" Pet Die.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—Jack, the "tight rope walking" gray squirrel, is dead. Jack was the pet of a girls' school because of his wonderful achievements in walking along a telephone cable. He would travel this way for blocks. The girls at the school fed him with nuts, which they would place on a pole near their windows.

One day in fun a girl broke off an icicle under the window ledge and handed it to Jack to use as a balancing stick. He soon became a proficient in balancing and would sit and beg for nuts. He was doing this when suddenly one end of the icicle broke, causing Jack to lose his balance and fall fifty feet to the ground. When the girls picked him up Jack was breathing his last.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Some people seem to think that they can run the universe and how mistaken they are. As a matter of fact it has been proven throughout the ages that NOT ALWAYS shall one and the same man serve the people in a certain way. People want changes sometimes and no matter how strong we may think we are, there will come a time when the smaller fellow will become the leader instead of the so-called big fellow.

Is not the universe an immense workship in which no man can be idle, in which the very least of us are doing our part in a mighty work, in which the machine goes on and turns out what it has made and is creating incessantly, whether it be simple fermentations or things that the of the utmost perfection? The fields ripe with harvest have been at work; forests are at work when the trees put forth their foliage; oceans, as they roll their waves from one continent to another, work; and worlds, borne by the rhythm of their gravitation through infinite space, are at work. There is not one being, not one thing in all the universe, that can be IDLE. Everything is impelled to work, is put to work, and is forced to do its part in the work common to all. Whatever does not do its work at once DISAPPEARS, and is rejected as USELESS and SUPERFLUOUS. It must give place to what will work—to some worker who is indispensable.

And how admirably can work regulate things; what order it creates wherever it reigns. It is PEACE and JOY, as well as HEALTH. I am amazed when I see it dispised, belittled, looked upon as a shame or as a punishment. There is no such thing as HAPPINESS, unless we place it in the united happiness of perpetual, united labor. And that is why I wish that someone would preach to the world the religion of labor, and sing hosannas to labor, as a savior, the only true source of health, peace and happiness.

Because you are blue, don't be yellow.

Why mail order houses flourish, —listen to what Herman Rosenfield, advertising manager of Sears, Roebuck — Co., recently told the members of the American Ad club at a convention: "We have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these newspapers and when we find a town WHERE THE MERCHANTS ARE NOT ADVERTISING IN THE LOCAL PAPER we IMMEDIATELY FLOOD that territory with OUR LITERATURE. It always brings RESULTS far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local papers." Could we find a stronger argument as to the need of advertising by the local merchant? Is it a wonder that we do not have the trade in FULTON we are so positively ENTITLED to? Who is to blame?

If the merchants in FULTON only KNEW what it means to them to advertise in LOCAL PAPERS, they would NEVER advertise in papers outside of the city.

* * *

Late Saturday evening there were more FULTON people on Salina street, Syracuse, with packages, than in the city of FULTON itself. We are going to start a new and very unique movement to GET the person trading out of town and this will be a picnic when it is under way.

* * *

Have you ever heard of a fool who did not know what he was doing? Well, we have a few of them in FULTON.

The fellow who does not want to recognize his own blood relations, because they did something a little off color, is not worth living and the good Lord will deal with him sooner or later, especially if this fellow thinks he is quite a fellow himself and has the habit of occupying the front pew in church on Sunday morning.

* * *

Begin NOW to think of planting flowers in the springtime. Do not forget that you can get seeds for almost nothing and that you will improve the looks of YOUR city a thousand-fold.

* * *

Have YOU made arrangements to help clean up the vicinity of FULTON as soon as the snow has disappeared?

Pathfinder Island Will Be Preserved the Coming Season

Pathfinder Island is not to become overgrown with weeds, nor is it to be consigned to a has-been spot for the propagation of families of goats—that is not this year; and, if one may judge by the enthusiasm displayed last evening at the Citizens Club where fifty odd men sat to dinner, later resolving themselves into a meeting for the purpose of discussing ways and means of preventing the beauty spot from falling into the hands of goat ranchers. No such fate is in store for the Island—no never.

The meeting, made up mainly of stand-byes for the Pathfinder Club, was called for the Citizens Club, with two purposes in view, one of which was to introduce strangers to the cuisine of the clubhouse; the other for the purpose of bringing to the fore the importance of adopting heroic measures for the preservation of the historic Island. Both objects were attained and, more than that, for it was the sentiment of everybody that the coming season shall pass into history as the season of seasons. No program was mapped out last night for the season, as that is a job left for the executive committee to handle.

A meeting of this committee will occur Friday evening when a tentative program will be prepare.

Millions for Roads to Be Improved All Over United States

Washington—One hundred and fifty million dollars will be expended in country-wide roads improvement during the next five years, if the co-operation between the national government and the several states set forth in the measure reported to the senate by its committee on postoffices and post roads as a substitute for the Shackleford house good roads bill finds approval.

Senator Bankhead's committee dissented from the legislation passed in the house in that it preferred a definite sum per year rather than "any amount up to $25,000,000;" believed that the money should only be expended for construction or improvement and not for maintenance; and also included in the distribution to the several states the additional factor of area, besides population and post road mileage.

In both bills the states match the federal dollars, but the Bankhead bill definitely calls foor $5,000,000 in 1916; $10,000,000 in 1917; $15,000,000 in 1918; $20,000,000 in 1919; and $25,000,000 in 1920. Incidently the senate substitute requires that a state shall establish a state highway department, though its apportionment remains to its credit for at least three years, so that the five states which, have yet to adopt the policy of the other states will have ample time in which to comply with his reasonable supervision of the expenditure of the joint money.

If a state does not properly maintain a road constructed by the federal and state authorities, which roads are decided upon by the secretary of agriculture and the state highway department, the sec-

Gasoline Club Hopes to Secure Supply of Western Gasoline

Watertown—It has been suggested by the Watertown Gasoline Club that gasoline be shipped from the western oil fields by boat to Cape Vincent or Sackets Harbor, where it would be transported by the New York Central, or motor trucks could be provided if necessary to bring it to this city. This step would be taken to lower the price and place it within the reach of autoists.

Inquiry was made at the fire department this morning by a representative of the Watertown Gasoline Club relative to the provisions which must be observed in the handling and storage of gasoline in large quantities. Fire Chief H. C. Bundy stated that it would be impossible to permit the distribution of the fluid to members in steel barrels, to be stored by car owners on their premises and drawn from as they desire. The barrels hold 60 gallons and a permit is required from the fire department where more than five gallons is stored. "If you get proper tanks you can keep as much as the Standard Oil Co.," remarked the chief.

Two methods of handling the gas here aren ow under consideration: The purchase and erection of tanks for storing large quantities, similar to the various oil concerns now operating with the Standard Oil Co. here; the establishment of headquarters just without the city limits, where the gas can be stored in barrel lots. In either case it will be necessary to have a caretaker to look after the property and prevent its destruction.

It is pointed out that the Standard Oil Co. has ac omplete and thorough control of the product, both gasoline and oil of all grades, in this city. This has been brought about not only through the creation of so-called independent local companies handling Standard oil, but by the free installation of tanks with curb pumps for retail dealers, who will sell Standard oil at Sandard prices.

While there is some complaint as to the grade of gasoline received here the price is the principal issue and it is for a reduction of price as well as a better grade of gasoline that the club is working. Gasoline today is retailing at 27 cents a gallon in this city, and ti can be truthfully predicted that unless thep rice goes below 20 cents by the opening of the season there will be a great many second hand cars for sale at low figures.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EXHIBIT IN STORE SHOW WINDOWS

There is now on exhibit work of some of the public school pupils in the special departments of the schools. This exhibit will continue for one week. The public is urged to examine the work presented.

The exhibit is as follows:

Wood work done in Manual Training under the supervision of Prof. J. A. Lawton, in the windows of the Palmer-Hope Co. This work has been done by pupils in the 7th and 8th grades and by high school students.

Work done in the handwork department, which is under the supervision ofg Miss Nancy C. Cook, will be displayed in Lasher's show windows.

Work done in drawing under the supervision of Miss Alla K. Brewster by high school pupils is displayed in one of the windows of the People's Hardware Co., as is also work in the stenographic department which is under the supervision of Miss Jane Waugh.

Work in the commercial department under the instruction of Miss Adelaide E. Lowerre is exhibited at Smith's Hardware store.

The United States proposes to pay Nicaragua $3,000,000 for the definite, permanent and exclusive right to construct a transoceanic canal across Nicaraguan territory. The route is believed to be practical, and the United States wishes to shut off foreign competition with its Panama waterway.

It is conceded that reprisals must not hurt neutrals, but those air raids on open and defenseless towns and cities slaughter women and children for no reason but reprisal.

"Shirt sleeve diplomacy" and "dollar diplomacy" may have to yield before "get there diplomacy" as the trademark of the American brand.

In the British casualty lists there are 100 heirs of families with titles among the killed. The other 120,200 slain were merely breadwinners.

If one must take a voyage the South American waters will be found clear of mines and other subterranean dangers—for awhile.

Many people are puzzled to know just what preparedness is. If war comes they may speedily know what it isn't.

"Parificist" is the softer and therefore the more suitable word, perhaps, because it takes the "fist" out of "pacifist."

Peace seems to be waiting on a motion from some party not too proud to stop fighting.

Knocking the United States navy will never make up its shortages in officers and men.

The mere possibility of war justifies taking a stitch in time to save nine others.

But doing preparedness early is not enough unless it is done thoroughly.

INVERTED VALUES

Professor Fisher of Yale says a baby is worth $90; a grown person $4,000.

I always knew that money talks,
But now I know it hollers;
Oh, hushaby, oh lullaby,
My little ninety dollars.

They say that riches all take wings,
My trepidation follers;
Oh, hushaby, or lullaby,
My little ninety dollars!

The moon looks down the livelong night
And shines upon the cholera,
Amused to see four thousand plunks
Walk ninety little dollars.

Watch Child's Cough

Colds, running of nose, continued irritation of the mucous membrane if neglected may mean Catarrh later. Don't take the chances—do something for your child! Children will not take every medicine, but they will take Dr. King's New Discovery and without bribing or teasing. Its a sweet pleasant Tar Syrup and so effective. Just laxative enough to eliminate the waste poisons. Almost the first dose helps. Always prepared, no mixing or fussing. Just ask your druggists for Dr. King's New Discovery. It will safe-guard your child against serious ailments resulting from colds.

A Carlyle View.

Carlyle compared the advance of the world to the progress of some drunken man who, reeling from one side of the street to the other, slowly and at the expense of much wasted effort finally arrives at his destination.

LAY ON, MY LORD!

Now that notice is served by the Chamber of Commerce Secretary of an impending scrap, the writer of an editorial objectionable to the official accepts whatever peril is in store; but before inviting the real disaster asks: Would he have us drop the issue where it is? or would he have us prosecute it with elder-stalk squirts charged with sweet-scented rose-water? We disdain the use of swords, preferring a more civilized form of warfare—if war there must be.

For months this newspaper has maintained a pilot on the captain's bridge all the time, all day and night. The pilot has seen in the offing something of the perils that are creeping upon the Chamber of Commerce—perils that will break on March 31st unless they are forestalled. This paper recognizes the necessity of preparing to meet the peril by sounding the channel; by determining that men who claim to be business pilots and who hold office in the Chamber of Commerce are unworthy of their positions, and unfitted to remain on any bridge representing a community.

Now if the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce wants to determine upon drawing a sword, the result might be fatal to his preferred adversary who insists upon finding a way to repel attacks without resorting to a weapon any more dangerous than an elder-stalk. If he prefers to believe that good can come out of the coming election by keeping a foot on the soft pedal, then let him bring on his sword, grindstone and all; but before the duel is begun we would remind him of a recovered gem out of a talk of Abraham Lincoln—"Stand with anybody while he is right and part with him when he is wrong."

Please, Mr. Secretary, read Mr. Lincoln over three times and pack him away in your mind for good. Then try first to set right the wrong and start afresh. Let us have a fair chance with our elder-stalk squirt gun. Remember that we are trying to speak the right word, believing also that we have succeeded, it is up to you to do the right deed at the right time which will make it easier for the people of this community to rise to the level of their opportunity. Fulton should be our little world, according to your teachings; and when you and The Evening Times, you in your little corner and the paper in it's, are on the watch with sword and squirt gun to do this, we will touch the men next to us and our little city will be better to live in.

What will you have? Rose-water?

Fire Chief Waugh along with nearly 12,000 citizens (including the taxpayers) is enjoying the respite given by the fabled fire fiend who seems to be lurking around some towns in a most reprehensible manner.

Now simmer it right down—why do the residents beyond the Great Divide say to the residents on the other side, "You're a snob?" Is it because one doesn't notice the other one?

"LOOK IN THE WINDOWS"

(A Contribution)

A walk down First st. on any of the remaining days of this week is something which every citizen of Fulton owes to himself and to the educational system of our city.

Many years ago in ancient Sparta the government aimed to evolve a perfect soldier—today our state aims to evolve a "prepared citizen. The word "prepared" is used in a political and economic sense—a citizen with mental and physical powers so correlated that they work together in perfect unison. It matters little whether that unison be directed toward completing a perfect sheet of typewriting, a page of well balanced accounts, a table with good proportions and construction, or a ring artistically designed and faultlessly carved—in all the underlying idea is the same.

Years ago the aim of our educational system was to turn out students well drilled in the manners and methods of work—but today, educators have advanced further and to method is added execution.

These new branches of high school work help to make more practical and therefore more valuable to the individual as well as to the community the work of our schools.

The question often comes up: "Why do the schools of today cost more than they did twenty years ago?" The answer is a simple one—we are doing more for the pupils to day than we did twenty

Opinions

OUR CREED

We believe in working, not weeping; in boosting not knocking and in the pleasure of our job.

We believe a man gets what he goes after; that one deed done today is worth two deeds tomorrow, and that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself.

We believe in today and the work we are doing, in tomorrow and work we hope to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds.

We believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship and honest completion.

We believe there is something doing somewhere for every man ready to do it.

We believe we are ready right now. —Exchange.

GOOD AND BAD "RISKS"

Your life is not worth a dime, not even a battered-up nickel, according to insurance companies, if you are listed among the "faltal seven," which consists of steeplejacks, aviators, soldiers, dynamite employes, jockeys, auto racers and grooms who ride to the hounds.

Insurance companies will not insure persons in some walks of life. They will take a chance on a soldier in time of peace, but a "rider" in his policy makes it void during war. The other chaps in the "fatal seven" they won't insure at all.

There are other "undesirables"—sailors, prison guards, bridgebuilders, ironworkers and players in the movies. Insurance companies charge high rates when insuring any persons of these occupations. Actresses are too temperamental for traveling, so the insurance people say, and they have to travel, according to the risk firms. Distillery workers pay $20 per $1,000 for policies.

Strangely enough, the best risks are commercial travelers— because they are so familiar with the perils of travel they seldom get hurt. Only 10 per cent of their accident policies are collected. School teachers are also considered good risks.—Batavia News.

PORTUGAL IN THE WAR

Germany's declaration of war against Portugal was the only possible thing after Portugal had seized all the German and Austrian ships in her harbors, the property of individuals, and had run up the Portuguese flag over each of them. Berlin has known since the war began that Portugal would join England on call. But it may be shrewdly guessed that Germany would have preferred to keep Portugal out as long as possible owing to the vast Portugese interests in Africa, and the increased difficulty of holding on to German possessions with the Portugese in the open for the Allies.

For the present "war" between Portugal and Germany is about what war between Germany and the United States would be. Neither side will hurt the other much. Geographical considerations, however, prohibit the figure of a "duel with broadswords at 20 paces." If Germany is not crushed, Portugal will be crushed, And at any time conditions may dictate military or naval activity against the little republic.

Portugal is the thirteenth power to be involved in actual war. She is not very strong, has an army of 30,000 men with 230,000 reserves, and claims only 870,000 fighting men. Her navy is negligible. Her foreign debt is to England and her close affiliation with Great Britain depends on many elements that have been potent ever since the Napoleonic wars.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PREPAREDNESS FOR PEACE AND WAR

Let is be asked in all fairness. What greater argument for preparedness that spells national honor and implies national security can be advanced than the one presented today by our humiliations and helplessness on the Mexican border? Bandits less than a thousand strong have invaded our territory, slaughtered our citizens and then, their lust of blood partly satisfied, have fled over the line and at the end of a few miles, by a superiority of numbers that made attack a crime, withstood the little band of pursuers and forced it into an inglorious retreat

The ever imminent dangers of such forays have been foretold for months Experienced army officers and citizens of the southern frontier have time and again prophesied the perils and pleaded for the strength to overcome them. But no; and so a thin blue line of American soldiers was stretched along the outer edge of the crater and was called upon to do what its numbers could not do, nor in any world of sanity should have been expected to do. It is altogether too pathetic for telling.

But what about the larger outlook? What has happened along the Rio Grande and the western edge of the danger zone is symptomatic of what may overwhelm us later unles Congress responds to the warnings of the hour. These sleeping legislators must awaken from their sloth, their indifference and their ignorance and prepare—prepare for the greater perils brooding in the wickedness and the ruthlessness of the world war, in its inspired hatreds and its slumbering revenges. But will Congress awake on still supinely "put the question by?"—N. Y. Herald.

TALKS ON THRIFT

THRIFT CAMPAIGN SERIES

No. 6—Whiskey's Decreasing Tax on Thrift

Whatever may be the consensus of opinion as to the necessity for and desirability of acoholic liquors as beverages, no thinking man will deny that drinking is an expensive habit, costly both to the individual and to the State. A dollar can be spent quicker and with less to show for it at the bar than in any other way, and the man who is a "good spender" and keeps pace with the crowd around the social glass must keep a pace that kills.

Of late years the production and consumption of liquors and beer has increased enormously, and from observation one would conclude that everybody drinks a little and most people too much. The resultant evils are widespread and far-reaching, even to the third and fourth generation, for the cost does not end with the waiter's check, but with the bills for police, almshouses, prisons and Potter's fields.

The man who indulges this habit must realize that he is putting a self-imposed tax upon his thrift, as well as a tax upon his energies. Of what avail to work hard and then spend to no useful end? Why work for the man who stands behind the bar? Why spend a day's wages in half an hour and get nothing for it but a thrill? If the State should put the same tax upon his income that he puts upon himself, he would rebel. Then, too, he who spends his money thus must realize that he is simply putting money in the bank for the other fellow. It may take a circuitous route to get there, but eventually it will find lodgment in some bank, where it will work for somebody, perhaps harder than he worked for it. And the easiest way to get it in a bank quick—to the other fellow's account—is to buy the drinks for the crowd.

Cheering news along this line comes from Government reports on the consumption of liquor for the past year. Alcohol is lessening its tax upon thrift. The consumption of liquor in 1913 was 143,220,056 gallons. In 1914 it was 139,138,501 gallons, while in 1915 it was 125,155,178 gallons, a net decrease of 18 million gallons in two years. Likewise in the matter of tobacco. In 1915 we burned up six hundred million less cigars than heretofore in a single year, and the Government's tobacco revenues decreased $2,500,000. One hundred and eight distilleries went out of business in 1915 and forty one breweries ceased to brew. Forty per cent of our Government revenues have been derived from liquor taxes, and in 1915 these revenues fell off over twentytwo million dollars.

Whatever may be the cause for this commendable showing—whether because of the thoughts of war and what it might mean, or whether as a people we are beginning to realize that this is a tax; or whether it is because in many places you can't get a lawful drink, the fact remains that we are drinking less and saving more.

Whether a man figures that drinking is expensive, or harmful, matters little as long as he stops. This conclusion is very apt to fatten his pocketbook somewhat and pad his pay envelope and make him a better citizen. When he concludes that indulgence in any form of extravagance can get him nowhere but downwards, and thrift will surely get him upwards, he has chosen well; for thrift consists not only in doing some things, but refraining from doing others, the chief of which is that habit which takes your all and gives nothing in return but regret, and regrets are costly emotions.—American Bankers Association.

Starting It.

Mrs. Naggs—I don't feel like myself tonight. Mr. Naggs—Then we ought to have a very pleasant evening.

years ago. Today is a day of specialities. The world has no place for the jack of all trades. When the boys and girls leave high school to enter into the business of life the competition is going to be greater than the competition of twenty years. Whether or not they succeed is going to depend on their preparation. That preparation is, today, being most carefully planned and directed by Superintendent Fairgrieve to whose efforts Fulton owes much of the advancement which has been shown in our educational system during the last few years. His interests, efforts, and encouragement have been fundamental in establishing and directing to their high state of efficiency our new departments —commercial work, drawing, manual training, handwork and applied arts.

TEDDY BEAR CREATOR DEAD IN PHILADELPHIA

Lansdowne, Pa.— Seymour Eaton died of heart disease at his home here today. He was fifty-six years old. A widow and three sons survive him.

Mr. Eaton was widely known as author, advertising expert and founder of many enterprises. He founded the Booklovers' and Tabard Inn libraries which had some vogue as distributors of popular literature several years ago.

Another original achievement of Mr. Eaton's was the creation of the Teddy Bears, which became so famous that they inspired the invention of the furry stuffed pet still dear to the arms of babyhood.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

The primaries in Indiana have afforded a practical demonstration of Republican reunion upon a basis of complete sympathy. The unusually large vote was produced by the general participation of former Progressives—and it is significant that, despite the provision of the law for challenging voters which Democrats had enacted in order to bedevil Republicans, absolutely no effort was made to prevent the full and free co-operation of the foes of four years ago in making up the party ticket for this year.

The old-line Republicans of Indiana marched to the polls with their one-time antagonists in the complete assurance that there are no differences in the essential Republicanism of the two groups who now make up a reunited party which is soon to secure an old-fashioned victory.

We do not believe, however, that these conditions are peculiar to Indiana. In every State where Republican majorities once prevailed and where a divided Republican vote was cast in 1912, there are indications of the same liberal spirit that animates the Republicans of Hoosierdom. Former Progressives are taking part in Republican primaries, are candidates for Republican nominations, and are seeking election as delegates to Republican conventions or as members of Republican committees. Nobody is questioning their right to do these things. No one is trying to exact an apology from them for anything that has occurred. They are now in the Republican party as of right, intending to deal fairly and asking only to be dealt with fairly. They have come back neither boastingly nor in shame, but, like the free men that they are, to the party of liberty, where the will of the majority shall be definitely ascertained and unhesitatingly adopted.

Indiana, as the first of thep rimary States of 1916, has shown to the country what the Republicanism of 1916 is. It is a body of citizens and of sentiment wherein the best and the highest that may be had for this land of ours is most worthily expressed. We are Americans first; and we are Republicans, all.

NINE CATS FIGURE IN FIGHT ON $500,000 WILL

New York—Nine hungry cats play an important part in the disposition of half a million dollars.

The cats belonged to Mrs. Jane E. Barney, widow of Hiram B. Barney, wealthy merchant. Prior to her death on November 9 last, she allowed the cats at times to nibble at food from the dishes she was eating from.

When she drew her last will she left seventeen cousins $1,000 each. To another cousin, Louis V. Ennis, of No. 539 West One Hundred and Fortyeighth street, she left the bulk of her estate. The seventeen are contesting the will, alleging incompetency.

Origin of an Old Saw.

"A feather in your cap" arose from a custom of woodcraft enthusiasts, and in Scotland today the one who kills the first woodcock plucks out a feather and proudly wears it in his cap. ## PLEA TO SAVE RAGS SENT OUT BY U. S.

Washington— Shortage of paper stock in the United States was discussed at a conference today between Secretary Redfield and Charles A. Holder, of the foreign trade advisers office.

France's embargo of the export of rags may cause many American manufacturers to curtail production of their mills. The Department of Commerce recently appealed to housewives to save old papers and rags.

Today the department began sending out 1,000,000 circulars to be posted in post offices and elsewhere throughout the country urging that papers and rags be saved.

Unhappiness Due to Apparent Indifference, Says Paul Kowalski

In the issue of March 9th, The Evening Times carried an article to the effect that residents and property owners in West 1st st., between Phillips and Kellogg sts., were up in arms—yes, worse than that— that they were saying things about a certain Polish family and, a city property owner in that vicinity, in particular. The item referred to the action of Mr. Paul Kowalski as agent in a real estate transaction which resulted in an alleged undesirable tenant moving into the neighborhood. The Times' informant stated that Mr. Kowalski rented the house to foreigners after endeavoring to sell the house to neighboring property owners.

Mr. Kowalski admits the accusations, submitting a communication which in substance is as follows: In answer to the statement or article in The Evening Times of March 9th, in regard to tenants failing to please the owners, Mr. Kowalski states that the alleged objecting owners were given ample time to buy the property in the vicinity. The house was vacant and could not be rented because of some ill feeling toward its owners. At one time the objecting neighbors could have bought the property at a reasonable price. They failed to buy because they wanted to secure it, avers Mr. Kokalski, at "a song and dance" price. He further alleges that when neighboring property owners were notified of the intention of the owner to lease it, with an option of buying, to foreigners, the neighbors thought the announcement a bluff. Mr. Kowalski now believes he has made good his word to sell to foreigners, concluding his statement thusly:

"And now Mr. Property Owners of the vicinity of Phillips st. if you do not want foreigners as Polish, Russian or European nationalism in your vicinity, I ask you to call and consult with the agent."

ROMANCE AT THE QUIRK

"When Love is King," an Edison photoplay in five parts, released through Kleine-Edison Features, will be shown at the Quirk theatre today. As its title implies it deals with a romance, but there is enough action and spice in it to satisfy the most exacting. The theme deals with the love affairs of a King and a young American girl whose daddy finally buys a Kingdom, titles and all, to make smooth sailing for the youthful monarch and his daughter. Those privileged to see this picture in advance of its regular release, pronounce it one of the very best produced by the Edison studio. The setting and scenery is said to be of exceptional order and demonstrates the earnest attention paid to minute details in all Kleine-Edison Features. Four Universal reels complete a nine-reel show.

STATE LAND BANK MAKING HEADWAY

Albany—Savings and loan associations with total resources of nearly $22,000,000 have become members of the Land Bank of the State of New York. The operation of this new institution will be commented upon in the forthcoming annual report of State Superintendent of Banks Eugene Lamb Richards on savings and loan associations of the State.

"The organization of the Land Bank of the State of New York," says Superintendent Richards, "was completed and commenced business during the year. It is probable that no institution was ever organized which has been more misrepresented both by its avowed advocates and its opponents than the corporation that is now beginning business so modestly and so economically. It is intended to be a central institution for all the local savings and loan associations of the State with power to assist them in procuring money to loan upon real estate values, both urban and rural, on reasonable terms.

"Notwithstanding the difficulties encountered and the fact that the times have hardly been suitable for its rapid development, its first issue of bonds has been sold upon a 4 1-2 per cent. basis and its affairs have been so economically and conservatively managed that after paying all expenses incident to its organization, a small surplus has been aculated from its profits."

AN IMPORTANT DECISION IN BANKRUPTCY LAW

Washington— Some knotty questions in bankruptcy law have just been decided by the Supreme Court.

In upholding the validity of a transfer of land, although the deed was not recorded until within four months of bankruptcy, while the law designates an invalid certain deeds if not recorded within that time, the court held that the law meant to invalidate only deeds required by local law to be recorded to make them valid as to creditors. In so holding the court reversed the interpretation given the bankruptcy law in nearly 20 Western States and sustained the interpretations in New York, Vermont and several other States.

BOWLING LIFE IS RESUMED

Fulton Men Outclassed Oswego Opponents In Last Night's Rolling.

By defeating the All-Oswego bowlers on the Onyx alleys last night, the All-Fulton team has the lead in the series of home and home matches which will be bowled to de termine the championship of the county. Three of the matches have been bowled so far and two have been won by the local team.

A feature of the bowling last night was the reverses which several of the men suffered. Feeley, of the Oswego outfit, who has always proved to be one of the leaders in matches, bowled entirely out of form from the start. Painter, of the locals, also had a repetition of bad fortune which has entered into his bowling in the past week. Rear and Stauring shared the individual honors, the former by rolling high game of 228 and the latter by obtaining a high total of 607. The local bowlers not only took two of the three games but rolled up a higher total than their adversaries.

CONCORD BATTLE WITH TIGERS

Syracuse Visitors Will Come Swathed In Belts of Honor, But Tigers Are Brave Too

An interesting game of basketball is looked for tomorrow night when the Y. M. H. A. Concords of Syracuse will oppose the Tigers at the City Hall. The visiting team is contending for the 95-pound championship of Syracuse and is expected to give the locals a hard tussel notwithstanding the fact taht there will be much difference in the weight of the respective teams. The Syracuse boys are exceptionally fast and will be seen to advantage on the small court here.

The Tigers, in preparation for this game and another encounter scheduled for Saturday with the I. C. U. team of this city have been practicing diligently for a week and should give a good account of themselves, in the opinion of Captain Murphy.

The line up follows:

| Concords | | Tigers |
|---|---|---|
| Pearlman | | Murphy |
| | Left Forwards | |
| Kuffman | | Larabee |
| | Right Forwards | |
| Seekin | Center | Palmer |

POOL TOURNAMENT PROMISES GOOD SPORT

The Maccabees and Woodmen's pool teams will engage in the first match of a series tomorrow night, the event taking place in the Maccabee rooms. Twelve men will play on each team and each player will meet every one of the twelve men on the opposite team in two games. A similar series of pool matches was played in the fall between the Maccabees and Odd Fellows which resulted in a victory by a wide margin for the former's team.

SAY U. S. PLACED AEROPLANE ORDERS

Buffalo—That the Curtiss Aeroplane Company is in receipt of a rush order from the United States government for a large number of huge "battleplanes," was a rumor current in Buffalo today, which gained no confirmation at the local plant.

"The United States army has been ordering motors from time to time, one or two or three, but we have not built the army any machines for almost a year," said an official at the Churchill Street plant. "We have built some machines for the United States army but they have been delivered months and months ago. As yet we have heard nothing of any big rush order, or any other kind or order."

It is rumored that huge planes are being built at the Curtiss plant of a size and efficiency designed to combat theg reat Fokker machines which have a wing spread of 130 or 140 feet by 10 feet, and which can carry 30 men. These flyers have three engines.

A Curtiss official this forenoon said that they had received no recent orders from any country and were working on "old stuff."

FEDERATION WILL NOT DISCUSS SUFFRAGE

Watertown—No suffrage speakers will appear on the program at the convention of the Northern Federation of Woman's Clubs, which will be held in this city in June. The statement was made by Mrs. Francis H. Lamon, chairman of the program committee, this morning that there were plenty of other speakers who could be engaged. Mrs. Lamon is one of thep rominent suffrage workers of northern New York.

The program for the convention has not been completely arranged as yet.

BULGARS REFUSE TO SEND TROOPS TO WEST

Geneva— German has requested Bulgaria to send two divisions to the French front, according to information received here from Bucharest. The Bulgarian government declined, the advices state, owing to the uncertain attitude of oumania.

The correspondent of the Berne Bund at Austria headquarters in Albania telegraphs that the Austrians have advanced far southward since their capture o fDurazzo, the talians and Albanians retiring on Aviona, blowing up bridges behind them. Slight skirmishes only have taken place, the correspondent states, but a pitched battle is expected soon near Avlona.

REORGANIZE BRITISH WAR DEPARTMENT

London—As a result of the appointment of Lord Robert Cecil as Minister of War Trade a reorganization of the various departments concerned is under way. Efforts are being made to concentrate the various activities of the foreign office, the Admiralty, the Board of Trade and the Special War Trade Department. While the foreign office must continue to have the last word regarding diplomatic relations with foreign countries, it will be relieved as far as possible of any hand in the mere details of blockade affairs.

USE BARRELS TO KEEP SHIPS AFLOAT

London —The Zeeland Company will resume its service across the English Channel between Tilbury, England and Flushing, Holland, on next Saturday, and will fill the holds of its paddle boats with empty barrels. This precaution, it is believed, will keep the vessels afloat longer in the event of their striking a mine. For the purpose 2,500 empty barrels will be used.

Very Modish In Men's Wear Serge.

Dark green men's wear serge is used to superb effect in fashioning this one-piece frock. The collar may be of lace or white silk.

Nothing exceeds in style and practical use the one-piece frock of serge. This model is in dark green and the open neck of the waist is trimmed with a flare collar. The attached skirt is a four-piece model with high waist-line. In medium size the model requires 4⅝ yards 54-inch serge, with ⅝ yard lace 18 inches wide for the collar.

Carefully study the construction guide and all will go easily in making the dress. First close the under-arm and shoulder seams. Turn under the front slashed edge of front section on slot perforations and baste. Gather lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Gather entire lower edge of left front. Adjust stay to position under gathers, center-backs and large "O" perforations at lower edges even, small "o" perforation in stay at under-arm seam. Center-front of waist indicated by line of large "O" perforations. Face flare collar, sew to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

Next, close sleeve seams as notched, terminating dart at small "o" perforation. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Then join skirt gores as notched, leaving seam to left of center-front free above large "O" perforation in front gore for a placket. Form box-pleats, creasing on lines of slot perforations, bring folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations; stitch about ⅛ inch from folded edges as illustrated on reverse side of envelope (to any desired depth) and press pleats. Adjust skirt to position; stitching upper edge over upper row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even. Bring the folded edge of the extension at lower edge of waist front, to corresponding small "o" perforations in the box-pleat on skirt and tack the waist to position at the upper edge of skirt.

Pleat the belt, bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforations and tack. Adjust belt to position, upper edge of belt about ⅛ inch above upper edge of skirt, center-backs even; fasten the front ends of belt on the waist front as illustrated, with the pleats in belt turning downward.

Trim with small fancy buttons.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6668. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

THE SPRING MODEL.

For Juveniles Comes This Good Looking Sports Coat.

SMART LINES.

One of the new coats comes in this rough weave of tan cloth, with velvet collar and cuffs and brass buttons as trimming. Belted waist line and reversible collar, along with the flare, are its good points.

The Kitchen Cupboard

SNAPPY WINTER CUES.

ICING.—Boil two cupfuls of granulated sugar and half a cupful of water until they spin a thread; pour in a fine stream over the well beaten whites of four eggs, beating constantly. When cool add half a pound of marshmallows, each one cut in four pieces. The marshmallows should not melt in the icing, which should be exceedingly light and fluffy. Flavor to taste.

Stewed Prunes and Kumquats.—Cut in halves a cupful of kumquats and soak and stone two cupfuls of prunes. Cook the prunes in the water in which they were soaked for an hour; then add sugar to taste and the kumquats. Cook until the latter are tender, but not broken. About half an hour will be required.

Sauce For Raw Oysters.—Take one dessertspoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of olive oil, one-half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, the juice of one-half a lemon and one-half teaspoonful of tabasco sauce. Add a little salt and half an onion, grated fine.

Vinaigrette Dressing.—Mix together a teaspoonful of salt, dash each of pepper and paprika, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, five of olive oil and one tablespoonful each of chopped cucumber pickle, chopped green pepper, chopped parsley and chopped chives. Add a few capers just before serving. This dressing must be very cold.

Anchovy Sandwiches.—Now that there are so many afternoon teas sandwiches in demand this good recipe for anchovy filling may be of use: Put into a bowl that has been rubbed with garlic one dessertspoonful of olive oil, one-half teaspoonful of salt and red pepper, as much as can be held on the point of a knife. Mix into this two cakes of Neufchatel cheese and one tablespoonful of butter. Mix thoroughly. Then mix into this a piece of Roquefort cheese the size of an English walnut and two teaspoonfuls of anchovy paste. This is enough for twelve sandwiches.

Chestnut Sauce.—Take the shells from a pint of large chestnuts, scald, then remove the inner skins, break in halves and cook in salted water, boiling, or stock until very soft; wash fine in the water in which they were cooked. Mix together one tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of browned butter, add to the chestnut puree and season to taste with salt and pepper.

For the Children

Snow and Ice Make Sport For Little Folks.

Not for many years have the children of New York enjoyed such a winter as the weather man has provided this year. There have been half a dozen snowstorms, and some of the time the lakes have been covered with ice for skaters. You may easily believe that skates and sleds have been much in use. Little New Yorkers do not let such opportunities go to waste, for some of them remember winters when there was not snow or ice enough to give them a chance to enjoy the sports of winter. The young lad in the picture has probably seen very little snow in his lifetime. However, he is making up for whatever time he has lost. His name is Duncan van Norden, and he was shoveling snow in Central park when the camera man happened along.

The Chickens' Surprise Party.

In southern California the dry season lasts from six to eight months, so there were some good sized chicks in our yard that had never seen rain, writes a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farm.

One morning a little cloud suddenly began to send down some big drops on the dry soil. The chicks evidently thought some one was throwing grain to them. They flew at the drops, this way and that, trying to pick them up. Peck as fast as they would they could not get a bite of anything. They heard the pattering; they saw the spots on the ground; they jumped about like crazy chickens, pushed each other about and looked skyward in their funny sideways fashion.

When the shower became heavy they flew to shelter, huddled together and cheeped pitifully. How we wished we could have understood what they said to each other about the!

The River Jordan.

Among famous rivers must always be included the Jordan, nearly as sacred to Christians as the Ganges is to the Hindus because of the baptism of Christ in its waters. The Jordan, except near its source, is below the level of the ocean, and the Dead sea, where it empties, is a quarter of a mile below the surface of the Mediterranean.

There are four old fords of the Jordan. At one of these on the Monday before Easter the pilgrims of the Greek church, often thousands in number, who have come down from Jerusalem escorted by Turkish soldiers, perform the well known ceremony of bathing in the sacred stream. A short distance below this is the point where the river loses itself in the lifeless waters of the Dead sea.

Natural Snow Bridges.

A slow thaw, following a heavy fall of snow, is almost sure to form, here and there, miniature natural bridges of snow, over which a rabbit or even a fox might run without crushing the short span. According to the lay of the land, the melted snow water collects at a certain place and gradually eats its way under another part not melting so rapidly, and this tunnel, growing larger from the increasing water, soon forms the span. In the same manner natural bridges of earth and rock are formed after hundreds of centuries of erosion, while the snow bridges are formed in a few hours and often disappear as quickly.

Under the Bridge.

Under the bridge the trains go by
With whistle and shriek and puff,
And I mean to go right off in a train
When I am big enough.

I shall go to a land where bananas grow,
And oranges, too, on trees;
Where every one eats whatever he likes
And no one says, "If you please."

I shall drink my milk from a cocoanut
And munch the sugar cane,
And when I am tired of that far-off land,
Why, I'll [illegible] again!

Most Dangerous of Minor Ills

Well informed physicians regard a common cold as by far the most dangerous of the minor ills. The danger is not in the cold itself, but the serious diseases it so often leads to. That a cold can be cured easily and quickly has been abundantly proven. Mrs. S. K. Van Denburgh, Middleville, N. Y., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and always found it a positive cure for colds and coughs."

Attractive Desserts.

QUEEN CAKE.—A cupful sugar, one-half cupful butter, one-half cupful milk, three eggs, a cupful flour; beat sugar and butter to a cream, add the yolks of the eggs with milk, then flour, into which has been stirred two heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder and cornstarch; beat thoroughly together; add whites of eggs beaten last.

Washington Pie.—Butter size of a small egg, creamed; add a cupful of granulated sugar and mix to a smooth cream. Break one egg into butter and sugar mixture and beat until light, three-quarters cupful of sweet milk, one and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour (measured after sifting) and sifted again with a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in two layer tins. Cream filling or just whipped cream is nice.

Lemon Pie.—Cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls flour, small piece of butter (melted), grated rind and juice of one lemon, yolks of two eggs, a cupful milk, whites of two eggs beaten stiff; bake in one crust for forty-five minutes in a very slow oven.

Orange Tapioca.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of water overnight. Then cook slowly in double boiler until clear. Add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little lemon juice; stir five minutes and pour over four oranges that have been peeled and cut in small pieces. Chill and serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Cranberry Sherbet.—To one quart of cranberry juice add the juice of five oranges and two pounds of granulated sugar. Mix well together and pour into ice cream freezer and freeze to a mushy consistency. Whip the whites of four eggs very stiff and stir into the mushy mixture, then complete the freezing. This is delicious served with a heavy dinner and makes a change from cranberry sauce.

For Her Afternoon Tea

Design by Maison Maurice, New York.

FOR informal occasions is this attractive gown of navy blue pussy willow silk combined with indestructible voile. The corded silk folds set over the voile give individuality to the gown, and the long transparent sleeves with tucked cuffs are interesting details. The surplice bodice has a silver buckle as a finish at the waist line.

gaberdine, with a double row of novelty buttons. The yoke is corded, as are the cuffs, and interesting little patches of smocking fill spaces. The coat takes a little white straw and satin bonnet trimmed with pink rosebuds.

Tartare Sauce.

Materials.—Two small cucumber pickles, three olives, one teaspoonful capers, one tablespoonful chopped parsley, one-half teaspoonful chopped chives or a few drops of onion juice and one cupful of mayonnaise.

Directions.—Chop all of the ingredients very finely, unless onion juice is used in place of the olives, in which event grate this from the whole onion on a coarse grater. Blend with the mayonnaise and set aside to become thoroughly chilled before using.

Fresh Meat Griddlecakes.

Chop bits of cold cooked fresh beef, veal, etc., and season with salt and pepper. Make a griddlecake batter and lay a spoonful of it (batter) on a heated and well buttered iron spider; on the placed batter a spoonful of the chopped meat, then a spoonful of batter over the meat. When cooked sufficiently on one side turn, and when sufficiently done (well enough cooked) carry to table to be served while still hot.

Made Over Frocks

It is not the fashion to make over our frocks nowadays.

We used to buy expensive materials and then have the frocks into which they were made remodeled and sometimes made over a second time. We don't do that nowadays usually. We buy poorer materials than we used to buy, and styles change more quickly than they used to change. Moreover, most people have fewer frocks than they used to have. They wear each frock continuously until it is worn out.

However, making over frocks often pays, and some dressmakers have lately been advertising their desire to make over frocks. These are expensive dressmakers, with high priced trades, and the frocks they make over are often imported models. They are real artists in the fashioning of fabrics into charming frocks, and they have the faculty of visualizing a remodeled frock after they have looked at and thought about the old frock for a little while.

This kind of remodeling surely pays. A practically new frock results, up to the last minute in its details. Nowadays a woman of fashion wears her frocks for such a short time that nobody remembers their colors and fabrics, and anyway, in remodeling, fabrics and colors are fashioned in different combinations from their original ones.

There are, for instance, the various jumper styles. The old material can be fashioned either into the jumper or into the blouse under it. Suppose there is an old black net frock. After it has been ripped and pressed and, if necessary, cleaned, the good separated from that which is torn, the net can be made into a blouse, with the best part in the sleeves and front. Then you can buy enough silk to make the jumper and the foundation of the skirt. There can be no flaring overskirt of the net, long or short, pointed or straight at the bottom, according to the amount of material.

There is also possibility for making over in the skirt with a very wide hem of contrasting material. Sleeves, or at least cuffs and collars, can be made of the same material as the hem, and new material may be bought either for this combination or for the rest of the frock.

WOMEN READY TO SHARE BURDENS

15,000 of Them Banded for Support of Men at the Front, Says National Officer

New York—What would be done by the women of this country if the United States should go to war?

Are they prepared to share their burden, like the women of Germany before that country went to war?

Or, are they wholly ignorant of what may devolve upon them, as were the women of Great Britain and France?

Mrs. William Alexander, president of the National Special Relief Society, No. 259 Fifth avenue, answered these questions yesterday. In doing so she brought out some surprising facts.

"There are 15,000 women enrolled in our organization," said Mrs. Alexander. "Every woman among this number has been trained along certain lines in the event of war. If war came today every member of our organipation would be able immediately to shoulder her share of the nation's defense.

"We took our lesson from Germany. For generations the women of that country were taught the responsibilities of war. Therefore, they were able to organize relief work, assist the medical staff and step into the places vacated by the men, at the moment the mobilization call was issued.

"Our members have been taught how to make hospital supplies. We have hundreds of nurses enrolled. Our card index system contains the names of thousands of women prepared to furnish anything from a potato to a Fifth avenue mansion should the necessity arise.

"This work is not confined merely to New York. There are branch organizations in Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, New Orleans and many other cities. In all these places the work has been brought up to a remarkably high degree of efficiency.

Since January 10, Mrs. Alexander has beeng atherin gnames and cttaloguing them on a card index.These cards show the names of women who are willing to become nurses, motor drivers, doctors, seamstresses, intrepreters, writers, clerks and even aviation pilots. In New York alone she obtained more than 5,000 names.

SCHOOLGIRL ENDS LIFE.

Reading of Innocent Note to Boy Before Class Causes Suicide.

Hartford, Conn.—Gladys Stone, fourteen years old, committed suicide by drinking poison because her schoolteacher had read to the class in a grammar school an intercepted note in which the girl had invited a boy friend to attend a social party at a church.

The girl took the affair to heart, purchased poison at a drug store and then swallowed it at her home. She wrote a note to her mother asking forgiveness.

Waited For Bride Twenty-five Years.

Denver.—Twenty-five years ago her parents told Lillian Nesser she was too young at twenty to marry Levi Clifford, then forty-five. Recently they were married, after world travels and her marriage to a younger man had intervened. The widow's hair is as white as that of her second husband. Clifford had never married.

DIGNITARIES OF WAR DON'T WORRY GIRLS

Test In Current Events Brings Forth Many Errors.

Cambridge, Mass.—An examination to determine whether Radcliffe girls stand in need of a course in current events has just been completed with startling results.

Sixteen girls were chosen for the experiment—four from each class, and all members of the Civic club. The questions dealt with names and places connected with the war.

The name of Secretary of State Robert Lansing may be a household word, but two of the sixteen never had heard of him. Three had a hazy idea that he was secretary of war, while another said that he was "an American ambassador of some sort."

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg was given every title in the German service except his own. One mis designated him as a "resigned Dutch cabinet minister."

The name of General Gallieni, French minister of war, was unknown, and all but two of the girls called him an Italian. Premier Aristide Briand was almost similarly neglected, only two giving him his proper office.

Gallipoli was placed in Greece or in Italy by the majority of the writers. Not a single girl knew that Sir Ian Hamilton had ever come within speaking distance of the Dardanelles.

Asked to name three German generals six papers cited only Von Hindenburg. Von Buelow and Von Mackensen were known by one girl each. Von Kluck was entirely forgotten.

MILLIONS FOR ROADS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

retary has the power to withhold a further apportionment of funds if, within six months after he has given notice in writing to the state highway department of a state, the neglected roads are not given the necessary attention.

That the good roads bill has an excellent chance of passage in the senate is indicated in the replies received by A. A. A. clubs throughout the country from their senators. These were in response to a communication asking for favorable consideration of any logical highways measure which might be reported to the entire senate, with particular reference to the fundamentals contained in the original bill drafted by the American Association of State Highway Officials, which secured the endorsement of the A. A. A. national board of directors.

Since the senate substitute contains many of the things included in the house bill, it is not likely that the conferees will have any difficulty in getting together, if a majority of the senate decides that good roads legislation is a need of the moment, accentuated in no small degree as a part of military preparedness.

PAYS $2.50 DEBT IN 40 YEA

Son of Original Creditor Receives Money Order For $9.

Indianapolis.—Homer Taggart, a real estate man of South Bend, has received a letter with a postoffice money order in it calling for $9. More than forty years ago Mr. Taggart's father, long since dead, sold a second hand buggy to F. D. Airgood, a country blacksmith, at Servia, Ind. A note was given in payment.

Part payment had been made on the small original sum. A balance of $2.50 remained unpaid. The note was later destroyed in a fire and the unpaid part was forgotten. Mr. Airgood, now an old man, had just thought of the money and mailed the South Bend man $9, which is the unpaid part of the debt and the interest on it.

HIS NEW FIDDLE BOW A THREE FOOT LATH

With It Uncle John Graves Scrapes Out Old Melodies.

Centralia, Kan.—John Graves, eighty-two years old, a veteran stage driver, has invented a new violin bow. At a dance for which he "fiddled" his bow broke in the middle of a barn dance melody. It looked as if the festivities were at an end, but Uncle John hobbled to the woodshed, cut a three foot length of lath, rounded its edges with his knife, explored with his thumb for slivers, spat on his palm to provide a polish and took up the strains of "Mornin', Si," where he had left them. The new bow quirked out the jigful notes so well that Uncle John still uses it.

When dances are infrequent Uncle John gives impromptu recitals in the kitchen of his two room home, where he lives alone. With his fiddle tucked against the collar of his blue flannel shirt and his rheumatic leg beating time, he jerks out with his unique bow his repertoire of "Turkey In the Straw," "Pop Goes the Weasel," "Irish Washerwoman" and "There's Honey In the Rock For Me" while the youngsters do jig steps on the porch.

Uncle John bought his fiddle fifty-four years ago from a soldier at Fort Kearny whose regiment had been ordered to the front. Uncle John was then driving the Overland stage on the government trail from Atchison to Fort Laramie. He says he made back the $10 he paid for it by one night's work.

FOUND DEAD ON BIRTHDAY.

Preparations Had Been Made For Party For Young Woman.

Westmont, N. J.—Invitations were out and preparations had been made for a party in celebration of the twenty-sixth birthday of Miss Hannah, daughter of Joseph Bentley of Walnut avenue. Miss Bentley had not appeared at breakfast time, and her mother went to her room to call her. She lay dead in her bed.

Dr. E. B. Rogers was hastily summoned, and he said death had been caused by acute indigestion. The Camden county coroner, after investigating the case, coincided with the physician and gave a certificate accordingly.

Von Tirpitz Resigns As Head of German Navy

London—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says the Wolf Bureau, the German semi-official news agency, announces that Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz, German Minister of the Navy, has retired, and that Admiral von Capelle, director of the Administration Department of the Admiralty, has been appointed his successor.

For years he had been the dominating figure in German official life, as far as the navy was concerned. A man of comparatively humble birth, he will be sixty-seven years old next Sunday. He entered the royal Prussian navy when he was only sixteen, cruising in the Baltic, the North Sea, the Mediterranean and the Atlantic Ocean and rose to the grade of second lieutenant in time to serve in the Franco-Prussian war on board the Koenig Wilhelm.

Service in South America, in the West Indies and again in the Mediterranean followed, and the young seaman had soon become so indispensable to the service that in 1879 he was apointed commander of the Zieten; in 1881, commander of the Blucher, and in 1885, commander of the Blitz, as chief of the flotilla. He was made rear-admiral in 1895. In 1896 he became chief of the squadron in East Asia and in 1898, Secretary of State to the Admiralty.

He is the real creator of the German fleet. His knowledge of the sea has been gained at sea and in circumstances which have convinced him of the necessity to the Fatherland to possess such a fleet as she has. He has had almost unsurmountable difficulties in obtaining it from the German people, already burdened with heavy taxes before they were asked to pay for a gigantic fleet.

DEAD MAN'S HILL LOST TO FRENCH

Berlin— Important gains for the Germans in the Verdun fighting west of the Meuse were announced today by the War Office. It is said the Germans pushed forward their lines west of Corbeaux Wood and on the height of Le Mort Homme capturing more than one thousand prisioners.

The statement follows:—

"Western Front—Near Neuve Chapelle we blew up an advanced British defence position, with the occupants. British artillery directed a heavy fire on Lens.

"French artillery is very artive opposite our new positions near Ville aux Bois and opposite various sectors of the Champagne.

"On the left ban kof the Meuse (Verdun front) Silesian troops, with a strong swinging onslaught, pushed forward their lines in the region west of Corbeaux Wood, on the heights of Le Mort Homme. Twenty-five officers and more than one thousand unwounded men were captured. A counter attack, four times repeated, gave the French no success whatsoever. They suffered very considerable losses.

"On the right bank of the Meuse and on the eastern slopes of the hills artillery on both sides kept up a bitter duel without interruption.

"In the Vosges the French undertook numerous small attacks with reconnoitring parties, which were repulsed.

"North of Bapaume Lieutenant Leffers shot down his fourth enemy aeroplane, a British biplane. Both nearVimy, northeast of Arras, and in the neighborhood of Sivry, on the Meuse northwest of Verdun, a French aeroplane was brought down by our antiaircraft guns. Over Haumont, north of Verdun , a large French battleplane fell to earth after an aerial engagement. The occupants were made prisoners. The occupants of the other machines mentioned are dead.

"Eastern and Balkaan Fronts.—"The situation is unchanged.' "

The young ladies in charge of the Library Tea, solicit your patronage. Don't forget the date, March 18. adv

BRITAIN WANTS TO RAID TOO

London—I am informed that Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, who has consented to accept membership in the new Air Committee, eventually will be made director of the air services and receive Cabinet rank.

With the organization of the Ministry of Air a vigorous campaign will be resumed against Germany to reestablish Britain's air supremacy. The reprisals, however, will be directed against fortified towns, military bases, ammunition depots, Zeppelin hangers and aerodromes.

Britain's aviators never will wage war on noncombatants, women or children.

There is no doubt that Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, who has been impressed for years with a belief that war in the air, particularly by Zeppelins, is to be one of the most important features of the great conflict, will insist on the construction of a fleet of counter Zeppelins. Britain already has some airships of the Zeppelin type, but with Lord Montagu of Beaulieu on the Air Committee many more will be built, since he believes, as he declared in a speech before the Constitutional Club last night they can accompany a hostile fleet and be able to detect strategic movements and direct the enemy fleet in such o way as to neutralize the effect of Britain's naval superiority in ship's and guns.

SEVEN THOUSAND TROOPS IN MEXICO; VILLAISTS GATHERING STRENGTH

San Antonio—"Now that our troops have gone into Mexico they will not come back until Francisco Villa is either dead, captured or entirely eliminated."

General Funston admits that the Second Brigade, comprising the Tenth and Seventh Cavalry, commanded by Colonel George A. Dodd, had crossed the border into Mexica near Culbertson's Ranch, twenty-five miles west of Columbus, last night. This command has gone south to Ascencion, and Colonel Diaz, joining a command sent out from El Paso over the Mexican Northwestern Railroad at Casa Grandes.

Information reached Fort Sam Houston today to the effect that Villa is steadily adding to his force and now has an army of about 3,000 men, poorly armed and poorly mounted.

The number of U. S. troops in Mexico now is estimated to be between six and seven thousand. There are 4,500 in General Pershing's command, it was stated.

There are believed to be about 1,500 troops under Colonel Dodd's personal command.

Besides the troops there were two hundred cowboys and ranchmen, many of them one-time Rough Riders. These men are to act as scouts. They all know the country thoroughly and are counted on to give invaluable aid.

The one great thing to fear now is a clash between the United States troops and Carranza soldiers. If that should occur and it should become necessary for the Americans to fire on the Mexicans, it is believed that the entire country would be aroused.

American soldiers are in Mexico with the consent of General Carranza. The officers of the Carranza garrisons along the border have received despatches from General Carranza that there must be no armed opposition to the invasion of the country in the pursuit of Villa, yet there is grave concern here and everywhere from Brownsville to Tia Juana over what the result of Brigadier General Pershing's expedition is to be .

The Carranza officers will obey their instructions, but they do not know themselves how far they can hold their men. Already one garrison has risen, murdered its commander and declared for Villa, and in Juarez and other Mexican border places, there is an ugly feeling which, however, has not yet manifested itsef in any outbreak of violence. Meanwhile Villa is plundering, burning and murdering around Cases Grandes and not a Carranza column has yet come up with him and given him battle.

MEXICANS FIRE ON 13TH CAVALRY TROOPERS

ElPaso, Tex., March 16.—Francisco Villa has opened his arfare with the American troops sent to hunt him down. News reached here today that mounted Mexicans fired upon the expedition sent into Mexico shortly after it crossed the border yesterady afternoon. There were no casualties and the marc ho fthe American column was not halted by the attack.

Thomas Davis, a ranchman, living two miles from Columbus, N. M., whence the forces of Gen. John J. Pershing set out brought in the details of the first clash between the Americans and Mexicans.

NATIONAL GUARD FOR PATROL DUTY

Washington—Officials of the War Department expressed the belief today that portions of the National Guard will soon be called out for patrol duty on the border.

The Administration, it was learned, is giving serious consideration to this step, on the recommendation of the War Department. It has been urged by officials of the Department this would release all the mobile troops of the regular army to carry on the campaign in Mexico.

Important conferences have been held at the War Department in the last day or two by officials of the Department and State Militia organizations.

The department officials, it became known today, advocate employing them ilitia in preference to calling for volunteers. The latter method, they point out ,might create the impression in Mexico that the United States was embarking on a war of conquest instead of the announced expedition merely for the capture of Villa and his bandits.

It was int mated, however, the War Department may still find it necessary to call for a limited number of volunteers, nI the event this is done the volunteer forces accepted will be made up of experienced riders and marksmen, such as composed the Rough Riders led by Theodore Roosevelt in the Spanish-American War. It was said these will be recruited for the most part in Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and California.

In the meantime the War Department is making every effort to raise the additional troops authorized by Congress. Instructions have gone to all recruiting offices to do their utmost to get men.

ELK IN THE ADIRONDACKS

It is a capital and appropriate idea of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks to present to the State of New York a herd of 50 elks, to be liberated in the Adirondacks. There is already a number of elks in the Adirondacks, and this new blood, as it is pointed out, will do away with the dangers of inbreeding.

Members of the Order of Elks somewhat unconsciously have had something to do with the diminishing supply of these splendid animals in the country, because of the demand for elk teeth to be worn as watch charms. Many elk in the West have been killed merely for the price that the teeth would bring.

But it is natural that a good member of his lodge should desire that his fraternal animal should not become extinct just as a good American would desire to see the national bird conserved and propagated.

More elk in the Adirondacks will add to the attraction of the woods, and at the same time wil lincrease the interest of many men in the value of that mountainous region.— Utica Observer.

SUNDAY WORK

The British munitions committee has stopped Sunday work for the most worldly reasons. Lloyd George says, "It is better to work overtime during the week than to have Sunday work." Accordingly the government controlled factories, notwithstanding the war pressure and war necessities, stop all Sunday labor, as the result of an investigation by a special committee with the conclusion that Sunday work diminishes rather than increases the output. Six days shalt thou labor and rest on the seventh day has a worldly as well as a spiritual value. Every employer knows that when he has made his men work on the seventh day the amount of product gained is more than lost during the six following days. The human system is tuned to sevenths; it requires one rest day in seven to keep it up to a point of efficiency. Seven seems to be a magic number. The French revolutionists tried to make it one day in ten and it didn't work; one day of rest in seven does produce efficient, sustained labor, and gives the best results. The experience of the British government as an employer may be commended both to some few workers who would drive themselves faster than they are driven only to meet untimely ends, and to some few inhumane employers with impractical views regarding the waste of human material, which they think costs them nothing. The human machine cannot hold up under constant driving and even metal machinery, it is said, lasts longer and does better work if allowed to rest one day in seven.—Watertown Times.

A GOOD KANSAS IDEA

The following announcement appeared in the Topeka Capital a few days ago:

"A good roads dinner, lecture and moving picture exhibition will be given complimentary to the farmers, at the Commercial Club tonight, starting at 7 o'clock."

Kansas farmers proclaimed with a flourish of Kansas trumpets recently that they owned more automobiles, in proportion to population, than their brethren in almost any other State. Then they found the cars wouldn't work. Ruts and mud and mire prevented. Hence the new idea: a campaign for good roads.

A start is to be made by constructing a highway from Kansas City to Topeka, seventy miles. At the dinner announcement was made that the road is to be built without porcine attachments. The farmers themselves will foot the bill and the road will be Kansas's own.

A district is to be formed including lands within two miles on each side of the highway, and the cost, $5,625 a mile, will be distributed over a territory of four square miles, making an average levy of $2.20 an acre. The farmers are enthusiastic. They figure that the road will more than pay for itself in a very few years. It's a good Kansas idea.—N. Y. Sun.

ONE INCIDENT OF ONE DAY

Every newspaper in this country is interested in its own community, "first, last and all the time." When the average man is asleep in his home—or somewhere else—there is generally a publisher pounding away in his interest and printing matter in his defense or the defense of the community —which is one and the same thing. But that is not the point we are making. The point to this little article is a story reaching The Evening Times office, which shows the futility of at least one of the city's institutions in trying to encourage the people of this community to "trade at home."

This thing of inducing people living in the country surrounding Fulton to make the city their headquarters in every sense of the word is, normally, a greater proposition than the layman can imagine. It is always easier to say it can be done than it is to do it, even under the most favorable circumstances. Napoleon once said he could see a dozen ways to get into England with an army, but that he had never been able to think of a single way to get out if he should get in. Here in Fulton we should worry about an invasion that would prevent the invaders from getting out again; that is, if the influence of the fashion set by one local institution should result in influencing other people to do as we hear the neighbor has done.

Commercially this city should be made Oswego county's heart, but the worst of it is that the people have not taken the city into their hearts. The whole secret of the trouble lies in the spirit prompting a man to doubt the integrity of a neighbor, or his responsibility, which amounts to the same thing. Imagine, if the reader can, the motive prompting a man of finance and business who will deliberately take from its hook the telephone instrument and remind a person at the end of the line whose standing is unquestionable of an insignificant deficit in an account. Yet this is one occurrence of one day in a Fulton institution whose whole solicitude for the city should be in trying to find out what the people in the community within a radius of ten miles want in the way of fair treatment—and finding it out should be willing to accord average ordinary business courtesy.

In our quest for better trading conditions we may find a thousand pretenses for not getting along faster and better, but most of them are all nonsense; they deceive nobody but ourselves. Suspicion and jealousy never did help any man in any situation, and they will not help a city to help itself. The incident here related may be considered by some persons as a small one, yet is typical of the small things constituting bigger ones; besides we have to remember that sometimes small incidents are often the most difficult ones to deal with. We have been advised to "throw away the hammer and get a horn;" but why hurry? The hammer is used in this instance in defense of the community—not of an individual.

It goes without printing here that many school children will be pleased to stay at home the next snowy day on account of the snow to play in the snow.

Some of the young men loafers around town think up a lot of things to benefit the city, none of which are as important as getting a job—or enlisting to fight Mexicans.

RAUCOUS UN-NEUTRALITY INJURES ONLY AMERICA

An American who has spent the past nine months in Germany writes to a contemporary that the former friendliness toward Americans entertained by the German people has changed to a feeling of strong resentment.

This is one of the deplorable results of the un-neutral propaganda that has been carried on by certain men and newspapers against the German people and their Government.

We cannot imagine what good result these foolish persons and papers hope to achieve. Certainly they cannot believe that the huge struggle across the sea will be affected one way or the other by calling names and throwing rhetorical catfits in newspapers and public halls. A dozen or two tomtits chirping amid the infernal uproar about Verdun would have as much effect upon that titanic struggle as have these valiant and furious orators and editors upon the great war.

It is not Germany which is injured by these foolish un-neutrals. It is America which is injured.

Without any possible hope of gain, without any possible effect upon the vast war, these rabid and raucous talkers and writers are destroying our potential usefulness as mediators and peacemakers, and are laying up for us a huge loss of trade and commerce and the resentful dislike of two great peoples, so resourceful and so powerful that they are more than holding their own, against the assaults of four first-class Powers, which outnumber them more than two to one.

Now, what sense is there in conduct by which we stand to lose so much and cannot possibly gain anything?

Really patriotic Americans, who put America over all, will refrain and do refrain from reviling any of the peoples who are at war.

The truest and most patriotic American is the American who is really and truly neutral in speech and act.

It is just as unpatriotic and un-American to be pro-British as it is to be pro-German, and it is just as reprehensible and as injurious to our country's real welfare to carry on a propaganda either for or against the British cause and the British people as it is to carry on a propaganda either for or against the Germaan cause and the German people.

Our clear duty to our own country and to mankind is to be absolutely and most scrupulously neutral. — N. Y. American.

Useless Grand Juries - - - N. Y. World

It is the matured opinion of former United States Attorney Wise that a Grand Jury does not amount to a two-cent piece, for it does nothing but register the will of the District Attorney. While practically everybody familiar with the system agrees with this conclusion, Grand Juries still persist in Federal and most state practice.

Without prejudging the Congressional investigation of District Attorney Marshall now in progress, it may be said that with the almost boundless opportunities which Grand Juries give to prosecutors to hide behind the findings of a secret inquisition, abuses of power have been rare. The District Attorney is the jury's only adviser. It is his judgment that prevails in most cases, and for all practical purposes a complaint in his name on information and belief is no less effective than the more ponderous form of indictment.

There was dire need of Grand Juries at one time as a check upon malicious and oppressive prosecutions by royal decree. Now that kingly prerogatives are worth nothing at all in this country, the Grand Jury as a check upon them has fallen to the same valuation.

PENNSYLVANIA STRONG FOR PHILANDER KNOX

Philadelhpia—All parties in Pennssylvania are taking a greater interest in the approaching national conventions than ever before. The belief that the name of Philander C. Knox will be presented to the Republican national convention as the Pennsylvania candidate for President is growing very strong throughout the State, as Mr. Knox is regarded now as the ablest statesman of any party in Pennsylvania. Colonel Roosevelt's statement that he regarded Charles E. Hughes of New York and Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania and former Governor Hadley of Missouri as men whom Progressives could support for the Presidency has made it easy for the 447,00 Pennsylvania Progressive Republicans who voted for Colonel Roosevelt in 1912 and the 273,000 Taft Republicans to unite in support of Mr. Knox. It is even now evident that Senator Penrose and the State Republican organization, Senator William Flinn of Pittsburg, who financed the Roosevelt campaign in Pennsylvania, and the State administration of Governor Brumbaugh will be for him.

PENSION LAW AIDS OREGON'S WOMEN

Portland, Ore.,—According to the report of the head of the Widows' Pension Department of the Juvenile Court, 279 women in Multnomah county were aided under the widows pension law between June, 1913, when it became effective, and January 1, 1916. In all 559 widows applied for pensions, of which 271 cases were rejected and nine and pending. Two hundred of the women assisted were widows, twenty-two were wives of insane husbands, twenty-eight had tubercular husbands who could not work, seventeen were wives of disabled husbands, six had husbands in prison and six had been deserted for more than seven years.

GERMANS IN MAJORITY IN SUNFLOWER STATE

Topeka—Germany has furnished Kansas twice as many foreign born citizens as any other nation in the world, according to a statement by J. C. Mohler, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture. The 1915 decennial census shows that of 115,266 foreign born persons living in Kansas March 1, 1915, 28,807 were born ... largest contributor to the Kansas prairies, with 14,620 Russians in colonies over the State.

FIDDLERS LIGHTEN HEART OF GEORGIA

Old Echoes Heard When Mountaineer Musicians Meet.

MANY ARE MOONSHINERS.

All of Fifty Men Assembled Are Deep Dyed Americans and Are Able to Trace Their Ancestors Back Many Years—Look With Scorn Upon Modern Popular Music.

Atlanta.—The Old Fiddlers of Georgia, first assembled as a clan a year ago, have recently closed their second engagement in this city. The pride of Georgia's heart is in her annual grand opera, and thousands of people congregate in the Auditorium every April to listen to strange music in a strange tongue, and many of them enjoy it "almost as much as they think they do." But the "old fiddlers" really touch the heart.

As a class these musicians represent the mountaineer type, long and limber of body, silent, slow of speech, refined of feature, with quiet gray eyes, hair parted in the back. Their ancestors took the mountains, and the sons have never left the neighborhood. One family live in the same house built by their sire more than a century ago. A great majority of the men are poor. Their fare is simple, their life is bare and hard, and almost the only diversion is from the music of the fiddle or melodion—that is, if the family be rich enough to invest in a melodeon. The fiddle is often homemade.

When the mountaineer visits or receives visits the fiddle is used as the entertainer, and when the men journey to the county courthouse the instrument is carried along to make music and join in with other fiddlers congregated there, and in the hands of these men, who know no such thing as note or tempo, the fiddle is made to sing for all she's worth.

Inactivity and isolation have not made ambitious men of the mountaineers, and on long sunny days when it's too hot to work in the fields the fiddle is picked up by "pa," for the average mountaineer does not seem to take to master the instrument till he's in the forties. Some of the fiddles—there are no violins in the convention—are older than the tunes they play, having been in the family generations, and in one instance the instrument has been handed down to seven sires. The men look with scorn upon modern popular music ragtime and opera, and nothing interests them except tunes that have been sung or played among them time out of memory.

When the winter is a particularly hard one and everything goes wrong on the little strip of land to make both ends meet, the head of the family finds a use for his corn—almost the only crop he can depend upon—and turns his cabin into a distillery, sometimes running the pipe into the kitchen chimney to put the revenue officers off the track of smoke. The distiller and lawbreaker is found sooner or later, and with others, plodding slow and weary he is brought before the federal judge who gives a word of kindly counsel and a light sentence.

The fifty men assembled are not all moonshiners, however, a small percentage coming from wire grass regions, but all are from the heart of the woods on peak or in dale, far from the roll of locomotive or honk of automobile. All the musicians are Americans. They do not represent the Georgia Cracker from the fact that for centuries they have not mingled in the low lands. If any enthusiasm on the subject could be raised—which is not probable—the fiddlers could trace their origin straight back hundreds of years to their mother country.

NO CLOCKS IN PRISON.

Oklahoma Convicts Go by the Sound of Electric Gongs.

McAlester, Okla.—After a trip through the state penitentiary here a visitor realizes that he has seen no clocks. Neither in the administration building, the rotunda nor cell houses is there a timepiece.

Recently a visitor without a watch was escorted back to the administration rooms after a tour of the prison. He glanced at the walls looking for a clock to see if he had time to catch a car into the city. There was none.

"Why, where are your clocks?" he asked a trusty.

The man grinned.

"We don't need any. We all have all the time we want here," he replied. Then he added: "Electric gongs announce divisions of time—work, eat and retire—according to the rings."

Jail Inmates Go Hunting.

Petersburg, Ind.—Hunting has become a pleasant diversion for some of the inmates of the Pike county jail. Time hangs heavily on their hands and twice during one week recently prisoners were permitted the freedom of the nearby fields, and the privilege was given to kill, maim or capture wild game. Thus far the boarders have returned and have not violated their parole.

Cough Proves Fatal to Man.

BUTTERFLY SAILS INTO LOCAL MUSICIAN'S HOME

Spring, or rather the signs of spring, are being sprung from various corners of the city.

The latest discovery was make by Mrs. F. Jess Newton this morning when she captured in the kitchen of her home a beautiful specimen of the butterfly family. The beautiful winged creature was described as gorgeously arrayed in a coat of brown and blue.

Mrs. Newton states she is unable to explain the little creature's presence in the house, and questions if it is possibly an omen.

The Evening Times is not versed in omens but if Madam Butterfly's presence might portend a Symphony Orchestra Concert in the near future all hail to her ladyship, bearer of omens.

MUSIC CABINETS TO BE MADE AT MEXICO

STORM DEMORALIZED STEAM TRAIN SERVICE

O. & W. train service is completely tied up early today by snow banks piled up in cuts and open spaces, in some instances a dozen feet deep. It is believed that train service will be resumed before tomorrow morning.

Central trains had troubles yesterday, the first one to leave Syracuse did not arrive here until late afternoon, and a snow at that a snow plow preceded it. Cars on the Empire United maintained nearly scheduled time, with the exception of the first few hours in the morning when some brief delays occurred.

It is in many instances impossible for farmers surrounding the city to leave their homes, hence their absence from city stores. Many residents of sections along the O. & W. and N. Y. C. lines were marooned last night in hotels in this city, because of the absence of train service.

THE NEW HUMPHREY
RADIO-X
GAS LAMP
HOME LIGHTING

Simplicity of action and use is exemplified in the RADIO-X Gas Lamp, a single chain pull turning the light on and off. No double by-pass chains to confuse one in the dark, no thumb shut offs, no matches are necessary; a small invisible pilot light is always burning to respond to the chain pull. This pilot light won't consume 1-2 cent worth's of Gas a month. Think of the saving, of the convenience, of the simplicity. A child can operate it, and it cannot be gotten out of order and absolutely no Gas can escape.

BRANDEIS IS UNFIT, SAY TAFT AND ROOT

Washington—A letter bearing the signatures of ex-President Taft, Elihu Root, Joseph H. Choate and other eminent lawyers and jurists, declaring that Louis D. Brandeis is "not a fit person to be a member of the Supreme Court of the United States" has been filed with the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

The letter also was signed by Sineon D. Baldwin of Connecticut and Francis Rawle of Philadelphia. All of the men named have served as president of the American Bar Association .

This protest made a profound impression upon members of the Senate. Senators close to the Administration were disturbed and admitted that the fight on the nomination will be conducted with great determination.

BURGARD CO. WINS TERMINAL CONTRACT

Close bidding was in evidence at Albany for building the Oswego barge canal terminal, the H. P. Burgard company securing the contract for $90,984. The other bids were:

Larkin & Sangster, Buffalo, $93,264.75; Frank L. Cohen, Buffalo, $200,028.50; Eastover Construction Company, Inc., Utica, $123,554.85; Scott Bros., Rome, $93,566 75; H. S. Kerbaugh, Inc. Buffalo, $91,520.07; T. A. Gillespie Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., $91,839.95; Morrison & Quinn, Inc., ochester, $92,957.75; Walsh Construction company, Davenport, Ia., $94,185.50; Lupfer & Renwick, Buffalo, $98,899.10; Troy Public Works Company, Utica, $113,018; Neilands Bros., Construction Company, Buffalo, $100,484.75; G. C. Hodgson, Fulton, $99,434, and Day & Zimmerman, Philadelphia, $104,508 50.

The engineer's estimate was $103,700.

SCHOOL BIBLE BILL CALLED A MENACE

Albany—The Greiner bill, which would make comprisory the reading of Bible selections in the schools of the State, is being attacked as the "opening wedge to the stultification of democracy" and a "menace to religion itself."

Senator William P. Greiner, Democrat, of Buffalo, who introduced the measure, warmly defends it and denied that he introduced the measure at the request of "certain organizations." He claimed a divine inspiration to introduce the Bible reading bill and attributed his election in a district normally Republican to his "trust in God."

"THE SENATOR" TODAY

"The Senator," coming to the Quirk theatre today, reveals Charles J. Ross as the star in the screen presentation of the part in which Wm. H, Crane won fame on the legitimate stage. Sydney Rosenfeld's drama has afforded a wonderful opportunity for beautiful filming, and it has been taken full advantage of in this great series of pictures. With three men interested in a pretty girl who is the centre of political and social intrigue, with an ambitious and unscrupulous schemer in an attempt to wreck two lives for his own gratification with a man of sterlling integrity, keen wit and steadfast purpose, and other characters of minor import, material is provided which has been welded into one of the most remarkable picturizations of its kind ever presented to lovers of the silent drama. A gripping appeal is made to the eye as well as the heart all through the great series of pictures. Four Universal reels make a big nine-reel show.

HOUSE HALTS DEFENCE FOR MINOR BILLS

Washington— Actual constructive legislation for preparedness must await, in the House, the slow course of action on the immigration bill, which has the right of way beginning Friday.

This gill has been passed twice, and vetoed by both Taft and Wilson. Its present form is substantially that in which it encountered the veto and there is a practically universal belief that it would be vetoed again.

Nevertheless, for the barren glory of debating and passing it the House will defer action on the vitally important Hay army bill.

CAN CUT TIME FOR BUILDING SUBMARINES

Washington—"Speed and standardization" were laid down today by T. A. Edison as the two watchwords of national preparedness.

The electrical and mechanical wizard wagged his grey head and shook two warning fingers at the House Naval Affairs Committee as he told how to build a submarine in two weeks, an aeroplane over night, and provide the beneral mechanical necessities of military preparedness in the twinkling of an eye.

EX-SECRETARY TO JOIN FIRM OF LAWYERS

New York—Lindley M. Garrison, former Secretary of War, has become a resident of New York City. As soon as admitted to the New York Bar he will practise law here as a member of the firm of Hornblower, Miller, Potter &Earle. It was announced by that firm yesterday.

MAHOGANY DOUBLES IN VALUE ON SHIP

New York—The American fourantsted schooner A. J. West reached port yesterday after a voyage from Manila, via Honolulu, Ponta Arenas and Colon, hat was commenced on May 30, 1915.

During the nine and ahalfmonths that the A. J. West was on the way home her cargo of 525,000 feet of mahogany almost doubled in value, aptain Chapman's little son Charles learned to walk and the schooner safely weathered three of the worst typhoons the Pacific Ocean ever has seen.

N. Y. METAL WORKS TO STRIKE THIS WEEK

New Mork—A general strike of 40,000 brass and metal workers will be declared before the end of the week.

Circulars announcing plans for the strike have been prepared and will be distributed among union members. A joint board has beenf ormed by the metal and brass workers' unions to handle the strike.

TEACHERS' COTTAGES

Teachers' cottages, erected by the community in or near the schoolhouse, and used not only as a teacher's residence but also as the community center, are advocated in a bulletin prepared by R. S. Kellogg and distributed by the Department of the nterior through its Bureau of Education to county superintendents and other officers in charge of rural schools. The bulletin describes the movement for teachers' residences in rural districts and gives plans for cottages of various sizes and types

Lack of suitable boarding accommodations is one of the most serious difficulties in the way of securing suitable teachers for country schools. the bulletin declares. There are more than 200.000 rural school districts in the United States and over 16,000.000 children of school age who live in the country or in towns of less than 2.500 population, yet it is impossible because of the living conditions to get teachers of the highest type to remain in the country.

There are now one or more teachers' cottages in every state and in the state of Washington where the movement has been fostered by Mrs. Josephine Preston, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; there are now 108 of them.—Batavia News

FARM CREDITS

It takes an awful sight of talk in this country to settle belief in anything. Just now Congress, the Agricultural Department, and a lot of other people are engaged in geeing and hawing over the rural credits matter. The fact is, the kind of farmers who want assistance from the lawmaking powers are those who never established a good, substantial basis of credit for themselves. This fact is well illustrated by the action of the Texas Bankers' Committee on Agriculture. They recommend the adoption of a farm rate sheet for all those who apply for credit. This rate sheet simply steps in and dictates how the applicant for credit shall conduct his farming operations.

The following rule is adopted:

"The placing of not exceeding 50 per cent of the cultivated land of the farm in one crop, and the planting of sufficient acreage of the land in food and feed crops for the maintenance of the family and stock on the farm is safe farming."

There is one thing connected with dairy farming that is worth mentioning in this connection. It is this: In every well established dairy district there is no trouble whatever for any thrifty farmer to get all the accommodation at the banks that he needs and at rates as favorable as are accorded to business men in towns. It is the solid, substantial character of the dairy industry that builds up a strong basis of credit and this is always needed in borrowing money by any class of borrowers.— Hoard's Dairyman.

SPEAKING IN PUBLIC

The ordinary boy is selfconscious, and there is nothing he dislikes more to do in school than to get up and "speak a piece." That he so dislikes to do it is primafacie evidence that it is a good thing for him to do. It is only by performing disagreeable tasks, and particularly by submitting to discipline that compels forgetfulness of self, that a boy makes progress. No boy can learn to speak well in public until he begins to forget him self.

Yet there are many schools and colleges in which public speaking is not compulsory and is indeed practiced to a very limited extent. The consequence is that many an educator man who finds himself on some occasion compelled by circumstances to make a speech does it awkardly and ineffectively—not because he has nothing to say, but because standing up before an audience makes him acutely self-conscious. He becomes constrained, timid and shy—afraid to let himself go and let his subject carry him along; he is disturbed by the many pairs of eyes that are intently focused on him, and morbidly apprehensive that there is a hostile significance in the intentness of the gaze.

Practice in declaiming the poems or the speeches of others is valuable to any boy or young man. But he can derive much more useful experience from extemporaneous speaking in debate, or from more formal speaking, either with or without notes, on a subject that he has studied. By such practice the ordinarily intelligent boy will soon acquire facility and fluency, and will overcome the self-consciousness that, unless it is overcome, may seriously handicap him in later life.—Youth's Companion.

THE GILDED FOOLS AND THEIR RIDERS

People do not expect the impossible in a man when they ask him to be at least consistent in his dealings with other men—or for that matter, with the community. They do not care to have fired back at them such answers as: "Oh well, he is one of our leading men; he has accumulated a lot of hard cash, hence his views must carry much weight; he is mostly always right; and you are just as often wrong." What tish-tush; what man worship, as if a horse or an elephant could be any better for gilded harness, such as one sees in circus parades. Is a man anything worth while if he is only a tailored clothes-horse? What is the difference between the gilded horse or elephant and the man whose main perquisite is his ability to sign checks for more figures than his neighbor? But it is the same old story. The gilded horse is handsome to look at, but if he is gone in the knees and stumbles with his rider, he is not likely to get the rider on his back again. Nothing can come out of a horse's feet or a man's heart and head-piece which is not in him.

Man-worship or mammon-worship, both amounting to the same thing, cannot coin the useful, conscientious, consistent citizen. It cannot give men civic vision. It cannot create for a community a BUILDER OF PRINCIPLE. It cannot create a man who will put HIS OWN ABOVE OTHER TOWNS. There is a place for the looked for in its membership. The Chamber of Commerce has mercial organization of the town wherein his check book is dated.

Duties come clearly to the men who are listening to open their door at the first knock.

The commencement of the Chamber of Commerce of Fulton in the early part of last year was a far-reaching event in more ways than its growth from the small nucleus it had before that time; but the Chamber of Commerce still has much to do in the way of shaking off the riders who would minimize and compromise the standard looked foor in its membership. The Chambeer of Commerce has developed good men who have standardized the mercantile life of the community, but they have to reckon with the gilded men—the men who lack civic vision. Such men are gone in the knees, so to speak, and it will be the people's fault if they ever get another chance to stumble with those who are trying to ride to victory.

The next time Senator Brown thinks of running for the S. P. he may find it no easy thing to formulate a platform upon which to appeal for votes. How to hit it if it's a bear and miss it if it's a calf is one of the requirements for a skillful hunter that not many of them can muster.

GRIFFITH BRINGS CLEVER ACTRESS

Mae Marsh, who plays the role of Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation," which appears at Richardson, Thursday, Friday and Saturday and Quirk Sunday, matinee and night is known all over the country as the girl with a thousand faces. Her remarkable rise to thep osition in the motion picture field that Maude Adams holds in the legitimate drama is due to the careful manner in which D. W. Griffith, the master producer, has studied her personality and brought out every latent gift.

Little Miss Marsh has only been in pictures two years but she has already reached the top of the ladder. A few seasons ago she came to the Griffith studio to watch her older sister work. She was raw and undeveloped but Griffith's keen eye saw great possibilities beneath the surface of her anxious eyes and mobile countenance. He wanted a half-grown girl for a work he was finishing and he selected her. Now she has the most likable role in all the thousands of characters that crowd the Griffith masterpiece. She is the joyous note of youth in the most remarkable drama the film has yet unfolded.

Experienced actors always have a word of praise, sincere and emphatic, for the little lass who plays the young sister in this appealing story. This California girl can express almost any emotion the feminine mind can grasp. She has played tomboys and heroines, consumptive girls and athletic girls. No part frightens her when Griffith is directing. Today her face is better known than any actress in the world and she is the pet of movie fans in every quarter of the globe.

AT HAPPY HOUR TOMORROW

Polly Moran in "Her Painted Hero," Triangle-Keystone Feature.

In "Her Painted Hero," Hale Hamilton, as the star, helps Polly Moran playing the stage-struck girl, to realize her ambition to shine in the theatrical firmament. Hamilton is the handsome matinee idol, and his indifference to the worshipful attitude of Miss Moran is heightened by her attempts to win him. As foils to Hamilton are Charles Murray, the property man, and George Summerville, the bill poster, who are constantly running into and over each other in their wild attempts to win the attention of Polly Moran. Harry Booker, who plays the irate father of Polly, consents to the marriage of Murray and the girl, but she has other plans in view. While arrayed in bridal attire, she suddenly gets the notion to essay stage life and enlists aid of Hamilton by promising to back a company if she gets a chance to be the leading lady. Her awkardness is comic. In her excitement, Miss Moran knocks over her companions on the stage and finally gets her dress caught on a hook and is elevated halfway to the roof, while frantically struggling and gesticulating for aid.

But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.—Exchange.

BIDS CORPORATIONS APPEAL TO PUBLIC

Rudolph Guenther, Advertising Expert, Sends Letter on Value of Frank Explanations.

"No corporation or industry, however great it may have grown, can fail to find surcease from many problems through advertising." declared Rudolph Guenther today in a letter he is addressing to heads of many large firms. "All that is necessary is for them to have a clear case and present it properly through the advertising columns of the newspapers. Then they will succeed in withdrawing the sting of criticism and ward off any injustice on the people's part which would arise from ignorance of the real cause."

Mr. Guenther, head of an advertising agency at 25 Broadway, is conducting a campaign of education in regard to the value of publicity. He directs attention especially to the value of newspaper advertising. His letter in part says:

Happily the reluctance to come right out and through the advertising columns tell what a corporation has to say in answer to attacks of critics is, as it should be, fast vanishing.

As long as a corporation knows its cause to be just, it should feel no hesitancy in placing its cards face upward on the table and, by advertising, say through the newspapers: "Here, gentlemen, is our side of the controversy, judge frankly yourself of its merits."

Traditionally it is known the world over that the spirit of fair play is developed in no people more than in Americans. All they seek is the truth; give them the truth and they may be depended upon to weigh it carefully against all the arguments of the opposition.

Corporations Favor Publicity

Before the Court of Public Opinion any and all corporations will receive a fair hearing if they come before it with clean hands. As advertising is legitimate as long as it is not fraudulent, it constitutes, from whatever viewpoint the subject may be approached, the most direct and economical method at hand to approach this court.

Similarly the tendency is gaining ground among corporations to give the fullest publicity to their annual reports through intelligent advertising in such newspapers and periodicals as are known to reach people interested.

Such advertising exerts manifold influences for good. It inspires confidence among investors. It is indicative of an open and honest attitude toward the modern spirit of publicity. Secretive practices and secretive attitudes breed doubt and distrust. They are relics of the "dark ages."

Furthermore, publicity robs the manipulator and the rumor monger of their opportunity to spread malicious slanders, and frequently mitigates the adverse influences which political agitators endeavor to create for their own political advancement.

In a western state a few years ago a bill to increase the number of trainmen on each train was before the legislature. Finally it was referred back to the people for an expression of their desire regarding it.

An enterprising advertising agent represented to the railroads, vitally interested in thep roposed law. that if they would call to their assistance the advertising columns of the newspapers of their state, telling in clear and straightforward announcements why the bill was a menace, not only to the railroads, but to themselves, they would enlist on their side a most powerful ally.

How Missouri Was Shown

The railroads acted upon the suggestion; they told their side of the story frankly and used every sound argument to drive home upon public opinion the injustice of the proposed legislation.

When the election was over and the votes counted, the bill was defeated by a majority of nearly two hundred thousand votes. The state was Missouri, a state which "must be shown", and when it can be shown through the power of honest advertising and be convinced, it is reasonable to exect similar results in other communities.

Thus, it is with the anthracite mine owners of Pennsylvania. They face new wage demands from their miners, in order to convince the public of their inability to advance wages of their men on the present prices of coal, they are giving the people their reasons through advertising in the newspapers.

Not only are they giving their reasons, but they are presenting figures to show that owners of mines are getting a profit of only 20 cents a ton from coal retailing for over $7 a ton. If wages are to be increased, the consumer of coal is the man who eventually provides the difference.

Now, it is plain that if the miners secure an increase the anthracite coal miner owners cannot be charged with putting the burden on the public without a just reason for doing so. Whatever the outcome of this wage controversy, every dollar spent upon frank and open publicity is like bread cast upon the waters to return eventually, multiplied in benefits, to the operators and the anthracite coal business generally in a more favorable public understanding of the perplexities of business.—N. Y. Mail.

SPAIN'S KING BUYS AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE

In a recent shipment from the Willys-Overland Co.'s Toledo plant, particular interest attached to a stout packing box marked as follows: Per S. S. "Antonio Lopez," Compania Transatlantica, S. M. El Rey Don Alfonso XIII, Palacio Real, Madrid.

This case contained a model 84 Willys-Knight stock touring car, such as can be seen on local streets any day in the year, yet this particular car is singled out to be the first American made Knight motored automobile actually purchased for personal use by an European crowned head, and the honor falls upon the Willys-Overland Co.

The motor used in this car is of the Knight type, a sleeve valve motor that is exceedingly popular abroad and used in practically all of the fine cars of European manufacture.

Cars of this sort sell for several thousand dollars in Europe, and with closed bodies as high as eight thousand dollars.

Under the present cargo on shipments of rubber it is not possible to ship cars with tires to any of the neutral countries of Europe without routing via London, but in this case of the King's car, a special decision was obtained from the British Ambassador at Washington and the car was shipped complete with tires direct to Madrid.

Postage Stamps as Money.

An interesting innovation has been introduced in Russia owing to the scarcity of small coins. To meet the difficulty postage stamps of the value of 10, 15 and 20 kopecks have since Oct. 1 been in use as paper money. At the same time they can be used for postage, but they are printed on stouter paper and have an overprint on the back in black which denotes the new use to which they have been put.

Might Work Next Time.

A Washington girl has put a new wrinkle into leap year. Instead of popping, she simply got a marriage license and coyly showed it to the young man when he called. It should be added that the scheme didn't work. The young man took the license back and had it canceled.—Boston Globe.

A Flying Boat Record.

An altitude of 11,000 feet was attained recently by Lieutenant R. C. Saufley, U. S. N., in a flying boat, a new record for this type. But it cannot officially be so recorded because the air craft recording pen ran off the sheet at 9,000 feet.—New York Times.

SETS NEW STYLE IN AUTO TIRES

The "classy" looking black tread tires that you are beginning to see so frequently on the roads and avenue these days are but the start of a fashion in automobile tires, credit for whose sudden great popularity is claimed by the B. F. Goodrich Company, Akron, Ohio.

"When we first came out with the Barefoot Rubber Automobile tire a few months ago," says an official of the B. F. Goodrich Co., "there were no black tread tires on the market, except Silvertown Cord Tires, which we alone manufacture, under exclusive patents.

"On January 1st there were no black-tread tires on the market except these same Silvertown Cord Tires, (which we are not yet equipped to produce in half the quantity the market calls for) and Goodrich Fabric Tires, made from the self-same 'Barefoot Rubber' as we have been putting into the treads of Goodrich Silvertown

"But soon there will be a crop of "Black-Tread" Fabric tires I suppose.

"We are therefore anxious to have the motoring public know that the essence of Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber" value to consumers lies not in the color but in its composition—in its especially devised texture, flexibility, cling-quality, stretch, lightness and resilience of this 'Barefoot Rubber' alloy which, through years of research, the Goodrich Company developed to match the marvelous flexibility, resilience and power-conservation of Goodrich Silvertowne tires "Without that Silvertown experience we might never have known or fully understood, the enormous advantage of such a clingy, stretchy, lightweight, and responsible Rubber in all tires.

"Color alone would have been little help to us in making Silvertown Rubber Treads stand-up in the tremendous endurance tests which the 100-mile per hour races of 1915 provided.

And color alone, black, white, red or gray, can do little for the consumer who buys a tire, on the assumption that all black-tread tires must be made of similar materials.

The Tyrant in the Field.

There have been few commanders so tyrannous as Lopez, the dictator of Paraguay, when in the war of 1865-70 it fought single handed the neighboring countries of Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay. Lopez, says Mr. W. H. Koebel in his "Argentina," was wont to carry the theory of victory or death to an uncomfortable point. "Officers were executed for mere remarks whose tone fell beneath the standard of confidence that Lopez had set up for himself. One, for instance, was shot for having announced in the course of his duty that the enemy was strongly intrenched! Another met his end on account of an unguarded speech to the effect that the Paraguayan army was accustomed to count the enemy's losses and forget its own."

Yawning.

Yawning is a peculiar act and one that has never yet been properly accounted for. It is not by any means a sign of fatigue only, although it is sometimes produced by overexertion. But an attack of yawning comes on much more quickly if one is intensely bored, and certainly a stuffy atmosphere tends to produce it. It is also noticeable that when one has gone considerably past one's mealtime the tendency to yawn frequently becomes irresistible. A very peculiar feature of this complaint is its infectiousness; one person can easily set half a dozen all yawning in turn. When present in a very marked extent it is supposed to be the outcome of anaemia, indigestion or some other complaint.

Real Sympathy.

An old farmer down the country giving instructions for his will directed a legacy of $25,000 to be given to his wife. Being informed that some distinction was usually made in case the widow married again, he doubled the sum, and when told that this was contrary to custom he said, with heartfelt sympathy for his possible successor, "Aye, but him that gets her'll deserve it."

The Flight of Birds.

One of the few men to recover sight after being blind from the birth of recollection was reported to have wondered at nothing so much as the flight of the birds. "Why do not people make more fuss about them?" he said.—London Outlook

Geodesy.

Geodesy is the name given to the science of measuring the surface of the earth.

Why Do Dairy Cows Run Down?

No other farm animal is the cause of so much anxiety to the owner as his dairy cows; sickness gets in in spite of the best of care.

KOW-KURE

Why? Because the dairy cow is subjected to constant forcing to get the maximum in quantity and quality of the milk yield. This constant strain proves too much for many a good cow; some important function becomes impaired and for want of proper medical assistance she becomes a "backward" cow. In just such cases as these Kow-Kure has made its reputation for success when used to

of the herd. Kow-Kure is a medicine for cows only—not a stock food. It has wonderful medicinal qualities that act on the organs of production and reproduction for the prevention or cure of many serious cow ailments. It is especially useful in cases of Abortion, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring, Lost Appetite, Bunches, Retained Afterbirth, etc. Farmers who have used it keep Kow-Kure on hand constantly. Most feed dealers and druggists sell it.

GUARDING THE CHILDREN.

Widows With Offspring Should Be Sure to Make Their Wills

Sometimes the failure to make a will involves more than a loss of time and money. You are a widow and die without a will; leaving children who are not yet of age. Now, you may not care who looks after your property, but you do have a lively interest in the person who looks after your children. If you had left a will you could have named therein the guardian for your children. The court must do so, and the guardian appointed by it may charge commissions, counsel fees and premiums payable out of your children's share of your estate.

Suppose you leave real estate. It can't be sold without an order of the court. That involves a long and expensive proceeding on the part of your administrator. If you leave minor children that still further complicates matters. A guardian must be appointed for them who must join in the application—at a price—and their shares must be set aside and held until they are of age—also at a price. "Infant's proceedings," as such actions are termed, are most technical and expensive, yet unless every contingency is provided for good title cannot be given to the real estate. Nor can clear title be given for at least two years after your death. If you had left a will you could have included therein a power of sale, and at any time when the interests of the estate demanded it the property could have been sold.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Good Housekeeping.

A Foolish Notion.

"The critics say the last act of our play falls flat," remarked the manager.

"Hum," said the "angel," "can't you put in a few of those 'props' I hear you theatrical people talking so much about?"—Birmingham Herald.

Tigers Agility Did Not Match Display of Syracuse Boys

The Tigers basketball team and its supporters were treated to a surprise last night when the Y. M. H. A. Concords of Syracuse, a diminutive lot of youngsters, but carrying with them a full knowledge of the game and speed in generous quantities, outplayed the local team in every sense and took away an easily earned victory by a score of 31 to 11.

On account of the comparative sizes of the players, the youngsters from Syracuse did not seem to have a chance to win when the spectators viewed the teams before the game began, but immediately after the whistle was blown it was seen that the Tigers would have their hands full in meeting the activity of the visitors—and so they did. In the first minute of play, Seeskin, center of the Syracuse team, and incidentally the star of the game, dropped an easy one into the net after a volley of rapid-fire passwork by his entire quintet.

Very few opportunities were offered to the Tigers to take a well-aimed throw at the basket as the Concords played a remarkable guarding game. Murphy, the star forward of the Tiger team was watched closely, with the result that he was unable to score a point. In the last few minutes of the first period the home team was able to get two baskets from the field and a point from the foul line. Meanwhile the Concords had rolled up a total of 16 points, obtained from seven field baskets and two fouls.

Although Referee Johnson called a number of fouls, most of them on the Tigers, very few points resulted from the free throws. The Syracusans made three points in this way while the Tigers made one.

The Concords demonstrated the result of coaching by practically shutting out the scorers of the home team. Palmer, playing center and Murphy, left forward, had few opportunities to make throws and they both failed to enter into the scoring column. Larabee, playing right forward obtained one basket, while the remining points were made by theg uards, Barnes and Pickett, each making two baskets on long shots.

While Seeskin proved to be the individual star of the game, his teammates are entitled to share equal honors with him. Pearlman had many chances but in his anxiety he failed on most of them. He was able, however, to score eleven of the points totalled by his team. The summary:

| Y. M. H. A. Concords | | Tigers |
|---|---|---|
| Pearlman | Right Forward | Larabee |
| Kaufman | Left Forward | Murphy |
| Seeskin | Center | Palmer |
| Rakov | Right Guard | Barnes |

Baskets—Pearlman (5), Kaufmann (2), Seeskin (6), Rakov, Larabee, Barnes (2), Picket (2). Baskets from fouls—Pearlman, Seeskin (2), Barnes. Referee—Johnson. Timer—Freedman. Time of halves—20 and 15 minutes.

CONTEST OF WILL IN COURT TODAY

Case Promises to Be One of Great Interest—Undue Influence Exerted, Is Claim of Relatives.

The contest of the will of the late Bridget Gibbone was the first case on the calendar in Supreme Court this morning. Miss Gibbons died last December, leaving an estate the value of which is variously estimated at from $25,000 to $40,000. Her will decreed that certain specific bequests should be paid to St. Francis Home of Oswego; the Rev. J. L. Lindsman of this city, and several relatives and friends. The total of the bequests was about $6,000. The residue of the estate is left to her executor to distribute among charitable organizations as he may decide.

Nephews and nieces of Miss Gibbons, mentionedin the will for small bequests, have retained attorneys to contest the will, claiming that undue influence was used and that Miss Gibbons was not mentally responsible. The case is arousing much interest in Fulton and vicinity, where the parties are well known. It is expected that a large number of witnesses will be called. This is the first case of a contested will to be tried in Supreme Court in this county under the Penal Code.

Miss Gibbons' brother, Patrick Gibbons, died a very short time before her. They owned real estate and had joint bank accounts, so that when Miss Gibbons died the property passed to Miss Gibbons. He disposed of considerable property before his death, giving largely to Catholis charities and churches.

One of the most interesting cases on the calendar of the present term is the action of Clinton F. Kilburne, vs. The Travelers' Insurance Companw, to recover $7,500 on a policy on the life of plaintiff's father, John J. Kilbourne, who died suddenly in Putnam, Conn. several months ago. Mr. Kilbourne was a traveling man and formerly lived in Mexico. The circumstances of his death have never been explained. The fact that he had the policy of insurance, it is said, was not known to his family until after his death. The company claims, it is reported, that notice of death was not given within the time specified in the policy. H. M. Stacy is attorney fort he plaintiff.

The action of Frank Gilhooley vs. H. P. Burgard was completed yesterday afternoon. He is suing for $25,000 damages for injuries to his left hand alleged to have been received while dismantling a crane on a barge at the barge canal contract here. Amongthe witnesses today was Dr. H. S. Albertson, who showed an X-ray picture of the hand showing that all the bones were broken. It is said that the injury is permanent and that the condition of the hand is gradually growing worse.

TWO GAMES WILL BE PLAYED TONIGHT

TheHigh school quintet will play St. Paul's team of Oswego at City Hall tonight. This and one more game which is to be played on the same court next week will close the season.

The Oswego boys were scheduled to play here last Friday night but the severe storm tied up trolley service so that the visitors were unable to get here on time. Coach Merrill provided a contest between his first and second teams which commenced at 9:30. The Oswegonians arrived at the City Hall while the second half of this game was being played. As the high school representative five were not able to engage in another game on the same night, tonight's booking resulted.

A preliminary game will be staged between the High school second team and the St. John's of Oswego.

M. W. A. PLAYERS HANDED A DEFEAT

The Maccabee pool players captured the first match of the series with the Woodmen when thye finished 38 pointsin the lead last night. Boutin, first man up forthe Maccabees secured the required 50 points while his opponent, Bray had 36 to his credit. Scott had a walkaway with Gardner of the Woodmen outfit when he reached the half century mark with Gardner able to get but 16 in the pockets. Guppy, of the Woodmen outfit, trimmed Seymour 50 to 41. The total score, by which the final outcome of the series is to reckoned, was 141 to 102 in favor of the Maccabees.

Wirt R. Barker was referee. The next game in the series will be played on the Woodmen's tables Thursday evening.

He is in the same class as the man who hangs from his store a BUSINESS-IS-BUM sign, expecting people to fall all over themselves to relieve the congested condition of his shelves, counters and showcases.

SUCH A MAN MIGHT AS WELL LOCK HIS DOOR AND GO TO BED

For all the good he is to the mercantile life of the community. His way is not the way of the experienced and successful advertiser who never at any season of the year hides his merchandise behind a B.-I.-B. sign.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING TO LET PEOPLE KNOW THAT YOU ARE NOT TAKING A VACATION?

Nothing? Then begin now to advertise, keeping it up SIX DAYS EACH WEEK. It will brighten the community in which you live, and you will feel happy.

PEARL WHITE

WHEN PEARL WHITE, the heroine of "The Iron Claw," saw that Arthur Stringer, the author of this serial, proposed to have her jump from the Palisades into the early spring waters of the Hudson River, she indited the following lines of reproval and promptly sent them on to the author in question:

"Honest, Arthur, hear my plea,
Or you'll prove the death of me!
Say, remember this is March
And there's ice by High Bridge arch!
Put that high-dive stuff away,
Till at least the end of May!
Can that Hudson swimming, please,
Till the leaves are on the trees;
Shift the time, rewrite the part,
But have a heart, man, have a heart!"

To this invocation from the Pathe star the author of "The Iron Claw," sent back the following reply:

Fearless, peerless, reckless Pearl,
More a sea-bird than a girl,
More a wisp of flying spray
Than a child of mortal clay,
Dodging bullets, ditching trains,
Leaping slap through window-panes,
Smashing motor-cars kerflop,
Always coming out on top,
Trapped by villains black with gore,
Giving same the slip once more,
Gaily facing a la mode
Perils through each episode,
Can't you see I have to do
What the world expects of you,
And that spirits more sedate
In your trials luxuriate,
And the hum-drum, commonplace,
Hearts of hum-drum mortals race,
Madder, quicker, at the sight
Of our plot-immured Pearl White?
For the Claw that drags you back,
Leaves them gasping on the rack,
And each plunge you take, dear maid,
Though from roadster, Palisade,
Or from studio river-bank
Plump into the Pathe tank,
Warms them to their very toes,
Making cock-tails of your woes,—
Therefore, though the chill Atlantic
Ice-floes drive you nearly frantic,
Jump you must into that river,
That we all may share your shiver!

MAKERS OF "HAZEL KIRKE" HAD TO BUILD A STONE CRIST MILL—PATHE'S FAMOUS PLAY DEMANDED A CLASS OF BUILDING NOW EXTINCT.

When the Whartons began to make "Hazel Kirke" for the Pathe Gold Rooster program, they were confronted with the necessity of finding an old stone mill with waterwheel in working condition. They sought everywhere, but the use of steam and electricity had apparently eliminated the picturesque buildings so common fifty years ago. A structure of painted wood or canvas was out of the question, as they wanted realism. The consequence was that at Ludlowville, N. Y., not far from Ithaca, they hired masons to put up a real structure of stone, modelled on an old engraving of a one-time grist-mill in New England. The Wharton mill was put up on the banks of a charming stream, with sufficient power to turn the huge wheel their carpenters installed. The result was a triumph of the picturesque and the scenes showing the mill are among the most pleasing of the picture. A fine cast, headed by Pearl White, Wm. Riley Hatch, Bruce McRae, Creighton Hale, Florence Edney and Allen Murnane, was used in this picture, which will bring fond memories to play goers the country over. "Hazel Kirke," on the boards, has survived the changes of a generation, a sure proof that the qualities that make a play endure, must include cleanliness, heart interest of the less complex type and freedom from "problem" discussion.

Hatch, as Dunstan Kirke, most ably portrays the stern, yet loving, old miller. Allen Murnane, a most excellent actor, is worthy of mention as Carringford, while Pearl White, as Hazel, does some of the best work of her career. This Gold Rooster Play is deserving of being ranked as one of the best features of a twelvemonth.

MACKENZIE DIRECTS A PICTURE WHILE DRESSED IN SCOTCH KILTS — PATHE PRODUCER GIVES THE BIG WOODS A SENSATION.

Donald Mackenzie, who produced Fred Jackson's "Precious Packet" for Pathe, recently directed a scene while dressed in Scotch kilts, and standing barelegged in the snow. "Mac" took his company to Maine and while filming some logging scenes as required by the scenario fell into the icy water three successive times, putting every suit of conventional clothing which he had with him completely out of business. "Mac's" mascot is a complete Highland outfit, sporran, kilts, befeathered hat and all, and this he carries with him everywhere. Shivering in his wet clothes he took to the kilts as a last resort. Probably never before has a Maine logging crew seen the bonnie costume of Scotland save in an artist's illustration.

ELDERLY "RED CIRCLE" ACTOR OLD ONLY IN YEARS

Daniel Gilfether Can Beat Many a Younger Man in Athletic Prowess.

Daniel Gilfether, the venerable actor who plays "Circle Jim Borden," in the Pathe and Balboa serial, "The Red Circle," has carried a life insurance policy for over a quarter of a century. Lately he received from the insurance company an inquiry as to his health, and if he were still able to work. Mr. Gilfether replied as follows: "Take a look at the first two installments of 'The Red Circle' and you'll get your answer. In them you'll see me not only riding a bucking horse, but doing a hundred yard foot race in about twelve seconds. If you are still unconvinced, see me in the Pathe 'Who Pays?' series. I carry a woman up a flight of stairs, and am the chief factor in as lively a fight as you ever saw." Despite his sixty-four years the major is as lively as a cricket and always on the job.

"IRON CLAW" ACTORS SHOW NERVE.

Will Plunge in an Auto From Bridge Into the Water.

Edward Jose, who is producing "The Iron Claw," the Pathe serial, is lying awake nights scheming the best ways to get some of the spectacular effects demanded by the scenario. Each episode presents new problems that are handled with the utmost difficulty. The one for this week requires him to drive a motor car containing five persons from a draw bridge headlong into the water. Furthermore, he can't use dummies. The five unfortunates who must make the plunge include Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis. The death-defying dip will be pulled off at Toms River, N. J.

PICTURE HELD UP BY AN ASTRONOMICAL RARITY; A PATHE COMPANY RUNS UP AGAINST SOMETHING NEW.

George Fitzmaurice, who produced for Pathe "Big Jim Garrity," adapted from the A. H. Woods play of the same name, ran up against a new kind of an obstacle while down south recently. He took his players—Robert Edeson, Lyster Chambers, Charles Compton and Carl Harbaugh—to a small town a few miles from Atlanta, Ga. The weather was vile, and day after day was passed in idleness at the hotel waiting for the sun to shine. Finally the clouds broke away and all hands made a rush for the open. Work had hardly been started before it began to get dark—too dark for good photography, and yet the sun was still shining. Everyone was mystified until a small boy was seen gazing at the sun through a smoked glass. The mystery was solved—the sun was in an eclipse!

Woman's World

Newly Elected Treasurer of New York State Suffrage Party.

MRS. OGDEN MILLS REID.

"Ever since I was a girl at Barnard college," says Mrs. Reid, "I have had the feeling that life outside the home was incomplete without woman's direct contribution to the making of public affairs. This is an age of specialization, and if women specialize in anything it is in a sense of the value of human life.

"This idea of conserving life as the best investment any state can make is needed in political affairs. I believe in all the other arguments for enfranchising women, but this seems to me the most urgent. Woman's own specialties, those things which make up her peculiar province, such as guardianship of home and children and her better knowledge of housekeeping, are needed to make up a good world for men and women just as much as man's knowledge of business and finance is needed. Men have surely realized that women have had success in their own province. Why should they deny the world the value of this special skill? This great mass of influence and expert knowledge could be used for mankind. It should so be used."

Born in Appleton, Wis., Mrs. Reid is a true western woman. She has the point of view which sees the United States as stretching from coast to coast and not as a thin line along the Atlantic seaboard. As one who has herself been a wage earning woman she believes in woman's economic independence. "I certainly hope my daughter will have this same wholesome experience, for I believe every girl should be given the chance to earn her own living," she says.

She voices the newer call for woman's political freedom not alone because women are denied a privilege when the ballot is withheld from them, but because the world needs the enfranchisement of its women and because politics as well as domestic life needs her point of view.

Spring Cues.

Blouses formed of net, either used singly or double, are most charmingly dainty. They are severely tailored or made with ruffles and frills.

Chiffon hems on faille frocks are finished with overlapping folds of the faille.

An oblong picot edged piece of chiffon was attached to the underside of the seams of a dark blue faille and chiffon frock.

Sleeves are full below the elbow and in many cases flowing, with undersleeves that are often of extreme daintiness.

How are the women of spring to disguise themselves—for during the winter it was a wise husband who could recognize his wife at a little distance. The chin-chin collar hid her chin and mouth, while the small, close fitting hat hid all her hair and even obliterated one eye. So, given one eye, one had to recognize one's fashionable friends. Of course, if feet and ankles are individual enough—and, goodness knows, some are—one had a generous view of the latter.

Corsets continue to hug the waist, are still short on the hips and the bust remains medium in height. Even if the waist is to be smaller do not order a smaller corset to obtain this effect, for it will not only not wear well, but will be uncomfortable. The same effect can be obtained by getting a corset of your own size that is cut to fit in at the waist.

Fashion Hint.

Evening dresses are sleeved! Sometimes the sleeves are mere wisps, 'tis true, but yet they cover to an extent milady's pretty shoulders and make them even prettier for the veiling. A few evening dresses will be sleeveless, but they will be the exception. The 1800 drop shoulder is also forcing itself upon fashionable notice, and a few extreme evening gowns show its charming lines.

Shrimp Salad.

Chop shrimp with celery, ½ large, and add a little onion. Place in a salad dish and pour over it mayonnaise made very thin and garnish with sliced boiled eggs, sliced lemon, beets and celery tops. It may be served on lettuce leaves if preferred.

BUSY BEES IN WINTER.

How They Generate Heat to Keep the Colony Warm.

The bee upholds his reputation for industry throughout the winter months as well as during the summer. Being susceptible to cold, the bee must turn to his colony for warmth. Communism, which in bees is so highly developed in the storing of food and caring for the young, is also the basis for the heating system.

It was found by experiment that only the shell of the cluster made by the bees in cold weather is compact. This is formed by one to several layers of bees all solidly arranged with their heads inward, their hairs interlacing. This arrangement is perfect for conservation of the heat within. Except for an occasional shifting of position the bees forming the shell are quiet. But within the shell strange things are going on.

It is here that the heat is generated. And the antics are not unlike our own when we are cold. The bees are packed loosely within the shell so that there is plenty of space for many bees to be exercising at a time. Rapid fanning of the wings, shaking the body from side to side, rapid breathing and other movements are all part of the scheme for raising the temperature. In one particular instance, when a bee had been rapidly fanning with his wings for seven and a half minutes, the thermometer nearest him rose half a degree F.—Pearson's Weekly.

DOG NOMINATES MASTER.

Collie Is Popular, and Saunders Hopes to Be Re-elected.

Sebastopol, Cal.—Probably a unique political announcement has been presented to the electors of Sebastopol in connection with the approaching election.

Gyp is a Scotch collie, a magnificent specimen of his race, a canine aristocrat and a politician, being by far the most popular dog in town. He owns as master John Saunders, town clerk, and is very frequently alluded to as assistant town clerk. A placard issued bears Gyp's portrait instead of that of his master, and he is shown "bringing home the bacon for his boss."

The placard bears the announcement, "Gyp announces that his boss is aspirant for re-election to the office of town clerk."

Gyp's influence is not to be sneered at, as everybody is his friend.

WALKS CONTINENT TWICE.

Burns on Foot Travels Lincoln Highway Both Ways.

San Francisco.—Robert Burns, twenty-eight years of age, of Eureka, Cal., whose credentials credit him with being the world's champion hiker, arrived here on his way to Eureka after traversing the Lincoln highway both ways, covering 7,842 miles on foot.

He left here May 24 last and arrived in New York Sept. 23, leaving Oct. 1 and arriving here Feb. 25.

According to attested records in his possession, Burns beat Weston's record to New York thirty-two days and beat it from New York twenty-three days. Burns claims to have covered the round trip in 103 days. Weston accomplished it in 217 days.

Burns is the first man to cover the Lincoln highway both ways on foot. He made his expenses by advertising stunts. He was employed by the Eureka Development association.

Delicate Scales.

There are two sets of scales in use in the New Orleans mint, the larger of which weighs anything from one-thousandth of an ounce to 500 pounds. The second scale, with its agate bearings, will weigh accurately a human hair.

A Tailored Effect For Youth

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

CHECKS are popular this spring, and the suit pictured comes in black and white, brown and green and blue and green worsted. It is cut with flares and a convertible collar, while the back of the coat and the slit pockets as well as the collar are tipped with glazed leather. The buttoned belt, cut diagonally, is also smart.

Some new coats are very short, and the Eton seems to be gaining in popularity.

MOST FEMININE OF TREES.

The Birch Seems to Take a Delight In Theatrical Effects.

The birch, above all our American trees, delights in theatrical effects. And if that sentence is objected to on the ground of "pathetic fallacy," we will commit the whole sin at once and add that it is the most feminine of trees.

In earliest spring, when the hepaticas are pushing up last year's leaves and our Berkshire mountain sides are donning their frail, delicate veils of color, the young birches are conspicuous for the startling brightness of their new foliage, a green so much l[illegible]ter and more vivid than all the other greens that it would arrest attention even if it were not borne on a snow white stem.

Your young birch has all the daring of a debutante.

Later, when the summer thunderstorms come, the birch has another trick up its sleeve. Some afternoon a dark, gunmetal thunder head will mass behind the crest of a hill, and suddenly an old birch on the summit will leap into startling prominence, so that it focuses the entire attention, like a single splendid streak of chalk white lightning.

Again, in midwinter, when the birch by rights should be protectively colored and inconspicuous, it is the other trees we do not notice, and the birch tree rises by the edge of the frozen stream, perhaps, or against the dark wall of the pines and displays all its snowy limbs to best advantage against evergreen or sky. — Walter Prichard Eaton in Century Magazine.

A Famous Old Structure.

Santa Barbara, probably the most visited of all the California missions, presents a perfect example in stone of the mission style of architecture. Established Dec. 4, 1786, this is the only mission still in the hands of the Franciscans, who founded them all. This structure is situated in the city of Santa Barbara, in the foothills, two miles from the ocean.—Argonaut.

Imitative Monkeys.

Monkeys never wash or bathe, though they have, as a rule, every chance to do so. Possibly experience has taught them to be afraid of crocodiles, which are pretty generally distributed on monkey haunted rivers. It is said that a number of Indian monkeys watched a party of Europeans in a boat who washed their hands and brushed their teeth. Next day the monkeys were seen to come to the river side and go through the form of washing their hands and of brushing their teeth with bits of stick.

A DASHING MODEL.

A LA MODE.

Brimless, high, springy, this new turban combines much of style. The piquant wing is of hello cerise velvet, a deeper shade than the five floppy roses at its base. The straw itself is a novelty in one of the new tan shades. Please observe the net veil with its attractive border in triangles and dots.

ACROBATIC SQUIRREL KILLED.

Schoolgirls See "Tight Rope Walking" Pet Die.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—Jack, the "tight rope walking" gray squirrel, is dead. Jack was the pet of a girls' school because of his wonderful achievements in walking along a telephone cable. He would travel this way for blocks. The girls at the school fed him with nuts, which they would place on a pole near their windows.

One day in fun a girl broke off an icicle under the window ledge and handed it to Jack to use as a balancing stick. He soon became a proficient in balancing and would sit and beg for nuts. He was doing this when suddenly one end of the icicle broke, causing Jack to lose his balance and fall fifty feet to the ground. When the girls picked him up Jack was breathing his last.

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Life becomes, as the stoics more than once tell us, like a play which is acted or a game played with counters. Viewed from the outside, these counters are valueless; but to those engaged in the game their importance is paramount. What really and ultimately matters is that the game shall be played as it should be played. God, the eternal dramatist, has cast you for some part in his drama and hands you the role. It may turn out that you are cast for a triumphant king; it may be a slave who dies of torture. What does that matter to the good actor? He can play either part his only business is to accept the role given him and to perform it well. Success or failure is a thing he can determine without stirring a hand; it hardly interests him. What interests him is that one thing which he cannot determine—the action of your free and conscious will.

I know my town, and I love my town.
And I want to help it be
As great a town to every one
As it seems to be to me!
I praise my town and I cheer my town,
And I try to spread its fame;
And I know what a splendid thing it would be
If you would do the same.

I trust my town and I boost my town,
And I want to do my part
To make it a town that all may praise
From the depths of every heart!
I like my town and I sign my town,
And I want my town to grow;
If I knocked my town or blocked my town,
That would not be nice, you know!

I think my town is the very best town
In all the world to me
Or if it is not, I want to get out
And try to make it be!
I talk my town and I preach my town
As I think a fellow should
Who has more at stake than to win or make
For the love of the Common Good!

I bet on my town, and I bank on my town,
And I think it fine to feel
When you know your town, and you love your town
That it's part of your honest zeal!
I'm proud of my town, I love my town
And I want to help it rise
And that's the way to help a town
NOT CURSE IT AND DESPISE!

Board of Health Tightens Grip Upon Property Owners

A special session of the Board of Health was held last night in the City Hall when a committee from the Evangelistic Tabernacle Association requested permission to lay sewers from the Tabernacle to an outlet in the river. The permission was granted subject to the approval of the State Commissioner of Canals.

The Board voted to extend the date when the new milk license shall become operative from April 1st to April 10, upon the latter date every dealer will be obliged to have a new license in his possession.

A resolution was passed in effect that any property owner who wishes to have clean ashes and cinders placed on his premises for the purpose of filling in, may receive permission upon making application to the City Clerk; but such property owners shall be notified at the time of application that he will be subject to a fine of $25 and suffer revocation of his permit should he allow to be deposited anything of an unsanitary nature on his land.

Ash carriers will be furnished with a list of locations where clean ashes may be deosited. Violation of any of this rule cancels a man's future right to getting special permission of a similar nature, and he is made liable to a fine of an amount not greater than $5.00. The city clerk shall issue these permits with the approval of the Health Officer.

CONSTRUCTION vs. DESTRUCTION

Communities must be built, not literally, perhaps, but the same care and guidance must be used in the making of human beings which compose cities, as is used in selecting the materials which enter into the construction of your modern skyscraper.

Communities respond to the constructive thought of the master minds of which they are composed, as directly as the irregular block of marble takes shape under the chisel of a Rodin or a Thorvalsden.

A town does not get the name of being a good town, or a bad one by accident.

You cannot deceive the world at large, as to what elements compose your community, any more than you can change the reflection in a clear pool by riling up the water with as tick—when the pool clears, and resumes its normal placidity again—the reflection is the same.

Your work lies on the bank, if you would change the picture permanently.

But what are we driving at?

Just this.

The most permanent good comes to communities from the men who do the constructive thinking, along with the constructive work. The men who do not stand on the bank and rile the water, but those who draw the picture that seems should be mirrored and reflected by their community, and begin the work, tedious and slow, perhaps; but having a well thought out objective, which will eventually produce the permanent changes necessary for the successful modern city.

Those who rile up the water are more spectacular, perhaps, and those who keep it riled up continually, by destructive work, are given the most attention. But the man or organization, who, without thought of credit, without unnecessary talk or music, sets forth to accomplish some definite work, is the community's biggest asset.

We are gradually working toward more analytical thinking. The blatant destructionist who continually throws back his head and bawls without cause, is being asked, Why? The destructive citizen who decries conditions, without any suggestion of reason or remedy, will be asked to give some suggested cure showing constructive thought before he will be given any credence, nor will he be allowed to persist in continually sowing the leaven of unrest in peaceful communities.

Commercial organizations, or, as they should be called, community organizations will always be found planning unselfish work for the community for many years ahead, without thought of reward.

The choice between the constructive and destructive thinker is easy.

It is simply choosing between the ant and the ass.

—Toledo Commerce Club.

Hunter's Former General Manager Goes With LeFever Arms Company

Announcement was made by officers of the Lefever Arms Company of Syracuse yesterday that the firm has discontinued the manufacture of guns and sold that department of its business to interests, in which Mr. Harvey J. McMurchy of this city is interested, and which will hereafter produce the Lefever hammerless shotguns at Ithaca.

All the facilities of the Lefever Arms Company plant in Syracuse are now devoted to the manufacture of transmission gears for automobiles, it was announced, the gunmaking equipment having been removed to Ithaca.

In speaking of Mr. Mac Murchy's connection with the transaction, the officers of the Lefever Arms Company stated that Mr. MacMurchy is largely interested in the purchase of their gun department, continuing with the statement that he has been personally known to all sporting goods trade for the past twenty-eight years. He has been in this city for ten years. He has associated with him men competent and experienced in the manufacture of shotguns.

The statement continues: "The Lefever gun hereafter will be manufactured in Ithaca, N. Y. Water power available there makes Ithaca, for that kind of manufacturing, a most desirable location. A new and complete modern factory will be erected in due course of time. Mr. MacMurchy was formerly general manager of the Hunter Arms company of Fulton. When the property of that company was sold in bankruptcy proceedings in November, 1914, Mr. MacMurchy bid $60,000. It was said at that time that he represented an Ithaca syndicate."

Mr. MacMurchy is still in this city but could not be located this morning to discuss the deal.

CONTEST OF WILL IS UNDER WAY

Jury Awards Frank Gilhooley $7000 in Suit for $25,000 Damages---Defendant May Appeal.

Oswego—After the case of Frank Gilhooley vs. H. P. Burgard went to the jury in Supreme Court yesterday, the Bridget Gibbons will contest was started with William H. Bamerick and Charles N. Bulger appearing for Edward Moore, of Syracuse, the executor and proponent and R. J. Shannahan, of Syracuse, Giles S. Piper and George M. Fanning, of Fulton, for contestants, William O'Melia, Wilmer, Catherine O'Melia, Nora O'Melia, John O'Melia and Bridget Nealis, nephews and nieces

The will, made November 17th, 1915, which it is desired, by the contestants, to have declared invalid, disposes of between $40,000 and 50,000 as follows:

"I give and bequeath to my nieces and nephews Nora O'Melia, Bridget O'Melia Nealis, Catherine O'Melia, Sarah O'Melia, John O'Melia and Wil iam O'Melia the sum of one hundred dollars each.

"I give and bequeath to Mrs. George Baynes of Rome, N. Y., the sum of five hundred dollars.

"I give and bequeath to Nora O'Connor, of Rome, N. Y., the sum of five hundred dollars.

"I give and bequeath to Rossanna Suen, of Syracuse, N. Y., the sum of five hundred dollars.

"I give and bequeath to Sister Alberta Joseph, of Binghamton, N. Y., the sun of one thousand dollars.

"I give and bequeath to St. Mary's Maternity and Iinfant's Hospital, of Syracuse, N. Y., the sum of one thousand dollars.

"I give and bequeath to St. Francis Home, of Oswego, N. Y., the sum of one thousand dollars.

"I give and bequeath to the Rev. John Lindsman, of Fulton, N. Y., the sum of one thousand dollars.

"All the rest, residue and remainder of my property both real and personal and of every kind and description I give, devise and bequeath to my executor, Edward Moore, of Syracuse, N. Y., for the following purposes:

"I direct my said executor to distribute my said property to such charitable institution and for such charitable purposes as in the opinion of my said executor he may deem advisable."

The Conditions Imposed

By direction of Surrogate Miller, who made the order sending the case to Supreme Court, and by stipulation of the attorneys, the jury will be asked to pass upon these questions:

Is the will of November 17th, 1915, the last will of Bridget Gibbons?

Is the instruments duly executed as required by law?

Was the testatrix of sound mind when he published the will?

Was it obtained by undue influence?

Was it obtained by fraud?

If after hearing the evidence, any of these questions are answered in the affirmative by the jury. Justice Devendorf, who is presiding, can declare the will invalid and the estate would thus pass to the nephews and nieces who are the next of kin and the only heirs-at-law. In such an event, however, specific bequests will unquestionably be paid.

Family was Prominent

Bridget Gibbons was one of a family of three that were well known all over this section of Oswego county. The other members were Patrick and John, her brothers, the former for many years being an engineer on the Lackawanna railroad. The y are frugal and shrewd investors and a few years ago had accumulated in the neighborhood of $100,000. While they were all alive they made conveyance declaring that the property belonged to them jointly and would go to the survivor. Patrick died first and he wasf ollowed by John, who died last May. Bridget passed away shortly after the will, which is under consideration, was made.

After Patrick's, but before John's death, part of the estate wasd ivided, the nephews being given several parcels of land and about $25,000 being given to charity. The Catholic mission in the Philippine Islands was sent $12,000 in cash. The new Mexico Catholic church was given $1,000; $2,000 wasg iven to each the House of Providence and St. Vincent de Paul's in Syracuse; the church in their old home in county Mayo, Ireland, was remembered; Father Lindsman was given $2,000 for a steeple on the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Fulton; $1,000 was given to the Phoenix Catholic church and there were other fine gifts made. The contestants claim that was all they planned to give to charity and that the disposition of the residue as provided under the will is not within reason and was not considered while Miss Gibbons was in her right mind.

Gilhooly's Verdict

A verdict of $7,000 in favor of the plaintiff was returned yesterday by the jury in the case of Frank Gilhooly of Fulton against H. P. Burgard, which was on trial before justice Devendorf in Supreme Court for thep ast three days.

Mr. Gilhooly asked 25,000 damages for injuries received while employed by the H. P. Burgard Company on a barge canal contract near Fulton. It was the second trial of the case. The jury on the first trial disagreed. A motion to set aside the verdict was denied and an appeal probably will be taken. Thomas Woods of Woods & Woods, Syracuse, represented the plaintiff, and H. D. Bailey and F. E. Cullen appeared for the defendant.

DR. HALSTEAD WILL ATTEND CHIROPRACTIC MEETING

Dr. W. B. Halstead left the city today for Albany, where he wil lattend the State Convention of New York Chiropractors, who will be in session there next week.

The meeting is announced as one of the most important in the history of the profession in this state, and will be addressed by Hon. Thomas Morris, ex-Governor of Wisconsin; Lee Edwards, M. D., of Lincoln, Nebraska, and B. J. Palmer of Davenport, Iowa.

"MOCK" ENGAGEMENT IN HIGHLAND STREET

Miss Anna Kendrick, of Highland st., entertained a number of friends at her home last evening to celebrate St. Patrick's day. The house was prettily decorated in holiday design. The principal entertainment of the evening was a "mock" engagement proceedings. Guests were present from Baldwinsville, Oswego and Granby. The evening was enjoyed in card playing and music. Miss Mildred Kellar rendered a number of pleasing selections on the piano.

Among those present were the Misses Margaret Platt, Frances Holliday, Mildred Kellar, Mary Reavey, Nellie Breen, Hazel Briggs, Florence Briggs, Ruth Wilcov, of Oswego, Pearl Prashaw, Maud Sorrill, Ruth Beales, Lena Campbell and Marian McCrady; and the Messrs, Maurice Vedder, Silar Sullivan, Russell Harrington, Cassie Fresby, Thomas Murray, Joseph Muth, Harold Shannon, James Ryan, Frank McEwen, Walter McMann, Frank McMann, George Kendrick, Leonard Somers, and Francis Baker.

MISS TIBBITS DELIGHTED A LARGE AUDIENCE

Miss Beatrice Tibbits appeared before a large and appreciative audience at the First M. E. church, last evening, in a program of two parts, the first of which was entirely musical. Her sweet contralto voice was especially effective in the group songs, indicating that she has a splendid future before her in the work she has chosen, which was at all times marked by artistic simplicity.

In the second part of the program she was exceedingly clever as child impersonator, deluding as far as possible her auditors as to her correct age. This work was done in costume and showed talent whose originality was indeed marked. A hearty reception is assured Miss Tibbits in the event that she again appears in this city.

GOVERNOR AND SPEAKER WILL BE CITY'S GUESTS

N. L. Whitaker, president of the Chamber of Commerce announced this morning that Governor Whitman and Speaker Sweet have accepted an invitation extended by the Chamber to attend the first annual dinner, which will be held at a place unknown at present, on April 3rd. Complete details of the event will be arranged by Secretary Hollenga and announced in the near future.

EMPIRE UNITED PLEASES THE LATE TRAVELERS

A lot of gratification is expressed by the travelling public in general upon the ready response made by the Empire United Railways to the order issued by the Public Service Commission, in effect that the main terminal in this city shall remain open each night until 12:30 instead of 10:30 as in days gone bye.

CLOSE GAME GAVE HIGH BIG SCORE

Both Teams Played the Game, But Locals Won on Advantage Gained By Guards

In the best game of basketball played this season by High school, St. Paul Alumni of Oswego suffered a trouncing last night to the time of 43 to 20.

Strict attention to guarding was responsible for the victory. Frawley and Johnson, not only kept the visiting forwards under leash, but they were assisted materially by the remainder of the organization who were always on hand to back the two up.

The reputation which had preceded the arrival of McDonald, made advisable a change in the High school lineup. The game started with Martin as guard against McDonald, reputed to be the speediest forward in Oswego. Martin had no difficulty in keeping McDonald out of the scoring column and before the end of the first half, Martin and Johnson exchanged places, each going into his regular position.

Until near the end of the second half, the game was closely contested, with the locals maintaining the lead throughout. Gallaway, guard on the Oswego team, took on a spurt in the middle of the second half. In cooperation with McDonald, he scored four baskets in succession. The combination was soon broken up when the method was diagnosed by Frawley, Johnson and Wallace. From this time on the high school boys had easy sailing, dropping the ball into

One feature of the game was the close guarding of both teams which developed into roughness. Many fouls were called as a result, but neither team was able to turn these into points with any regularity. Martin added five points to the total by finding the basket in the second half from the foul line, while Reynolds contributed two points in the same way. The visitors missed repeatedly, securing out two points from the "dead line."

One more game is to be played by the High School and then the season will close.

In the preliminary game the high school second team had a walkaway with the Baptist Stars. The score was 34 to 1. Hinsdale made this lone point from the foul line in the first part of the game. Kraus and LaPoint showed up well on the second team. Summary:

| Fulton High | | St. Pauls Alumni |
|---|---|---|
| Reynolds | L. F. | Daly |
| Martin | R. F. | McDonald |
| Wallace | C. | McPeak |
| Johnson | R. G. | Gallaway |
| Frawley | L. G. | Shannon |

Substitutions—O'Connor for Shannon. Baskets from field---Reynolds (6), Martin (4), Wallace (4), Johnson (4), Daly (2), McDonld (3), Gallaway (4). Baskets from foul line—Reynolds (2), Martin (5), Daly, McDonald. Referee—Merrill.

"PONTIFEX MAXIMUS OF TENORS"—McCORMACK

John McCormack, who will make his initial appearance in Oswego at the Armory on the evening of March 23, had a new title conferred on him by Frank Ward Burgoyne, the noted musical critic of the Cincinnati Inquirer, who referred to him recently as the "Pontifex Maximus of Tenors."

McCormack is making musical history. He has established attendance records in half a dozen cities and refused an offer of one hundred thousand dollars to go into the movies." The gross receipts of the last six concerts given in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Cleveland, Detroit and Dayton, approximate $35,000.

"It was worth ten years of peace ful life," says one writer in a Duluth paper, "to hear one broadside of Hibernian applause, hyphenated with the indoor edition of an American ball fieldovation."

Notwithstanding the long train journeys, change of climate and hard work, it is extremely doubtful if McCormack has eversung as well as he is singing just now. McCormack got a big ovation in Cleveland and Wilson G. Smith, critic for the Plain Dealer, in reviewing the concert next day paid McCormack a wonderful tribute. "It is impossible to criticise McCormack." Mr. Smith says. "His singig blunts the pen of criticism and he deserves every bit of popularity that is his. To hear him sing is a joy and to come under the spell of his personality is a privilege."

MISS MARSH'S ACTING WINS EVERY TIME

It is a well-known fact that lovers of photo plays have their favorites among the actors in the cast and rave over their cleverness and personal charm as if they were before them on the legitimate stage in actual flesh and blood.

Mae Marsh, who plays Flora Cameron, the younger daughter in the Southern household in "The Birth of a Nation," has many bits of fine acting in the picture. Among the most delightful are the welcoming of the brother back from the Civil War; the making of "southern ermine" with raw cotton and chimney black; the scene in the cellar with Miriam Cooper; the garden making that follows the return from the war; the southern banquet; and the pretty scene where she rains kisses on her brother Ben's mouth to console him for temporary loss of his sweetheart Elsie. There is always a touch of comedy or of pathos where Miss Marsh appears. Her personality lends itself to fine temperamental treatment of any part she plays. Her expressive, ever changing, mood-adapting face, is one of the most valuable in all the list of film favorites.

She was discovered by David W. Griffith, the producer of many film successes, long before he made "The Birth of a Nation."

This picture will be shown at the Quirk Theatre Sunday, March 19, matinee and night.

NEW CANNING BILL EXTENDS LATITUDE

The bills extending the hours in which women may be employed in canneries will be introduced in the assembly next week by Assemblyman Bewley of Niagara. This legislation was agreed upon at a series of conferences between the Industrial Commission, representatives of the canners and members of the reform organizations.

The measures will provide that canners may work their employes 12 hours a day in any twenty days of the canning season, provided the permission of the Industrial Commission is obtained. In practice this will mean that an employer, when an emergency arises, will go ahead and work his force overtime, notifying the Industrial Commission of his action.

So long as there are no complaints of violations, the commission's permits will not be withheld., but an employer who breaks over the law will have some trouble the next time he asks for a permit. It is believed that this feature will be an attempt to safeguard against abuse of the law.

TWO TYPES OF MEN FOR INSPECTION

It was a good man who said: "A Christian is God Almighty's gentleman," to which might be added: A Christian is the highest style of man; but this does not mean admiration for the man who is so much of a Christian on Sunday that he can afford to be a worldling the rest of the week. Nobody does or can admire such as he, because he gets nowhere. He can be likened to a steamer leaving a port for another port, going one day in one direction and the other six days in another direction. It is needless to ask how long it will take the steamer to reach the port for which it started. It will never get there. And though a man may seem to be voyaging heavenward during the first day of the week, if, during the following six days of the week he is lying to himself and the community, thus going towards the world, the flesh and the devil, he will never ride up into the peaceful harbor of which he dreams about.

Then there's the "slop-over" Christian, the kind that tries to impress one with the idea that he is simply running over with Christian grace and love for his fellow men, even including his competitors in business and every institution which stands for the good of the community—but isn't able to see that his city needs help through honest channels for its starved condition. He is the man who rushes up to shake your hand after church on Sunday, or when he meets you on the street, or when he has sold you a bill of goods—that is, if you are dressed well enough—but can't see you if you are engaged in the business of the community.

It is said that it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Probably that is why there is another kind of Christian—the man loved and respected by every one. He lives good and goes about doing good things for his community to the best of his ability, taking decent care of home institutions without any fuss or feathers: He doesn't set up his own standard of an institution as the one to which it must measure. In short he just lives good and goodness shines out in all his acts. Such a man doesn't need to wait until he reaches Heaven to get his wings, which may not be visible—but he has them just the same. He is the kind of man that makes one feel he would like to get up in the seat of the gospel wagon and ride up to the pearly gates alongside of him.

Fulton has such men. THEY ADVERTISE IN THE HOME PAPERS.

Nobody loves a bad boy. A woman in her will left $2 for a worthless son and $7,002 for her faithful cat. It is more profitable to be the good cat than a bad boy.

Right now some of the Congressmen have a better scheme than getting it printed in the Congressional Record; they get it printed in their county papers.

WATCH YOURSELF GO BY

Just stand aside and watch yourself go by,
Think of yourself as "he" instead of "I,"
Note closely as in other men you note
The bagkneed trousers and the seedy coat.
Pick flaws, find fault; forget the man is you,
And strive to make your estimate ring true.
Confront yourself and look you in the eye—
Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

Interpret all your motives just as though
You looked at one whose aims you did not know,
Let undisguised contempt surge through you when
You see you shirk, O commonest of men!
Despise your cowardice; condemn whate'er
You note of falseness in you anywhere.
Defend not one defect that shames the eye—
Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

And then with eyes unveiled to what you loathe—
To sins that with sweet charity you'd clothe—
Back to your self-walled tenement you'll go
With tolerance for all who dwell below.
The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink,
Love's chain grow stronger by one mighty link—
When you with "he"' as substitute for "I"
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.

DISCARDED TIN CANS SHOULD BE PUNCHED

Who would have thought that the tin can is a menace to the public health? The expert malaria investigators of the U. S. Public Health Service have found however that discarded tin cans containing rain water are breeding places for the mosquito which is the sole agent in spreading malaria. A hole in the bottom of the empty can might have resulted in saving of human life. Certainly it would have assisted in preventing a debilitating illness. Empty tin cans have no business about the premises anyway, but if we must so decorate our back yards, let's see to it that the can has a hole in the bottom.

EXTEND THE PROTECTION

That the birds which have protection part of the year are great destroyers of insect pests is conceded. Thus there is force in the argument that they should not be killed at any time for no better purpose than affording pleasure to owners of shotguns. Song birds, formerly killed in great numbers, are now protected throughout the year. The farmers who once shot robins because they picked a few cherries realize that these birds save more than the value of an entire cherry crop by eating insects. Today no intelligent American thinks of killing a robin. The quail, like the robin, is a most useful bird. Why should the quail not be given more protection? He is of more value on the farm than in the icebox of a city market man. And this can be said of other birds on which there is an open season—Providence Journal.

MAKING MOUNTAINS OF LITTLE MOLEHILLS

A contemporary has discovered a dark and dramatic plot of the German Government to send a "secret agent" to spread a pro-German propaganda in the United States.

The facts are that Dr Karl Oskar Bertling was sent to the United States in August, 1914, to present the German view of the war in newspaper articles and public lectures, a procedure that had no occasion to be secret, as it was entirely proper just as it was entirely proper for England to use the services of a hundred writers and speakers who have been employed ever since the war broke out in presenting the British view of the war to Americans.

The red eyed partisanship of some of our newspapers and private citizens leads them to make themselves childishly ridiculous without seeming to know it.

Of course, any Englishman, or Frenchman, or German, or Austrian literary man has a perfect right to argue his country's cause before the American people and to do his best to gain good will for his own people

And any fair-inded American is ready at all times to listen to both sides. —N. Y. American.

MEANING OF "CYCLE" IN ELECTRICITY

There are two kinds of electric current which are used commercially to any great extent. These are the direct and the alternating. A physicist once used a hose for the purpose of illustrating the difference between the two. He said that if water flowed through the hose it might be compared to a wire along which electricity moved as a direct current.

On the other hand, if the water were held within the hose by means oftwo drumheads or some such barriers, an alternating current might be compared to the impulses which would travel from one drumhead to the other when one of them was tapped sharply. In other words, the direct current moves along the wire and the alternating simply transmits impulses.

When an impluse travels from one end of a wire to the other it is called an "alternation." When an impulse travels from one end of a wire to the other and then back to where it started, that is called a "cycle." Twentyfiveof such cycles asecond give 25-cycle current and sixty cycles a second give 60-cycle current.

FINDS HEIR TO $400,000.

Son of Oil Man Located After Search of Nine Years.

Keith Edwin Dalrymple, twenty-five years old, who has been sought for nine years as heir to about $400,000 left by his father, a Pennsylvania oil operator, was taken to Charles City, Ia., from the south by Dr. C. M. Palmer.

Dalrymple is a nephew of Mrs. Palmer and when a small boy made his home with the Palmers, but later ran away.

"The boy was located in a southern hospital in February," Dr. Palmer said. "He was in need of attention, and I went to his relief and brought him to our home, where he will be cared for and where he will make his future home."

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS
President American Society for Thrift

Many people, in their eagerness to economize and save, after having been awakened to the value of economy, get a warped idea of what thrift really is. To them, it is the refusal to spend money for things actually needed or the buying of the very cheapest articles obtainable.

Thrift means, among other things, getting full value for your money. This does not mean endeavoring to get a merchant to lower the price of an article so that it can be bought below cost, but it means buying only things that are actually needed, and then things of good value.

We do not get value received for our money when we buy foolish, foppish luxuries in the way of novelties for the wardrobe, even if they are cheap. It is no economy to buy a suit of clothes for little money and of cheap material. A really good suit, costing a reasonable amount will outwear two or three cheap ones. It never pays a woman, who has only a small sum of money to spend on clothes, to buy a suit made in an extreme style, though it be cheap. A conservatively made suit from good materials will outlast several of the other kind; it cannot be "dated", and the woman who wears it will always.

There is no economy in buying cheap shoes either for children or grown people. Well made shoes will outwear the poorly made, cheap shoes long enough to pay for the extra money expended on them and may save wet feet and a doctor's bill.

The same rule applies to extravagance and economy in the home. Unnecessary gew-gaws should be dispensed with in order that the things which get the hardest wear may be of good quality. A good housewife is often known by the kind of utensils she has and the care she takes of them. The loss from carelessness in one home would furnish the kitchen in another home. The economical housekeeper after having bought a good saucepan, a good tea kettle and good steel knives, takes care of them, so that they pay for themselves many times over, and it is years before she has to replace them.

Another hint to the thrifty is to save waste paper, for it is a marketable article. After being worked over, pulped, the ink extracted, etc., it is turned again into fresh white paper. One big eastern railroad realized over $19,000 in 1914 from the sale of its waste paper. This is another evidence of the fact that nothing need be wasted, not even waste paper.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

It is a cheerful fact for suffragists that the new minister of war is reported by Commissioner of Immigration, Frederic Howe, as "keen about woman suffrage." Suffragists hope that he will infect his chief who, it must be admitted, has never seemed the least bit excited over self government for women.

In Nevada the list of alternates to the Republican National Convention contains the name of Mrs. Thomas Moran of Reno who will do her small part toward feminizing the great occasion.

"You may have the distinction of neither the pay nor the consideration that hod carriers command," Samuel Gompers told a recent teacher's mass meeting in New York city, and amid murmurs of "yes," and "that's right!" he added, "You are the poorest and the least considered of all the public servants."

There are not far from half a million women teachers in this country holding their positions by the grace of politics. "In order to get a square deal they must organize," says the chief of labor unionists, "and vote," adds the suffragist.

If the suffragists hope to win Iowa because it is a progressive state, they expect for quite another reason to win West Virginia. It is because West Virginia has a large mining population and because mining communities in the West have been easiest to win for suffrage that votes for women advocates expect to carry West Virginia next November.

Mining is a risky business anyway. A man who was afraid to take chances wouldn't be a miner. So he can't be scared into voting "no" on woman suffrage by being asked how he would like to have his wife sit on a jury or be a policeman.

In Congress a bill has been introduced which, if passed, will deny to a prostitute American citizenship as a result of her marriage to an American citizen. Congress is also expected to consider a bill to prevent an American woman from losing her citizenship upon her marriage to an alien.

If the first, which is said to be generally approved, becomes a law and the second fails, suffragists will jot it down in their note book under the heading "Men in government are more interested in punishing the bad womanthan in protecting the good."

* * *

The suffrage campaign in Iowa is reported as moving along to an apparently successful issue on election day in June. It is backed by the Governor, the two U. S. Senators, the Supreme Court Judges, and the most prominent political leaders.

There has always been a feeling in Iowa that if the question of suffrage could ever get past the legislature to the voter, woman suffrage would win. June will tell the story.

SUDAN GRASS IN NEW YORK

It is doubtful whether Sudan grass will prove a profitable crop for New York state farmers, according to statements made by the State College of Agriculture, in response to a number of inquiries which have been sent in. The college says, however, that it is a crop well worth planting in an experimental way.

Sudan grass is a tall, coarse forage plant, and grows to an average height of from three to six feet. It is very closely related to the well-known Johnson grass of the Southern States, the most important difference between the two being that Johnson grass is a perennial spreading by strong, underground root stems, while Sudan grass is strictly an annual. The forage value of Johnson grass has long been recognized in the South but because of its habits it has often become a bad weed and southern farmers have hesitated to introduce it on their farms.

Because of this objectionable feature of Johnson grass, the United States government made a general search for a form which would not have the strong perennial root stalks. The seed of such a grass was received in 1909 from the Sudan government at Khartum, Egypt. This grass is closely related to the sorghums, but differs in that it is much more slender and grass-like in its growth.

GERMAN TELLS WONDERS OF AN ARTIFICIAL ARM

Invention of American Enables Wounded to Write and Do Other Things.

Dr. Max Kohn of Berlin, who lost his left arm in battle, recently delivered a lecture in Vienna before a large gathering of physicians to demonstrate the wonders of the Carnes artificial arm. This ingenious invention is named after its inventor, an American.

Dr. Kohn showed the physicians how the Carnes arm took the place of the lost member in most wonderful fashion. He showed how the arm can turn and twist, how it can reach in any direction and take hold of any object with the same facility as any natural arm and hand. The physician also demonstrated to his audience how readily he could open and close an umbrella, the facility with which he could write with the artificial member, put the hand in his pocket and take out loose change, put his gloves on, etc. He could take off his coat or put it on without assistance.

Dr. Kohn showed the simplicity of the mechanism which controlled the movements of the hand and fingers and said with an artificial arm of this type no inconvenience or annoyance was experienced. The invention is being used to replace amputated arms and hands in the German hospitals and the results have been remarkable. Men who otherwise would have been afflicted for life now can attend to the work and business as before and can even return to the front if need be.

ELECTRICITY FROM THE AIR.

Kansas Man Gets It, but What Is He Going to Do With It?

For two years Harry Perrigo of Kansas City, Mo., has been striving to draw electricity out of the air. He can get the currents all right. The trouble is that he can't take care of the power after he gets it.

The other day the inventor was knocked unconscious twice by the strong current and both times a pulmotor brought him to. Later he took the count again. But Dr. James I. Tyree and the pulmotor soon were on hand, and in an hour Perrigo was at work again.

Perrigo's device resembles a wireless tower connected with a mysterious bread box and numerous wires. He says his machine already has furnished enough power to light an eight room house.

FULFILLS LINCOLN'S PROMISE

Navy Department to Take Monitor Survivor Through Canal.

President Lincoln's promise, made more than a half century ago to John Driscoll of Hampton, Va., said to be the oldest living survivor of the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac during the civil war, is about to be carried out by the navy department.

After the naval engagement President Lincoln summoned the crew of the Monitor, of which Driscoll was a member, to Washington. He thanked them for their valor and said if any of them ever wanted a favor it would be only necessary to ask for it.

It was not until recently, however, that Driscoll decided to ask the proffered favor. He requested to be taken aboard a battleship going through the Panama canal, which, he said, he longed to see before he died. Arrangements for the trip have been completed, and the next warship that passes through the great waterway will carry the aged veteran as a passenger.

Said the Critic,—

"Give us TRACTION,— —without FRICTION!"

MAKING the "Silvertown" Cord Tire, taught us a few lessons in the manufacture of lighter, cooler, more flexible and enduring FABRIC Tires.

The "Silvertown" Tire, you know, gains its marvellous Speed (and the Coasting qualities that demonstrate its Speed) primarily through having only TWO layers of Cords, laid transversely.

Of course, these TWO layers bend more readily than Five, Six, or Seven Layers of Fabric do (or of Cord would).

But, we found it necessary, in order to conserve that flexibility (in the Two-cord construction), to put a Rubber Tread over it which was equally flexible,—equally strong,—and elastic enough to act as a sort of spring between the Earth and the Tire-casing, when Brakes were thrown on at stopping, or clutch thrown in at starting.

So, we had to devise practically a new kind of Rubber, for this purpose, TWO YEARS AGO.

And this new kind of Rubber Compound now does for GOODRICH Tires a work paralleling that done by the wonderful Alloys of Steel and Bronze in modern Motor Car construction.

It multiplies Rubber Efficiency, for Tire purposes, while decreasing its Weight, and without increasing its Bulk, or its Cost to you.

AS we cannot yet supply half the demand for "Silvertown Cord Tires" (until enough manufacturing equipment can be constructed) we compromise with the Public by giving them, without additional charge, the highly efficient black Silvertown Rubber in all Goodrich FABRIC Tires for 1916.

This makes GOODRICH Fabric Tires the most Resilient and Responsive-to-Power,—the most Long-Lived and Lively, of all FABRIC tires, at ANY price,—without increasing their relative price to you.

We call this new Silvertown Tread Compound by the name and brand of "Barefoot Rubber."

Because, it CLINGS to the pavement for the same sort of reason that your bare foot clings to a slippery floor, while being flexible, stretchy, springy, and light.

TENACIOUS, resilient, enduring, this "Barefoot Rubber" you today get in all black-tread Goodrich Fabric Tires, —Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,— Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in none but GOODRICH products.

Test out a pair of these moderately priced black-tread FABRIC Tires and see what results from the mixing of BRAINS with Rubber.

Once in a generation or so a book finds it way into history. Once in a decade the populace of a world power is stirred.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

an inspired revelation written by J. Stuart Blackton, shows America's defenselessness.

You see the most beautiful sky line in the world in flames.

The metropolis of the western hemisphere devastated.

The fall of New York.

The enemy approaching.

The defeat of the meager American forces.

The landing of the invaders.

Our forts destroyed.

Our fleet beaten in battle.

BUT,

With it all is a heart interest drama so vivid, so real, so touching that it makes a lump rise in your throat and makes your heart pulsate faster.

ELIZABETH ROBERTSON CLASS WAS ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Charles Johnston of North 5th st. seized upon the opportunity afforded by St. Patrick's Day coming into conflict with the time set for entertaining the members of the Elizabeth Robertson class of the Presbyterian church, yesterday, to provide an entertainment both pleasing and helpful. Charity sewing occupied the attention during the afternoon, and at 6 o'clock the forty-five members of the class sat at tables to participate in a picnic supper. The color scheme was appropriate to the occasion. Music was furnished during the mealtime. A business session followed the supper hour.

How He Got Even.

"Getting even" is a hazardous undertaking. A Philadelphia lawsuit, originally involving less than $80, ended a long course through the courts with costs aggregating over $13,000. The plaintiff got the $80 sued for, but his lawyer's bill was $1,700. He is $1,640 to the bad, but he has "got even," for the other fellow had a lot more to pay —Christian Herald.

Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

Community Notes

Mrs. Lora White Kessler spent the day in Syracuse.

Mr. L. E. Hope of the Palmer-Hope company, returned last night from Chatham, N. Y., where he attended the funeral of his son. Mrs. Hope is expected to arrive next week.

Miss Anna Brackett of Cazenovia is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Campbell of W. 4th st.

Mr. I. Fox, in announcing the arrival of spring goods to be made up in suits for men and women, says that the prices will more than satisfy the purchaser.

Miss Hazel Adsit has returned to Baldwinsville. She spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Summerville of West 1st street.

The Red Men's dance, as well as the one held by the Elks was well patronized last night.

The State-St. Scouts easily defeated the Holy Name Juniors at basketball this morning; score, 34 to 1.

FRIENDLY NINE CLUB MIXED THE COLORS

"Strictly neutral" might have been the slogan of the Friendly Nine Club whose members were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Case of 715 Phillips st., the reason being that hand-embroidered, green and gold garments were worn by the ladies. This pacifist action won the admiration of everybody, except one horrid man who appeared upon the scene with a camera, so eager was he to secure film subjects; and now the guests are wondering which theater will have the temerity to reproduce the result of his snap-shooting. Readings upon historical subjects connected with the life of the Patron Saint were given by different members. Late in the afternoon a drawing contest was held, Mrs. McCoy winning first prize and Mrs. H. J. Terpening, consolation.

MR JOHN GREENWALT

Mr. John Greenwalt, a former employe of the Boland Brothers, in W. Broadway, is dead in Syracuse, where he removed about one year ago to remain with a sister. His death occurred on Thursday at the age of 47 years. The funeral occurred in Syracuse today.

Pity the Congregation.

An old Scotch minister told his assistant that he felt more fatigued hearing him than in preaching himself. The assistant replied that he experienced a similar feeling when his senior was in the pulpit.

"Then," rejoined the minister, "I peety the folk that have to hear us baith!"—Youth's Companion.

DOBBIN'S RUNNING DAYS ARE PASSING

Covering 670 cities of 7,000 population and over the Firemen's Herald has taken a census of thefi re apparatus and hose in service and reserve in America nand Canad.an fire departments. In 1914 the 315 cities which reported possessed 7,059 fire vehicles drawn by Dobbin, while now, with statistics from more than twice the number of departments, reporting, including the original 315, the number of horse-drawn pieces of apparatus in service and reserve is less by over a thousand.

Of the total of 9,295 pieces of apparatus of all kinds, there are 5.869 horse drawn and 3.426 automobiles, including 1,012 combination chemical and hose cars. What appeared to be hesitation in adopting the triple combination pump, chemical engine and hose car, seems to have disappeared, the Firemens' Herald says, as there are 385 of these registered, as against 290 straight automobile pumping engines. Ladder trucks and water towers number 313; tractorized pieces 573, and all other fire automobiles, most of them chiefs' cars, total 853.

Possible purchases this year, according to reports, include 808 motor vehicles, while municipalities are in the market for only seven horse-drawn wagons.

IT'S FOOLISH TO SUFFER

When So Many Fulton People Are Pointing the Way Out

You may be brave enough to stand bachache or headache or dizziness. But, if, in addition urination is disordered, look out! If you don't try to fix your sick kidneys, you may fall into the clutches of dangerous disease before you know it. But, if you live more carefully and help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, you can stop the pains you have and avoid future danger as well. Don't experiment—use the remedy Fulton people are publicly endorsing. Read this case:

Mrs. E. Randall, 222 S. Second st., Fulton, says; "I had kidney trouble and suffered from lameness in my loins. I also had dizzy and nervous spells. I did not rest well and was annoyed by the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills stopped the pains and aches and regulated the kidney action."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Randall had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

SHE SAW THE SHOW.

And Then She Told Him Just What Happened There.

"I heard a cynic talking on the futility of self sacrifice the other night," said a New York lawyer. "I didn't agree with his conclusions, but his theme recalled an incident in my youth.

"When I was a youngster the dog faced boy was in his prime. We lived in the county seat of a county up state. My only sister—always my great pet—and I were intensely excited when we heard that the lad with the canine countenance was to come to our town.

"We had saved up all our pennies, and when the boy arrived we had twenty-five. We figured the admission would be 10 cents and we would have a nickel over for candy. For what's seeing a dog faced boy without candy to chew while staring?

"Well, the boy arrived, and we went down to the tent where he was being displayed. To our horror the admission was 25 cents. We puzzled long, but the tragic conclusion was always the same—only one of us could go in. So with tender fingers I drew forth the twenty-five pennies, and in a voice husky with emotion of disappointment I said: 'Here, Dot, you go in. I don't mind, and you can tell me about it when you come out.'

"My sister protested, but finally went. In five minutes she was back. I was all eagerness to hear every detail.

"'How was he—how was he, Dot? What did he look like? Is he really, truly a dog? Tell me, quick.'

"Dot gazed at me, and her lip quivered. 'Oh, Jack,' she said, 'when I got in I was so scared I couldn't look at him.'"—New York Times.

As, pausing in alarm before her gate,
He saw within another, bolder man
Embrace his Kate.

"This," laughed the maid when once her lips were free,
"You could not understand should I explain,
And, anyway, I'm much too busy now.
Pray call again."

—Judge.

Retailing Canaries.

Stranger—I noticed your advertisement in the paper this morning for a man to retail imported canaries.

Proprietor of Bird Store—Yes; have you had any experience in that line?

Stranger—Oh, no; I merely had a curiosity to know how the canaries lost their tails.—Indianapolis Star.

One of the Home Guard.

"Why go away from home to fight?"
She asked, and so he tarried.
He did not need to go, all right.

But this is not a cynic shaft,
'Tis flown with love's own feather;
Life's wars they fought; life's joys they quaffed

DINNER IN HONOR OF ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Among the many home celebrations in honor of St. Patrick's Day was one given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Massaro, of 610 Utica st. The dining room was tastefully decorated, and the table favors were miniature Irish flags standing in small stove-pipe hats. Music and a recitation by Mrs. George B. Moore were enjoyed by the guests, the musical features embracing songs by Messrs. A. E. Krause, J. W. Branche, and Miss Ethel Sweet. A Victrola added to the life of the evening, and Miss Madge Bentz and Mr. Vincent Martin were quite amusing in recitations.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Krause, Miss Ethel Sweet, Miss Madge Bentz, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Moore, Mr. J. William Branche and Mr. Vincent Martin.

WEDDING ANNOUNCED ON ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Envelopes bearing a neat design in honor of Ireland's Patron Saint were used to convey one of Cupid's messages to a few friends of Miss Corinne Goodrowe. The occasion was a dinner given yesterday in honor of the young lady who is now the bride-elect ofMr. Raymond Strahn. The party was held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Birdsall of South 2nd st. and was elaborate. Irish colors were used to decorate the home and table and many were the expressions of congratulation for Miss Goodrowe.

GOLDBERG CARTOONS

GOLDBERG ANIMATED CARTOONS SOMETHING NEW IN PHOTOPLAYS—FAMOUS ARTIST OF THE "MAIL" WILL DRAW FOR THE SCREEN.

The announcement that R. L. Goldberg, the famous artist-humorist of the N. Y. Evening Mail, is producing animated cartoon comedies for the motion picture screen which will be released through Pathe, recalls a romance of success that is almost unparalelled.

Mr. Goldberg for some years has enjoyed a position on the very top round of the newspaper ladder, and his cartoons have achieved such popularity that they have been syndicated and are being published in one newspaper in every large city of the country.

To be only thirty-three and yet draw a salary of $50,000 yearly, with percentages bringing it up to some $100,000, is to be in a class by yourself, and that is true of R. L. Goldberg. He was born in San Francisco, and at an early age made up his mind to be a newspaper artist. His father, a substantial business man, strenuously objected to the boy's ambition, saying that there was no money in the newspaper business. Mr. Goldberg, senior, prefers to forget his early objections now.

As a student in the University of California, studying to be an engineer, he was drawing continually for the mere fun of it. His pictures were published in the college paper and his fellow students learned to look for them. There was something different in the young man's outlook on life, something different in the creations of his pencil, and something different in the captions,—in the imaginary conversations of his brain people. He graduated from the University in 1904 with the degree of Bachelor of Science and soon got a job at planning sewers in the San Francisco City Engineer's office at $100 per month. However, it strains one's sense of humor considerably to see humor in sewers, so he threw up his job to take one with a San Francisco paper at $8 a week. He was hired to draw daily cartoons for the sport page, but the paper didn't publish his cartoons and he wanted to see them in print. So he quit this job also, and went to another paper that agreed to publish his pictures. The salary was even less at the new job than at his other one, but that didn't bother him, for he found it better fun. A few months of this and he decided that New York was the better field, and so went East. He talked to three or four editors, all of whom he failed to interest until he went to the Evening Mail. There he was offered the chance to make pictures daily for the sporting page. That was nine years ago, and he is still with the Mail. He started in at $50 per week. Three months later it became $65 a week; six months later $75 a week, and at the end of a year he got a two years' contract at $100 a week. At this time, too, his cartoons were first sold to other newspapers throughout the country. Today his pictures are being seen by more than 2,200,000 persons daily. At the close of his third year he signed a three years' contract at $300 a week, followed by another at $450 a week. His new contract now gives him a salary of $50,000 per year and royalties—surely a pretty respectable jump from $8 per week.

Mr. Goldberg works hard for his big salary. Early and late he is at it, going over his pictures again and again until he has produced what he wanted to obtain. His pictures are intensely human and his characters unlike anything that was ever conceived before.

Mr. Goldberg is the most companionable of persons. His success has not spoiled him, and he is as modest as though he were still earning his $8 a week. His animated cartoons represent a year's patient work and experimentation, and they will strike a new note of originality and cleverness on the screen.

There is little doubt but what the Pathe people have done a good stroke of business in acquiring these films.

"NEW YORK" CONTAINS SOME FINE NIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY SCENES

Pathe—A. H. Woods Picture, Shows Broadway by Night.

Some very interesting and unusual scenes of Broadway by night, are shown in Pathe's "New York," adapted from A. H. Woods' play of the same name. The cameraman was stationed on the roof of an office building and was able to film a long stretch of the "great white way." The remarkable changing electric signs which make the street unlike any other in the world are clearly shown, and the processions of trolley cars and automobile headlights make endless lines of light which shoot up and down like the tail of a comet. No better examples of night photography in motion pictures have ever been made.

PATHE PRODUCER RUNS UP AGAINST THE BLUE LAWS

Geo. Fitzmaurice, who produced Pathe's "Big Jim Garrity," had his company down in Georgia for several weeks. The weather was so bad they were kept indoors for days at a stretch. "Fitz" finally lost all track of the passage of time. When Sunday came he braved the elements and went out into the back yard of the country hotel and practiced shooting at a mark. Within ten minutes he had been arrested, arraigned before the magistrate at his home and fined $25 and costs for "hunting on the Sabbath."

Robert Edeson, who stars in Kipling's "Light That Failed," which is being produced for Pathe, says the title is a good one, for the company was held up recently for three days owing to poor light when they were doing exteriors.

SNOW SCENES MANUFACTURED FOR "THE IRON CLAW"

Desperate Measures Used on Pathe Serial.

Manufactured snow storms are an old story on the legitimate stage, but Director Jose who is now producing the new Pathe serial, "The Iron Claw," believes he is the originator of the fabricated film snowstorm. After a strenuous day, in which Pearl White, Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis, who are starring in the new Pathe pulse-quickener, had encountered all the danger that Jose could think of, the company repaired to their hotel at Toms River, N. J., to rest awhile and dream.

Toms River awoke the next morning to Jose's unmuffled query as to who had stolen the snow. All unconscious of the fundamental principle of "movie" mechanics that continued action demands continuity of scene character as far as weather conditions are concerned, the enterprising Toms River street cleaning department had stripped every vestige of the snow from off their fair community and their relentless shovels had completely ruined all of Jose's finest scenic effects.

The local weather prophets predicted "more snow soon" and the Pathe players settled down to wait. Three idle days passed before Jose got his idea, but not three idle minutes afterwards. "Go out and hire every wagon you can get," he ordered, "and we'll have snow from Montreal, if necessary, rather than wait another minute."

And that's how it was done. The pure white flakes were transported from a point half a mile away out of range of the Toms River diggers, sprinkled carefully over the "locations" required and the work of "The Iron Claw" making went on as merrily as ever.

INCORPORATING HUMAN NATURE IN PHOTO-PLAYS

GEORGE FITZMAURICE, PATHE PRODUCER, REVEALS SECRET ART OF EFFECTIVE DIRECTING

AN INFINITUDE OF DETAIL

Aptitude Must Be Inborn for the Cinema Drama Has its Unique Rules, Technique and Psychology.

Coming from a director who has proved his theories by practical application and demonstrated their truth by a record of a series of productions without a failure, these ideas of George Fitzmaurice, the Pathe producer, on photoplay directing, are well worthy of serious consideration. He says:

"The right and proper direction of a photo-drama is necessarily as much of an art as painting, sculpture or any of the other arts. It has its rules, its technique, its composition and, above all, its psychology, and it is this latter phase of the subject that is given too little attention by the average director, which is largely responsible for the vast quantity of only mediocre pictures now produced.

"A comprehensive knowledge of psychology, in all its branches, is a necessary complement of good directorship, for motion pictures have progressed to such a stage that psychology is the base upon which they are all built. The public of today demands something more than mere action; it demands a well developed theme, and when you enter upon this you enter the realms of psychology. To incorporate human nature into a picture you must understand the science of mental phenomena, for it is this science that is guiding the guiding hand of realistic action.

"To my mind the action of a director in producing a picture is largely subconscious. I can only speak of my own individual method. First, there is the purely technical work of designing the sets. I work out every detail of this in advance, even selecting the design and color of the wall paper. Then I pick out my furniture and work out detailed plans of just how it will be arranged in the completed sets. I even carry out this initial supervision so far as to accompany the women of the cast to the stores where they purchase their gowns, in order to be perfectly sure before I start work that everything is in harmony. During all this time I am thinking deeply of the play as a whole, not in a conscious detailed manner, but absorbing the theme, the atmosphere, in a subconscious manner. When it comes to the actual acting of the various scenes the whole idea is in my mind. I first send my people through a scene without instruction, for frequently they, in studying out the action of the picture, evolve ideas that are valuable. Then by combining the best of their initial work with my own previously conceived ideas, I arrive at the manner in which the scene should be played.

"Composition is a subject that bothers many directors. Personally, I never bother about it, except to notice when it is wrong. The ability to judge composition is something that is more or less born in one. One does not necessarily group his characters in certain definite positions, but should they group themselves in a manner that offends the rules of good composition the fault is at once noticeable to the good director."

Mr. Fitzmaurice, it is interesting to note, is the man who produced "Via Wireless," "At Bay," and "New York," for the Pathe Gold Rooster program,—three pictures that are considered among the best of the last twelve months. He is now finishing "Big Jim Garrity" for the same concern.

FANIA MARINOFF DOES A REMARKABLE FALL

"New York," the Pathe Gold Rooster Play, in which Florence Reed is featured, contains a startling fall done by Fania Marinoff, who appears in many Pathe pictures. With utter disregard of life and limb she goes head first down a long flight of stairs, turning several complete somersaults. Miss Marinoff was badly bruised in the interests of realism. George Fitzmaurice produced the picture, which is adapted from the A. H. Woods play of the same name.

A lot of money must be spent to give the proper atmosphere to a picture where many scenes are laid in homes of wealth. For instance, in "New York," there are some bedroom scenes in which are used lace sheets which cost $250. The bedspread is of hand embroidered silk and costs $450.

PATHE NEWS SHOWS WONDERFUL SUBMARINE PICTURES.

One of the most noteworthy news pictures ever taken was shown in a recent number of the Pathe News. The cameraman was perched in an insecure position on the turret of a submarine, and filmed every stage of the launching of a giant torpedo at an enemy ship, together with the submersion and rising of the submarine. The pictures depict in a way that no mere description could ever do, the methods adopted by the newest and most terrible element of modern naval warfare.

He celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday here recently by meeting all his old friends, going about town and proving by every known method that he might be accepted as a gilt edged risk by any life insurance company.

Mr. Reid, who was a soldier during the civil war, purchased the coffin after considerable shopping around. ## ON MOVING.

Common Sense Hints to Make a Bore Somewhat Easier.

Few people move right, and it is a good plan to know how to pack things for moving, even though you are not threatened this year. When you know you are going to move begin at once to save newspapers and boxes. Several small boxes are more practical than the huge packing cases sometimes used. They are not so hard to handle and consequently receive better treatment. For the same reason barrels are more advisable than boxes for dishes or fragile articles. If boxes are used for this purpose they should be conspicuously marked. When preparing pictures or mirrors for shipment it is considered a good plan to wrap and crate them instead of boxing, so people handling them can see what they are. In the same way a strip lid adds to the security of the box of glass fruit jars or similar articles. Books should be packed in small, strong boxes. Of course the way things are packed depends largely upon their destination. When hauled in a van they require comparatively no packing, the movers assuming all responsibility for scratches and breakage. When preparing for shipment the packing can not be too carefully done. This work should also be guaranteed. In case your effects comprise more than one load it is essential that the first one should contain the carpets, the dining room and kitchen equipment, for, while they are the last things needed in the old house, they will be demanded first in the new. The importance of carefully made plans cannot be too highly emphasized, nor can the advantages to be derived from securing the expert and competent services of a reliable moving concern.

Medical Dilemma.

"What should one do," asks the young doctor, "when a patient comes in and diagnoses his own case exactly?"

"In such a situation," explains the experienced physician, "you must use your best judgment of human nature. ### Everlasting Bricks.

Once made a brick is practically indestructible. Nearly every brick that has ever been made by man from the beginning of time is still in existence on this earth. The men who made and laid them and who directed these operations have long since been gathered into dust. Some of them have doubtless contributed in their bodies to the making of more bricks. But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.—Exchange.

Imitative Monkeys.

Monkeys never wash or bathe, though they have, as a rule, every chance to do so. Possibly experience has taught them to be afraid of crocodiles, which are pretty generally distributed on monkey haunted rivers. It is said that a number of Indian monkeys watched a party of Europeans in a boat who washed their hands and brushed their teeth. Next day the monkeys were seen to come to the river side and go through the form of washing their hands and of brushing their teeth with bits of stick.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Friday and Saturday, March 17th and 18th, a very remarkable meeting was held in the city of Rochester. This meeting was called by the Rochester Chamber of Commerce the most efficient organization today in the United States of America. Forty secretaries were invited to attend this meeting for the purpose of discussing the diff erent programs laid out by the different prominent commercial organizations in the State of New York. This meeting was remarkable, because it gave an inside in the workings of the commercial organizations not only, but gave the secretaries an opportunity to 'swap experiences" and to see what could be done in the way of standardizing the organizations in the state. We shall refrain from boosting and boasting; we are only given FACTS as they are.

Several very important matters were brought up by the Rochester Chamber and when an organization of that class seeks light in certain matters then it is needless to say that the smaller organization, has a chance to learn a few things. Without any exaggeration on the part of the Fulton Chamber of Commerce, it must be stated here that OUR organization compares VERY favorably with the other organizations and the members and the Board of Directors may be complimented on their efforts. Seemingly almost impossible things have been done here in the period of a few months and the people in FULTON should be indeed proud that their commercial organization is classed among the MOST PROGRESSIVE ones in the entire state of New York. One of the main features of the meeting was the discussion in regard to membership and how to keep the members satisfied. It was brought to light that very few organizations do like FULTON by calling the members together every month—like we have been doing lately. The only thing in which we are TOTALLY lacking is cooperation amongst the merchants. The Rochester Chamber called seven different committees for meeting on Saturday so that the secretaries could have a chance to see these committees work.

We herewith copy the announcement of these meetings:

Rochester Chamber of Commerce

Committees for Saturday, March 18th, 1916.

1. Acquaintance and Entertainment Committee (Annual Cruise), 12:15.
2. Legislation Committee, 12:30.
3. Membership Committee, 12:15.
4. Solicitation Committee (Report of Sub-Committee on Advertising-Donations, etc.), 12:30.
5. Trade Customs Committee of Wholesale Merchants' Council, 12:30.

All secretaries were invited to attend one or two of these meetings and it was remarkable to see how they all sit down with the committee on membership. After the committee had opened the meeting and the members went through routine business, the chairman called on the secretary of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce first for his opinion and then on the secretaary of the Fulton Chamber of Commerce for his comment on the matter.

It is remarkable to hear how they work together in Rochester and it is to be regretted that the merchants in our good city, seemingly do not want to sit with each other at the same table and patronize the home institutions. We will, however, try to remedy this in the near future and we hope that our efforts will be crowned with success. One thing was forcibly brought to the front and that was the unanimous opinion that the organization of the Fulton Symphony orchestra was something unique in this state and Fulton was complimented. We sincerely hope that the members of the Chamber will show their faith in the organization and will be willing to work a little for the Chamber.

After all, it is as true as two times two is four that we have to meet with one another to accomplish certain things for the good of the city. What does it matter to us to get together once in a while to see if we can't straighten certain things out and to help Fulton to become bigger and better. There is a wave of prosperity going all over the Country and still, to be perfectly frank, we do not seem to get our share. And is it not true that we only will get our share, when we meet each other on a common ground and try to find ways and means to bring Fulton forcibly to the front. We have on different occasions said that NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE and this is true with Fulton's future; it can be made bright and good, but we shall not be able to accomplish it UNLESS we are willing to forget those petty little troubles of the different many units in our good city and unless we are broad-minded enough to exchange ideas and to take matters serious for once.

There are so many fine and splendid men in our city that it is almost a shame that we should be so divided and talk about each other. It must not be forgotten that praise always bears fruit and that others have just as good qualities and may be better than we are.

Ithaca Gains Man Who Sold Millons of Dollars' Worth of Fulton-Made Goods

Mr. Harvey J. MacMurchy announces the immediate removal of all machinery, belts, shafting, etc., of the gun department formerly belonging to the Syracuse plant of the Lefever Arms Company; in fact, the work began last Saturday and will continue until everything is landed in Ithaca, which will be in about two months. When this has been accomplished the work of making shotguns in the new plant will begin.

In the meantime Mr. MacMurchy will prepare to remove his household goods to Ithaca, in the end severing his relations with this city where he has been prominent in the business and social life for a period of about ten years. During that time he has been while connected with the Hunter plant the means of securing approximately $3,000,000 worth of business for thel ocal gun works, most of which, of course, found its way ultimately into the Fulton merchants' treasuries.

It is not the purpose of the Lefever Company to contract for war business, but to stick strictly to making an especially fine line of shotguns, to supply the trade in the absence of the foreign-made product.

"Between two and three hundred men will be employed inthe plant at the start and if conditions warrant this amount will be gradually increased, was the statement made by Mr. MacMurchy. "At the present time there is located on the stream where we will take our water power the plant of the Ithaca Gun Company. This firm is controlledentirely by Ithaca capital. The city of Ithaca is pleasing to a manufacturer from the fact that capital can be readily interested there in a legitimate venture.

"We will have suitable shipping facilities and will not be hampered by inconveniences such as are likely to result in other cities. It is my intention to engage in that part of the business relative to the output of the product and not go into the manufacturing end itself," said Mr. MacMurchy this morning.

PURSUIT OF VILLA STIRS ANXIETY ON BOTH SIDES OF THE BORDERLINE

El Paso, Texas—Concern for the men of the punitive expedition now in Mexico give way today to apprehension over the situation that has developed at Juarez. The United States musts have the unrestricted use of the Mexican Central and the Mexican Northwestern railways at once. General Carranza has once refused permission. Representatives of his military and civil governments here believe that he will do so again.

Mexican officials are feeling the st strain keenly. They are fully alive to what it may mean and there is a tense feeling both here and across the border today.

The Sixth and Sixteenth infantry and the Thirteenth cavalry, making up thec olumn which left Columbus, arrived this morning at a point in the vicinity of Ascencion, northwest of Casas Grandes.

Radio reports of General Pershing's arrival there state that the troops made a journey of 110 miles in forty two hours. This is a record and is at the rate of thirty-three miles a day. As Ascencion is only about seventy miles from the border it is probable that the column was obliged to take a round about route. The wireless also reports rumors of Villa having murdered many American colonists in the Casas Grandes district on his retreat from Columbus, but gives no details.

The Seventh and Tenth cavalry, under Colonel Dodd, which made the record night ride to Colonia Dublan, is reported still at that place.

The exact whereabouts of the Eleventh cavalry is not known here. This regiment, a thousand strong, started for Columbus Thursday night or Friday morning. It is reported, but not confirmed, that the First Aero squad, under Captain Fulois, has taken the field.

Itis reported that GrigadierGeneral Pershing at the front and Major General Funston at San Antonio, afte rwireless communicationyesterday with Colonel Dodd at Colonia Dublan, have decided thec avalry cannot go any further south from Casas Grandes without railroad communication.

Brigadier General George Bell, Jr., held second conference at the Toltec Club here today and received complete lists of all the engines rolling stock, track conditions, arms and ammunition now in Juarez.

TEN KILLED, 50 INJURED IN GERMAN AIR RAID ON ENGLAND'S COAST

London—Four German seaplanes yesterday raided Kant, adding one woman, three men and five children to their list of sky murders and wounding thirty-one non-combatants, fourteen of whom were women and children. They narrowly missed half a dozen churches,the special targets of the Huns in this war, but they managed to drop bombs on a home which sheltered hundreds of motherless children in Dover, wounding one of the sisters. Though the explosion caused great damage to the building, the children, huddled in the basement, escaped injury.

In Ramsgate ther aiders dropped a bomb on a hospital for soldiers, fortunately without injuring the patients. Here, too, the air craft did most effective wor kas they killed a man enjoying an outing in an automobile and four children on their way to Sunday school. The bomb fell in the tonneau.

Bombs dropped at Margate and Deal did slight material damage. There were nocasualties at Dover, Deal or Margate. At Ramsgate many thousands of persons watched a stirring machine gun fight between German and British aviators, who, assisted by a French machine, speedily drove away the enemy. The raided town tonight is celebrating theb rilliant exploit of Flight Commander Bone, who, according to the official report, after a running fight over a distance of thirty miles, during which he scored many hits, killed the observer and force dthe enemy machine into the sea.

The first bomb dropped in Ramsgate fell squarely on an automobile, killing thec hauffeur and setting fire to the gasolene tank. Pieces of the bomb fle wamong children on their way to Sunday school, killing four of them. Other bombs hit a business block, a barber shop and several residences.

One bomb fell through theg able of a hosiptal to the floor below, but no one was injured. The weather was clear and the attacking machines flew very high.

A dozen bombs were dropped in Dover and four persons were killed there. One of them issiles crashed through the roof of an orphanage, causing extensive damage and injuring a nun. The children in the institution suffered no injury, having been taken to the cellar at the first alarm. One of the raiders dropped four mobs into the sea as he was flying away. Severl British aeroplanes started in pursuit.

ZEPPELIN ATTACKS THE SALONICA BASE

London—A Zeppelin approached Salonica early on Saturday and dropped some bombs, but without doing any damage, says Reuter's Salonica correspondent. The aircraft was forced to turn back because it was heavily fired upon. At the time of the attack the noon sun was shining brightly.

WEATHER FORECAST

Snow tonight; rain or snow Tuesday; fresh southwest winds becoming warmer.

NEW GERMAN UNIFORM FOR VERDUN CAMPAIGN

Paris—French soldiers who were wounded in the region of Verdun have just arrived at Troyes, in the Department of the Aube, where several of themwere interviewed by a correspondentofthe Petit Parisien. They were among those who had particit paed in the fighting in front of the Douaumont fort and were full of confidence regarding the eventual outcome of the great battle.

Believe Not the Stories About a Home Institution—This Newspaper

The attitude of a decidedly few men toward this newspaper might well cause the more soberminded citizen to ask, and in all sincerity, whither is the home daily drifting. The inquiry is made in home, in store, in factory, in club—and, in fact, almost everywhere one turns. It is made by the people who yesterday clamored for a daily newspaper, and who today would have it "A Herald of Progress"—an asset to this community. They are the people who believe that no city of 12,000 population can be progressive unless it supports a daily newspaper. They are the people who do not understand why the city has remained in the background for so many years; why a venture was never made and carried forward until success crowned the effort. They are the people of today—not the people of yesterday —the people who have supported at least this one institution, giving to the paper its splendid circulation, which is not exceeded by any other daily newspaper circulating in Fulton.

Fulton's daily newspaper shall live, but for the sake of expediency no reasons can be given now. It is entirely too early in the struggle to take the public into our confidence. Time will tell and in due time our loyal readers will be made acquainted with the Jekyll-Hyde practices of the jealous men who have been for sixteen months spreading their beds with stinging nettles. It will be the privilege of such men to sleep upon the beds they have made for themselves while The Evening Times continues on its course six days each week.

There is no bluffing in this statement—no grandstand play. It is to thank the people of yesterday for their support they and now, at the same time assuring them that the welfare of the entire community depends upon holding fast to the clean principles which underly this newspaper—a paper without malice toward any honest, decent man, but with a hatred for the vices of the men who have dragged the city into the mire, politically and otherwise.

Nowadays it is apparent to the most indifferent reader that a newspaper must have advertising patronage; hence it must be obvious to the people that the struggle to maintain a clean daily newspaper in this city is no light task. The advertising colums of The Evening Times tell nearly all there is to say upon that point. They tell everyone looking at them each day who among the merchants of Fulton is deserving of their patronage. They tell who is doing his best to secure trade upon legitimate lines, by advertising in the home papers. The reader must seen for himself the character of the loyal, consistent merchant, the Christian-like merchant, because he is the man whose name appears, according to his means, in the advertising columns of this city's newspapers. The rest is easy, for the observant reader must recognize who is unworthy of patronage. He or she has a duty to perform—not to the papers of the city, necessarily, but to himself, herself, and his or her neighbor. It is this: That love for the city one calls home demands that attention shall be paid to every detail connected with our institutions—not the least of which is the home paper, whose advertising columns have a right to be reckoned as the community's business directory. It is in the advertising columns of the home papers that one should see the names of the men who don't want to let their stores get out of gear any more than one wants home institutions maintaining payrolls, which feed the stores, to slip their traces once in a while.

Now, the truth of the hub-bub is that The Evening Times has not slipped its traces in the struggle to give the people of yesterday and today a clean paper. There is no secret connected with the condition. Frankly, it is a struggle against what should be expected when men break a bond or contract for advertising. Then too, there are the men who persist in publishing the worth of their wares in mediums that do not contribute one cent toward the support of home institutions. The Evening Times is a home institution. It maintains a payroll which would increase in proportion to the patronage it gets. It is an industry. Perhaps your merchant tells you the city needs more industries. If he does, ask him what he is doing to build up an established industry. If he is a non-advertiser he may lie to you, but his lie will cause us to have the laugh on him. He may be one of the men who advertise in out of town papers because his competitor persists in the practice. If this turns out to be the case, then he is worse than a liar—he is a weakling—too weak to make a stand for right and justice, no matter where he is needed and the reader must know that no city can afford to trust a weakling.

Three cheers! The flag still floats from the walls of the fort.

Opinions

GETTING THE PUBLIC MONEY

The proposition to establish a State police force is again making its appearance at Albany. Every so often the politicians determine that the constabulary would afford a splendid opportunityto create an abundance of new jobs and they introduce a measure along that line. This year the proposition is again ushered in with an announcement that the bill will provide chiefs and deputy chiefs, captains and lieutenants, and places for innumerable troopers, whose horses and equipment will be provided by the State. With automobiles for the officers and heaquarters and summer camps, a fine means for gouging out the public money should be thus provided.

We do not know whether this proposition will get any further this year than it has in the past, but at a time when every effort is being exerted to hold down the cost of government in municipalities and in the State, certainly there should be some curb on these wild-cat schemes for spending the public money.— Buffalo Times.

AMAZEMENT

A thing that always amazes the people is the fact that it takes such an infernally long time to do anything in Congress. People can't understand why, if there is an important thing to consider, it can't be taken up and disposed of after the same manner that a great business proposition would be disposed of by a corporation. The English Parliament, the French Chamber of Deputies, the German Reichstag, all seem able to attack things that are of importance to their countries and bring them to a speedy conclusion. In the United States, however, a most important matter hangs along in Congress week after week and month after month, dragging through a whole session and really prolonging the sessions far beyond their reasonable length. It is one of the failures in our form of government. It is proof that the government is not quick and responsive, and it admits of the introduction of politics and invites the interference of outside influences.—Utica Observer.

ELMIRA WOULD DUMP POLITICS OVERBOARD

In the event that a sufficient number of signatures can be obtained between now and next Monday night, the Common Council at that time will be asked to provide for a referendum vote on the proposition of the commission-manager plan of city government. Then, in the event that the voters of the city shall decide in favor of the plan, the election in 1917 would be for commissioners under the new system. * * *

It is designed to take city elections out of partisan politics and permit electors to choose city officers on the ground of personal fitness instead of political affiliation. It is to be sincerely hoped that the law will pass the Legislature before the time for the next municipal election. In the event that it does not, however, Elmirans may have the good sense to get together in the selection of five commissioners, same men fitted for the work and elect them without contest. It will be a great day for Elmira when politics is forgotten and when everyone will pull together for the interest of the city instead of for the interests of a particular political party or group. That time is coming, and soon.—Elmira Star-Gazette.

PATHFINDERS ELECT OFFICERS

Men intefested in preserving the historic traditions connected with Pathfinder Island for the club whose headquarters have been established there for many years met at the Citizen's Club Saturday evening to take measures for once more popularizing the beauty spot in old Oswego river, with the resultt that many improvements were planned which will produce one logical result—the attractiveness of the resort. In the minds of the gentlemen who met Saturday evening, the season of 1916 should become a banner one.

Officers were elected asfollows:

W. L. Forsyth, president; W. P. Morin, vice president; Charles S. Hall, treasurer; Bruce K. Steele, secretary; N. L. Whitaker, commodore. The Island committee comprises W. P. Morin, chairman; Maurice. Conley and George C. Webb.

At the present time the committee is seeking the services of a steward, with the object of making the spring opening a successful event in the matter of caring for the comfort of the members and friends who may attend on that day.

REV. DR. CODDINGTON AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

The Rev. H. G. Coddington, D. D., Rector of Grace church, Syracuse, will be the preacher at the evensong service at All Saints' church, Fulton, on Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

This is the second of the series of midweek Lenten evensong services for which special visiting preachers have been secured. Dr. Coddington, is a preacher of exceptional power and ability, and his many friends in Fulton will be glad of the opportunity of hearing him preach.

The service will begin promptly at 7:30 p. m. and the general public is cordially invited to attend.

VIEWS OF STATE EDITORS

The great outpouring of Republicans in the Indiana primaries is discouraging to the Democrats. There was the same manifestation of Republican virility in 1914 when the tremendous majority of the Democrats in Congress was almost wiped out. In 1914 moe coutious Democrats announced their retirement. Already leading Democrats are giving out news that they will not run again.—Watertown Standard.

With the aid of the votes of 93 Republican members of the House of Representatives, the McLemore resolution, which was designed in a somewhat different way to accomplish the same purpose for which the Gore resolution was introduced in the Senate. The restriction of rights of citizens of the United States on the high seas—was tabled yesterday. The practical effect of the vote is to kill the resolution, though theoretically it is left in a position whence it could be recalled for reconsideration. If the 93 Republican members had voted on the other side, the motion to table would have been defeated by a vote of 235 to 183.—Albany Journal.

REAL ARTISTS WILL PLAY HERE

The ladies of Circle No. 2 of the First M. E. church are affording the music lovers of Fulton a real treat, in presenting Mrs. Colton Ide, Prof Harry L. Vibbard in joint recital, assisted by Miss Goldie Andrews.

Mrs. Ide has spent four years in the college of Fine Arts, Syracuse University, where she received her elementary training.

Prof. Vibbard has also met with great favor as an accompanist for some of theg reat artist.

Miss Andrews has in times past created a sensation on account of her extreme youth. She not only still creates wonderment at one so young, but also her beautiful technique and interpretations make her audiences feel sure they are listening to one endowed with most unusual gifts.

C. E. WORKERS WILL GIVE AN OUTING

The members of the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church have planned to give a sleighride to South Granby, tomorrow evening. They will leave the church at 7:30 o'clock promptly, but in the event of unfavorable weather the ride will be poseponed until Wednesday evening.

AUTOS AND BOATS EQUAL IN COUNTY

Albany—How does your county compare with others about the State from an automobile standpoint? This question, frequently asked these days, is answered by figures that have just been compiled in the State Automobile Bureau.

In proportion to its population, more automobiles were registered with Secretary of State Hugo last year from Putnam county than from any other county in the State, the ratio being one to every 13 residents; the Bronx furnishing the other extreme with one to every 205 of its population. In thirty-one, or an even half of the counties, there was a car last year for every 29 persons or less. The ratio for the State in general was one to every 41 residents.

The comparatively light registration in the Bronx is thought to have been due not only to many residents of that section registering their car under a downtown business address but also to the fact that the Bronx is the residing place of many young conples who cannot afford a car and the incidental expenses.

The influence of location in determining the popularity of the automobile is shown by the Oswego county registration. In that county there is a car to every 66 persons, the result of the automobile being forced to share honors with the motor boat. The mileage of a county's improved highways is also a powerful influence towards determining the number of automobiles owned in that section.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, The great and Supreme Ruler of the universe has in his infinite wisdom removed from among us, one of our worthy and esteemed Neighbors, Sarah Campbell. And, whereas, the long and intimate relationship held with her in the faithful discharge of her duties in this Society makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of her; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which she has exercised in the aid of our organization, by her service, will be held in grateful remembrance;

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all members and friends of this Society and will prove a serious loss to all.

Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well;

Resolved, That a copy of the resolutions be spread upon record of this Society and published in the papers, and a copy forwarded to the family.

By order of committee: Mrs. Alice Rank, Anna Echard, Maebell Middleton. adv

TICKET SELLERS WILL CONTEST

Teams Captained by Two Enthusiasts Will Scour the City Selling Chautauqua Tickets.

This year's Chautauqua campaign of ticket selling promises to become quite exciting, both from the interest displayed by people who would have the course become an assured and permanent feature and by reason of a ticket selling contest which was arranged at two meetings held last Friday evening, when teams were chosen captained by men who want to see raised the guarantee fund of $1,500 without a hitch.

Names of the persons comprising the teams and their captains follow:

Team No. 1—Ansermet, G. A., Captain; Barrett, Rev. J. W.; Bristol A.; Cary, Dr. F. L.; Carner, Geo. T.; Day, O. T.; Dryer, C. A.; Fairgrieve, Prof. J. R.; Foster, J. M.; Hal stead, W. The team under Captain Ansermet met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. L. P. Smith. The team under Captain Hornibrook met at the same time with Mrs. F. E. Goodjon.

SHERIFF BUCK ANSWERS CHARGE

Attorney's Claim That Court's Order Was Disobeyed--- Attorney Cullinan Included in Motion.

Mrs. Emma Mongin through her attorneys presented a motion before Justice Hubbs in Oswego, Saturday morning, to punish Sheriff Buck and Attorney Cullinan for contempt of Court. The proceedings are the result of the financial difficulties of the Brosemer Brewing Co.

It is claimed that Attorney Cullinan and Sheriff Buck disobeyed an order of Justice Hubbs made January 15, in which all further proceedings of the plaintiffs under a judgment for $11,000 secured on a note endorsed by thed efendants, were stayed pending a trial at the March Trial Term, by proceeding with the execution for the sale of the property of thed efendants.

It in expected that Justice Hubbs will reach a decision this week.

The issue arises out of a note which was given the Second National Bank for $10,000 by the Brosemer Brewing company, A. E. Brosemer and Mrs. Mongin and the Misses Brosemer as individual endorsers. Mrs. Sophie Brosemer, wife of John Brosemer, brother of the defendants, purchased the note from the bank, and obtained judgment against the defendants December 23, 1915. An execution was against the property of the defendants. Subsequently, it is claimed, after the order had been granted by Justice Hubbs staying thep roceedings, Under Sheriff Schulz posted a notice of sale on the defendant's property, including ther esidence.

Barnes & Mournighan claim that the action was taken in defiance of the order and that the question was whether the mandate of theS upreme Court was tob e obeyed. Mr. Cullinan denied the contempt and said that he was merely acting within his rights. He said that the defendants did not act within the time specified in the order of January 15. Mr. Gallagher said that the sheriff was not served with a copy of Justice Hubbs' order but if he had been it would not have made any difference as he was simply carrying out an execution begun in the regular way.

Justice Hubbs also signed an order adjudging George J. Bishop of Central Square in contempt of court for failing to appear before W. M. Gallagher as referee for examination in supplementary proceedings in an action by Oliver Hall to collect a judgment for $115 40. A fine of $40 is also imposed and an order of arrest issued. Bishop is also ordered to appear before Mr. Gallagher for examination March 27.

FASHION FANCIES IN MANHATTAN

New York—Judging by the way that all sorts of novel accessories are bought at the smart shops, and the prices paid for them, there are no end of people ready to spend lavishly for fancy fixings which appeal to their tastes and needs. Nor are such investments ill-judged for it is the small up to the minute belongings that does for a costume what the high light accomplishes for a picture—gives it life and lends distinction.

New Bags

There is no end to the fascinating variety, of new hand bags, nor to their ornateness for every time of day, with every sort of costume. All the motifs that rule the world of dress are reproduced in these small but by no means minor belongings, if their importance is reckoned by their effectiveness. Silk bags varying from quite simple little affairs in black moire, to long ruffled bell shaped reticules with a beaded tassel at the end by way of clapper are prized additions to the modish outfit. Suede bags with inserts of brocade that harmonize with fashionable suede boots. Wrist bags closely beaded in mosaic designs, ruffled taffeta, wrist bags, and smart long purses in pigskin, suede or patent leather. Alms purse bags that copy the bag that hung from theg irdle in the Middle Ages are developed in finest beadwork, jewel-like in effect and almost as precious, since they represent long and skillful hand work.

Neck Fixings

At a time when everyone is buying or thinking of buying new hats, the various neck fixings shown in enticing variety at all the shops are particularly interesting. Cape motifs are apparent in many of the wide spreading models displayed among collars, and real capes and pelerines afford an opportunity for new effects that women are eagerly seizing and making the most of. A new Lavin collar of taffeta with inset points of Irish lace flares upward and forms a vest effect and is banded with moire ribbon. A very new pelerine cape collar is a ruffle of faille silk collared and banded with ostrich trimming. A Jenny Cape collar of maline shirred over taffeta, the soft ruffles bound with ribbon is caught with a butterfly of taffeta. Another necklet is caught with a bow of Joffre blue velvet. A pelerine of taffeta, exactly like the one in grandmother's portrait is finished with shirrings of pink taffeta and caught with a quaint corsage flower.

As skirts grow wider and more flaring, bodices grow tighter trimly defining the lines of the figure, and the necessity of a skillfully designed corset is greater than ever. The new Spring Warner rust-proof models are charmingly shaped to support and accentuate the fashionable outlines with real luxurious comfort, for notwithstanding the advance of materials the standards are maintained that have given this make such an enviable reputation for reliability.

Both back and front lace styles are shown in Spring models so that the discriminating woman is able to secure the correct corset to suit her individual taste at a price that matches her requirements.

Hat Styles

Louis Phillippe models, their crowns set off with rows of up-standing frills of ribbon, lace, tulle or lace straw rather dominate in their class, though there are plenty of severe Directoire hats where the stiff high crown makes no concession of any softness of outline. Chin straps give a very Tommy Atkins air to trig little turbans, and find a fitting place in less severe lines on plateau hats of quite another metier.

One of the new ideas is the trimming of straw with straw. A black hat is ornamented with a wreath of pink roses and pale green leaves and tendrils developed in the new irridescent straw. A hat with a high wide crown of black straw has a drum-majorish ornament of dark blue straw.

LUCY CARTER.

PROPER PRUNING DEMONSTRATIONS

A number of orchard pruning demonstrations are scheduled as shown below for the week of March 27th. Last year a number of similar meetings were held in various parts of the county and were well attended. These demonstrations have been place din sections of the county where fruit growing is of secondary importance and consequently where the orchards are apt to be neglected.

In many cases these orchards with a little care can be made to produce a cash income for the farmer.

Mr. Berry Johnson will assist the Manager of the Farm Bureau again this year in holding the following meetings:

Tuesday, March 28th—C. T. Hurlburt, Mexico, R. D. 3; Willis Clark, Fulton, R. D. 3.

Wednesday, March 29th—D. Distin, Fulton, R. D. 2; L. A. Carrier, Fulton, R. D. 5.

Thursday, March 30th— Frank W. Washer, Pennellville; J. M. Snow, Central Square, R. D. 3.

Friday, March 31st —J. G. Burr, Central Square, R. D.; C. D. Sargent, Cleveland.

If weather conditions will not permit outside work the meetings will be held indoors.

Remember the date of the meeting most convenient to your farm. Plan to be present and bring a saw.

E. VICTOR UNDERWOOD,
Manager.

LAST CALL IS ISSUED FOR McCORMACK CONCERT

Fulton will send a large delegation to Oswego on March 23, to the John McCormack concert to be held at the State Armory. Many residents have already reserved seats and an evening of rare enjoyment is anticipated by them. McCormack will receive a guarantee of $2,500 for his Oswego appearance and he has promised a program of exceptional merit. A number of good seats are still available and may be had by calling the McCormack headquarters at the Hotel Pontiac. It is an opportunity for Fultonians to hear the famous Irish tenor, with little inconvenience and many of them will take advantage of the occasion.

PEACE JUSTICE'S GIVEN SOME HARD RAPPING

Albany.— Directors representing more than 15,000 members of 105 automobile clubs composing the New York State Automobile Association appeared Thursday afternoon at the hearing on automobile bills before the Joint oCmmittee on Internal Affairs of the Senate and Assembly, and vigorously oppsed all measures affecting owners of motor cars with ther esult, it is confidently predicted, that none of these bills will ever come out of committee except possibly the Brown-Maier bill which is intended to divide automobile monies between state and counties.

It was pointed out that thousands of speed traps would be put into operation throughout the state to mulct motorists and an agreement made by the State Legislature at the time of the enactment of the Callan highway law would be broken, if several of nine automobile measures pending before the 1916 legislature are enacted, declared the speakers.

Charges against justices of the peace who became wealthy when speed traps were in existence were made by several of the spakers in support of thir arguments.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington—The not unexpected death of Senator Shively of Indiana makes that State a political center of supreme importance this year, for there are two Senatorial seats now at stake in the Hoosier elections an dthe Republicans will strain every nerve to secure both of them. Happily, it is a united Republican party which will strive for these great political prizes in Indiana this year; and there is every prospect that the next Congress will see two Republicans in place of the two Democrats who have represented Indiana in the Senate since 1911.

The wisest political observers here have long been of the opinion that a Republican President and a Republican House are sure to result from this year's elections. But there have been grave doubts in many quarters whether the Senate could be recaptured by a majority on the floor and without the deciding vote of the Vice President.

The Democratic majority in the Senate now stands at sixteen. To regain the Senate to Republicanism means the taking of nine seats. Two of these will come from Indiana, as events now signify. In addition there is small question that the Republicans will win in Maine, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia and Missouri.

This would divide the Senate equally on the floor and would put control into the hands of the Republican Vice President.

The other States to elect Senators this year, where there is a chance to replace a Democrat with a Republican are Nebraska, Montana and Nevada—and in each of these States there is more than a fighting chance for Republicanism.

All this is predicated on the theory that none of the seats now held by Republicans will be lost to the enemy. In 1914, however, three such seats were taken from us.

The determination of the Republican leaders is to carry on a vigorous campaign everywhere that even a slight chance appears to secure a senatorial recruit. It now seems likely that the Republican victory next November will lack nothing in completeness.

"Getting even" is a hazardous undertaking. A Philadelphia lawsuit, originally involving less than $00, ended a long course through the courts with costs aggregating over $13,000. ### Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality, which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

THE CHRISTIAN TODAY

Hall Caine's superb love story, "The Christian" is today's production at The Quirk. This is Hall Caine's best story. As a novel, it gained international fame, and as a drama, it brought fame to Miss Viola Allen, who appeared in its star part for eight consecutive years.

Miss EdithStorey assumes the difficult part made famous by Miss Viola Allen. Miss Storey gives a wonderful impersonation, so much so that she easily proves the claim to her being them ost talented artiste now appearigon the screen. Mr. Earle Williams is his best as John Storms, giving the part a powerful interpretation which has met with great praise. Miss Storey and Mr. Williams are supported by an All Star Cast of Vitagraph.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

We are still on the road to progress, but never will reach the goal, unless we all work to gether.

* * *

Millions of dollars' worth of business pours daily into the United States; seemingly we don't get a cent of it. Come on, let's devise ways and means to find a channel to get some of that very good money coming to Fulton.

* * *

Get busy and know for once that IF YOU DON'T GO AFTER SOMETHING YOU WILL NEVER GET IT.

* * *

Forget those rotten political struggles for once in the city of FULTON and instead, fight for PROSPERITY.

* * *

If you keep on fighting each other with your petty schemes you are bound to lose.

* * *

Wake up and take affairs in your own hands and let's start something and after we have accomplished it we can then fight again our petty schemes, if we still feel like it.

* * *

There is no use in talking, but if you don't forget quarreling with each other there will be in the end disaster for all of us.

* * *

What in the name of all that's good in this world will become of our good city, if we keep on going to fight our petty schemes and keep on chewing the rag about politics.

* * *

When it comes to city affairs, THERE IS NO POLITICS. Each one ought to be interested in the welfare of the city and NOT in the welfare of some one who is trying to run the town for his own benefit.

* * *

There is a concert going to be given on Wednesday, March 22, 1916, at the First M. E. church. Mrs. Anna Colton Ide, Prof. Harry L. Vibbard and Miss Goldie Andrews will appear before what we hope to be a large audience. Prof. Vibbard is a master organist and has appeared in very large cities, like Toronto, etc. Mrs. Ide is an accomplished singer and Miss Goldie Andrews is a pianist of the first class. The price of admittance is very low, being 25 cents. You will enjoy going to the concert.

* * *

FULTON will never go ahead unless the people join in one great effort to work with each other. It does not matter who or what you are you are a citizen of FULTON and the rest does NOT count.

* * *

Christianity is NOT the occupying of a front seat on Sunday's in some church and then trying to get your fellow citizen on MONDAY again, but Christianity in the real and literary sense of the word in DOING good for your city and your fellow men on all the days in the week. People who are so cheap as to forget those great teachings should bear in mind that they will get their's some time.

* * *

FULTON should be a combination of men, and women, and children, FIGHTING for each other; politics do not count in city affairs and the petty rotten schemes of a few individuals should be destroyed.

* * *

FULTON is a city of HOMES. Do you know what the word HOME means?

Toasts, Serious and Humorous, Features of Elks' Big Dinner

Elkdom was in its glory last night and today the dinner which was served to about 200 members of Fulton lodge comprised the main subject of those who were fortunate enough to have been seated around the tables, which were arranged along the lines of a horseshoe. Within this semi-circle were seated the men who were there to make addresses. Banked at frequent intervals were plants and cut flowers, and from every available spot on the walls hung flags and bunting, all of which gave to the large dining hall the most festive appearance in the history of the order in this city.

No sooner had the first course of the dinner been served than the entertainers began their work, Miss Grace Hoey and Miss Agnes Joneick being the leaders in singing topical and popular songs, every one of which scored a hit with the audience.

One most pleasing feature of the evening occurred when Past Exalted Ruler E. P. Cole presented the lodge in behalf of Exalted Ruler J. W. Stevenson a beautiful memorial in bronze, emblematical of the order, and testimony of the esteem in which the deceased members of the Fulton lodge are held.

Attorney Claude E. Guile was toastmaster, and at no time did he allow the proceedings to lag behind. In response to Mr. Guile's request the State President of the Elks, William E. Drisland, of Albany, made a brief speech, referring in glowing terms to the work of Mr. J. W. Stevenson in behalf of the local lodge. Mr. Stevenson replied to the visitor's remarks in a way befitting the occasion. He was followed by Messrs. John Painter and L. A. Richardson, the latter one of the Past Exalted Rulers of No. 830.

Patriotism was the subject chosen by the Hon. Charles N. Bulger, of Oswego for the speech—a subject near and dear to his heart, and William T. Byrne, of Albany, selected the "Popularity of the Elks" as his subject, comparing the membership of the lodge with the population of the city.

The program was concluded by addresses by District Attorney Frances H. Culkin and the repetition of the minstrel songs by John Pomphret, Thomas Farrell, George Washburn and Michael Bray. The Elks' orchestra accompanied the singers while the entire group of guests joined in the chorus of each song.

ALLIED AIRMEN DROP BOMBS ON BELGIAN TOWNS; NEW ATTACK

London—In the most spectacular air raid yet undertaken by the Allies sixty-five British, French and Belgian aeroplanes yesterday attacked the German submarine and seaplane base at Zeebrugge and the aerial base at Houttave nearby. Of the great squadron fifty were bombing machines, which carried 10,000 pounds of bombs. The remaining craft were armored battle planes used to convoy the bombing parties. The 10,000 pounds of explosives was dropped on the targets, considerable damage was done and all the aeroplanes returned to their camps with only one Belgian officer wounded.

Another powerful German attack, this time between Avocourt and Malancourt, west of the Meuse, resulted today in heavy losses to the Germans, according to the official communication issued by hte French War Office tonight. A fresh division brought up from a distant point was used in this operation, which was characterized by the employment of jets of liquid flame. At one point in the eastern part of the Malancourt Wood the Germans made some slight progress.

BRITISH BRING DOWN A GERMAN AEROPLANE

London—In the report on the operations in France yesterday the War Office last night said:—

"Hostile aeroplanes are active and there were many combats. An enemy machine was brought down near Radinghem. One of our reconnaissances was heavily engaged, but fought off all attacks and drove down one enemy in a damaged condition. All our machines returned safely after completing their mission.

Mutilated Body of R. Reynolds Found Near Railroad Tracks

The body of a man believed to be R. Reynolds, of Fulton, was found at 7:20 o'clock this morning by a trackwalker on the O. & W. R. R. at the side of the tracks located in what is known as Corey's cut, between Pennellville and this city. Dr. E. J. Cusack, coroner, who was summoned to the scene immediately found that the man had sustained a fractured skull, a broken right arm and fractured in both legs.

Although the body was well dressed, there was absolutely nothing in his pockets. In his hat, was found a laundry slip issued by Taylor's Laundry of S. 2nd st., this city, bearing the name of R. Reynolds. Upon returning to this city, the Coroner learned from Mrs. Taylor that the man has been patronizing the laundry at regular intervals, but about two weeks ago the visits ceased.

The man was seen walking through Pennellville about five o'clock last night, in the direction of Fulton, and it is assumed that he was struck by a freight train during the night. The body was taken later to Hall & Allenson's undertaking rooms in Phoenix. He appears to be about thirty years old, wears a good blue suit and gray overcoat.

Thel ocal police department has been notified of the death and efforts to find relatives or friends are being made.

Villa Forces Beaten by Carranza; Bandit Escapes Pursuers

El Paso—Francisco Villa, the bandit, instigator of the Santa Ysabel and Columbus massacres, was twice defeated in battle by Carranza troops and is fleeing in a northwesterly direction from Namiquipa.

Two of the three columns of the cavalry sent out by Brigadier General Pershing stand between Villa and any northern point he may be making for. There is every indication that by tomorrow a part of the American punitive expedition which went out of Columbus and Hachita may come to a clash with the man that nearly twelve thousand Mexican and American soldiers are trying to run to earth.

Reports that come from both Mexican and American sources tonight indicate that Villa is in a trap. While the news is received with great enthusiasm there is not too much optimism, for Villa has been in tight places before and escaped. There is a great deal of mountain country in which he may take refuge but the big thing that stands out is that the American forces, moving with almost incredible rapidity, have reached points where they effectively can cooperate with the Carranza troops in Villa's own territory.

The question now is whether the Mexican government forces will stand up to the task in hand. If they will, American military officials here believe that Villa's capture is only a matter of days.

Two regiments of Carranza troops encountered Villa and a force of several hundred at Las Cruces, thirty miles south of El-Valley, on the Santa Maria River, which is in the territory between the lines of the Northwestern and Central railways. There was a battle in which Villa was defeated, but there are no details of casualties.

Villa retreated in the direction of Namiquipa, where he was met by Colonel Cano and nine hundred men, who had come out of Madera. There was another clash and Villa was again routed. As there is a Carranza garrison at Santa Ana, south of Namiquip, Villa retreated in a northwesterly direction.

Brigadier General Pershing's cavalry has been split into three columns. One force is reported to be at San Miguel Babicora, which

EVIL IS SELF-DESTRUCTIVE

Malice is incapable of successful organization. Good is the only force that can really organize and accomplish things. When evil—malice or hate or jealousy—organizes, it loses half or two-thirds of its strength. Good multiplies the strength of the individual or organization, and so it wins its way in the world. But the plotters of evil, and the workers of iniquity, get further when each man goes it alone. For evil is not cohesive, it flies to its own destruction.—Emporia (Kansas) Gazette.

BUSY WEEK IN CONGRESS

All indications point to this being a week of great activity in Congress. Dispatches this morning predict that the House will pass the Hay army reorganization bill at a date not later than next Thursday. Gratifying proof of hearty co-operative spirit in Congress in the cause of preparedness for national defense is furnished by the energy shown in pushing ahead the preparedness program in the House, and in the action of both House and Senate in advancing the defense legislation in preference to any other.

A matter of special importance is to bring about entire cohesion between the House and the Senate in regard to army reorganization plans. There is a divergence between the House and the Senate bills, and it will be necessary for both branches of Congress to be in accord, not only in the general purpose, but in the specific methods, by which preparedness is to be attained.

But there is every reason to believe that this matter will be adjusted without much difficulty. The gist of the situation is found in the rally of the Senate and the House to the support of the President in his vigorous insistence on providing adequate resources for national defense. With such a spirit actuating Congress, satisfactory results are assured.

With the preparedness legislation accomplished, the way will be cleared for the rest of the legislative program, which is extensive and important. Its chief features are the tariff commission bills, rural credits, the Phillippine bill, the shipping legislation, the immigration measures, and the revenue bills.

Here is enough to occupy the attention of Congress for some time yet But with resolute advancement of the work of the session, it need not be unduly protracted. The task of Congress is cut out for it, and the advanced state of preparation which legislation has attained now is an excellent guaranty of results, satisfactory in themselves and promptly obtained. —Buffalo Times.

HAPPINESS, IN PIECES

People do not expect the average man at the head of a newspaper to know much about happiness, to know how it comes, or whither it abides. The lot of the average man in the business is so filled with trials and tribulations encountered in trying to make a paper that will please all the people who give him real news pointers and the people who think they do the same—but in reality are giving him genuine advertising for themselves or their pet projects—that one might not suppose him to know anything about the happiness of the world. But the truth is, the average publisher does know something about happiness, although few of them are capable of so expressing themselves as to bring happiness to others. Getting down to the point, there is a little sermon on happiness by the publisher of a southern newspaper which ought not to be allowed to sink, for it contains philosophy that is inspiring. It is as follows:

"We are told that happiness comes by pieces, and that it is these small bits linked together that make our lives worth while. Some of us are not content to take our happiness by degrees or at intervals. We want it all the time in big pieces, and if we cannot have it that way we think that we are deprived of our natural rights and look upon ourselves as injured beings. It is a rather singular expression of human nature how happiness affects the individual. With some of us it makes us friendlier towards others and anxious that they should experience like joys; with others it makes us too satisfied with ourselves to think very much of our neighbors. Perhaps those of us who know what the joy of living means have experienced both of these attitudes at different periods of our lives and are in position, therefore, to appreciate a varying viewpoint, but even so it is only after we lose something of that joy of living and have found out for ourselves that there are shadows which no amount of sunlight can disperse, that we can readily appreciate the blessing of whatever happiness may find its way into our lives. The little things that count so much in our intercourse with each other are not always regarded as highly as they should be, and for this reason we pass by much that would give us joy."

NOTED CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURER COMING HERE

(Contributed)

The Christian Science Society of Fulton announces a free lecture on Christian Science, by Bickwell Young of Chicago, member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston, Mass. The lecture will be given Monday, April 3, at 8 p. m., in the assembly room of the Public Library, and the public is cordially invited to be present. No collection.

This lecture is given to correct wrong impressions gained from false statements, said to have been made regarding this religion and to educate those who are ignorant of its principles.

Humanity is seeking the world over for health and happiness and Christian Science gives, both it is claimed.

How and why this religion accomplishes this, will be explained by Mr. Young, who will also embrace in his subject, why this religion in less than fifty years has circled the earth and is attracting the attention of men and women of all classes and faiths.

The rapid growth of Christian Sciense is not a result of what it promisces it followers at some distant piace called heaven, or at some future time beyond the grave, but is rather the result of what it it doing here and now to relieve suffering humanity of sickness and sin, and all the other discords that enter into human expression.

Not alone does this religion heal sickness and sorrow but through its holy influence it causes the wicked to forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts.

THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITY

Mr. Agnew T. Dice, who succeeds the late Theodore Voorhees as president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, began as a flagman with that company. For some time he has been vice president and general manager. Although young in years he is old in experience. The secret of Mr. Dice's success is that he has "made good" in every position he has held in the process of qualifying himself for thep osition higher up.

Mr. Dice's career furnishes one more illustration of the fact that America is the land of opportunity. It serves also to draw attention to another fact, which is that in choosing executive officers and the men for other positions ofresponsibi lity great railway corporations are not guided by political or any other kind of influence. The man who has "made good" is the man wanted.— N. Y. Herald.

MRS. CLARA A. FREDENBURG

Mrs. Clara A. Fredenburg, 80, died this morning at the home of her son, James, 11 North 4th st., after an illness of about six weeks' duration.

She was the widow of James Fredenburg, who died about twenty years ago. She leaves three sons, James and Orin, of this city, the former being a member of the Fire Department, and Chauncey, of Syracuse. One brother also survives, Dr. A. G. Hick, of Quincy, Ill.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ANYBODY HERE SEEN MR. KELLY?

The Pinkerton Detective Agency, of Boston, has sent communications to post offices in Central New York in an effort to locate David M. K. Kelly, a former member of the Wiscon in Senate, and speaker of the Wisconsin House of Representatives. Mr. Kelly has done nothing wrong. He is 75 years of age and disappeared from his home in Sharon, Wis., January 21st, and was seen in Boston several days later. He is described as about five feet seven inches tall; weight 160 pounds; medium build; sandy complexion; hair reddish gray; blue eyes, prominent nose; heavy reddish gray mustache. At the time of his disappearance he wore a G. A. R. button on the lapel of his coat. He is a tall, erect, stately and dignified looking man, and has large business interests in the western part of the state.

Postmaster Conley is in receopt of the inquiry, as well as many others of the same nature.

McCORMACK ILL; CONCERT POSTPONED

M. J. McDonald, who is managing the John McCormack concert, which was to have been held at the State Armory on Thursday, is in receipt of a telegram from Charles L. Wagner, McCormack's manager, announcing the postponement of the concert because of the illness of the singer. The new date set will be April 13, and at that time all reservations and tickets for this week, Thursday, will be honored.

On April 13, Mr. McCormack will present the same program that he was to have sung Thursday night and should be in even better voice than usual as he will be greatly benefited by his little enforced vacation from active work.

RED CROSS HELPERS SEND AWAY SUPPLIES

The Red Cross Helpers have sent their second consignment to the hospitals of France, consisting of two dozen sheets, two dozen pillow cases, two dozen face towels, one dozen hand towels, one and one-half dozen bath towels, two dozen handkerchiefs, three dozen wash cloths, two dozen hot water bottle covers, two dozen binders, two dozen triangular bandages, one dozen three-inch bandage rolls, eight dozen four-inch bandage rolls.

COMMISSIONER WANTS SPORTSMEN'S ORINIONS

Albany—The attitude of all of the forest, fish and game associations and rod and gun clubs in New York State on the proposal of the Conservation Commission that a fishing license law be enacted is to be taken, according to a letter just mailed by Conservation Commissioner George D. Pratt to the officer of these associations. The letter also asks for the sense of the associations regarding the proposal that each holder of a hunting and fishing license wear upon his clothing, at all times when hunting or fishing, a button bearing the number of his license. The salient points in these proposals are analyzed by Commissioner Pratt in his letter as follows:

1. The present hunting licenses will be changed by adding to their title the word "fishing." Thus they will be known as "fishing, hunting and trapping licenses." The fee for these licenses will remain the same as at present—$1.10—so that those who now take out hunting licenses will pay nothing additional for the combined fishing, hunting and trapping license. The state's investment in 11 fish hatcheries is over $200,000 and the yearly cost of operation is about $75,000.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"Green-eyed Monster," with Mantell, hinges on curse of jealousy, deals with man who coverts wife of own brother, removes every obstacle to her hand and then falls victim to his own self.

Jealousy serves as the basis of the William Fox production, "Green-Eyed Monster," starring Robert B. Mantell, foremost of tragic actors, with Genevieve Hamper. The scenario for the production was written by Nixola Daniels, author of "Destruction," and other Fox dramas, and it may be said that none other than a woman could have given so comprehensive an expose of the soul-wracking tortures of one cursed with jealousy.

"Juror No. 7," in two parts, with Dorothy Phillips; "Slightly Mistaken," and "Lizzie's Shattered Dreams" complete the regular nine-reel show with no change in prices.

H. S. AND LODGE OUT FOR HONORS

Result of Best Two Out of Three Games Will Decide City's Champions—Season Is Closing.

With the announcement made that a series of three games will be played between the High School and Maccabee quintets to decide the championship of the city, the dopesters are commencing to figure out the relative merits of the two teams by comparing the results of the season's games. As the two teams have not opposed each other, it devolves upon the result of their encounters with the Oswego Normal to determine which is the best team. This would make the Maccabee five favorites in the coming contests, as they have made the best showing against the Oswegonians. Although the Normals have not met some of the other Oswego teams, viz: the Mohawks, Goosebones, Company D, the Maccabees have and they have defeated each of them, but have dropped three successive games to the Normals. The high school team has met and been defeated by the Normals upon two occasions.

Zeal of the Coach

Notwithstanding the fact that they made a bad start, the High School team will close one of the most successful seasons in the history of the local institution, due in the main to the untiring efforts of Prof. Merrill, who was forced in the middle of the season to reorganize the team and train a squad of unexperienced youngsters. The resignation of Webb and O'Brien, the only two veterans, from the team, and the declaration of others as being ineligble, forced Coach Merrill to make up a representative quintet after a number of experiments. The style of play was changed entirely. Whereas, it was usual to organize around one man, Prof. Merrill obtained better results by insisting more on team play. The result is shown by the string of victories which have followed the reorganization.

Hopes for a winning team next year are "sky high" as there is at present an active squad of fifteen players who have gained fine experience in the practice sessions, nearly all of whom are available for the next team. Particularly noticeable has been the work of the quintet known as the "seconds," who on Friday of last week demonstrated their ability to aspire for positions on the first team by playing the leaders a close and interesting game. As most of the student body was present to witness the match, it cannot be said that the first team "stalled."

Unfortunate Maccabees

When the Maccabee lodge announced in the fall it's willingness to continue athletic activities by putting out a basketball team, hopes were entertained that this outfit would place Fulton on the map as far as securing prestige in Central New York athletic circles was concerned, but resignations from the team, constant injury to players and the lack of a coach placed the team in the position of second raters. With these disadvantages corrected, there is no doubt but what the premier teams of Syracuse and Oswego would have bowed to defeat —on the home court of the Maccabees at least. The season was started with victories over the best Oswego teams, but the hoodoo soon attached itself to the team, with the result that the past two months have seen a successive row of defeats administered to the local boys. The players are not discredited, however, by defeats as they have been scored by teams which have played together for years and whose records are marred by only occasional reverses. The lodge, however, feels that the interest aroused in the team has proved of considerable advantage, with the result that stronger efforts will be made to bring out a winning team next season.

The basketball season in this city will be closed probably at the end of this month, as the teams will not be allowed the use of the City Hall court after that time. The court has been in use nearly all the time by Boy Scouts, Coach Merrill's squad, the Tigers and other independent organizations ,and by several girls teams. Miss Dickerman has enjoyed a very successful season with her squad of about twenty girls, some of whom have shown considerable ability as players.

MYSTERY SUPPER WILL BE GIVEN BY GOOD TEMPLARS

In looking around for the unique in the way of entertainment for members and friends, the lodge of Good Templars hit upon a "mystery" supper, and a decision was reached quickly to provide the feature this Friday evening, in the headquarters, West Broadway. In addition to the supper, there will be given a number of musical selections, readings and recitations. A cordial invitation is extended the public to be present —at 8 o'clock.

TROUT SEASON LESS THAN TWO WEEKS AWAY

Snowshoes may be part of the fisherman's outfit this year, at least for the first few weeks of the brook trout season, which opens April 1st, two weeks from tomorrow. In some sections of the state it may be possible to take trout on the opening day, but in Fulton and Hamilton counties a fisherman will probably have trouble locating the streams, to say nothing of the fish.

A section of the conservation law gives the conservation commission commission the right to allow fishing through the ice in waters inhabitated by trrout, but this year Commissioner Pratt says he will issue no such order. The commissioner believes that fishing trough the ice for trout spoils the fishing for the remainder of the season. Orders have been issued to the game protectors traoughout the state to enforce this ruling strictly.

Ice does not ordinarily leave the Adirondack lakes until late in April and this year forecasters say it may be well along in May before the ice will go out. Brook trout fishing is seldom good until after the snow water has passed off, which this year certainly will not be until long after the opening of the season.

PETRIFIED POTATO IS FOUND AT HASTINGS

The Oswego Times is authority for the following:

David Worden of Minetto noticed in some of the western papers that a petrified potato was found by a man while plowing. Mr. Worden called at the Times office this afternoon with a real petrified tuber which he had picked up on a farm which he rented in the town of Hastings while plowing about 18 years ago. The spud was, at that time, at least 15 years old as the field was planted with potatoes at that time and was allowed to run back into pasture. The potato clearly shows the eyes and other markings of an ordinary one and is of a color which would readily deceive one at a hasty glance.

MORGAN SEES NO SIGN OF ALLIES WEAKENING

New York—After seven weeks' sojourn abroad J. P. Morgan, accompanied by Mrs. Morgan, arrived here yesterday on board the Philadelphia, of the American line. The financier appeared in excellent health and spirits, and the ocean trip has much improved his health, it was said.

"How is the war going on?" he was asked. "I am not a military man and cannot discuss the war," he replied. "But there are more sides to a war than that concerning troops," a newspaper man said. "I don't see any signs of the Allies weakening," he replied.

BORT GETS NEW COURT ORDER

Judge Ray Grants Right of Further Examination of Alleged Bankrupt.

Attorney Floyd E. Spangle, who is representing John A. Bort, in connection with alleged bankruptcy proceedings, is in receipt of an order issued by Judge Ray, of the U. S. District Court, bearing date of March 20th, which limits the order previously obtained for the examination of Mr. Bort. The order of the court reads:

"This court having made an order for the examination in this proceeding of John A. Bort, and certain other witnesses, and it appearing that said John A. Bort claims to have a cause of action to recover damages against one R. Bonner Swartz of Dundee, N. Y., for alleged false representations, and it further appearing that whether or not he has such cause of action is entirely immaterial to the question of and in determining whether or not said John A. Bort was or is solvent or insolvent and has no bearing on that question annd that evidence on the merits of that claim might tend to defeat success of the plaintiff in that action and the trustees in bankruptcy, if one is appointed and furnish evidence in advance to said Swartz or which ought not now to be disclosed.

"ORDERED: that on the examination of said John A. Bort, and the examination of his wife and other witnesses, the merits of that claim shall not be gone into except on further order of this court."

BRITAIN USING UP ALL HER INCOME

London.— Thousands of stately homes of England are now changing hands, according to the real estate authorities. The old owners have in many instances been forced by increasing taxes to seek more moderate places, and some of these estates are being purchased by people who have profited by the war through contracts.

There is talk of wholesale migration and predictions that country life will undergo a revolution such as perhaps England has not witnessed since the Norman Conquest. Many of the estates may even be cut up and parcelled out among disbanded soldiers whose jobs are gone and for whom no other employment can be found.

NO SEIZURE OF GERMAN VESSELS

Rio Janeiro—From a reliable source it was learned that the Brazilian government, despite reports to the contrary in circulation in the United States, has taken no action toward requisitioning merchant vessels of German ownership at anchor in Brazilian ports.

According to information published in the newspapers the Brazilian government would not consider taking such action without an amicable agreement with all interests concerned.

The neutrality of Brazil in the war between Germany and Portugal has been decreed.

RUSSIANS GRATIFIED WITH NEW GAINS

London—On the two wings of the 900-miles eastern front the Russians have launched a strong offensive against the Germans and Austrians. This movement, apparently designed to prevent the withdrawal of German troops from Russia to reinforce the armies attacking Verdun, has been attended with success.

BERLIN DENIES ATTACK ON DUTCH STEAMSHIP

Berlin, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.).—No German submarine could have been in the vicinity of the spot where the Dutch steamship Tubantia was sunk and no German mines had been laid in this region, the German Admiralty announced.

BANK TO EDUCATE BOYS IN FINANCE

New York Institution to Award Fellowships Each Year.

TO TEACH PRACTICAL DETAIL

Offers $50 a Month to Young Men Who Study and Work—After the First Year It is Planned to Furnish Permanent Positions—Colleges and Business Men Co-operate.

The plan of the National City bank of New York "for bringing the universities of the United States into closer touch with the needs and demands of the commercial institutions of the country" and for the purpose "of helping university students to choose their vocations and to enable the institution itself to select specially trained men for its foreign and domestic service" has been announced.

The bank proposes the establishment of a business fellowship, which will enable certain students selected by colleges to spend one year in the bank during their four years or more in college. In consideration of the practical work and certain courses of study pursued while there, the universities have agreed to let those students graduate with their classes, all other conditions having been fulfilled.

At Start $50 a Month.

Under the plan the National City bank agrees to pay each student in connection with this fellowship $50 a month for the first twelve months in its employ, with an opportunity to enter the permanent service of the bank at the end of that time, provided there is an opening and the student has satisfactorily passed the requirements of the bank and his university as well.

The bank further agrees to allow the student a sum not to exceed $100 for railroad fare to and from his university and the bank, it being understood that this does not cover more than two trips to and from the bank and applies only to those students accepted by the bank.

The conditions governing the selection of the students are in brief as follows:

The university shall select and recommend to the National City bank each year certain students who have completed two years or the equivalent of their collegiate course and certain graduate students especially qualified for banking service. Selections shall be made without regard to the student's financial condition. They shall be on the basis of character, personality, natural ability, scholarship and probable fitness for banking service.

How the Youths Will Work.

The students accepted by the bank will apportion their one year's time in the following ways:

Undergraduate students entering upon their collegiate course in the fall shall spend two summer vacations of approximately three months each at the bank between their sophomore and junior and their junior and senior years. The remainder of the required year may be completed in the first or second semester of the senior year or immediately after graduation.

Graduate students shall spend at least one summer vacation, preferably two, at the bank in their graduate course and shall complete the remainder of the required year immediately upon finishing their course.

Should it seem inadvisable for a student from the middle west, west and south to return east for two summers it shall be arranged to have him work his first summer in a large bank in his home section. It might even be acceptable in some cases if the student in lieu of three months in the bank spent the same time in a commission house, a bond house, a United States custom house, a forwarding company, a brokerage house or in some form of executive work.

A recommendation from the student's employer shall be required as a requisite to enter the second summer's class.

During the twelve months of service with the bank the student, besides his practical work, will pursue certain studies prescribed by the bank with the advice and co-operation of the university. The course of study will be under the supervision of the university committee, composed of representatives of the leading eastern universities in and near New York city, working in conjunction with officers of the bank.

CHEESE AND CITRON SANDWICH.—One Neufchatel cheese, three tablespoonfuls citron and a few grains of salt. Put the citron through a meat chopper twice, mix with the cheese and add the salt. Spread on one side of thinly sliced bread and on the other spread butter.

Cheese and Olive Sandwich.—Take one Neufchatel cheese and two tablespoonfuls chopped olives and cream together with just enough milk to make a smooth paste. Spread on a thin slice of brown bread.

Cheese and Nut Sandwich.—One Neufchatel cheese and two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped English walnuts. Mix cheese and ground or chopped nuts with just enough milk to make a smooth paste that will spread easily. Spread one thin slice of bread with butter and the other with the cheese paste, press together and cut into fancy shapes.

Cheese and Cherry Sandwich.—One Neufchatel cheese, one tablespoonful chopped candied cherries and one tablespoonful chopped citron. Mix cheese, cherries and citron with just enough milk to make a smooth paste. Spread one thin slice of bread with butter and the other with the paste. Press together and cut into fancy shapes.

Cheese and Parsley Sandwich.—One Neufchatel cheese, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a dash of paprika, a dash of white pepper and a pinch of salt. Mix the cheese, parsley, salt, pepper and paprika together with just enough milk to make a smooth paste. Spread one thin slice of bread with butter and the other with the cheese paste. Press together and cut into fancy shapes.

Peanut Kisses.—Shell a half pint of peanuts, removing the brown hulls, and chop rather fine. Beat the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth, but not dry, add carefully two cups of granulated sugar, stir in the nuts and drop by teaspoon on oiled paper. Bake in a moderate oven till a delicate brown.

A Springtime Frock of Taffeta.

The straight front and shapely underblouse of this frock augment its smart simplicity. Carried out in chiffon taffeta, it is trimmed with buttons of self-material.

This lovely frock for the spring wardrobe is fashioned from chiffon taffeta, the season's most popular silk. It is made with a sleeveless underbody and the blouse front, back and long sleeves are cut in one. Deep cuffs finish the sleeves. The straight front is cut in one piece with front gore. Medium size requires 6⅞ yards 36-inch material, ⅞ yard lining for underbody and 3 dozen buttons.

In order that the frock may be properly fitted the underbody must be made first. Pleat the lower edge of front and back as indicated, then close under-arm and shoulder seams. Hem the front next and keep the center in mind by the large "O" perforations. Adjust the belting to position, laying the fulness in pleats.

Then close the under-arm and sleeve seams as notched and after closing the back seam hem the front. Close the cuff seams as notched, leaving outside seam free below small "o" perforation. Sew cuff to sleeve, single large "O" perforations even, and bring the back seam of cuff to single small "o" perforation in sleeve. Arrange blouse on underbody, center-fronts and center-backs even; stitch neck and lower edges together, under-arm seams even. Sew standing collar to neck edge as notched.

Turn under front edges of front and front gore of skirt (in one piece) on slot perforations, lap right front gore on left, center-fronts even; stitch about 1 inch from folded edge, leaving edges free above single large "O" perforation for a placket. Lap the remaining folded edge of front gore to line of small "o" perforations in side gore, notches even, stitch about ¼ inch from folded edge to any desired depth and press; close seam under pleat. Close center-back seam. Gather upper edge of skirt between double "TT" perforations. Pleat under-arm edges of front and back, bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforations and tack. Underface front, from front edge to 1 inch inside of small "o" perforations; roll on small "o" perforations to form rever. Line back collar section and sew to front section as notched. Close under-arm and shoulder seams; and sew collar to neck edge as notched. Adjust to position, stitching gathers in skirt along upper row of gathers in blouse, bringing single large "O" perforation to corresponding perforation in underbody and bring small "o" perforation in skirt to under-arm seam.

Although they are not necessarily inexpensive, buttons are among the season's chief trimmings. Covered with self-material they are as smart as the smartest of novelties.

Of course Mr. Edison said lots more that was interesting, because he had knocked off work for a good time and was a boy again. Returning to the subject of the hypnotic fish lure, he said that in odd moments he had invented a bait that no fish, be it ever so haughty, could successfully resist. It is a secret yet, and he is going to try it, out on the tarpon and sea cows of the Florida coast.

All the Democrats voted for confirmation.

Mr. Mitchell's name was next presented and the vote for his confirmation was unanimous.

AMERICANS KILL EIGHTEEN MEXICANS

Torreon, Mex.—Government troops have routed a band of Villa followers at Trinidad, killing eighteen men and capturin gsixteen saddle horses. They pursued theb andits as far as Jimulco.

Twice defeated in one day by Carranza soldiers, who stood the test and bffled his attempts to escaps, Francisco Villa rallied his forces and was reported today as marching toward the northwest from Namiquipa. If he continues along this route he will come directly into the jaws of the trap formed by three columns of American cavalry.

VICTORY AT VERDUN CLAIMED BY FRANCE

Paris—Heavy fighting, preceded by terrific bombardments and marked by ferocious hand-to-hand conflicts, left the situation around Verdun but little changed tonight, with the French victors on the west and the Germans on the east.

In the Avocoure-Malancourt district northwesst of Verdun the Germans made an infantry attack in force, aided by "liquid fire", but made only a slight gain, according to the French Headquarters report tonight.

BOWLING FOR PRIZES

A sweepstakes bowling tournament commenced this afternoon at Hagstrum's alleys between two men teams in competition for a set of prizes awarded tonight. W. J. Scott is conducting the contest.

"I never hesitate to cut and slash and change any play until it suits me," said Stuart Robson to his legal adviser on one occasion.

"I suppose you edit Shakespeare with a blue pencil?" replied the lawyer.

"You can just bet I do."

"Then, I imagine, you would plead guilty to an indictment for murdering the Bard of Avon?"

"No; I would not, but I would admit dissecting his corpse."

How Silver Bow Got Its Name.

Silver Bow creek received its name from a party of prospectors who reached its valley in the vicinity of Butte in 1864, says a bulletin of the federal geological survey. While discussing the best name for the stream the clouds broke away, and the sunshine, falling on the creek as it circled around the mountain, suggested the name Silver Bow, and it was accordingly so called.

A Smooth Approach.

"You seem hard worked, sir," said the affable stranger.

"I'm half dead."

"Then I called in the nick of time. I'm selling life insurance. If you're half dead you can't get a policy any too quick."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Impossible Feat.

Irate Father—Don't you think, young man, you can walk into this house and hang up your hat. Timid Suitor—I know I can't, sir. You're sitting on it.—Baltimore American.

The more you speak of yourself the more you are likely to lie.—Zimmerman.

BIG CROP OF PINEAPPLES.

Sixty Thousand Tons of Canned Variety From Hawaii.

Sixty thousand tons of canned pineapples will be shipped to the mainland by the growers of Hawaii this year in accordance with their agreement with the Matson Navigation company to ship by that line for five years a minimum of three-quarters of the annual pineapple pack. The freight rate on the product is $3.25 a ton. The pack this year will be exceptionally large.

Churches Have 39,375,271 Members.

According to the year book of the Federal Council of Churches in America, about two persons in five of the inhabitants of this country are members of some church, the number of church members being 39,375,271.

Pleading Insanity.

A French lawyer once defended a man who had stolen a chicken from a barnyard. He said his client was insane.

"I do not see in this theft anything that would indicate the mental derangement of the prisoner," said the judge.

"I beg your pardon," replied the lawyer, "this poor fellow is certainly insane. He stole a wretched chicken when he might have taken a nice fat pig."—Chicago News.

Deceitful Billy.

Mother (sternly to young married daughter)—Really, my dear, I am astonished at your allowing Billy to attend that farewell supper to Mr. Soakum. I understand it was a most disgraceful affair.

Daughter (indignantly)—Why, mother, how can you? I am quite sure it must have been very sad. Billy distinctly told me the men filled right up, and even the main speaker of the evening was too full for utterance.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

The lecture given last evening at the Citizens Club by Prof. Earl E. Sperry, served as a lesson to all those who attended the meeting. It is sincerely to be hoped that an awakening will come over our great and good country to prepare for anything that may be to our disadvantage. The Professor has proven himself to be a man who is thoroughly conversant with the subject and it was a treat to listen to him.

* * *

Not only the Country but FULTON should be prepared for the future and we hope that the citizens will wake up to the fact that we need strong men to help us build the city.

* * *

Competition is very strong and we must be wide awake, otherwise we will be defeated.

* * *

The Chamber of Commerce announces a Spring Fashion Display to be held in this city on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 29th, 30th and 31st. All the merchants are cooperating and we call herewith the attention of the FULTON people to the fact that they can get JUST AS GOOD, IF NOT BETTER GOODS HERE as in other cities and that OUR display will be just as nice and just as elaborate as that in the neighboring cities. Watch for more news later on.

* * *

Don't forget the spirit of the dollar spent at home. If you back YOUR merchants up, you will be able to do more for the city in the future.

* * *

And to the merchants we have the request to ADVERTISE IN HOME PAPERS. It pays you gentlemen to do that. Stimulate the good spirit and come across with your ads for the home papers.

* * *

The first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce will be held on April 3d, 1916. We guarantee herewith that NEVER before in the history of FULTON (and we do not make any exception) has a banquet been given as the first one of the Chamber. Watch and see if we are not right. The biggest and the very best thing that ever was pulled off in FULTON.

* * *

The gigantic wave of prosperity seemingly has not hit FULTON as yet, Wake up and get busy; talk it over with your fellow citizens and suggest something to the Chamber of Commerce.

* * *

Gold has been brought to this country with shiploads and still FULTON has not seen a penny of it. Get busy and tell us what you think we ought to do.

* * *

If a man or a woman w ants to shop in the city of FULTON to protect the home merchant and he or she cannot get what they want, please ADVISE THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IMMEDIATELY OVER THE TELEPHONE; GIVE US THE NAME OF THE MERCHANT AND THE ARTICLE YOU DESIRED TO PURCHASE AND WE WILL SEE WHAT WE CAN DO.

* * *

It has come to our notice that on different occasions when certain merchants did not have the goods in stock a customer asked for the merchants do not EVEN OFFER customer asked for the merchant do not EVEN OFFER TO GET THESE GOODS; please report such matters to the Chamber of Commerc eoffice immediately and we will see what we can do.

* * *

Whatever you do TRADE AT HOME and if you can't get what you want, phone us and we will go after the merchant in good shape.

* * *

Tell all your troubles to the Chamber of Commerce, the real bureau of service and we will help you all we can.

* * *

Believe in FULTON and you will make good.

* * *

DO IT FOR FULTON AND YOU WILL BE CERTAIN OF SUCCESS.

* * *

Fulton is the best city ........ if ........ the people will cooperate.

Conley, Putnam and Ash Selected by "Prominent Citizen" to Succeed Paddock, Butts and Achilla

If at least one influential citizen of Fulton has his way at the coming election of Chamber of Commerce directors, to succeed Messrs. H. L. Paddock, W. A. Butts and I. Achilli, those gentlemen will have to step aside for the following men: Messrs. Maurice Conley, E. A. Putnam and Frank C. Ash, all of whom have been named by the gentleman referred to as his choice. The same man went on a tour of opinion-getting this morning, with the result that he feels encouraged in a belief that, provided the suggested candidates are agreeable to accepting a nomination, nothing short of a sudden declaration of peace in Europe would prevent their nomination, and it is hinted by one who has taken some soundings that peaceful negotiations over-seas would not prevent the three gentlemen from taking up the work of giving the city and the Chamber of Commerce a year or two of activity in behalf of an organization that has suffered ever since its reorganization from "Too Much Johnston."

Now that the citizen referred to has started to bring about the nomination of Messrs. Conley, Putnam and Ash, the word has gone out from certain club rooms to "boom" the men for all that the cause is worth, and the propaganda is in splendid working order.

The reason for all this is that the merchants of this city have never felt that their interests were properly represented on the board of directors, whoc omprise in the main the manufacturing interests their sympathizers. They feel confident of their ability to overthrow the condition and therefore the cannonading in behalf of getting possession of the trenches.

As a natural result of the "booming" for Conley, Putnam and Ash there ought to be some lively doings between now and March 31st.

Drink Ruined Swede Killed by Train; Known to Ensign Fitzgerald

Identification of ther emains of the man who was killed on the tracks Monday night has been made by Ensign A. J. Fitzgerald, who visited the undertaking rooms of Hall & Allenson in Phoenix where the body was taken by a section hand yesterday morning.

The Ensign is positive the body is that of Richard Reynolds, a native of Stockholm, Sweden, a college graduate, and bearing every evidence of having been brought up amidst excellent environment. Reynolds confided in the Ensign during the three months when he was assisted in getting on his feet.

"Reynolds applied at our barracks about ten weeks ago for shelter and food," Ensign Fitzgerald states, "and after housing him for several days, he secured employment at the Allen Excelsior Mill. Within a short time he was placed in a better paying position at the American Woolen Company plant, engaged in preventing ice from clogging in theg ates. He received about $13 a week for his work, being engaged in night duty. Drinking caused him to lose this job after seven weekc' work. It was drink that caused the young man's downfall.

"In the first few days he was with us, Reynolds was equipped with an entire new outfit of clothes, purchased in one of the downtown stores. He was able to pay for these after a few weeks' employment at the woolen mill and was also able to accumulate some money. He then told us that he was vey thankful for the assistance he was receiving, and that he did not care to impose upon us further. He advised that he had engaged quarters on the west side of the river where he meant to board. I know the family he first went with, but I understand that he changed his boarding place in a few days. I have no doubt but what the suit case he carried with him will be found at the boarding house he occupied after leaving the first place. In this suit case will no doubt be found letters and papers giving an idea of his family connections. He had told me his mothe'rs address in Sweden. His mother is a widow, and he also has a married sister living in the West.

"The body may be buried in a vault at Phoenix to await advice from his relatives. I have the mother's address in Stockholm but I will have the matter carried through our national headquarters in New York. We will meanwhile try to locate the sister by referring the case to Detroit Headquarters.

"The last time I saw Reynolds was Saturday when he called

Old Rags and Paper Shouldn't Be Wasted, Says U. S. Official

William C. Redfield, Secretary of the Department of Commerce, has caused to be issued an appeal to the people of the country who are at times, or habitually, wasters of old papers and rags. His letter, which follows, has the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce, by Secretary Hollenga, and reads as follows:

"The attention of the Department of Commerce is called, by the president of a large paper manufacturing company to the fact there is a serious shortage of raw material for the manufacture of paper, including rags and old papers. He urges that the Department should make it known that the collecting and saving of rags and old papers would greatly better existing conditions for American manufacturers.

"Something like 15,000 tone of different kinds of paper and paper board are manufactured every day in the United States and a large proposition of this, after it has served its purpose, could be used over again in some class of paper. A large part of it, however, is either burned or otherwise wasted. This, of course, has to be replaced by new materials. In the early history of the paper industry publicity was given to the importance of saving rags. It is of scarcely less importance now. The Department of Commerce is glad to bring this matter to the attention of the public in the hope that practical results may flow from it. A little attention to the saving of rags and old papers will mean genuine relief of our paper industry and a diminishing drain upon our sources of supply for new materials.

"A list of dealers in paper stocks can be obtained from thel ocal Chamber of Commerce."

BATTLE ISLAND CASE IS ARGUED IN NEW YORK

Arrangements are being made in New York by Attorney E. J. Mizen, of Oswego, in the case of the Battle Island Paper Co., whereby it is hoped to reverse a decision of Referee in Bankrupcty Wright who granted the sum of $44,000 to the bondholders of the company against the Battle Island Pulp & Paper Co. When the bankruptcy hearing was given it was shown, on evidence, that the mony from the sale of bonds went into the treasury of the Battle Island Pulp & Paper Co.

The trustees of the latter concern appealed fro the report of Mr. Wright which wasc onfirmed by Judge Ray, to the Circuit Court of Appeals, District of New York.

JUDGMENT ENTERED AGAINST BURGARD CO.

Mr. Frank Gilhooly of this city, who secured a verdict, last week in Supreme Court against the H. P. Burgard Company for $7,000, caused to be entered judgment for a total of $7,270.02, in County Clerk's office yesterday. The suit was the result of an accident to Mr. Gilhooly whereby he sustained what are alleged to be permanent injuries.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Between now an May 15th the city administration, the Board of Health, the Chamber of Commerce and all good citizens who want to see Fulton a cleaner city are going to cooperate in a general clean up. Will you help? Rubbish and paper are a fire hazard—get rid of them, and avoid the risk. Filth and stagnant water breed disease. Are you raising mosquitos and flies that plague you? If so cover up your garbage cans, and drain your stagnant pools. Ashes and refuse left in yards are not only unsightly and unsanitary but are there in violation of the law. NOW is the time to get rid of them.

YOURS FOR BETTER HEALTH * * * FEWER FIRES * * * CLEARNER FULTON.

Experts say one of the best ways of arriving at the state of a city's prosperity is to balance the bank clearings against the population. This tells the story how money is circulating through the city, and the better story told, the better you may be sure, is the condition of the average citizen of that city. The dollar spent in the store of the Fulton merchant goes into one of the Fulton banks. The chances are in favor of it coming out again into Fulton. The dollar spent in Fulton is almost sure to figure twice in the bank clearings of Fulton. The dollar spent away from Fulton will figure in the bank clearings of some other city. And experts determine the general prosperity of a city by comparing the bank clearings with the population.

* * *

The merchant who can turn over his stock eight times a year—very few can do so well—is obviously better off than the merchant who only turns over his stock twice a year. This is one of the great problems of the Retail Trades. It is a matter of importance to the buying public. The quicker the turnover the better the selection, the fresher the goods, the newer the styles. Volume of business is, together with shrewd buying, the secret of quick turn-overs. We can trust our merchants to buy well and wisely—that is their business and their splendid stores and fine assortments tell of their success. We, however, can help ourselves to larger and better stocks to select from, if we add to the volume of their business by buying in Fulton.

* * *

The extension of Fulton's trade area is a question that is of interest to every man, woman and child in this city. There is no reason in the world why Fulton should not indisputably be the trade center of northern New York. Even a child can see the advantages that would accrue to all. The stronger our merchants are, thef arther they can reach out their arms for trade. The greater their trade, the stronger magnet it is to pull people and money into Fulton.

BOARD MEETS IN LONG AND SHORT SESSION

At the conclusion of a star chamber session lasting about one hour the Board of Public Works held a short meeting last night and transacted business of a routine nature.

Resolutions were adopted granting authority to the president of the Board to supervise the construction of a sewer at the new tabernacle. The same authority was conferred on the president to extend to the park when Chautauqua comes this summer.

Superintendent of Works Rumsey was given permission to purchase 20 water meters and a supply of oil.

JEWELRY THIEF CAUGHT HERE IS SENTENCED

The confession made by William Morey to Chief Dyer when in the custody of the local police charged with robbing the Regan jewelry store in Seneca Falls shortly after his release from Elmira reformatory, has resulted in the imposition of a sentence of not less than three, nor more than four years and three months. Morey received the sentence yesterday.

He was arrested here by Chief Dyer and Officer Brannigan after he had disposed of a quantity of the stolen goods, consisting mostly of cheap jewelry, to members of the foreign population. Nearly all of the loot was recovereed by the police.

Fashion Days to Be Ho Timid Miss Whose Loo Sought by City's Merc

Plans are building splendidly for next week's fashion display, according to what one hears in the stores whose proprietors are cooperating with the Chamber of Commerce in bringing about the big spring event, and Fulton is assured of a celebration, extending over three days— Thursday, Friday and Saturday—the like of which for vivacity it has never known.

Miss Spring was due to arrive here Monday afternoon, but the young lady is lost, strayed or stolen. Wireless messages are trying to locate her whereabouts, but at the press hour no sign of her green attire has been seen. Eac timid creature, but in this partic boldened in the least her timid, s

China Turns Back on Monarchy; Yuan Still President of Country

Peking—A State Department mandate, issued last night, announces the abandonment of the monarchy and resumption of the republic.

The mandate says the revolution shows the demand for a monarchical form of government is not unanimous and that therefore Yuan Shih-kai rejects the Emperorship and resumes the Presidency.

The imperial documents, the mandate adds, will be returned by Yuan Shih-kai to the State Council, which will recomvene as the Senate, preparatory to the resumption of the republic.

Hsu Shih Chang, who left the Cabinet because of them onarchical movement, signed the mandate as Secretary of State, having reentered the cabinet.

Unofficially it was stated that there would be no change in the government until the great war was over. It was understood that the prospect of having China barred from the peace negotiations, in which the final disposition of Kiao Chou will be determined, was an important factor in influencing the postponement.

The United States government has played no part in the diplomatic exchanges at Peking regarding the proposed change. Great Britain, France and Russia soughtAmerican co-operation in their opposition, but the Washington administration declined to express either approval or disapproval of Yuan's projects. The State Department took the position that the United States with propriety could not interfere in the internal affairs of a sovereign State. The fact that the American government so cordially welcomed China into the world's family of republics had been relied upon by the European Powers to influence it to interest itself in the new situation.

SUBSTITUTE FOR WATER POWER BILL

Washington—A substitute for the Shields waterpower and dam bill, recently passed in the Senate over the fight of conservation forces, has been drafted, by the House Commerce Committee. It will be reported in a few days.

While the new measure, like the Shields bill, would provide no revenue for the Government in return for dam sites, it incorporates virtually all the other leasing features of conservation measures which have passed the House this year with the full approval of most conservationists.

The Secretary of War would have absolute control over the granting of sites, and State public service commissions would regulate waterpower rates.

Combinations would be prohibited, no one purchasen could obtain more than 50 per cent of the output of a single company, and no sale or delivery of power could be made to a provol of the Secretary of War.

YOUTH TRAPPED OVER PHONE; ARSON CHARGED

New York—The telephone was called into play in effecting the arrest yesterday of an alleged incendiary and sender of "false alarms", to the Fire department, George Gustow, an eighteen-year-old student, living at No. 715 West One Hundred and Eightieth street was locked up charged with malicious mischief and later with arson—on his own confession, the police declare.

Gustow attends a downtown business college. His father, Herman Gustow, is a lawyer with offices at No. 233 roadway. For some time past the district where he lives has been contcinuously stirred by fire apparatus responding to alarms, following telephone calls.

Opinions

THE THREAT OF A RAILWAY STRIKE

The present demand of the four Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Railway Conductors and Railroad Trainmen ignores the fact that they are the best paid employes in the raiway service—in fact, the best paid in all the country's industries—while large classes of unorganized railway employes are admittedly receiving wages that are too low. The question is not one of shorter hours. That plea is hypocritical. It is a question of "punitive overtime." The four unions have already exacted the provision that if a man is called for duty and performs any service, even fifteen minutes' service, he shall receive a day's pay. A run of ten hours is equivalent to a day, and extra pay is stipulated if the run exceeds ten hours. But the demand of the unions is not to reduce the length of runs. That is impossible. Their hours will remain the same, but their demand is for pay on the basis of an eight hour day, with pay and a half for time worked over eight hours.

It is a demand eminently fit for arbitration. The threat of enforcing it without arbitration and at the expense of unspeakable distress to a population of 100,000,000 goes to show to what a pitch of arrogance and menace the irresponsible power wielded by the labor chieftains has brought them. For a precedent in this country we must go back to the coal strike of 1902, when the President of the United States intervened. Have we come to the pass that we must rely on the interposition of an extra legal power to safe-guard the nation from injury?—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE HEART IN FLYING

Aeroplane sickness is, of course, a well-known condition, and a great deal has been written concerning it. It is probably to be classed with mountain sickness, though there are many points of difference.

Thus, the airman reaches a great altitude much more quickly than does the climber and—except, perhaps, when the climber goes up by a funicular railway—with less physical exertion. Again, the descent of the airman is very rapid. The airman has therefore to adapt himself in an exceedingly short space of time to entirely different climate conditions.

The medical side of thep roblem is being worked out, and the French are devoting considerable attention to it. They recognize that a great deal depends on the physical condition of the man sent up. If he is the wrong type the strain imposed on him by altitude alone may well defeat his utility. If he is the right type his value must needs be very much greater.

The work is of a highly technical nature, but it is also highly interesting. Some of the most recent researches are described in La Press Medical for February 14, and are well worth attention. The writer, Dr. G. Ferry, aide-major de 2e classe au Parc d'Aviation, took careful records of his pulse and blood-pressure during several flights, and his conclusions are as follows:

The pulse becomes more and more rapid from the ground up to a height of 750 metres. From this height to 1,250 metres it still augments, but less rapidly. Above this height it again accelerates more rapidly. The period of slower acceleration seems to be explained by the fact that between 750 metres and 1,250 metres the air is usually calmer than at lower altitudes and the wind more regular. Above this height the cold becomes a great factor in acceleration. Each time a gust strikes the aeroplane the pulse accelerates. During a flight at a particular altitude the pulse remains constant.

When descent begins there is again for a very short period a quickening of the pulse, due, it is thought to the thrill of excitement experienced when the engine is shut off. After this the frequency falls in a regular manner during a slow descent. Each "event" in the descent causes an acceleration, short, but definite. The pulse at the end of the flight is always more rapid than at the beginning.

Blood pressure is dealt with in the same way, and the author concludes that in the choice of pilot-pupils men with heart or blood-vessel weakness should be rigorously excluded. Even the slightest weakness should, in his view, be sufficient ground for rejection, because of the great strain which will be put on these organs.—London Times.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN 1916-17

Within a day or two balloting for new directors of the Chamber of Commerce will take place, and when the result is known, then what? What is the Chamber going to be in 1916-1917? An inert body, anchored behind its Secretary, interested only as he is interested, in the advancement of our city, afraid to cast off its coat and get into the game of cooperation for the good of this community for fear some one may get the best of the deal?

Are we going to see to it that a large chunk of the life of the community is conducted in the interests of the people as a whole, instead of allowing greed, fear and envy crowd out noble attainments? If we do, then we shall confirm a large portion of the population of Fulton in the tradition that the Chamber of Commerce is an entity:

In opening the door of the new year it is necessary to open the life of the Chamber to the influences of some of the life-giving oxygen which the Secretary found in Rochester upon the occasion of his last week's visit. It will be the Chamber's opportunity, if the vim-giving air of a cooperative community can be injected into the meetings of the board of directors. It will mean that the corporation shall rise above its handicaps since the last election. It will mean leading up to the fact that the Fulton Chamber of Commerce is to become a big, bigger, biggest business enterprise.

The Chamber of Commerce is the biggest thing in Fulton right now, but it has not reached the desired goal. It is still climbing, and that is why, in voting for directors, it is our bounden duty to vote for practical, straightforward, fearless men.

If we do this, and do it conscientiously, we are bound to make the election a success. But if we allow selfishness, fear and greed freeze our judgment, and paralyze our ambition to help, the coming election will be a fizzle—a flat failure.

THE HISTORICAL SENSE

Once upon a time, when perambulators were new, a careless woman let one roll over a cliff, and every one said: "There, you see, perambulators are a failure!"

But fifty years later, when the same thing happened, they only said: "What a careless woman!"

Once upon a time, when banks were new, a bank president ran away with the funds, and every one said: "There, you see, money is safer in a stocking!"

But fifty years later, when the same thing happened, they only said: "What a dishonest man!"

Once upon a time, when town building was new, the selfish people of the community were allowed to kill their newspaper.

But fifty years later when the same was attempted ——— ———.

THE BILL POSTERS' TRUST

Judge Landis's decision declaring the Associted Bill Posters of the United States and Canada a combination in restraint of trade is not going to make much difference to the people in the cost of living. Bill posting is not a necessity of life, and it is so easy for any one to go out and post a bill on fences and trees, in spite of the law against posting bills in the public highway, that the "busting' of this trust can not be regarded as the greatest decision a judge ever handed down.

Nevertheless, this decision by the $29,000,000 judge serves to call attention to the fact that combinations are at work in directions not suspected by the general public. The people haven't felt the pressure of boosted prices in bill posting. We have evidence here, however, that they have been paying indirectly for excessive charges on bill posting, for it all must come out of the consumer with a little profit on top.

That bill posting should be restricted has its merits, for it only defaces what is often a lovely landscape, or one that does not strike the attention, but that is not the question here. The counry has a real question to solve. It can not afford to pay monopolistic prices for so many things which are consumed. Most people work in a world of competition, for wages and salaries, the products of the farm, and many other sources of livelihood are fixed by competition. When people with such a plane of life come to buy from trusts which are not held down by any such necessities, the cost mounts up. If there were monopolistic salaries, wages and prices on farm products, the consumers perhaps could stand the pace.

Manifestly the trust problem has not been settled. Trusts which are split up still cooperate. Monopolies which are controlled still exact a price above the competitive price. The oil companies are not carrying on any cutthroat competition, though the oil trust was "dissolved." In communities where telephone competition is eliminated, prices of telephone service take a substantial advance, although they are supposed to be controlled by a commission.

The trust question, however, is not a live one at present. People are thinking of other things, except for the automobile owners. It is a slumbering issue, but it is one which is bound to come forward when other more spectacular problems have died down. Some day the people will turn their attention again to the trust problem.—Utica Observer.

THE GRAFTER

When a grafter is caught with his hand reaching out
For a beggarly dollar or two.
The people arise and with clamorous cries
Kick up a tremendous ado.
It isn't the fact that the man is a thief
Which moves the great masses to weep
With shuddery shame at the sound of his name,
It's only because he is cheap.

A crook may go South with a million or two
And never the public will moan,
Though the records will show, as they very well know,
That the loot that has gone was their own.
But let him sneak off with a paltry six bits.
When his pilferings might have been great,
And you suddenly hear a unanimous sneer:
"Well, isn't that chap a cheap skate?"

Factories Are Replacing Parents

In the April Woman's Home Companion Ida Tarbell describes how the modern factory is taking the place of parents in training girls and how it drives home certain ideas that are essential to good housekeeping.

"It demonstrates that order is not an external, artificial condition," she says, "cultivated because of a fear of what people will think if you are disorderly, but that it is a law on which results depend, and without which neither utility nor beauty, is possible. It drives home the reasons for promptness, exactness, consideration of others. A girl who has become a desirable operative under our new industrial code has had a training which will serve her in anything she undertakes, and without which nothing she would ever undertake could properly succeed. But what a reflection on the trainers of the young in and out of school that a girl must go into a factory or shop to learn to be prompt, exact, attentive, how to become interested in the thing to be done and to sense its relation to other things!"

This Man Proved The Value of Advertising

In the April American Magazine is the story of a very wealthy man who made his fortune through an advertising scheme. In front of a small store in New ork City a crowd was looking at a novel article exhibited in the window. The advertising man introduced himself to thep roprietor of the store and said:

"You have something here that is worth a fortune if you advertise it. I want to advertise it."

"I don't believe much in advertising," said the man.

"I'll make you a proposition. If I triple the sales of the article in three months will you give me a half interest in the business?"

After an hour's talk the other consented. Inside of five days he called his new partner upon the phone and begged him to stop as he was sold out ten times over the capacity of his plant. The advertising man took a half interest in the business, rented a five-story building, advertised for workers—and inside of a month had increased the output of the article forty-fold and extended his field to other cities.

Mrs. Williamson Greatly Surprised

"When my son Andrew was eight years old," writes Mrs. Richard Williamson, of Booneville, N. Y., "he was subject to croup. As Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was so highly recommended we got a bottle of it for him and was greatly surprised at the prompt manner in which it gave relief. A few doses always affected a cure." This remedy can always be depended upon and is pleasant and safe to take.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

The recent Democratic State Convention was full of harmony on the surface. It praised Wilson in high sounding phrases, and insisted that the old party, unterrified, should be restored to power in this state. It said the national administration was serving the country with great wisdom and with profound statesmanship. But everyone who knows anything about practical politics knows that the real forces which controlled the Syracuse convention are btiterly opposed to the Wilson coterie in ew York and that Tammany has nothing but contempt for the manner in which the offices have been parceled out.—Rochester Times.—

In the role Ajax defying the lightning, Mr. Glynn did as well as could be expected. He came as near answering Mr. Root as any Demiocrat could have done. He simply got into too fast company and undertook a job beyond his own power and beyond the intellectual capacity of most public men of the day. To start Mr. Glynn at "scratch" with Mr. Root was manifestly unfair. He ought to have had a handicap of a few miles.—Newburgh Journal.

Legislation under the Dix, Sulzer and Glynn administrations and the enormous waste of time incident to discussion and passage of worthless bills contribute history that is not very pleaing to remember. Quality rather than quantity is the hing hat counts for most in law-making and that is the principle upon which the present Legislature is consistently working. — Gloversville Leader-Republican.

TALKS ON BANKING

SAVINGS BANK CENTENNIAL SERIES

No. 6.—DISCOUNTING A NOTE

It so happens in business that all payments cannot be made in cash, for most of the business is done on credit in one form or another. Small purchases and many of the daily expenditures are cash transactions; but business as a whole moves on credit, the form depending upon the customs characteristic of that peculiar business. The most common form of credit is the book account, where goods are sold and "charged" to thep urchaser. When you go into the grocer's and tell him to "charge it," you are opening a credit with him in the form of a book account. This is common to all retailing transactions. But in thel arger dealings, the credit is in the form of a promissory note, which is merely a written promise to pay a sum certain, in money, to a designated person, firm or corporation, at a stipulated time. Hundreds of thousands of these notes are made every day. They are given, merchant to merchant, in payment of debts resulting from the sale of goods, and while they settle the debt must themselves be paid in money, in order that the obligation may be finally discharged, for a promise never liquidates a debt.

If these promises could be treated as money and passed from hand to hand, they might answer very well, but they are of non-uniform denomination, their goodness is a matter not commonly known, and even though the maker might be "as good as the government," few know it and few would take the risk.

And if the holder could wait until maturity he would get cash from the promiser. But he does not want to wait that long—he wants to turn his evidence of debt into money at once; for with money—real money—he can get better terms, and for certain purposes, such as paying laborers, he must use cash. There must, therefore, be some medium through which he can turn this promise into money before it is due—for a price—and that medium is the bank. The process of doing this is called discounting, which in other words means buying the paper. A simple illustration will explain.

Suppose A sells B a bill of goods on three months' credit. A does not want to wait while B sells the goods and gets the money to pay him, and therefore offers to take B's note for the amount. But the note is not money, and if A would use the money, he must find someone who, for the hope of gain, would advance the money; but the logical place to get this done is the bank, for the bank always has money. It knows men and their ability to keep their promises and can judge the quality of the risk. A therefore offers thenot e to his banker, who says in substance: "I think B is good for this amount If you will endorse—promise to pay if he does not—I will buy that paper evidence of debt from you." Let us say it is for $100, due in three months. The banker knows that at the end of three months he will get the $100, and so gives A $98.50 for it, the $1.50 being interest on the money for that time at 6 per cent. Ordinarily the banker would not give A the cash, but credit his account, with thep rivilege of checking against it, which is virtually the same thing.

Now, what is the result? A sold his goods and got his money at once. B had three months to sell the goods to get the money to pay the note when the banker presented it at maturity. A could use the $98.50 to buy more goods to sell to C, and the bank has made a profit of $1.50 for taking the risk. That is what banks are for—to take risks, to know men, to help business and make profits for itself. And this it does to a very marked degree. We could not do business very well without this help. It is one of the indispensable adjuncts of business. The promises of business men held in the National Banks of thec ountry alone amount to over three billion dollars.—American Bankers Association.

SMALL ANIMALS; THEIR DISCOVERY

Borrowed Timers Learn Much From Physician About Tiny Organisms Found in Materials In Common Use.

Dr. Schlappi's address to the Borrowed Timers, on Monday afternoon caught and held the attention of every member of the club, from start to finish. He said in part: "In thinking of a subject, it occurred to me that you might be interested in knowing something about the "smallest animal I have seen," hence I will try to entertain you for the length of time allotted to me by your secretary, which was to be fifteen or twenty minutes. The title of my subject is somewhat misleading, when you appreciate that my theme will be of microbes, germs or parasites; or even under another name—bacteria. Bacteria are extremely minute plants. The name is Greek in origin, meaning a "little stick." They are the smallest, and at the same time, most and indeed of greatest use in the economy of nature, causing decomposition of both animal and vegetable matter, without which life on earth would be impossible. They are the cause of infectious diseases in man and animal, being very widely distributed as they are found in the air, water, soil and in the bodies of animals.

"Germs were thought to exist long before they were actually discovered. The first authentic observation of living microbe organisms is found in the records of Kircher and Jesuit, printed in 1671. Complete microscopic discovery wasm ade as far back as 1590, but Kircher was in reality the first to find the minute organisms, or worms, in putrid meat, milk, cheese, etc. He did not describe them, probably because his miscroscope did not show them as clearly as we see them nowadays, for in those times the instrument was not perfected. In 1675 Antony Van Leewenhoch, of Delft, Holland, ground lenses and made misroscopes of better quality, which he used to find living matte rin rain water. Soon after his discovery the theory of germs, the theory of "contagion animatum," which was ridiculed out of existence. Then came the idea of spontaneous generation. Needham, in 1749 attempted to prove the spontaneous theory. He put barley under the crystal of a watch, later finding argonisms, which he said were effect and not caused by germinating. Then he boiled particles, keeping them in tightly corked flasks; soon living organisms developed, thus proving (?) the theory of his discovery, that germs could resist ordinary boiling temperature.

"It was not until 1876 that the theory of spontaneous generation was finally settled by Koch and Kohen. Then began an attempt to classify the germs which required a long time resulting in a great deal of discussion by the scientists."

Dr. Schlappi received a rising vote of thanks, and the March meeting adjourned.

TRUE LOVE'S ROUGH PATH

Youthful Pair Struck a Shoal in Attempt to Get a Scrap of Paper from City Clerk Allen.

"The course of true love never runs smooth," providing the course is laid in East First st., between thel ower bridge and the City Hall where dominates the "cold blooded" city clerk, is the conclusion reached by a youthful pair, Miss Florence Gillespie and Mr. Ralph Pierce. Their efforts to complete the preliminary stages to the matrimonial route received sufficient setback this morning to dishearten the average lovers.

It happened this way: Miss Gillespie resides in the Town of Volney, just outside of the city limits and Mr. Pierce is her "friend." March 22d, today, was decided upon as the appropriate time to visit the City Hall, where the first lap in the matrimonial race would be completed. It is safe to say that as the cutter in which they were riding neared the municipal home, the driver's hand became unsteady—or perhaps he was driving with both hands. However, the guests of the Clark House and adjoining business places witnessed a picturesque upset. In some manner the cutter dropped into the cut in the car tracks and turned over throwing the occupants out.

Having successfully extricated themselves from this position, Miss Gillespie and Mr. Pierce deserted Dobbin and the cutter and proceeded afoot to the City Hall. When the genial Clerk Allen had completed the questioning of the would-be bride, the dealy was "all-off"—temporarily at least, for the bride resides outside the city limits and she was told (and he heard also) that the Clerk in the Town of Volney would be the only and proper person to issue the certificate. # RETURN OF OLD STAGE FAVORITES

The time test of literature when applied to the works of the stage has few survivals of plays that were keenly and widely honored in the years of their first production. The rule of progress which rests on change turns down the story of another generation for one reason or another, generally, because the way and manner of people and speech are different. The stage story that outrides these laws of age must have the character quality of human nature that makes the world kin, and stirs one's sensibilites with the fire of truth about people with souls and ideas. The vulgar pitch of comedy or tragedy is a lime-eating quality that makes short shift of the life of such a play.

This axiom of truth is brought forcibly to mind by the conspicuous success of revivals of old plays during the past two years. Perhaps most notable of these was the return of "The Henrietta," the comedy classic of earlier days, with the beloved actor, W. H. Crane, in his original role of "Old Nick Van Alstyne," an "American-Made" hero from the tips of his fingers to the soles of his feet. This golden spring of geyser fun was inspired by Thackeray's Vanity Fair, considered byp many authorities, the greatest novel in the English langguage, and the wonderful manner in which this seed thought was developed into an American comedy is attested today by as keen an interest of thep ublic as at any time in its unequalled career.

The appearance of Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Edith Taliaferro in the cost of this revival with W. H. Crane distinguishes it as one of the most cent years and its presentation at the Richardson, Oswego, Thursday evening, March 30th, will no doubt attract record-breaking patronage to that playhouse. One familiar with the scheme and character types of "The Henrietta" can anticipate in delightful reverie the pleasure that must come from another performance of the delightful comedy by a cast led by these five stars. Seat sale Tuesday, 9 a. m. Mail orders now.

KIBBLE'S SHOW COMES IN A NEW DRESS

Wm. H. Kibble's scenic and dramatic production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be seen at the Quirk Thursday. Mr. Kibble's company carries all the special scenery and effects required to give a perfect production of this old, ever popular play. The company embraces over fifty people, a chorus of over twenty colored men and women, ponies and six man-eating bloodhounds. A special train of cars is employed in transporting the production.

NORMAL STUDENTS MAY GET SUMMER COURSE

Oswego— Several students at the State Normal and Training school are agitating a novel proposition by which certain members of the graduating classes will receive the benefits of a Summer chool course at Columbia University. A mass meeting of the students will be held Friday morning for the purpose of discussing the matter. It is now the plan that one student be selected from each graduating class and from funds collected among the members of the class be enabled to attend the Columbia Summer school. As to how the selection will be made will be a matter which will be decided later. Several ways have been suggested, including a prize essay contest, highest standing and also a contest for popularity.

PEACE RUMORS REACH WASHINGTON; BASED ON MINISTER'S RETENTION

Washington—That Germany is about to open preliminary peace negotiations with the Entente Allies, through the United States, was a report widely circulated in Washington this afternoon. It followed upon the heels of news that Mr. James W. Gerard, American Ambassador at Berlin, has abandoned his intended vacation trip to this country after a conference with Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor.

Since early in the war Washington at intervals has been flooded with peace rumors, but ther eport today seemed to be of a more definite character, and was at least hung upon one tangible fact, the cellation of Mr. Gerard's trip.

It is well understood here that should a suggestion of this delicate character be received by President Wilson it would be guarded as no other secrets in official Washington are guarded, and that denials might be forthcoming in the early stages of the negotiations.

As far as the rumor of today is concerned, it can be stated on high authority that it is purely an inference from the change in the arrangements of Mr. Gerard, after his conference with the German Chancellor. It is a natural inference, according to the view of some officials, but easily may be a wrong one.

Despatches from private individuals and unofficial rumors, transmitted for what they are worth by American diplomatic agents in Europe and which have reached the State Department and President Wilsonr ecently, indicate the war might end sooner than expected.

These rumors seemingly are based upon recent and expected military developments, which might be summarized in this way:

Failure of theg reat German offensive against Verdun and realization on the part of Germany that France cannot be conquered.

Failure of the submarine campaign to starve England.

Reverses of the Turks in Armenia.

Renewal on a gigantic scale of the Russian offensive against Germany and Austria.

Prospective entrance of Roumania in the war on the side of the Entente Allies.

JUDGE RAY ISSUES RESTRAINING ORDER

Oswego — United States Judge George W. Ray has issued an injunction in the Brosemer Brewing Company's bankruptcy case restraining P. W. Cullinan, attorney for Mrs. Sophie Brosemer, and all other creditors from interfering in any way with the trustee, Norman S. Bentley ,in the management or sale of the bankrupt estate.

The petition of Decker & Smith, of Syracuse, attorneys for the trustee, it is claimed that Mr. Cullinan, acting for Mrs. Sophie Brosemer, had begun an action against Mr. Bentley as trustee, and the brewing company, to impress a note for $10,000 held by her as a mortgage against the property and to impress it as a lien on the real estate of the bankrupt, and further that Mr. Cullinan had notified Mr. Bentley that he should retain from the amount received from the sale of the property, $10,000 to be paid Mrs. Brosemer. It is claimed that these actions against the trustees tend to hamper him in his administration of the bankrupt estate and should be restrained.

Justice Hubbs has not yet handed down his decision on the charge of contempt of court against Attorney Cullinan and Sheriff Buck growing out of the Brosemer financial difficulties.

"JACK" IS MADE THEIR CAPTAIN

"Jack" Reynolds, one of the most popular young men in high school, was yesterday elected captain of the basketball team for the season of 1916-17. There was only one other nomination for the office. He succeeds Martin, who was made captain following the resignation of Webb from the team after the holidays.

While the new captain did not attempt to "make" the team in the early part of the present season, he has since then proven his ability to hold down one of the forward positions without his right being disputed as he has been of invaluable assistance in scoring the successive victories which has followed in the wake of the team since its reorganization in the middle of the season.

UNCLE JOSH HAS 493 LIVING DESCENDANTS

Youngest Child Fifteen, Oldest Great-Great-Grandfather.

Birmingham, Ala.—The little town of Oneonta, tucked away in the foothills of Alabama's mineral district, has discovered why there are so many Smiths in this region.

Uncle Josh Smith, who lives near that town, is hale and hearty at ninety-nine, and he has 493 children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren and great-great-great-grandchildren. They are all still alive and will soon have a family reunion. Uncle Josh's youngest child is fifteen, his oldest is a great-great-grandfather.

Here is the way it runs: Uncle Josh's son, Sam Smith; his son, James Smith; his son, Robert Smith; his son, John Smith, and the latter's daughter, aged eight. There is still a younger son of Uncle Josh, William Smith. There is John's son, Sam; a daughter of Sam and her child, Sam, who is a grandfather at the age of thirty-four.

Uncle Josh is a parson and still preaches in the Primitive Baptist churches of his section. He is active, walks five miles any time, has a fine appetite, reads several hours a day and is still a good horseman and rifle shot.

He came to Alabama shortly after it was admitted to the Union. His advent was thrilling. A cyclone overtook him, and he sought refuge in a field where a hay pole stood. According to his story, he held to the pole and was blown around it like a whirligig. Finally the pole was uprooted, but he hung on, and he and the pole were landed 300 yards away on the hillside. He's living within a stone's throw of the place now.

POWER OF PRAYER.

Mother Will Mortgage Home to Go to Her Kidnaped Children.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Eager to see her two children, kidnaped from her fifteen years ago and just found after a search she never abandoned, Mrs. Ella Barnhart declared that she would mortgage her little home and go to them at once.

"It was the power of prayer," she said, in telling how, after inquiring from house to house in the cities of many states, she at last discovered the whereabouts of her boy and girl in Oklahoma.

Mrs. Barnhart was living with her husband at Mount Vernon, Mo., when her husband kidnaped the children while she was sick. As soon as she recovered she started the search which lasted for sixteen years.

Stork Visits Business Partners.

Haddonfield, N. J.—A peculiar coincidence in births occurred here. J. C. Remington and Winfield Vosbury constitute the firm of Remington & Vosbury, engineers, of Camden. Both families live here. Mrs. Remington gave birth to a son, and a few hours later Mrs. Vosbury gave birth to two daughters.

Cow's Tongue Caught.

Kelso, Wash.—A cow belonging to J. F. Stidham lost about two inches of her tongue by having it caught in a steel trap. When the cow was found her tongue was in bad shape, and Stidham could not figure out what had happened until he found the trap with the missing tongue.

Avoid Spring Colds

Sudden changes, high winds, shifting seasons cause colds and grippe, and these spring colds are annoying and dangerous and are likely to turn into a chronic summer cough. In such cases take a treatment of Dr. King's New Discovery, a pleasant Laxative Tar Syrup. It soothes the cough, checks the cold and helps break up an attack of grippe. Its already prepared, no mixing or fussing. Just ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. Tested and tried for over 40 years.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS AFTER $5,000,000 FIRE

Paris, Tex.— With approximately 10,000 persons homeless, the entire business section wiped out and from 1,500 to 2,000 dwellings destroyed, the fire which started late yesterday afternoon still was burning early today. The property loss, it is estimated, will reach $3,500,000.

To Rid Child of Worms

Don't scold the fretful, nervous child. Often its due to worms. Get rid of these by giving one-half to one lozenge Kickapoo Worm Killer, a laxative worm candy. Most Dangerous of Minor Ills.

Well informed physicians regard a common cold as by far the most dangerous of the minor ills. The danger is not in the cold itself, but the serious diseases it so often leads to. That a cold can be cured easily and quickly has been abundantly proven. Mrs. S. K. Van Desburgh, Middleville, N. Y., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and always found it a positive cure for colds and coughs."

ROMANTIC BIRTH OF PHOTO-PLAY BUSINESS

AMAZING NARRATIVE OF HOW THE FIRST ACTED STORY WAS FILMED FOR THE SCREEN.

CHARLES PATHE THE PIONEER

Behind It He Put His Dynamic Personality and Transformed Toy-Like Idea Into a Mammoth Industry.

The romance of a great business often exceeds imagination and proves more interesting than fiction. The hesitating beginning, the slow and stumbling progress, the costly mistakes, the various ailments which so often prove fatal to an infant industry do not make an impression upon the mind of a casual observer. It is only when the process of evolution is complete and the great fabric has been woven that he notices and then, forgetful of the past, he is prone to believe that, like the dragon's teeth of mythology, a particular business has sprung into life fully equipped and formidable in the panoply of might.

Remembering how much the motion business, now ranking fifth in importance of all industries of the United States, owes to the House of Pathe, a representative of this paper during a recent trip to France made a visit to several of the huge factories and studios of that great international organization.

Located on the Boulevard des Italiens, "the glory of Paris and wonderful centre where the five parts of the world meet together," are the head offices of Pathe Freres, sumptuously housed in a building which by its beauty and permanent character might well be a great art museum or government offices. Here alone in times of peace are housed some four hundred employes, a small portion of the army of nearly 10,000 scattered all over the world who draw their salaries in Pathe envelopes. In Vincennes, the birthplace of the motion picture industry, the city which saw the early struggles of the Brothers Pathe, are several of their huge factories and studios covering an area of 28,000 square meters and employing over seventeen hundred employes of both sexes. Here are colored by the Pathe process those beautiful pictures of which the "Beloved Vagabond" is such an excellent and recent example. In these factories is also produced raw film stock amounting to over 300,000 meters a day, a quantity which makes Pathe one of the principal sources of raw film material in the world. Other great studios are located in Montreuil-sur-Bois and Nice, and in them daily, before the war, met the greatest actors and actresses of France. At Joinville-le-Pont is another huge factory with a payroll of 1,100 persons, where films are developed, edited, printed, and then forwarded to all parts of the world. In Paris is still another, where are manufactured cameras and accessories, employing nearly a thousand persons. Remembering that other large factories are located in England, Russia, Italy, the United States and other countries, as are studios and selling organizations, one finds it difficult to believe that this great organization is only about twenty years old, and represents the growth of an idea in the minds of two men, poor of pocket but large of vision.

Harking back those twenty years, Drama, Comedy and Opera sat all powerful and apparently inviolate on the throne of the Speaking Stage, and he would have been a rash man, indeed, who would have prophesied that they must eventually yield supremacy to the long rolls of celluloid film and the flashing of myriads of tiny pictures upon a snowy screen. But Genius gives Vision and to Messrs. Charles and Emile Pathe we must concede true Genius. With two other brothers they put all their savings into a business which then was but a mere idea. The combined capital amounted to but $2000 and after only three weeks the other two brothers, horrified by their rashness, withdrew, taking their money with them. Messrs. Emile and Charles Pathe, who held true to their faith and stuck to their guns, today draw $100,000 per year apiece in salaries alone! Opportunity had called to them and they had heard her voice.

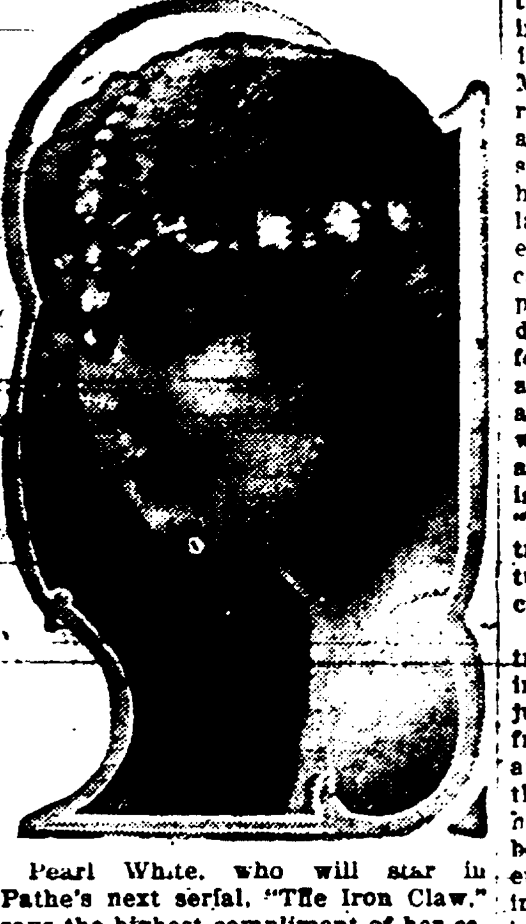
The original motion picture was imprisoned in a wooden cabinet where one was privileged by depositing a coin to see a succession of tiny photos tumbling over one another, and giving the semblance of life action. The original idea had been Edison's, and in it Charles Pathe had recognized the germ of great things. He rented a small store and placed within it two of those machines. The venture proved profitable, but was handicapped by the fact that there was but one picture to a machine. To make patrons return again and again, a change of program was a vital necessity. To secure his program Mr. Pathe purchased eighteen more machines and placed them in eighteen different cities. From week to week he switched his pictures in rotation, and then and there was born the modern film exchange idea.

With his profits he purchased a motion picture camera,—one of the very first to be made,—and started making his own pictures. His subjects were primitive,—a man running, chickens feeding, cattle grazing, and the like,—but he was developing his idea and for that reason his work was important. These embryonic dramas were in short lengths, ten, twelve, fifteen feet at a time, but the idea of projecting them upon a screen instead of imprisoning them in a box helped tremendously. He took his films in his pockets and carried them (traveling third class, if you please) to London, Berlin and Rome and sold them there. By degrees his films lengthened and his market strengthened, but for weary months he was his own camera-man, shipping clerk, manufacturer, demonstrator and salesman. Man of many activities as he was, his brain could not be idle. The idea came to him that a story could be worked out upon the screen—and that that story would possess a far wider appeal than the simple little facts of every-day life which he had been filming. To think, with him, was to act. He employed Max Linder, a threadbare young actor, for $4 a day to act out a crude scenario, and Louis J. Gasnier, a stage manager and play producer of Paris, to direct the taking of the picture. That short picture was the first acted story ever to be put upon the screen, and from it the modern photoplay has developed. Max Linder jumped to fame and fortune and is still considered the best pantomime comedian in the world. At the outbreak of war his $4 per day had grown to $70,000 per year. L. J. Gasnier, the first director, is today one of America's prominent film men and still identified with the Pathe organization.

Still another great idea came to Mr. Pathe when he considered the possibility of putting news into motion pictures. The idea, like all of his ideas, proved practicable and successful, and the News Weekly came into being. Most persons, in spite of the competition which sprang up, still associate the news film in their minds with the old Pathe Weekly, the father of them all. Today there is the Pathe News in the United States, the Pathe Gazette in Great Britain, the Pathe Journal in France, the Pathe Giornale in Italy, and still another with a jaw-breaking name in Russia.

Thus are great businesses born; beginning with an idea some strong man like Charles Pathe takes it, molds it, changes it, improves it, and makes it his own. Behind it he puts his own strong will and dynamic personality. He breathes upon it the breath of his genius and like Galatea it becomes alive, throbbing with beauty and energy, an entity and no longer an Idea!

PEARL WHITE



Pearl White, who will star in Pathe's next serial, "The Iron Claw," says the highest compliment of her career was paid by this serial being written for her. It was the result of multitudes of letters from all over the country asking for her to be starred in another serial.

ROBERT EDESON

ROBERT EDESON TALKS OF THE "MOVIES"

Is Now Starring in Pathe Production.

Robert Edeson, who stars in "Big Jim Garrity," the A. H. Woods' play produced for Pathe by George Fitzmaurice, is a deep student of dramatic art and talks intelligently and well upon the subject. Recently he gave an interviewer some opinions on photoplay art which will be found interesting:

"The screen is a strange medium," he said, "for there is no tomorrow in the movies. Each day brings its own problems and as they are solved the art moves constantly to a higher plane. The future of the photoplay is very bright. The interest is increasing and will continue to increase. The silent house and the lighted screen have a peculiar and vivid effect on you. You forget that you are sitting in a theatre—time does not exist. It's the movie lure and I'm just as great a fan as any man who spends his last nickel to watch the screen. I have been in pictures only one year, while I was on the legitimate stage for twenty-five, and yet it is safe to say that more persons have come to know me in the past year than in all the previous time. That in itself is the laurel that sits on the head of the photodrama. It is democratic to the last degree."

Mr. Edeson is a southerner and played all over the country in stock, his best know successes being "Strongheart" and "Soldiers of Fortune." He was in the famous Empire Company, which was the special pet of Charles Frohman, and which produced so many brilliant players such as Faversham, Viola Allen, Henry Miller and Ida Conquest. In addition to "Big Jim Garrity," he also stars in Kipling's "Light That Failed," a Pathe feature to be released later.

When Mr. Edeson travels, his wife, five-year-old daughter, and dog, "J. D.," all go with him. He likes the life of a movie actor. "It's the life of a prince!" he says.

BABY MARIE OSBORNE, THE YOUNGEST LEADING WOMAN IN THE WORLD

She Stars Delightfully in a Pathe Picture.

Baby Marie Osborne loses her amateur standing as a guileless kid and assumes the professional dignity of an honest-to-goodness leading lady in "Little Mary Sunshine," a Pathe Gold Rooster play that propels us with an urgent, though delicate, touch, back to the free spaces of the "never-never land."

"Little Mary Sunshine," is one of those "once upon a time" butterflies, through whose gauzy wing we see life in rare and delightful tints. Five reels isn't a scene too long for "Little Mary," who, thank heaven, doesn't realize the charm of her fat little self and never overdoes the "saccharine stuff." Her utter unconsciousness of herself is a revelation in art, particularly in one so young, and points encouragingly to a brilliant stage career. Director Henry King, who also plays the male lead in the picture, deserves more than passing notice for his masterly handling of the child, and his delicate, knowing touch on a play that was woven of Fancy's woof. He is an actor of intelligence and subtlety, and a personality that is impressive. His handling of the "little things," the "tremendous trifles" in the direction of this feature, shows him an artist of depth and certainty.

Baby Osborne can honestly and truly lay claim to be the youngest leading woman in the land, for she has just turned three years of age. Far from being "camera shy," she gurgles and laughs as though she were having the time of her life and goes through her scenes as though to the manner born. Almost invariably the child player of the stage is oppressed with a feeling of self-importance. Little Marie is not—she is just a wholesome, mighty clever, unspoiled baby, of whom any mother would be proud. Her debut in pictures makes us hope we will see others in which she is featured.

HER FATHER'S DEATH

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. Shale, a crook and tool of Pollock, was on the fire escape watching for Langdon. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. Mary's escape after the murder is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis."

PSYCHOLOGISTS and those scientists who study the human brain declare that the focus of consciousness is dual, and that unless the sub-conscious mind supplements the conscious concentration, the attention is easily diverted. Thus it was that Mary Page, sitting in the prisoner's dock with the Damoclean sword of justice above her, was now unconscious of the crowd in the court-room.

Mind and soul were alike concentrated upon Langdon and upon the slow building of the evidence that was to free her from the charge of having murdered James Pollock.

A tumult of old memories was surging about her, as witness after witness told of the tragedy of a year before; (a tragedy that had so grim a sequel in the present,) and yet there were strange nightmarish blanks in those memories—spaces where fact had to give place to imagination, and during which she had hung in the nullity of uncounted moments, merging like a person under ether to momentary pain-scared consciousness, only to sink whirling back into oblivion. And it was of these moments of which Mary herself knew only by hearsay that the witnesses were now testifying.

Mary did not realize the subtlety with which Langdon was calling these witnesses. In fact, it was doubtful if any of those in the court-room except perhaps the Prosecutor and the Judge, appreciated the skill with which he brought out each detail in its turn.

In pursuance of his method of bringing out events as they had happened he had already, at a "bar side conference," asked permission to recall his witness as a second or even a third time. Thus it came as a surprise only to the spectators when Mrs. Page again took her place in the witness-box.

"Mrs. Page, you told us yesterday of how your daughter, struggling with her drunken father, was struck by him and fled screaming from the house. Will you tell the court, please, what followed that flight? Did you go after her or remain at home?"

"It was impossible for me to follow as quickly as Mr. Langdon did," she said quietly, glancing toward the Judge. "So I stood at the gate waiting, feeling sure that it would only be a very few minutes before he would return with my poor, half-crazed girl.

"I went back as far as the window. It was very cold and I wanted to get a wrap, but I—I—was afraid of my husband. I saw him sitting by the table still drinking. At last, however, he fell over onto the couch asleep, and I went in and got wraps and blankets thinking to start out myself in search of Mary. As I came out of the cottage I saw Mr. Pollock drive up in his motor. He said, 'My God, she'll die out there in the cold. They must be a pack of idiots not to have found her in this time.' Then he grabbed the other man by the arm and said, 'Get in the car and show me how to reach the place where the searching party is. I'll find Mary—I promise you that.'"

"Did he offer to take you with him?"

"Yes, but I felt that I must stay at home in case—in case—they brought her back, or she wandered back of her own accord."

"Did you go into the house after they had left?" Langdon's voice was very gentle now, and Mrs. Page smiled at him, a smile that was far sadder than tears as she said:

"No—I wrapped myself up and sat on the steps. I—I felt nearer to Mary out under the stars."

"That is all, Mrs. Page."

But now the District Attorney was on his feet holding up an arresting hand.

"Mrs. Page," he said harshly, one lean finger thrust towards her menacingly, "if your husband struck your daughter and injured her so terribly that she temporarily lost her reason, why doesn't she carry a scar?"

"Why, she does." There was a note of surprise in the quick answer, and Mary's fingers tightened ever so little about the rail in front of her.

"Is it possible to show the court that scar?" There was a sneer in the voice; a sneer born of the realization that something must be done to stem the great tide of sympathy for Mary, and cast disparagement upon this story from the past. But his request was a boomerang, for when Mary, trembling a little, took her place before the court and, lifting the soft hair from her forehead, showed the great livid mark of a hideous scar, the murmuring of compassion that swept through the room found a mute echo on the Bench itself, and the Prosecutor, discomfited, swung curtly away and dropped into his seat as Langdon called the next witness.

"John Alexander MacPherson!"

"Mr. MacPherson, you have told of seeing Miss Page running through the wood and of my finding her. Will you tell us now, please, whether you saw me again on that night and under what circumstances."

"I saw Mr. Langdon again on that nicht wi'in the hour. I had nae more than reachit home and were tellin' my gude wife of the evenin' when there coom a knock at the door. I opened it, and there stude Mr. Langdon. He was all in a feery farry—not to say commotion, and his face were white. Beyant him I cude see twa or three other men—all excited like."

"Did you recognize them?"

"Aye, there were men from the town—I had seen them often, and taken a wee drappie wi' them at the hotel come Saturday nicht. But it were Mr. Langdon who spoke. 'Have you seen Miss Page,' he cried, catching at my sleeve. 'We are looking for her.' 'Div you mean tae say you've lostit her again?' I asked; and he said, 'Yes. I sat doon to rest a bit and I must have lost consciousness. When I came to, she was gone.'"

"Did you go with any of the three men?"

"Havers, no, man! I came back for my cap and coat, and I got to the door

"I—I felt nearer to Mary out under the stars."

just in time tae save Mr. Langdon from a bad fall, for he would hae gaen over in a heap if I hadna caught him. My gude wife and I took him in the house, and when he was revived a bit I was for leavin' him, but he wouldna stay. He said, 'I must find Mary mysel'—it was I lost her the second time.' So we went oot together."

"How long was it before you got a trace of her?" Langdon's voice was toneless, but his eyes were alight with fire as he pictured to himself that strange night hunt for the slender girl he loved. The occasional shouts of the other searchers; the flash of a lantern; the heavy shadows and vividly white snow; the cold that stung his face and hands and the aching weariness that numbed his muscles. It had been like a nightmare to him, a dream that set his head to throbbing, and in which the only real thing was the stalwart bulk of MacPherson encouraging him forward—and then—the little shoe. He roused himself with a start, realizing that the Scotchman was answering his question.

"It might hae been fifteen minutes—mayhap more, when we coom to her little footprints in the snow. Then—" he paused a moment and his voice softened, "we found her wee slipper in a snow bank. A bit further we found t'other one—and the snow began tae be flecked wi' draps of blood. But I should say it was mair than half an hour before we coom upon the lassie hersel', lying in a faint like."

"Was she conscious?"

"Nae, and we could na bring her to, so we wrappit her in oor coats and took her back to the gude wife."

"Will you tell us please in what condition Miss Page was when I—when you—arrived at your house with her?"

MacPherson frowned at the memory and a deeper note crept into his tones as he said slowly:

"She was nae conscious, and her clothes were tairn to pieces and hangin' in ribands. Such clothes as she had on, puir lassie! Her feeties were cut wi' the ice and the stones, and there was a terrible wound on her forehead and an ill faured queer bruise on one shoulder."

"Was your wife alone in the house when you returned?"

"Nae, there was maybe half a dozen men frae the town, who had heard of the lassie and had coom to help the search. They set up a shout when they saw us, and I had one of them fire his revolver to tell the others Miss Page was wi' us."

"Did they show any emotion at the sight of Miss Page's condition?" asked Langdon, and a little shudder shook Mrs. Page, who alone of all those present knew of the tragedy to which that "emotion" had led. MacPherson's voice, too, was grim as he said:

"I wouldna call it 'emotion,' but there was a gude bit of murmurin' against these who had driven so sweet a lassie distractit and sent her to maybe her death in the snow. The murmurin' grew louder when they saw the hurt and there were cries to know who had done it. When Mr. Langdon told them the murmurs grew louder and finally one of the lads cried out in a loud voice, 'This town has na room for wifebeaters and drunken brutes—he ought to be hung.'"

A stir of excitement swept through the court-room, for MacPherson, without a gesture, with no more than a rising inflection of his voice, had brought before them a vision of the snowy night and the little house from whose doorway the lamplight streamed out, mellowing the snow to gold, and touching with its fingers of light the grim faces of that group of men stirred to the deep anger of the mob at the thought of Dan Page's brutality.

"Did the other men make any threats?"

"Aye. Another one of them cried oot, 'Killin' is too good for Dan Page. He should be horsewhipped out of town.' At that, my wife coom up to me and says, 'For the lassie's sake don't let them be takin' the law into their oon hands or there'll be murder done this nicht.' So I cried 'Dinna take the matter too personal, lads—we've law and a gaol in this town. Somebody get the sheriff.'"

"Did they heed you?"

"I couldna tell at the time, because just then a cutter comes dashin' oop with twa men in it, and one shout oot, 'Have you found Mary Page?' An' they all answers, 'Yes, she's found.' Then he says, 'I'm James Pollock—her fiance—and I have come to take her home.'"

"Was Miss Page still unconscious?" The question came sharply. MacPherson shook his head.

"Nae, she was conscious, and when she heerd him she gave a cry of 'No, no, no!' and dragged hersel' up from where she lay and clung to Mr. Langdon. At that the man Pollock pushed by me and cried, 'Mary! Mary—I have come to take you home.'"

"Did Miss Page answer him?"

"Nae, she just shookit her head, and Mr. Langdon said, 'Miss Page is no going home yet.' But Mr. Pollock was sair angry and shouted, 'What the devil have you got to do with it? Haven't you made trouble enough?'"

"Did Mr. Pollock make any move toward Miss Page?"

"Aye. He tookit a quick step forward like he would carry her off, but the gude wife stoppit him. 'Ye'll no move the puir lassie till she is warm and restit,' she said, and put her arms aboot her and tookit her into the bed room beyant. Mr. Langdon helpit her and when he came oot he said, 'Miss Page will not return to her drunken father. My friend Dr. Jamison and his wife will give her temporary shelter and the proper medical attention.'

"Did Mr. Pollock acquiesce?" Langdon's voice was dry with reminiscences.

"Mr. Pollock was sair angry, and he said, 'It is not for you to say what my future wife shall do. I'll not have her put with your friends. She shall go home with me—I can protect her from her father. I suppose you think you can carry her right off under my nose. Well, let me tell you that's called by an ugly name!' At that Mr. Langdon shouts, 'What do you mean, Jim Pollock? Tell me what you mean by that!' He lookit so fierce I feared a fight, so I went between them and said, 'Dinna fash yersels like that. Think of the puir lassie—and be quiet.' Then I says to Mr. Pollock, 'Ye'll gang outside a bit and when the lassie is restit, I'll let ye know.'"

"Did Mr. Pollock go then?"

"Aye, for I went wi' him to the door mysel'."

"Were the men still outside?"

"Na, and it gi' me a shock like, for I cude see na one exceptit the friends of Mr. Pollock. The ithers had all slippit awa' towards the town."

"Did you speak of their absence when you re-entered the cabin?"

"Na, for I had ither matters to make clear. I had made up ma mind that it was na with Mr. Pollock that the lassie should go, so I pit it tae Mr. Langdon, that wi' my horse in the sleigh, we cude carry the lassie out the door to the kitchen and drive off, leavin' the gude wife to tell the ithers."

"I can protect her from her father."

"Did you carry this plan out?"

"Aye. We fillit the sleigh with blankets, and I pit my shot-gun in the front and we helpit the lassie oot—"

"Will you tell us please," broke in the Judge with some asperity, "what you expected to do with a shot-gun?" And a little twinkle sparkled for an instant in MacPherson's eyes.

"Mr. Pollock was in an automobile," he said, "and shot is a grand thing for tires. Nae doot you can guess yoursel' how much chance they have to escape it."

A ripple of laughter swept through the room, instantly hushed at the warning frown of the Judge, and MacPherson, his huge brown hands gripped about the edge of the stand, turned inquiringly towards Langdon.

"Will you tell us, Mr. MacPherson, as briefly as possible, what occurred while you were on your way to the residence of Dr. Jamison?"

"We had na mair than got startit when the noise of the horse brought one of Pollock's friends to the corner of the house to look oop the back road. At sight of us he gave a cry and ran back, shoutin' to Mr. Pollock. * * * We had a fair getaway, but na horse is as gude as one of those devil machines, and they were after us at once. So I tookit the reins and give them to Mr. Langdon and said, 'You drive, and pit the lassie doon. I've a way of stoppin' them as is behin', but I need my hands.' At that I tookit my gun and stude up in the sleigh. I cude see the ithers plainly, and I shoutit, 'Go back, unless ye want to be hurtit!' But they only swore at me, and when I saw they were gainin' I sent a load of shot towards them. It did na harm, but they stoppit short, tae see if there was hurt. 'They'll na coom after us again the nicht,' I said; but it was no mair than a few minutes before Mr. Langdon said, 'I hear the motor!' And I said, 'There's anither barrel to the gun.'"

It was a strange scene that he drew for them in his deep, quiet voice—a scene so unreal that it was incredible to most of those present that it could all have happened not so very many miles from the court-room where they now sat—a scene with the dark, snowy road and the silent woods for its setting, with the flying sleigh speeding almost noiseless over the slippery road, Langdon, his face white and set with fatigue and anxiety holding the tugging reins in one hand while the other arm held close the half-conscious form of Mary, her bandaged head ghastly above the enwrapping blankets; while over them towered the grim figure of the great Scotchman, his shot-gun to his shoulder, his big body swaying with the speed of the flying sleigh.

"I waited till they came oop too close," he finished, a deep note throbbing in his voice, "and then I did fer a tire wi' the second shot. The auto nigh upset wi' the force of the explosion, and they all jumpit oot. And that was the last we saw of them."

"Did you remain at Dr. Jamison's house when you reached there?"

"Na. For when I had seen the puir lassie taken away by the kind gude wife of the doctor, and I knew she were safe, I keepit thinkin' of how fast the men had gone fra the hoose that nicht, and I says to Mr. Langdon, I will jes' take a run back to the town, I'm thinkin', and make sure there's na harm coom to Dan Page through this nicht's work.' And Mr. Langdon says, quick like, 'What do you mean?' So I told him and the doctor, and Mr. Langdon was all fer comin' wi' me, but the doctor wouldna let him. 'Dinna fash yersel',' I said, when I saw the doctor was richt. 'I'll gae fast, and if there is need fer you I'll come richt back.' And the doctor said, 'You're all worn out, Philip. You've got to have some rest. Be sensible.' So I went back alone."

"At what hour did you reach the home of Miss Page?"

"I dinna ken the exact hour, but it were aboot daylight, and I cude see quite a ways ahead of me."

"Will you tell us, please, what you saw when you approached the Page house?"

Slowly one great hand clinched itself into a knotted fist, and the muscles of his jaw tightened, and across those who sat between, the gray eyes of the Scotchman and the tear-dimmed eyes of Mrs. Page met in a mute communion of terrible memories. Then, slowly, with a new tone of suppressed excitement lending a thrill to his voice he said:

"When I got nie enough to see the hoose, I cude see a great black splotch in front of it, that I made oot to be men. Then I cude hear shouts: 'Come oot, Dan Page, we've summat to say to you!' So I didna drive right oop to the place. I stoppit in the road and crepit through the wood at the back and, hiding under the hedge, got oop to the rear. Then I wrote on a wee scrap of paper, 'I've news of Mary—and I come to bring help.' Then I tappit on a window, till I saw Mrs. Page peerin' oot—and I held up the paper.

"After a minute or so she unlatchit the back door and I slippit in. 'Oh, Mr. MacPherson,' says the puir lady, cryin', 'is my girl safe?' And I says, 'Safe and sound asleep.' And she says, 'Thank God.' Then I heerd another voice sayin', 'Annie, Annie—who is it? Don't let them get me—oh, my God, don't let them get me!' And I saw that Dan Page was hidin' behind her, clingin' to her skirts like a scared bairn. His face were all drawn and twisted like, and his mouth was slobberin', and he kept cryin', 'I was drunk—I was drunk! You tell them, Annie—You tell them!' At that she says like one speakin' to a child, 'There, there, Dan—you're safe!' And then there came an awfu' cry from outside: 'Come oot, Dan Page—or we'll smoke ye oot like the beast that ye are!' At that Mrs. Page began to sob and says, 'Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do! They will na talk to me—and they'll burn oor hoose, they'll burn oor hoose! Oh, if Philip were only here!'

"'Dinna greet,' I said, 'I'll get him, but he mun ha' time. Let Dan Page go upstairs and talk to them from a window.'

"'Oh, Dan,' says the puir lady, 'Dan—will you do that? Tell them you didn't mean to hurt Mary or—or me.' 'No, no,' he whimpered, 'I can't, I can't!' But I grabbit him by the arm and pulled him to his feet. 'Be a man,' I cried, and I shookit him. 'Be a man and get yon upstairs.'

"'You'd be safe in the cupola, Dan,' says Mrs. Page. 'I'll stay with you—and this kind man will go for Philip.' But he kept sayin', 'No, no,' and I could hear the others bangin' at the door and I dared not stay, so I slippit oot the way I came and went off for Mr. Langdon."

Mrs. Page, whose anxiety to be near Mary had kept her from returning to the witness room, shuddered at the memories that MacPherson was conjuring up out of the past. The softness which time has lent the tragedy of that chill winter morning was stripped off, exposing the old horrible wound, and she could feel again those groping fingers, icy cold, clutching at her as she strove to drag Dan Page up stairs towards the cupola.

She could hear his voice, now thick with drink, now athrill with terrible fear—as he pleaded with her to hide him and to save him. She had been mercifully numb with the horror of it then; consumed only with the desire to hold those men at bay long enough for MacPherson to bring help, and it was that desire which gave her the strength to drag the heavy bulk of her husband up the two flights of stairs into the little cupola at the top.

She could feel again the sting of the cold dawn wind against her face as she stepped out on the platform of rough boards and dropped the inert figure of her husband at her feet.

Then with all the eloquence of her great fear she had pleaded with the mob below to go away. They had seemed all eyes floating on a great pool of blackness against the snow as she looked down, but later she could see the grim mouths below the eyes and knew that her pleas were falling on deaf ears.

Finally one who seemed to be the ringleader had stepped forward and cried:

"Where is your husband? It is he that we want to talk to." And she had lied and said, "He is sleeping."

They muttered ominously at that and again the ringleader spoke: "We have no quarrel with you, Mrs. Page, but no drunkard who strikes his daughter and drives her insane shall stay in this town—Dan Page has got to go."

"He will, he will," she promised wildly. "I'll take him away today. He didn't mean to hurt us—he didn't know what he was doing— But he'll go away—oh, I promise that." And again the grim voice answered her:

"He'll go, but WE'LL see him off. Let him stand up like a man and talk to us."

At that they all took up the shout for Page, and he, lying on his face on the boards, moaned and prayed to the God he had long forgotten, to save him.

How long she talked and urged and wept and pleaded Mrs. Page herself did not remember, but somehow she had held them—still threatening—still ominous—till far down the road she saw a small speck that she knew was an approaching sleigh with two figures in it.

At sight of it she had forgotten everything except an infinite relief, and crying in her joy had sped down stairs, leaving Dan Page still huddled in the windy cupola.

If she hadn't—she shuddered, and caught her breadth in a smothered sob, and for a moment the court-room hung in a haze before her and the voice of MacPherson speaking on the witness-stand receded to a vast distance and seemed to be again the murmuring voices of that angry mob. But she fought back the impending faintness and the rising tears, and as one bracing himself against the impact of some great weight, she straightened her slender shoulders to meet without flinching the story of that morning's tragedy.

"When Mr. Langdon and I drove oop," MacPherson was saying, "the men were still there, and Mr. Langdon stood oop in the sleigh and made a speech to them urging them to go home quietly. 'Miss Page is safe in the hands of a good doctor,' he said, 'and you will only make a bad matter worse if you attempt to carry out this plan of whipping Dan Page out of town. I'll see to it that he leaves the community, but if you drive him out this way, it's going to mean disgrace to the town and to Mary Page, too. Do you suppose she could bear the thought of her father's having been publicly whipped?' 'Well,' shouted one of the men, ''tis not beatin' her the way he has done it— Drivin' her and—the brute!' And the crowd began to murmur again. Then Mr. Langdon told them that the drink was like a ragin' beast inside Mr. Page, that he knew nought of what he did; that he probably didn't remember anything—that he really loved his wife and his girl. And while he was talkin' one of the men gave a cry and pointit oop, and there in the cupola stood Dan Page—wild like the daft, clingin' to the rail, and he cried oot, 'What he says is God's truth. I love my wife and girl as much as you men love yours— It's whiskey that hurt them—not me. I've been a slave in the grip of a fiend all my life. I've tried—my God, men, I've tried—to keep away from it—but it gets me. The sight of it—the smell of it—the taste of it—is ever in my mind. I drink because I must, and drink more to drown the memory of it! I've lived in hell for years, and no horsewhipping could punish me—as does the knowledge of this night's work.' Then suddenly he burst out cryin'—sobbin' like a child, while the men stood starin' oop at him. Then he flung out his arm and said, 'Philip—take care of them—be careful of Pollock—I'm going to take myself out of the community—now!' And at that he leapit oop onto the rail and jumped."

MacPherson broke off abruptly, and his hand shook as he wiped the drops of sweat off his forehead—and the shudder that gripped him swept through the entire room at the thought of that body hurtling through the air down upon the snow to stain it with that swiftly flowing stream of crimson.

"Was Mr. Page killed instantly?"

Only Mrs. Page sat erect and unmoved, but her eyes were pools of an agony too deep for expression.

"Was Mr. Page killed instantly?"

"Yes, he was dead when we pickit him oop, and the men spread their coats over him and carried him to the hoose."

"Did you go into the house with them?"

"No," said MacPherson, "as well ye know, sir, I tookit you back to the doctor's hoose."

Langdon smiled a little. "It's not what I know, but what I want you to tell the court, Mr. MacPherson; so will you please tell them, as succinctly as possible, what occurred upon your return to the residence of Dr. Jamison?"

"It were the gude wife of the doctor that met us, and toldit us that the doctor had Miss Page in his laboratory making some tests about the brain."

"The doctor had already said that he had been making some special tests for the brain." Langdon's voice rasped sharply through the room. "Did he make the results of those tests known in your presence?"

"He said, 'She is sane now, and these tears will relieve her, but I would advise you to have Dr. Foster, the alienist, make an examination. She has still much to suffer, and—this thing will come back!— You'll have to take good care of her and guard her, Philip.'"

ROCHESTER MAN LOST TO MOTT

"Hank's" Neck Proved Too Strong to Be Broken By Even a Policeman.

Two novelties were introduced in the wrestling match between "Iron Neck" Mott, of this city and Policeman Webb, of East Rochester, which was held in Church's hall last night. The unusual features were the attempt of Webb to break Mott's cast iron neck, and the local wrestler's exhibition of the "merry-go-round" hold. Webb's close attention to Mott's neck resulted in the local man winning the bout. The first fall went to Mott in 42 minutes of interesting grappling after Mott had secred a head, scissors and toe hold. The second bout was awarded to the local man after 17 minutes' time when referee Stewart claimed that the visitor had used the strangle hold illegally. It had been pre-arranged that the straggle hold was to be barred.

Mott's friends are now convincetd that his nick-name of "Iron Neck" has not been misapplied as the visitor's attack was aimed at this part of Mott's anatomy throughout the game.

Whether or not Mott was acquainted with the physical condition of the policeman is not known, but before going on with the bout, the visiting wrestler exhibited a letter from his physician stating that he had suffered an attack of acute indigestion in the past week and was not fit to engage in a wrestling bout. Did Mott use the "merry-go-round" hold with his opponent's condition in mind, is the question the spectators asked. Securing a firm hold on the policeman's feet, Mott rose to his feet in the first encounter and swung the heavy chief round and round—and then let him fall heavily to the mat with the express purpose of falling on him instantly and pinning his shoulders to the mat. The policeman, coached by brother officers of the local force evaded the trap, however.

In the preliminary between "Young" Victory and "Young" Wallace, two straight falls were scored by the latter. The first resulted in 17 minutes, thew inning hold being a head-scissors. The second fall was scored in half a minute.

Announcement was made that "Young Tunk" would meet Ted Renous in a return match on April 10th and that Mott would wrestle Harry Guppy at Solvay for the championship of Central New York on March 31st.

This Apron Answers Many Purposes.

A novelty in aprons is this side-closing design in white percale trimmed with blue gingham.

For real service, combined with daintiness and chic, this apron supplies a crying need. The three-piece skirt and short sleeves are cut in one with the body. There are a few gathers at the slightly raised waist-line, over which a straight belt is stitched. In medium size the apron calls for 4⅞ yards 36-inch gingham or percale. If contrasting material is used for the belt and neck trimming, ⅞ yard 20 inches wide will be needed.

Since there are so few seams the making of the apron will be quick work. First turn under the front edge of right gore on line of slot perforations. Lap on left front gore, center-fronts even (line of large "O" perforations indicate center-front); stitch to position (⅜ inch from folded edge), from the slash to the lower edge.

Close under-arm, sleeve and shoulder seams as notched. Form pleats in sleeve, bringing the "T" perforations each side of the seam, over to the seam, and bring the remaining "T" perforations to the corresponding small

"o" perforations; stitch a straight strap of material ⅜ inch wide (when finished) over pleats.

Gather front and back (at raised waist-line), on crossline of small "o" perforations and 1⅜ inch above. Adjust belt to position over gathers, center-fronts and center-backs even (large "O" perforation in belt indicates center-front), small "o" perforation at under-arm seam.

Stitch the strap to position on the right front and right front gore, notches even; underface upper part of strap, and stitch a straight band (1⅜ inches wide when finished) around neck edge as illustrated.

The large "O" perforations indicate front of pocket; turn hem at upper edge at notches. Adjust to position on front gore, upper edge of pocket between indicating small "o" perforations.

White percale trimmed with blue gingham is an effective combination for the design.

BRITAIN ARRANGES TO INCREASE SIZE OF OVER-SEAS ARMIES

London—All the newspapers this morning publish prominently cable despatches from New York announcing that as a result of a general peace talk in the United States American industrials have suffered a severe depression.

The consensus, however, is that the fall in stocks is due to the American conviction that the failure of the superhuman efforts of the Germans at Verdun foreshadows their collapse.

This view is corroborated by thel atest despatches from Berlin, which report that not only the Deputies of the Reichstag are protesting against thep rolongation of the wholesale slaughter of the manhood of the Fatherland but that in the capital and other cities of the Empire police and soldiers have been called out to suppress anti-war demonstrations.

So far as Britain is concerned, the only subjects of discussion here are to measures to be adopted to increase the ever growing army in order to insure a certain victory.

VILLA FIGHTS CARRANZISTS

El Paso—Francisco Villa and his bandits, reinforced by men that were picked up Galeana on the retreat south, are reported fighting tonight between Namiquipa and Madera with a column of the Madera garrison under Colonel Cano. This news came here from Chilhauhua and was made public by General Gayira at Juarez. It is purely Mexican in its origin and comes from a point nearly eighty miles southeast of the scene of the reported fighting.

Wires Cut, Says Gavira

General Gavira announced today that thew ires of the Northwestern Railway have been cut and gives that as an explanation why he has no direct news of the situation.

American officials are growing more and more suspicious of reports of occurrences in Mexico which come from Mexican sources, unless they are verified by General Pershing's wireless messages. For one thing, if the Mexicans northwestern wires have been cut it indicates that the Carranzistas have not been having it all their own way in the fighting around Namiquipa and Babicora, as they have reported.

Cavalry in Striking Distance

The only definite news that has been received concerning the American troops in the field is that General Pershing is still maintaining his base as Colonia Bublan, although his cavalry columns have pushed much further south than that. News has been anxiously awaited today of the first clash between American troops and Villa tand his bandits, but so far as can be learned the Americans have not fired a shot in action yet.

If the Mexican report is true that Villa is still engaged with Carranziastas in the neighborhood of Namiquipa there is no reason why the punitive expedition should not have got into the battle by now, as two of the cavalry columns were reported in striking distance last night. One was at Lake Babicora, the other at a point south of El Valle.

It is admitted by men whok now the country that if Villa is between Namiquipa and aMdera there is a chance of getting him, providing the Carranza force are able to harass him so that his retreat further south will be delayed. But there is very little confidence in the government troops, and the belief here is that Villa can slip through them whenever he pleases.

ARMY AVIATORS LOST IN MEXICO

Commander of Aero Squadron Reports Two Men Fail to Arrive at Base.

Columbus, N. M. Radio advises to Major W. R. Sample, commandant here, received today from Captain B. D. Foulois, at Casas Grandes, commanding the aero squadron, reported that Lieutenant Robert H. Willis and Lieutenant Edgar S. Gorrell, who left here last Sunday afternoon, each on an army aeroplane, had failed to arrive at the advanced base and that no reports of the missing men or their biplanes had been received.

Immediate instructions were issued to the driver of every motor truck leaving here to watch for traces of the missing men and their aeroplanes. It is believed also that some of the six aeroplanes which arrived safely at Casas Grandes are being employed in the search. The missing men face starvation. They have but two days' rations and two canteens of water.

The eight aeroplanes started from here late Sunday for the flight over 110 miles of desert and mountains through the Casas Grandes Valley to join the expeditionary force. Neither of the men was accompanied by a mechanician or by an observer, and soon after the flight began the two aeroplanes were detached from the others. Nothing has been heard from either since.

Tonight army men admitted that, with the two fliers forty-eight hours overdue at Casas Grandes, there is much concern for their safety. It was said, however, that the delay does not indicate necessarily that the aviators have met with serious accident. Members of the Aero Clubs clung to the hope that they may have encountered engine trouble and been forced to land for repairs in some unfrequented region.

It was shown that Lieutenant W. G. Kliner, who started with one of the planes Sunday, was forced to return here after flying but about a dozen miles over the Mexican border. After trifling repairs he again start and reached the advanced base safely. It also was declared that it is possible that in landing in the rocky region over which thye were to fly their planes might have been wrecked and that the two officers may now be struggling to make their way to some settlement.

Reports reaching here indicate that civilian scouts accompanying the punitive expedition were leading small detachments of cavalry into the wildest parts o fthe district in the search for the two lieutenants. Army men here said tonight that efforts would be made to expedite the search since the men carried only food enough for a few days and that both thi sand their water supply may have wrecked.

Considerable hope was based on the fact that both men are athletes and are well able to care for themselves in emergencies. Lieutenant Willis is twenty-six years old and was appointed to the army from South Carolina, while Lieutenant Gorrell is twenty-four and was appointed from Maryland. Both took part in the recent fiight or army planes from Fort Sill, Okla.

REINFORCEMENTS RUSH TO VILLA'S ASSISTANCE

Washington—Villa's forces in Mexico are being constantly augumented by well armed and equipped men, according to inforomation reaching Washington today. As a result the United States forces under General Pershinmg are now compelled to proceed cautiously. Army officers here no wsay there can be little doubt that the Villa campaigners will try to ambush his pursuers.

CIGAR FRAUD NET CLOSES ON MAKERS

New York—Through the efforts of the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States which began its crusade a month ago, forty-seven cigar manufacturers have been arrested in the last two days and more than one hundred will be taken into custody for alleged violation of internal revenue laws, by which the government lost possibly $200,000,000 in the last five years.

The Real Albanians.

South of Valona lies the only part of Albania where the people call themselves Albanians, or something like it. It is said, according to Sir Charles Eliot, that the names Arboeri and Arboerec are applied to this region and its inhabitants. The natives of the rest of the country know what is meant when Turks speak of Arnauts and Europeans of Albanians, but they do not use this name themselves, preferring to be called Shkyipetar, which means eagle men. Northern Albanians are also generally known as Ghegs, southern Albanians as Tosks, but these names are considered not quite complimentary.—London Telegraph

45-PHONE NEWS ITEMS-45

Thursday, March 23, 1916.

In an editorial leader under the caption "What Is to Be Defended?" the Indianapolis News sounds a timely warning against "compulsory universal military service in times of peace." After briefly reviewing some propositions looking to this end the News concludes: "We believe that the people are pretty generally convinced that it is their duty to strengthen their defenses—to strengthen them, indeed, considerably. But behind those defenses they will insist that the old America, the America of their love, shall continue to exist. For that is what they are going to prepare to defend. Among the things to be guarded are Magna Charta, the bill of rights, habeas corpus, the Declaration of Independence and the constitution. Without these and the spirit that breathes in them there would in truth be little to defend. We should never forget that institutions are of slight value unless they are enshrined in the affections of the people and supported by public opinion. If every man in the country were a trained soldier we should be absolutely safe from attack. But the nation would no longer be the America of the constitution and Declaration of Independence."

China bids fair to be a political wonder. Her troubles in the last 100 years have been enough to destroy the integrity of any nation lacking solid foundations. The Taiping rebellion, which was raging about the time of the civil war in this country, ravaged the whole length and breadth of the land, destroying lives, wealth and institutions of civilization. Since then there has been the war with England, war with Japan, the war against opium and against the Boxer rebels. To crown all the corrupt dynasty of the Manchus was overthrown by a tremendous political upheaval. The wonder is that there remain sufficient virility of conscience and patriotism to do the work of reconstructing an ancient civilization on modern lines. Whether the government shall be republican or monarchical is of small interest to the outside world so long as it is a government of progress.

The "greenback" currency which the Bankers' association ask to have retired from circulation and canceled dates from the civil war. The bills are demand notes payable in gold (or silver). There are now in use $346,681,010, the sum left when congress finally stopped their cancellation in 1878. Besides the "greenbacks" there are now five forms of paper money in circulation—gold certificates, silver certificates, treasury notes, national bank notes, federal reserve notes, besides miscellaneous notes in small amounts.

HOORAY! FASHION DAYS

In yesterday's issue of this newspaper the Chamber of Commerce announced, for the first time, the proposed cooperative effort to show the people of Fulton that here—right at home—they may see the latest creations in spring fashions. The Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated, the spirit of the merchants deserving the highest praise. May each one entering into the plan reap a harvest—if not in dollars and cents, then in something better than financial return, which is, and should be for all time—a broader way of transacting business.

It is not well that we should at all times look too closely at the dollar sign. We must look beyond it for development. When the heel of a shoe becomes worn it must be built up—layer upon layer—until it is time to nail on the last or finishing piece of leather. This city has been found in a run down condition. The Symphony Orchestra and Spring Fashion Week are the layers that will, with other features yet to come, produce the finished article, because they impressively teach us lessons in cooperation. They teach us what a community can do for a common purpose, and if ever a town stood in need of the lesson, Fulton is that town.

It is hardly to be expected that the coming Spring Fashion Week will actually add dollars to the merchants' bank accounts, but no matter whether they do or do not reap a harvest they will find by working in harmony for the success of the venture that they can make anything possible in Fulton—and that is worth learning all about.

Celebrations of the same nature in other places have been made successful; they have been the means of solving the buy-at-home problem; they have been the concrete suggestion in keeping the shoppers at home; but never in the history of such events has one succeeded without the aid of publicity. Publicity is the need of merchants in a majority of the small cities of the country. In that respect few merchants are on the right track. They are learning their lesson but they do not keep up with the advertising departments of the big city stores and the mail order houses.

Bargain days and fashion days call for the use of big guns in business, and right here is where the newspapers afford the one necessary medium for publicity to make a city, from a mercantile viewpoint, what it should be. Big city stores succeed in having big days, and consequently those same days are small days in the small city stores.

Beat the devil at his game, should be the watchword of the small city merchant. It can be done by using the newspapers as the big guns, but the merchants must furnish the ammunition. It must be a case of concerted advertising with a definite object in view; all for one and one for all.

One-day-a-week advertising is the bane of all newspapers and the merchants as well—that is, if they only knew it. Nine out of ten merchants advertise to get Saturday trade, neglecting the other five days of the week; but the big city brother has different ideas on the subject; he advertises to get trade five days of the six, leaving Saturday to take care of itself.

Fulton has its mercantile problem, too, which cannot be solved unless five days of the week are turned into big days. It means greater and better stores. It means holding home trade. It means bigger and better newspapers. It means a greater and better city—a city of 25,000 in 1920.

And now we say to the merchants of Fulton, advertise and have plenty to advertise for the coming Fashion Days. Advertise altogether, each seeking profit for himself—not necessarily in hard cash, but making the profit of today and the dividend for yourself subservient to the permanent prosperity of your city.

It's comforting to know that there is a place for old rags. Some of us may have to hang to them—wearing them for some time to come, unless by cooperation in city building, business conditions are made to pick up a bit. In the main the holler is coming from Washington, and is the same old holler in the same old way, for it's any rags, any bottles, any bones today.

A REWARD FOR ADVERTISING

Business relations made with newcomers through advertising usually prove permanent. The man who advertises realizes the necessity of making good promises he puts into print. He gets the cream of the new trade, and wins the friendship of new people, who to less enterprising merchants remain strangers. — Ithaca Journal.

THE PEOPLE'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

Senator Mills in his income tax speech before the Utica Chamber of Commerce stated that it isn't the useless jobs, but rather the system of extravagance which has been inaugurated by the popular vote, which has caused the enormous leap in the cost of government in the State.

This is the usual excuse offered by those who either enjoy governmental waste, or are responsible for it. In their minds, if there is any blame at all, it always rests somewhere else. And almost at this same moment we are confronted by a confession that $1,500,000 might be saved the State by doing away with useless jobs. We think a very much larger sum might be saved—probably twice this sum.

The fact remains that the Legislature and the administration officers have a tremendous power, and to say that they habitually misuse it to the great cost of the taxpayers is to express the most trite of facts.

Useless jobs are only a part of the waste. The slack methods of doing business, the fat contracts, the needless expenses, extra allowances, and the utter negligence with which many State officials do their work no doubt creates a loss which exceeds the needless salaries. There isn't any dodging the fact that millions are spent where they should not be spent, and that it is in the power of the Legislature and the administrative officials to stop up theb ung hole. Instead of doing this they are all the time chopping it wider open.

The people want the good roads. They voted for the canal. But they didn't vote for the extravagance in constructing these things. They did not rig up the provision by which the interest on bonds will exceed the cost of the construction, or by which the interest will go forward long after the improvement has been worn out. It is true that they passed on the bond issues, but what they were really voting for was whether or not there should be good roads and a canal. They could not be expected to pass an opinion on the sort of bonds that should be issued, when that was not the question. They had a right to expect that their learned representatives at Albany would see to it that an economical bonding method and not the most expensive one, would be framed.

The people do not object to improvements, they want an dhave a right to them, but they do not like to be taken advantage of just as soon as they have authorized an undertaking. They do not enjoy paying $2 for $1 worth of work, and that is the root of the complaint against their representatives.

The truth is that the Legislature and the administration do not measure up to the job, and they seldom, if ever have. They are keen only when they deal with patronage, and then they are unanimously interested. They are happy when they wallow in the people's money, most of it hard earned and needed whence it was taken.

The big job of the Legislature is not to secure an elastic source of wealth for more plunder. If that body is up against a wall for more money, it is probably a happy condition for the taxpayers. The great work of the Legislature is to get down to bed rock efficiency in State government, the thing that is promised in every campaign. Are there any men big enough, capable and courageous enough to go about the State speaking to public organizations and the people in favor of such a desirable end?— Utica Observer.

"NO THANK YOU" TO DECREASE DRINKING

We recently printed elsewhere a very interesting letter from the "No Thank You" League, of Sacramento, Cal.

The chairman of this league is Alden Anderson, a banker and man of affairs, who is highly esteemed in his State. The other members of the executive committee are men of excellent repute in private and business life.

The members of the "No Thank You" League simply pledge themselves "not to take an intoxicating drink in a saloon at another's invitation or expense. Then each member wears a "No Thank You" button, and that is all there is to it. No dues, no expenses, no lodge meetings.

We think the idea is excellently good. We believe that a general cessation of the treating habit would soon put an end to saloon drinking and would greatly decrease the habit of drinking strong alcoholic liquors.

The American has ideas and plans of its own, but it is not narrow enough to decry other plans and means of promoting temperance. It welcomes all suggestions and all means of decreasing the evil of excessive drinking.

We think every community should have a "No Thank You" League. Why not start one in your community? Write to the "No Thank You" League at Sacramento, California, and get information about the way they started and what they have accomplished.—N. Y. American.

BOOSTER vs. KNOCKER

The Watertown Standard, in a recent issue, contained the following description of two articles contending for supremacy in Fulton:

"When the Creator had made all the good things, there was still some dirty work to do, so He made the beasts and reptiles and poisonous insects, and when He had finished, He had some scraps that were too bad to put into the rattlesnake, the hyena, the scorpion, and the skunk, so He put all these together, covered it with suspicion, wrapped it with jealousy, marked it with a yellow streak and called it a knocker.

"This product was so fearful to contemplate that Hee had to make something to counteract it, so he took a sunbeam and put it in the heart of a child, the brain of a man, wrapped these in civic pride, covered it with brotherly love, gave it a mask of velvet and a grasp of steel and called it a booster, made him a lover of fields and flowers and manly sports, a believer in equality and justice, and ever since these two were, mortal man has had the privilege of choosing his associates."

Prange Left Family to Seek a Fortune In the West.

FALL INJURED HIS MEMORY

On Recovering He Was Ashamed to Write, but Prospered and at Last Decided to Return—Found Wife and Two Grown Children—Happy Family Reunion Results.

Frederick C. Prange was reunited with his family at Stamford, Conn., the other day after having been given up as dead for twenty-three years. When he went away he was poor. He comes back rich and with a story as strange as a moving picture scenario.

Prange was in business in a small way in Stamford in 1893. He had lived there all his life and was well known and highly respected. Prange lived with his wife and two children—Elita, eighteen, and Charles, twenty—at that time in a comfortable home.

In the fall of that year the wanderlust seized him. He believed a fortune awaited him in the west. Finally he answered the call, telling his family that he would communicate with them later.

Months passed and they heard nothing. The months lengthened into years, and still no tidings came. Advertisements were inserted in newspapers all over the country without avail. Then the conclusion was forced upon the family that Prange was dead. He was mourned as such.

Suffered Partial Aphasia.

Meantime Prange was encountering strange experiences. He went first to Chicago, then to Denver. In Colorado he became interested in gold mining and started to prospect. He was so engrossed in his surroundings that he forgot to write home.

One day while riding along a lonely trail his horse stumbled and threw him on his head. For weeks he was in a hospital with brain fever. When he finally emerged he suffered from partial aphasia. His mind for months was a blank.

It was a long time before Prange fully recovered. Then, ashamed to write home, he plunged farther into the west. He took up mining in California and prospered.

Within the past few years his activities have centered about Los Angeles, where he made a fortune. Still he delayed writing to his family. He believed his wife and children dead. Then came a longing to know. He decided to go east.

Prange arrived in New York. So sure was he that his family was dead that he went at once to the family burying plot in the Hackensack (N. J.) cemetery. No new graves were there. He then visited a brother-in-law, William Huyler, in New York and from him learned that his wife and children were still in Stamford. The daughter is Mrs. Henry J. Flick, wife of a photographer there. She now has a daughter as old as was Prange's daughter when he went away. The son is Dr. Charles Prange, a prosperous dentist.

The wife, son and daughter were communicated with, and all three hurried to New York. Prange met them, and the reunited family went to Stamford.

Prange is sixty-nine years old, and his hair is white. He proposes to dispose of all his interests in California and will spend the remainder of his days in Stamford, which he left so long ago.

KENTUCKY COLONELS.

In the Nature of Things They Simply Can't Help Being Numerous.

In the south especially and in Kentucky more especially a man becomes a colonel at about forty-seven unless he is of a willful, rebellious, obstreperous disposition and inclined to stand up for an admitted but rarely exercised right not to become known as "colonel." A man who is not sudden and quick in quarrels and who can be put upon cannot escape becoming "colonel." Many men whose courage is unquestioned prefer not to engage in street fights in opposition to an established custom. It is the rule rather than the exception to submit good naturedly or with concealed impatience when the first three gray hairs appear at the temples and the use of the title begins by popular consent.

There are, of course, many colonels under forty. When a governor is inaugurated he has the power to appoint staff colonels. A governor who does not appoint as colonels such of his constituents as he knows by name is lacking in the punctiliousness which distinguishes the practical politician. Thus many young men who would have been "leftenants" if they had adopted a military career are made colonels in civil life. Another predisposing cause of premature colonelcy is the tendency of some men to become fat early in life. A man who measures as much as forty inches at the waist line and has not been convicted of felony is entitled even obliged, to be called "colonel" before he is forty.—Louisville Courier Journal.

USED TIPS TO MAKE FORTUNE

Checkroom Boy Saved Money and Invested In Real Estate.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Charles S. Bergquist was seventeen years old when he began his business career. He was a polite and accommodating checkroom boy at the Minneapolis club for five years, and all tips and money he saved went into the nest egg. He told his mother he was buying real estate, and she chided him for undertaking anything of the kind at his age. Thereafter he said nothing about it but went on buying.

He died suddenly when he was twenty-three years old as the result of an accident. Four months ago friends of his began relating stories of property he had bought. His mother began a search at once. She found he had several lots in the city and forty acres of land near Sandy lake. She is seeking further information about his land and trying to locate the bank in which he had an account.

GIBBON'S WILL CASE SETTLED

Columbia Mills Employe Sues to Recover $10,000 for Loss of Eye.

Oswego—A settlement in the Gibbons will contest was reached here yesterday afternoon and Judge Devendorf directed that the jury be discharged and that the proceedings go back to Surrogate's Court, where the will will be admitted to probate and letters granted to Edward Moore, of Syracuse, named as executor.

The terms of the settlement were not disclosed but it was said that all specific bequests would be paid. The residue of the estate was left to Edward A. Moore ,as executor, to distribute amony such charities as he might select. Mr. Moore is a lawyear in Syracuse and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Sheridan, it was brought out in the evidence, was a friend of the decedent.

None of the attorney's would admit the terms of the settlement. Mr. Moore, the executor, admitted that the specific bequests would be paid as provided in the will.

The exact amount of the residuary estate has not been disclosed but it is estimated at $40,000. If it has been decided to distribute the residue among the six nephews of nieces, who are the collateral heirs, each would receive approximately $6,000. It is understood that Mr. Moore will continue to act as executor and administer the estate. The next step in the case will be to formally prove the will in Surrogate's Court. Then the estate will be appraised and the usual formalities of Surrogate's procedure carried out.

The case was started yesterday morning on the questions submitted by Surrogate Miller as to whether Miss Gibbons was competent to make a will and also to whether undue influence had been used. Mrs. J. T. Hopkins and Mrs. Anna Kilbourn, both of Fulton, and witnesses to the will, were the only witnesses called by the proponent. The contestants opened their case by moving to instruct a verdict for their side but decision was deferred. Mrs. Mae Coles, a graduate nurse, was called as the first witness for the contestants just before adjournment yesterday afternoon.

Slander Case Dismissed

The case of John L. McCormack vs. George N. White, for alleged slander, was dismissed this afternoon on motion of D. P. Morehouse ,attorney for the defendant. Mr. White is a clergyman, whose home is in Scriba. On the previous trial in October last, the case was ordered over the term on payment of costs. These were not paid in the specified time and the complaint was dismissed.

Justice Devendorf held the court in recess until two o'clock in the noon and in the meantime the attorneys had a chance to get their bearings. The case on trial is that of John DcDonald vs. The Columbia Mills, Inc., to recover $10,000 damages for loss of an eye in an accident at the Minetto plant, May 14, 1914. The accident occurred two months before the compensation law took effect. Mr. MacDonald was employed in opening barrels, using a hammer and chisel. He alleges that a splinter frfom the chisel struck him in the left eye, destroying the sight. The action for damages has been started under the common law as the labor law was not then in effect. L. W. Baker of this city is attorney for the plaintiff. Gannon, Spencer and Mitchell defend.

The case is somewhat similar to the action of William Kline vs. the city of Oswego for the loss of an eye injured in a similar manner. That case was brought under the labor law. A verdict of $2,400 was returned.

ELKS AND MASONS STIRRED BY NEW BILL

Masonic and Elk interests are aroused because of the Assembly bill, which has passed third reading, providing that property owned by the Y. M. C. A. and the two fraternal orders be taxed in the future.

The bill was introduced by Senator G. A. Slater, of Westchester county, who says he wants to add some taxable property to the rolls in his district.

The measure would put back on the tax rolls the Elk and Masonic holdings, which were recently exempted. while a large number of semi-religious societies all over the State ,would also be hit. It is said that the Rockefeller Foundation might come within the provisions of the bill.

NOTICE TO LEADERS OF PRAYER MEETINGS

Some leaders have asked for topics. The six following subjects are therefore suggested for the six meetings in the order named.

1. "Divine Appointment of Revivals," Joel 2:28; Ezekel 37.
2. "Instruments in a Revival." Amos 1:1-5; Amos 6:1; I Kings 17:1-7; Eph. 4:1-16.
3. 'How Much Shall We get Out of the Campaign?" II Kings 4: 1-17.
4. "Prayer and Promise," Matt 7:7-11.
5. "The Gift of Salvation," Luke 19: 1-10.
6. "Pentecostal Prayer," Acts 4: 31-35.

These topics are not mandatory, nor even advisory. They are simply suggested for such leaders as desire to use them. It is also suggested that the topic be used for the particular night that is that No. 5 for example be used for the fifth prayer-meeting, otherwise two different leaders might use the some topic on two successive nights in the same district.

HUGH CHALMERS GIVES AN ADVERTISING LESSON

Hugh Chalmers, president of the motor car company, which bears his name and the man who once threw down a $60,000 a year job, because he knew he was worth more, wrote an address on advertising some months ago. Some of the paragraphs which it contained are the following:

"Every now and then I run across the man who 'doesn't believe in advertising'—one who says 'advertised goods costs more.'

"As a general rule—while he says that he at least is not influenced by advertising—he has on an advertised collar and advertised shoes; he shaves with advertised soap and an advertised razor. He reads advertised books —and goes to an advertised theatre. And if he smokes—it's an advertised tobacco.

"Every time I meet him I'm genuinely sorry for him, as I am sorry for the man who doesn't believe in the telephones. (For such men still exist)."

20 CENT GAS IS PREDICTED

Even though no iron-clad agreement exists, both the Standard Oil Company representatives in this section of the State, and representatives of the independent companies operating in the wholesale trade, are practically assured of at least one thing —that autoists have little cause to worry about the price of gas the com ing season. News is gradually seaping hrough the right channels that gasoline will not retail for more than twenty cents a gallon, and that during the months of greatest consumption, July and August, it will probably be eighteen cents.

The automobilist having a 100 or 200 gallon tank at his garage will be assured of getting his power at just as low a figure as the retailers are paying, it was stated today.

This statement, made today in regard to the price of gasoline for the coming summer is the most satisfactory and opimistic that has come to the ears of owners of automobiles. That the present prices will not obtain was stated.

At the present time few cars outside of the small number of public vehicles, are being used in this part of the state, but after the snow disappears and the warm weather of spring comes it is said that the consumption of gasoline by the owners of pleasure cars will begin to jump at the price will correspondingly decrease.

HARD COAL MEN ASK FOR HEARING

Wilkes Barre, Pa.— Business men from throughout the anthracite field gathered today and decided the public's side must be given proper recognition by operators and mine workers in the preparation of a new working agreement for the hard coal fields. This step is unprecedented.

The anthracite business men object to a new agreement of two years duration; they insist on a much longer period—anywhere from six to ten years. With an agreement of but two years, as the miners demand, business men claim their interests would be almost perpetually unsettled.

TEXTILE LEADERS ARE AMAZED AT PROSPERITY

New York—Operations in the textile world have been so enormous and grown so rapidly in recent months that many manufacturers and merchants are frightened. Their world has suddenly grown too large for their comprehension by the standards of the past: Houses htat ponder ed long on annual orders of $100,000 have been compelled to order $200,000 in goods twice within a year. Superstitious ones in the textile world are wishing for some little stroke of ill luck because they are afraid that the present tide of good times must have some current of disaster in it.

One billion dollars a year is the amount of the textile trade in the United States. Leaders in its various branches yesterday united in declaring that never in the history of the world have raw materials for their business been so low and so high in price in so short periods. They were unanimous in describing as the man in greatest danger any manufactureer who commits his producing plants and his credit now to fulfilment of advance orders at a fixed price. They declared that stocks have been swept away in their entirety by the enormous buying power, that the manufacturing plants working at utmost capacity are unable to meet current demands and that these demands are growing over night in every line of textiles.

STEVENSON BOOMED AS EXALTED RULER

Unless all signs fail of realization Fulton's "dandy" Elk. John W. Stevenson, will be boomed by the New York State delegation at the Baltimore convention, in July, as Grand Exalted Ruler of the order. The Palladium says in part regarding Mr. Stevenson's candidacy as follows:

"Mr. Stevenson has been prominent in Elkdom for many years and has attended every State and national convention for a long time. It was at the Denver national convention several years ago that he purchased the big Elk which adorned the streets of Fulton during one of their big carnivals.

"The Grand Lodge meeting will be held in Baltimore July 8th, 9th and 10th and the Oswego delegates, C. H. Glynn and Professor Frank Schilling will lend their hearty support to Mr. Stevenson's candidacy."

For The Small Girl.

Little girl's frock of white crepe meteor, trimmed with smocking done in blue. Shirring makes an equally smart trimming.

The supply of dainty frocks for little tots is remarkable, and among them one notices many quaint models in silk, crepe de chine and crepe meteor, all, however, of washable variety. A dainty model is shown here, made with the front and back yoke cut in one. The distinguishing feature of the dress is the smocking which trims it. In medium size it requires 2⅜ yards of 36-inch material.

There are eight pieces to the pattern and it is necessary to fold the material in half so that each piece will be cut in duplicate. The front is placed on the lengthwise fold, as shown on the cutting guide (A), and to the right of it is laid the back (B). Next come the yoke and collar.

On the second row are placed the lap, the pocket and the sleeve, all on a lengthwise fold. For the open neck, cut out the neck edge of the yoke ⅝ inch above small "o" perforations. Many mothers prefer the high neck, however, with straight collar, in which case a double row of buttons may be added to the decorative scheme, being sewn directly down the front.

The smocking is a simple design and works up very quickly. Threads of contrasting color may be used for the work, for instance, white on a blue or pink ground, and vice versa.

There is a plait at either side of the back of the dress and between this are several rows of smocking.

Shirring may take the place of smocking and is also very fashionable.

Waists Now Close at the Side.

Shirt waist of crepe meteor, closing at the side. It is trimmed with self-buttons and a four-in-hand of taffeta.

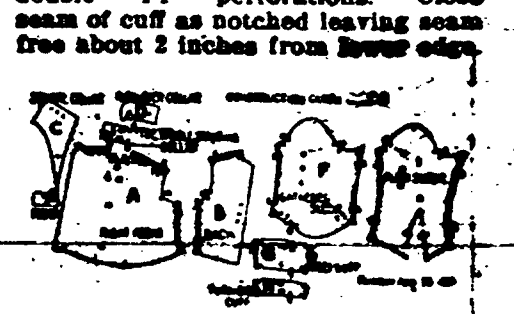
Nothing short of an index system will keep one posted on the changes in separate waists. Each innovation seems to find a ready welcome, however. Here is a new design in crepe meteor, distinguished by its method of adjustment. The side closing gives free play to front decoration and one easily can imagine how effective embroidery would be on a waist of batiste or linen. In medium size the model calls for 2¾ yards 36-inch material.

The priminary step in the construction of the waist is to gather the shoulder edges of the front between double "TT" perforations Then close the underarm and shoulder seams and hem at left front edge of right front at notches. Stitch a tape underneath the gathers at left shoulder edge of right front drawing gathers tto the required size. Center-front is indicated by large "O" perforations in right front.

Adjust pockets to position on right front, upper edge of pockets between the 2 small "o" perforations.

Sew collar to neck edge, center upper edge of pockets between the 2 backs even and on right front along small "o" perforations, single large "O" perforations even: leave the left side of the collar free from shoulder seam to lower front edge of collar and bind the edge.

Close the sleeve seam as notched and gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Close seam of cuff as notched leaving seam free about 2 inches from lower edge.



Sew to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation in cuff to seam of sleeve and bring the seam of cuff to small "o" perforation in sleeve. Sew turn over to cuff as notched. Sew sleeve in armhole, notches and small "o" perforations even, easing in any fulness.

Self-covered buttons and a four-in-hand of taffeta are details that count for smartness of decoration.

SENATOR BROWN HEADS "BIG FOUR" DELEGATION

Albany, N. Y. —Senator Elon R. Brown will head the Republican delegates at large to the national convention as the outcome of drawings for position made at the office of Secretary of State Hugo this morning. Garry Farrell, well known in Watertown, was present at the drawing as the representative of Senator Brown. James W. Wadsworth of Mt. Morris was the second name to be drawn, while Frederick C. Tanner of New York was third and Governor Charles S. Whitman was fourth and last. The outcome of the drawing was awaited with considerable interest many being present at Secretary Hugo's office while it wa sin progress.

Each of the four delegates were represented, Secretary William Orr representing the governor, Assemblyman Marsh looking after Mr. Tanner's interest, Walter Mose representing Mr. Wadsworth.

Democrat: William Church Osborne, chairman of the state committee United States Senator James A. O'Gorman, Samuel Untermeir, of New York, and George J. Meyer, of Buffalo.

College boys and college girls will be in attendance and give their yells and class songs. During the school session an interesting program will be given by the various "districts" and guests of honor. The district school sextette and glee club, from school number 23, wil render several selections during the program.

The ladies and "school girls" will bring a lunch for two, either in dinner pails or boxes, which later in the evening will be sold to the highest bidders.

THEY WERE MARRIED IN SPITE OF MISHAP

Miss Florenoe May Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Gillespie, of the Whitaker road, was married to Ralph D. Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pierce of the East River road, at six o'clock last night at the home of her parents.

Rev. C. S. Robertson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. The couple were attended by Miss Florence Moody and Harold Pierce. A dinner was served following the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce left for a honeymoon trip to New York. Upon their return they will reside on the East River road, North.

On their way to obtain the marriage license yesterday, the cutter in which they were riding, overturned in 1st st., near the City Hall, but neither was hurt.

Washington Stirred By News of Flopping of Carranza's Men

Washington—After a conference with President Wilson, Secretary Baker made official announcement he had received word from General Funston that Luis Herrera, with 2,000 Carranza troops, had gone over to Villa.

General Funston's information came from General Bell, at Fort Bliss.

Army officers regard the news of the defection of the Governor of Chilhuahua as an extremely grave development in the Mexican situation. The opinion was expressed that it reveals the real design of Villa when he crossed the border and attacked Columbus, N. M. The view is held quite generally in Washington that Villa had arranged with Herrera for cooperation before he crossed the border, and the entire affair has happened as he planned it.

In unofficial Mexican circles in Washington—at least, in these opposed to Carranza—the opinion is held that the action of Herrera is an important indication of Carranza Government is crumbling and that it will undoubtedly force actual interveention by the United States.

One of the high ranking officials of the War Department has said the action of Governor Herrera at Chihauhau means the rallying of hundreds, if not thousands, to the Villa standard, and that the initiative taken by Chilhauhau probably will be followed by most if not all, the states of Northern Mexico.

In the event of wholesale defection, it was pointed out, it will be necessary for the United States to employ at once the entire army, including the coast artillery, which would be used as infantry.

The possibility of such need has already revived talk of calling out the militia. In military circles the opionion was expressed that it is not at all unlikely the national guard will be called upon very soon for service.

HERRARA'S MEN JOIN VILLA; AGITATORS ACTIVE

El Paso, Texas—Street car service into Mexico is discontinued by order of the military. All persons are refused permission to cross the International Bridge. While the rumor that the Juraz garrison is about to go over to Villa is persistent, there has not been a sound of any disorder or rioting in that city.

Melchor Herrera, a brother of Luis Herrera, and sivx other Mexicans, some of them reported to be a brother of the Villa General Cardenas, were arrested here tonight charged with conspiracy to bring about the murder of American citizens. Herrera has been watched by Department of Justice men for weeks. He is one of the leading Mexican "I. W. W." workers, but the government agents could get no evidence against him. He crossed the river to Juarez and was in consultation with eneral Gavira for more than an hour. When he returned the police placed him under arrest. The other six prisoners are followers of Herrera and charged with conspiracy to bring about an attack on El Paso and then plunder the town.

General Gavira has made no statement since the news of the Herrera deflection became known, but Andreas Garcia, the Carranza Consul here, issued a frantic denial of the whole story last night. No one has paid any attention to the Garcia denial.

Confirmation of ther evolt accounts will prove the Carranza reports of the gallant fight Calonel Cono and his column from Mawera were putting up against Villa to have been absolute fictions, as they were suspected of beinng. Long before the American advance got past Colonia Dublan, Cano and Villa had met and joined forces, according to the information that reached here tonight.

The uprising report is taken as Herrera's answer to the order of Carranza supplanting him with General Luis Guiterrez and giving American soldiers permission to enter Mexico in pursuit of Villa.

The Mexicans here and in Juarez are in an ugly, sullen mood They have been agitated to the danger point by socialists, "I. W. W." agents and by Villa sympathizers, who have magnified the punitive expedition into their country.

PRISON-MADE SIGNS WANTED

Utica—Let the boys at Sing Sing make the number plates for the automobiles each year,' says Secretary George C. Donahue, of the New York State Motor Federation, and in this way the State of New ork will save money which can be used to supply the deficit in the maintenance fund for state highways each year. The automobilists are surely responsible for the passing of the two fifty million dollar bond issues; the automobilists are the people who brought the improved highways, and the automobiles are the ones who are maintaining these highways each year. And money can be saved the state if the yearly contract for making license plates is given to the Superintendent of Prisons. Such work would be appreciated by the prisoners and would cost probably fifty per cent less than at present.

Machinery to do this work could be purchased right away and while the initial cost would be high, the plates to be issued every year henceforth would be cheaper to the state and no doubt better quality would be furnished. The New York State Motor Federation members alone would use over ten thousand of these plates, thus paying into the State Treasury an average of $75,000 annually for fees.

LOAN ASSOCIATIONS GROWING IN STRENGTH

The 251 savings and loan associations in New York state had on January 1, 1916, total resources of nearly $72,500,000, an increase for the year of tapproximately $4,000,000.

"Six new associations were organized during the year," says State Superintendent of Banks Richards in his report just issued, " and only one discontinued business. The total membership of the associations was 179,380 an increase of 7,133. Their total payments to their own members during the year amounted to over $17,000,000 or considerably more than one-fourth of their total resources at the beginning of the year.

"When it is remembered that these associations are not required to maintain a cash reserve and keep their funds closely invested, this showing is rather remarkable. The surplus of all associations, including the so-called nationals, was $3,191,508. The total earnings, were $3,477,842. The operating expenses amounted to $435,526."

W. J. REJECTS $150,000 TO LECTURRE SOME

Lincoln, Neb.—William J. Bryan is sacrificing $150,000 offered him by a Chautauqua lecture bureau for a series of lectures beginning in April, to remain in Nebraska and campaign for prohibition and his brother, Charles W. Bryan, Mayor of Lincoln, it became known here today. Charles W. Bryan is candidate for Governor.

Mr. Bryan declined to accept the offer and refused to discuss it. He intimated, however, he believed the bureau which extended the offer was financed by the liquor interests.

RELATIVES IN LAW.

A Little Advice That May Help to Make Things Pleasant.

If I were giving counsel to the husband and wife who would make each other happy and hold each other's love I would suggest that neither call the attention of the other to the disagreeable qualities of the family of either.

"My husband loves my people as if they were his own," a wife told me. "It makes me so happy!"

I doubt if he did love her people very dearly, but he overlooked those characteristics which a more selfish man would have resented. If it was what a schoolboy would call a "bluff" it was a gloriously unselfish one.

Most of us can stand the tempers and idiosyncrasies of our own when we alone have to bear them. It is when we see them through the eyes of a third person that they become unendurable. That is perhaps one reason why so few roofs are large enough to cover two families.

If each "in-law" exercised toward the members of the household into which he or she married the same pardoning love that is exercised toward one's own the aspersions cast upon the mother-in-law would die a natural death because they would have nothing on which to feed. Virginia Terhune Van de Water in Mother's Magazine.

WHIRLIGIG BEETLES.

These Four Eyed, Six Legged Creatures Are Expert Swimmers.

More than likely you have watched him skating in "figures 8's" and all sorts of elaborate designs in quiet pools along a stream or on the edge of a lake. He will turn this way and that, describing one graceful curve after another, and then dart off in a straight line when he's frightened. He's speedy, as well as graceful. He's the whirligig beetle.

He has six legs, two longer ones in front and two pairs of short, flat paddles behind. These paddles make him an expert swimmer. His front legs, stretched out, look like arms.

Nature was also generous in giving him two pairs of eyes. With one pair he looks at objects on top of the water, and with the other pair he keeps watch for preying fish below.

There are something less than 300 species of whirligig beetles and they're scattered in all parts of the world. All summer you'll see their shiny bodies skating in spiral tracks and in curves on the surface of pools and sluggish streams.—Philadelphia North American.

Choate and the Green Bag.

Very few of our lawyers carry the green bags which were once a badge of that profession.

"I think the sight of such a bag once kept Joseph H. Choate from coming to Philadelphia to make a speech," Mr. Conlen said.

Mr. Conlen and another lawyer had gone to New York to invite the ex-ambassador to England to deliver an address in Philadelphia. Mr. Conlen's companion carried a green bag, which he laid upon Mr. Choate's table, evidently to the great lawyer's annoyance.

"What do you carry in that thing?" he asked.

"I have some law books," the young Philadelphia attorney replied.

"When I was a young lawyer," Mr. Choate said rather coldly, "I was taught to carry my law in my head."

And the invitation was declined.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Carved by Newton.

In the Newton chapel of the church at Colsterworth, in Lincolnshire, England, where Sir Isaac Newton was born, is to be seen one of the most interesting relics of the greatest of philosophers. It consists of a sundial and was carved by Newton when he was a boy on a stone in the house in which he was born, his only tool being a penknife. There it remained for many years until removed to Colsterworth church. Unfortunately the organ has been built directly in front of this interesting relic, so that unless one knows of the stone's existence and its presence in the church it is overlooked.

Nelson's Message.

In a book called "National Humor" a serious footnote states that Nelson's celebrated message, "England expects each man to do his duty," was phrased by the famous admiral as "Nelson expects," etc., and that one of his officers suggested the change of the first word to "England." Nelson's greatness was evident in his immediate acceptance of the change. A smaller man would have felt insulted at the proposed elimination of his own name.

It Sounded Big.

"She talks at different times of 'my maid,' 'my cook' and 'my laundress,'" said the woman with the mackinaw.

"Has she actually so many servants?"

"No," said the accompanying male person. "She means that her hired girl is a lightning change artist."—Detroit Saturday Night.

Extreme Ennui.

"I fear hers is a hopeless case. She's tired of everything."

"Everything?"

"Yes; even of going to the doctor."—Kansas City Journal.

Cured.

"Bacon lost a lot of money in a big sugar deal. That cured him of speculation."

"Sugar cured, so to speak."—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Bowser's Bombs

He Decides Not to Avoid Them

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Bowser had to go over to the family drug store after dinner, and when he came back half an hour later he was laboring under great excitement.

"Has any one tried to hold you up?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Worse than that," he replied. "Mrs Bowser, have we got a couple of cots in the house?"

"Cots, cots?" she repeated. "What on earth do you want with a couple of cots? I think there may be a couple in the storeroom."

"Mrs. Bowser," answered Mr. Bowser in impressive tones as he held up a warning finger, "we are in direct peril, and we must dodge it if we can. I want those cots to put down cellar. We shall sleep down there tonight and probably for many nights to come!"

"What is this?" she demanded, as she turned on him. "Did the druggist spin you a yarn that has got you half scared to death?"

"Mrs. Bowser, it is not the time for such talk. The druggist has spun me no yarn. He is not the man to spin yarns in the face of peril. There were eight men in the store, and they were agreed with me that it was a situation full of the direst menace. I want those cots at once!"

HE CAME DOWN WITH IT ON HIS HEAD.

As he started to go upstairs Mrs Bowser caught him and pushed him into a chair, and, holding him there she said:

"You have evidently heard something that threatens me as well as you. I want to know what it is before you go any further. You talk about cots and sleeping down cellar, and I want to know what such bosh means."

Mr. Bowser gulped three or four times and then explained:

"Mrs. Bowser, you know what a Zeppelin is, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"And you know what a bomb is?"

"I do, and what of it?"

"This of it!" he exclaimed in irritation. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city within the last hour. Thousands of people have been alarmed, and there are great crowds in the streets."

"I don't see what there is to be scared about," said Mrs. Bowser. "If a Zeppelin is hovering over the city let her hover the same as we would let a crow hover."

"Zounds, woman! Can't you understand that a Zeppelin is probably here to drop bombs down on us? And that is the peril I referred to!"

"Nobody knows that that is her object. And suppose it was. Suppose she dropped a hundred bombs as she flew over the city. At least ninety of those bombs would fall into the streets and do no damage. Nine more would fall into the back yards and, like enough, destroy the clotheslines, and the other one might fall on a barn and demolish a horse. I don't see why you should get excited about that. I'm sure I shan't."

Mr. Bowser said no more. He was so mad he couldn't talk. He rushed up to the storeroom and there found an old cot with a broken leg. He came downstairs with it on his head and disappeared down cellar. When he came up again, puffing and blowing, he found Mrs. Bowser calmly reading the evening papers, and she looked up to ask:

"If you fear the house will be struck with a bomb during the night why don't you go to a brewery vault somewhere? They are so deep under ground that no missile can reach you."

It was amazing that Mr. Bowser did not jump up and down and wave his arms about, but he didn't. He brushed a cobweb out of his hair and sat down and quietly said:

"Mrs. Bowser, let me explain the situation, for I see that you don't understand it. A bomb from a Zeppelin will penetrate the roof of a house and go through to the first floor. There it stops to explode and to make the awfulest racket you ever heard. One in the cellar is safe, but nowhere else in the house. Therefore I propose to sleep down cellar."

"And I don't," she replied.

"Then you can get busted into so many fragments that it would take a police force a week to pick them all up up! Woman, I can't understand you, and I won't try to understand you. From this time on I sleep down cellar. You can sleep up here or sit on the front steps all night long."

"It is because I have a better plan than you have, Mr. Bowser," she explained after a minute's silence. "I have thought of this Zeppelin matter for the last fortnight and planned out what to do or what to have you do in case things come to a climax. Your coming home from the store the way you did, with your hair standing up and your eyes bulging out, was no surprise to me."

"Mrs. Bowser, this is no time for insults!" he warned her.

"And no one is using them," she answered. "A Zeppelin has been seen hovering over the city. No one knows what she wants, but all suspect that she is going to drop bombs. She may drop one on this house, but if she does it will be by mistake. Mr. Bowser, you are a well known character. You have won your way up the ladder of fame. You have never said or done anything that Mrs. Zeppelin could take umbrage at. I don't think she would willingly harm a hair of your head."

"Woman, what does this talk mean?" was demanded.

"Don't be impatient, Mr. Bowser. You are to go out on the streets and watch with the rest of the crowds. If that Zeppelin every one is talking of has got tired of hovering she will fly around for a change. You will see her flying this way and that and dropping those terrible bombs as she does so. By and by, as you watch with mouth agape, you will see her head in the direction of our house. She has one bomb left, and that may be for us. When she comes near enough you will hold up your hand and shout:

"Ho, there, Mrs. Zeppelin, starboard your helm! You're headed for Bowser's house. Sheer off to the left a rod or two more and drop your old bombs on the butcher shop."

"They will hear you aboard that craft," continued Mrs. Bowser, "and it will swerve from its course, and when the bomb drops it will strike plumb on the butcher shop, and the butcher will never send us any more bones. I will help you on with your overcoat and muffle you up, and you go right out and be ready for the crisis."

"Woman, I am tempted to say that you ought to be blown up," said Mr. Bowser as he walked to and fro. "You would be sarcastic with your feet on the edge of your grave. As I cannot convince you of this great peril, I shall leave you to suffer for your obstinacy. I did intend to pass the night in the cellar, but I have changed my mind. I do not want to be awakened by your screams and shrieks as a bomb strikes the roof. I shall therefore pass the night in some other place and come around early in the morning to view the awful wreck."

"If I am alive your breakfast will be ready at the usual hour," remarked Mrs. Bowser as he rose up. "If I have been blown into a thousand fragments you will have to get your breakfast somewhere else. They say that new place two blocks down is going to be a success. Its specialty is fried pork sausages, and you know how dearly you love them."

Mr. Bowser glared at her—just glared.

"I wish you would take the cat with you," Mrs. Bowser pleaded. "You know he has been one of the family for eight long years, and he does not want to be blown to atoms any more than you do. He loves you dearly, and he looks to you for protection in this emergency."

Mr. Bowser walked three steps toward the hall tree, and then over his shoulder gave her another glare.

"And you have some of your speeches in manuscript. They should not be lost to future generations. Hold on a minute, and I will get them for you."

But Mr. Bowser did not hold on. He put on his hat and overcoat and muffler and passed out, and if he uttered any swear words as he did so Mrs. Bowser did not hear them.

It was a cold evening, and the streets were deserted. Mr. Bowser walked about until his ears were red as paint and his nose was as cold as a chunk of ice and then returned to the house.

"You will need two quilts and a pillow down there," quietly observed Mrs. Bowser, "and you had better provide yourself with a rope to tie on something in place of that missing leg. You will sleep in peace in spite of the rats and spiders and cockroaches. Good night, Mr. Bowser!"

But Mr. Bowser warmed himself, read his evening paper and smoked his usual cigar, and when the time came he headed for his usual bed, and though the Zeppelin continued to hover and hover, he was sleeping as though one did not exist.

Real Strategy.

"Mother, if a poor, hungry little boy was to come to the back door and ask for something to eat, would you give him that piece of pie that was left over from dinner?"

"Yes, Willie, I think I would."

"Well, just wait a minute till I run around to the back door."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Woman's Work

The President's Daughter Is an Advocate o Suffrage.

MISS MARGARET WILSON

Miss Wilson always has been a suffragist at heart, but it was not un.. last year, after her father had announced his own views on the question of votes for women, that she permitted herself to come out and work for the enfranchisement of her sex. She had for several years attended as a silent spectator all the mass meetings of the suffrage societies. Even now she seldom makes speeches, since she needs to save her voice for her chosen career as a vocal artist.

Recently Miss Wilson was one of the hostesses at a suffrage tea given in New York, where Miss Julia Lathrop, head of the national children's bureau, spoke about the relation of suffrage to child welfare. The children's bureau is another one of the humanitarian interests of Miss Wilson, whose unaffected love of humanity has led her to ally herself with many philanthropic movements.

It is said that she always gives the proceeds of her concert money to the work for the blind, for, while she is an enthusiastic lover of her work, she does not sing to enrich herself, but to help mankind.

FANCY HATBANDS IN FAVOR.

Some of the Pretty, Frivolous Things That Appear This Season.

Fancy adjustable hatbands are a feature of the new millinery and appeal to the woman whose longing for variety is hampered by a limited purse. They furnish an excellent means of introducing daring touches of color in an otherwise dark street costume and are adaptable to the stiff crowned, narrow brimmed models as well as to the soft sports hats of felt and beaver for which they were originally designed.

Plain colored ribbons in the new, bright shades as well as in striped and blocked effects, combining two colors in sharp contrast, are the most used for adjustable hatbands. Many of these are so woven as to pass for hand knitted bands and have a convenient elasticity which makes them easily adjustable to any size crown. Others are of a stiff ribbed silk similar to belting and fasten under the flattest of tailored bows.

Double faced ribbons, showing a dark shade on one side and a vivid coloring on the other, are among the most satisfactory for fancy hatbands, as they are capable of almost endless variety in adjustment.

Here Is a Beauty Diet.

Soups: Fresh fish, vegetable broths, clear.

Fish: Raw oysters, fresh fish, boiled.

Meats: Fat bacon, boiled or broiled; chicken, game (all sparingly).

Farinaceous: Cracked wheat, oatmeal, rice, sago, hominy, whole wheat bread or biscuits, rye bread, graham bread or rolls, crackers, dry toast, milk toast, macaroni.

Vegetables: Mashed potatoes, green peas, stringbeans, spinach, cabbage, cucumbers, cresses, lettuce, celery.

Desserts: Plain milk pudding, junket, rice and milk, sago and milk, stewed fruits (all without sugar).

Drinks: Weak tea (no sugar), milk, buttermilk, toast water, pure water (cold or hot).

Thoroughly masticate all foods and eat slowly.

Deviled Sardines on Toast.

Materials.—Two tablespoonfuls butter, a tablespoonful dry mustard, one-half teaspoonful salt, a teaspoonful lemon juice, sardines, one-third cupful butter, a tablespoonful Worcestershire sauce.

Directions.—Beat the two tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, add the mustard, salt, sauce and lemon juice. Saute the sardines for about six minutes in the remaining butter and when nearly done add the creamed mixture. Heat the whole thoroughly and serve on toast.

Chocolate Icing.

Two tablespoonfuls cocoa or melted chocolate can be used, four tablespoonfuls sugar, two tablespoonfuls hot water, one-quarter teaspoonful salt. Mix the sugar and water until smooth, add the cocoa or chocolate and salt and stir until creamy. Spread between the cakes.

A FAMOUS VICTORY

By F. A. MITCHEL

A young man within the German lines in Alsace knocked at the door of a cottage. A girl came to the door and he asked her if he might be accommodated for the night which was coming on. She called to her mother in the German tongue. The young man knitted his brows. He had expected to find French inmates.

The mother came and spoke to the stranger, speaking French with a German accent. He told her that he was traveling and since there was no other house near either she must admit him or he must bivouac for the night. She consented to admit him.

The young man was about twenty two years old and handsome as a picture. A winning smile began to play about his lips the moment he spoke to the girl, and his eyes indicated his admiration for her. He said nothing about the terrible war that was going on nor did his hostess or her daughter. Nevertheless he assumed that they sympathized with the German cause. For France's lost province has at least as large a population of Germans as French. As to the young man, he was plainly French.

Now, though these persons did not talk about the war, it was evident that the visitor, being a Frenchman within the German lines, was living with a sword suspended over him. True, the country near about was not occupied by troops except in small bands, but any German soldier meeting a Frenchman there would require him to give an account of himself. At bedtime the stranger took a candle and went to the room that had been assigned him, locked the door after him and went to bed, but not to sleep. There was that on his mind that precluded sleep. Life was on the one hand, death on the other. He was liable to be clutched by death.

The girl about midnight, armed with a pair of pliers, went to the guest's door and, feeling with her implement for the end of the key, finally succeeded in turning it. Opening the door, she stole into the guest's room and to a chair beside the bed on which he had put his clothes. She was about to withdraw them when she felt a hand on her wrist.

"Let me go," she said in a low voice.

"Certainly," said the visitor. "You have doubtless made a mistake in the room."

He released her, and she withdrew. He knew well what her object had been in trying to take his clothes. She suspected he was a spy and that in his pockets would be found papers containing information he was taking to the entente allies.

In the morning when he came down to breakfast and bade the girl good morning his face wore that same winning smile. She did not respond, evidently steeling herself against him. When he started on his journey she had on her hat and coat and gloves.

"I am going with you," she said.

"I am delighted."

"You are a spy, and I intend to turn you over to the first German officer we meet."

"Oh, no, you won't!"

"Why not?"

"Because they would stand me up and shoot me."

"I have considered all that."

"But when it comes to seeing me shot down you will regret what you have done."

All this the Frenchman said with that same irresistible smile on his lips.

"Give me the papers you are bearing and you may go free for all me."

"It is beyond your power to free me."

"Why so?"

"You have made a prisoner of my heart, and my heart will not be released."

It was evident that the shot had hit. The girl was winged. But she was not ready to surrender.

"My feelings may drive me one way, but my duty is driving me another. I am capable of sacrificing my feelings to my duty."

"Then do so."

The only weapon he carried was a revolver. Taking it from its holster at his hip he tossed it to her. It fell at her feet. He folded his arms and stood looking at her with that smile which was having the same effect upon her that the eye of a serpent would have on a bird.

"Do your duty to your fatherland. The papers you wish are on my person, but you shall not have them without first killing me."

She was not yet conquered. Taking up the weapon she cocked it, advanced to within a few feet of him, put the muzzle against his breast and said:

"Give me the papers or I will sacrifice you to my duty."

"I love you," was his only response.

"Once more, give me the papers."

"Once more, I love you."

They stood, the eyes of each fixed on those of the other. The battle waxed hot, but not with weapons of death. It was a fight of love against duty. Without that smile duty might have won.

Presently he saw victory for himself, defeat for her. Disregarding the weapon pressed against his heart he extended his arms, her hand sank slowly, he encircled her, drew her to him and kissed her.

When he went his way with his papers she returned to the house. Her sense of duty had given place to an all absorbing love.

The Hiker's Costume For Spring

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

THIS smart sport suit comes in green or old rose, with a checked skirt to match either color. Wide box plaits give the skirt's fullness, and the plaid is also used to pipe the belt, front and cuffs of the coat, as well as to line the roll collar. Novelty buttons serve as trimming, and the bottom of the coat is stitched three times as a finish. The tilted straw hat is simply faced and banded with white satin.

Costume In Crepe and Chiffon.

Rose colored cotton crepe made with a full skirt and quaint jumper mounted over an overblouse of chiffon makes this attractive frock.

This design gives the home dressmaker an excellent opportunity for extended experience with cutting. It will be noticed that there are distinct guides for the jumper, the underblouse and the lining, as well as for the skirt. The dress is fashioned from rose colored cotton crepe, with an underbody of chiffon in the same shade. The lining may be of taffeta or coarse lawn, but the silk gives a better effect to the chiffon. In medium size the dress requires 2¼ yards 44-inch crepe for the skirt and jumper, 1 yard 27-inch lining for the lining and 2¼ yards 36-inch chiffon for the underblouse.

The skirt is cut from a double fold of material, while the crepe is folded in quarters for the jumper. The back gore of the skirt is laid on a lengthwise fold of the goods, while the front is placed parallel with the selvage so that it rests on a lengthwise thread. In folding the material in quarters for the jumper, place the selvage edges so that they will meet, as shown in the cutting guide.

From the quarter fold cut the front gore, placing it on the lengthwise fold, and the back and front of the jumper, these sections being laid on a lengthwise thread.

The chiffon is laid in open width for the underblouse, which covers most of the material. The cuff and collar are placed top and bottom, respectively, to the right of the main section of the pattern. If the shield is used this may be cut from the space to the left of the cuff.

The back of the lining is laid on the lengthwise fold, while the front rests on a lengthwise thread.

The extended front of the jumper is trimmed with fancy buttons, put on to emphasize its outline.

A SHAMPOO JACKET.

How to Make One of the Comforts For This Irksome Duty.

A real necessity to the woman who shampoos her own head is a jacket to protect her from the water that falls on the shoulders. Quite a practical jacket can be made from a Turkish towel or from a straight piece of linen with a hole cut in the middle for the head to slip through. At the sides the jacket can be held together with cords, tapes or ribbon. Beauty can be added to the jacket by embroidering little flowers here and there over the front. French knots and lazy daisy stitches fill in quickly. China blue and old rose are cheerful colors to choose for the stitches. The edge of the jacket can be finished with a rolled hem, a binding of braid or, if one has the time, a crocheted edge would increase the attractiveness of the garment. A simple coat could be made from a piece of stock sheeting.

Should you be making the jacket for a gift you might include with the present a bath mitten. This can be made from Turkish toweling also, or a better idea would be to use a Turkish wash cloth for the purpose, since it is not necessary to have fingers or a thumb in the mitten. All that is necessary is to fold a wash cloth in half, stitch it along the long end and one short end and finish the edges with crochet stitches to match that used on the jacket. On the mitten a spray of the design used on the jacket can be embroidered, or the monogram of the recipient can be substituted. Many people prefer the bath mitten to the regular wash cloth. It is quite convenient for bathing children.

THE DISORDERED HOME.

The Happy Policy of Keeping Things In Their Place.

Sometimes women are not responsible for the big sorrows which invade the home, but it is within their power to make life wretched for others in innumerable little ways. You have probably been to a shiftless home where affairs are allowed to run themselves just as if they could.

Nothing is in its place, so that needed trifles must often be renewed because the ones on hand can never be found. There is no health in such a home, no repose, no dignity. Good housekeepers abominate bad ones and rarely put down the failings of the defective woman to inability in domestic matters. No excuses are made for the atrocious housekeeper who is besides a wife and mother, for it is a woman's business to know how to keep a home.

The young daughters and sons of such establishments get a taste of better kept homes as they go about and soon become ashamed of their own. If they grow up to its ways unconscious of its discomfort and inelegance there must come a time when they will be reduced to the society of persons beneath them, as the saying is.

The effects of the disordered home life, too, follow the young people with their own marriage and home relations, and the partner who has been brought up in a better manner is the one who suffers and revolts. Disorder without encourages disorder within, and harmony of externals encourage serenity of mind and heart.

Salad Dressing.

Three-fourths of a cupful of vinegar, one-half cupful of sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, butter size of walnut.

Boil vinegar and butter together for three minutes, mix dry ingredients and add to beaten egg. Combine this last mixture to the former slowly, stirring constantly, and let cook (but not boil) for fifteen minutes.

Fruit Salad.

Wash thoroughly one cupful of seedless raisins, cover with boiling water, let simmer until plump, then drain dry in napkin and cool. Add one cupful of finely cut celery, one cupful of diced apple and one-third cupful of blanched and sliced almonds, toss lightly with a fork, sprinkle with the juice of half a lemon, place on crisp lettuce leaves and mark with mayonnaise or cooked dressing.

Cornflower blue taffeta is developed here in puffy panniers and full skirt. The simple corsage is blue net over a foundation of white shadow lace, the net being arranged surplice, with shoulder bands caught by a spray of lilies of the valley, which also trim the plaited girdle. The effect is picturesque and individual.

FACE POWDER.

Some Cruel Facts About the Cult of Powder Puffs.

Many women whose faces are blotchy and unclean looking can trace the trouble to the powder they use. Even the best powders on the market will clog the pores if applied too heavily and too often.

Powder was not meant to cover the face till it looks as if the flour barrel had been visited head first. It was intended as a means of removing shine from the skin, giving it a velvety look, and to protect the skin. What have we done with powder?

Too much powder is unsightly and only focuses attention to blemishes.

The tint of the powder used must depend on the coloring of the user. Blonds must use one color, brunettes another, and according to the degree of fairness or darkness; also for evening use there are certain shades of powder which are much more becoming than the tints most attractive to the daylight.

The kind of powder? Any pure powder. In cheap powders there will be some sort of adulteration that will harm the skin. The best is the cheapest.

The best powder to use is a powder that is very soft and light with clinging qualities—one that does not seem to "pack."

The powder should be used in the morning. If during the day the face shines gently rub over it the powder puff wrapped in a fresh handkerchief.

Nougat Cake.

Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one cupful of sugar and beat until very light. Sift two cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and add alternately with one-half cupful of milk. Flavor with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, beat thoroughly, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and bake half an hour in a shallow tin. Cool and spread with nougat frosting.

Nougat Frosting.—Chop one cupful of almonds and brown them in the oven. Melt one-third cupful of sugar to a caramel, add the almonds, cool and pound to a powder. Boil one cupful of sugar and one-quarter cupful of water until the sirup will thread, add the almond powder, pour slowly into the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and beat until stiff enough to spread.

Stewed Raisins.

A package of seeded raisins, two tablespoonfuls finely shaved orange skin, a level teaspoonful salt, one-quarter cupful sugar, three cups water. Wash the raisins through several waters, put in saucepan with three cupfuls boiling water. Bring to boil quickly and boil five minutes. Add sugar, salt. When ready to take from fire add the yellow from the orange peel cut very fine or lemon will do.

Evening Fabrics.

For evening wear gowns of metallic tissues, cloudlike tulles, chiffons, mousselines and diaphanous silks abound. For youth and slender lines there are girlish frocks inspired by old time crinolines, while the older matrons appear in handsome gowns with clinging foundations of silk or satin veiled with layers of vaporous tulle.

PENSION ACT WILL ELIMINATE CHARITY

Albany, N. Y.—Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and Miss Sophie Irene Loeb are in Albany to lead the fight for amendments to the Widows" Pension Act that will compel the New York city authorities to carry out the spirit of the law.

After a conference with legislative leaders, amendments which eliminate Commissioners of Charities Kingsbury from all participation in the administration of the Widows' Pension Act were framed. It is proposed also to give the Child Welfare Board full control over all investigations. These amendments apply only to New York City.

Commissioner Kingsbury, under the existing law, as a member ex-officio of the Child Welfare Board in New York City. By reason of the fact that Kingsbury furnished the investigation for the board he has been able to dominate the work, although only one of the nine members.

OIL FIRMS TO WORK GASOLINE PROCESS

Washington, D. C.—Ten oil refining firms have been licensed by the Bureau of Mines to use the process inveted by Dr. W. F. Rittman, which greatly increases the perceptage of gasoline obtainable from crude oil.

Its general use, officials believe will lower the cost of gasoline to consumers by increasing production. California oil ,in particular, heretofore continued valueless as a gasoline producer, develops gasoline in large quantities under the process.

PHYSICIAN TELLS OF HORRORS OF HEROIN

New York—Startling figures on the extent of traffic in habit-forming drugs and the widespread addiction to the vice in this city were given to the New York American yesterday yesterday by a prominent physicians.

Bills to control this evil and to eliminate the sale of strong alsoholic liquor have been proposed by the New York American. These bills, now before the Legislature in Albany, are meeting with universal endorsement.

In 1915 there were 1,978 arrests of drug users and drug vendors in this city. Only two per cent of this number were dealers. The remainder were users.

Authorities compute hat there are at least 60,000 addicts and vendors of habit-forming drugs in this city alone. That the traffic is flourishing, despite attempts to curb it, is apparent, according to the authorities.

There are hundreds of agencies through which the traffic is secretly conducted. By eliminately the sources from which these agencies obtain their supplies and by centralizing the responsibility in the hand of practitioners and health boards, the New York American's drug bills, it is conceded, offer a practical and lasting solution of this difficult problems.

Recent investigations show the use of morphine and opium is steadily decreasing. The high cost of these two drugs is given as the reason. But the use of heroin is growing at an alarming rate, due solely to the fact that it is easy to obtain, the cost is nominal, and the stimulation is quick.

OPPOSE JEW NATION PLAN, SAYS MINISTER

New York—Appreciation of Ambassador Morgenthau's effort in behalf of Jewish people in Turkey was voiced yesterday at a reception held in his honor in Thomashefsky's National Theatre, No. 111 East Houston street. More than eighty-four Jewish organizations were represented. The receiving committee was headed by Mayor Mitchel and Jacob Schiff.

Mr. Morgenthau gave a resume of conditions in Turkey as they existed before he left. He declared that not until after a visit to Palestine did he really understand the Jews in Turkey. "The Jews in Palestine depend largely for suppurt on Ruscsia, France, England," he said. "The Germans and Austrians have enough to do to take care of their own."

The Ambassador took occasion to thank those present for money contributed to the war sufferers. He said there were 15,000 destitute families who received but twenty cents a month, but this has now been increased by the American Relief Commission. The Ambassador also complimented the Turkish Goverment on its treatment of the Jews.

"There is one thing the Turks would object to," he said. "That is the establishment of a nation within a nation. I hope nothing will be done here or by the Jews of other countries that will disturb the present friendly relations."

STORE OR STAGE?

A Word to Ambitious Young People Seeking a Future.

There is just as much demand among store owners and managers for high class salesmen, buyers and managers as there is among the theatrical and movie producers for actors. Merchants want to employ ambitious young men and women who can raise themselves above the ranks of the ordinary. The work is no harder, hours no longer and pay quite as good in the stores for help of all classes as it is in film or stage productions.

The "stars" in business are just as well paid as are those whose names grace the billboard. Where there is one film favorite who is paid $1,000 a month there are half a dozen mercantile managers who receive as much or more. There are hundreds who receive $200 a month to where there are five movie actors who receive the same. And there are ten dollar a week places among the members of the mob scenes, as there are ten dollar a week jobs among the "mobs" in the stores. Once a year or so some one graduates from the chorus or the "supes" to a place as an understudy or star, while in business many are promoted from the ranks to positions of trust and good salaries.

There are better opportunities for ambitious people in mercantile fields than as actors. The demand is many times greater. Owners are always on the watch for some one who will justify a promotion. But positions can not be had without effort. They must be won by hard work, study and an overwhelming desire to get ahead. At all events we say, Stick to the store.—Farm Machinery.

DUELS OVER TRIFLES.

At One Time Almost Any Incident Was an Excuse For a Meeting.

Duels at one time were fought for the merest trifles. Colonel Montgomery was shot in a duel about a dog, Colonel Ramsey in one about a servant, Mr. Featherstone in one about a recruit, Sterne's father in one about a goose, and another gentleman in one about a bottle of anchovies. One officer was challenged for merely asking his opponent to pass him a goblet. Another was compelled to fight about a pinch of snuff. General Barry was challenged by a Captain Smith for declining wine at a dinner on a steam boat, although the general pleaded as an excuse that wine invariably made him sick, and Lieutenant Cowther lost his life in a duel because he was refused admittance to a club of pigeon shooters.

In 1777 a duel occurred in New York between Lieutenant Featherstonhaugh of the Seventy-fifth and Captain McPherson of the Forty-second British regiment in regard to the manner of eating an ear of corn, one contending that the eating was from the cob and the other contending that the grain should be cut off from the cob before eating. Lieutenant Featherstonhaugh lost his right arm, the ball from his antagonist's pistol shattering the limb fearfully, so much so that it had to be amputated. Major Noah lost his life in 1827 at the dueling ground at Hoboken in a simple dispute about what was trumps in a game of cards.—London

ASSAIL AND PRAISE LOCAL OPTION BILL

Albany, N. Y.— "Kitchen bars and blind tigers" will spring up throughout the State if local option is adopted, William H. Hirsh, attorney for the State Brewers' Association, told the Legislature at a hearing on the Local Ootion bill. William A. Anderson, State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, answered by accusing the Brewers' Association of insincerity and bad faith. The hearing was before the Senate Taxation Committee and the Assembly Excise Committee. The Assembly chamber was packed to the doors by enthusiasts, who cheered for prohibition and local option.

AUTOMOBILE TRUCKS RUIN ROADS, SAYS BROWN

Albany, N. Y.— The entire highway system of the State is being ruined by automobile trucks, Senator Elon R. Brown informed automobilists who appeared before the Senate Internal Affairs Committee in opposition to his bill calling for a division of automobile funds between the State and the communities in which they are collected. The Senator made that statement in tolling the automobilists that they might better direct their efforts toward the solution of that problem than oppose his bill, which is among the highway measures intended for the relief of New York city.

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

You're like the rest of us, old scout,
And swear each year you'll be
A better chap e'er the year runs out
Into eternity;
That's how you know you'll keep out front,
Only you don't.

You're going to put a raw-hide brake
On all profanity;
An angel child, while you're awake.
Asleep, from faults you're free!
You've made up your mind what to do, and don't;
Fine—but you won't!

On good intentions you are strong;
A halo hangs above;
Your head and you can think no wrong;
Your heart is filled with love!
For a day, perhaps, you feel like a saint;
Only you ain't!

Don't forget to be ready for the annual meeting and banquet, April 3rd, 1916.

Next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 29th, 30th and 31st are Spring Fashion Days for Fulton. Don't forget to call in the different stores an see what the Fulton merchants have to offer you. We think you will be surprised and well pleased.

Don't forget to get those seeds planted. These are the days to begin to plan that flower garden which is so pretty later on.

'Tis not enough to sit at home and say:
"The thing is rotten."
It is because by men like you their Duty to the state is oft neglected and forgotten.
That power is vested in a selfish few
Do not presume to criticise or blame;
Your own indifference is still greater
Cause for shame, to say you have no time
Is hollow subterfuge; you know full well
That if you would you could;
But it's easier to shirk, and let the other do the work.

While you complain, grumbling alone
Will never win reforms or right men's wrongs;
'Tis those who back their protest with their deeds,
And with their efforts parallel their prayers,
Who gives the nation the relief it needs.
Don't be a simple knocker! Be a man! to every Duty true. Declare yourself! Then take a stand
With those who fight to free the land, from the grasp of the pirate crew;
Who, but for your neglect, and mine,
Would n'er have been allowed to climb
And seize the reins of power.

ST. LOUIS ALDERMEN MUST DRESS BETTER

St. Louis—Not content with their warfare against city officials who refuse to "doll up" at public receptions, St. Louis tailors have organized and with a number of the merchants are planning a "dress up" week beginning April 9, at which a special exhibit of correct wear for Aldermen and other city officials will be staged.

There followed a courtship of two weeks and friends here have been notified of the wedding which took place at Las Angeles. It was at the Ephphata mission for the deaf at Los Angeles that Mr. Roberts "heard" Mrs. Birney-Ellis "sing."

The wedding ceremony was conducted in the sign language by the Rev. Clarence E. Webb, missionary to the deaf.

The Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. has been denied a motion for a new trial in the case of Mrs. Isabel Adle, who secured recently a verdict for $7,000 in the damage suit for the loss of her husband. The order was filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office.

Herrera Refuses to Join Villa; Funston Remains Puzzled

El Paso—General Luis Herrera, late military governor of the State of Chilhuahua, has not joined forces actually with the bandit Villa, but has defied the Carranza government and notified the First Chief at Queretaro that he will not obey the order to remain passive while the American soldiers are on Mexican soil. By this very act he necessarily makes common cause with Villa, and it is believed to be only a matter of time when the forces led by Herrera will be fighting side by side with Villa's bandits.

This is the actual situation as it at present exists, and it so has been reported to Washington tonight by the military and by the government agents stationed here after careful investigation. It is no way mitigates the gravity of the situation, for it is believed that Herrera's defection will be followed by others before long.

Chilhuahua City is still in the hands of a small Carranza garrison under General Luis Gutierrez. Most of the soldiers who were stationed there have gone to a point ten miles away, where Herrera hasq stablished a camp. There have been no hostilities whatever, but the action of Herrera amounts to a mutiny, which it is doubtful if any Carranza officer now in the northwest will dare to punish.

Villa and two hundred of his men were defeated in battle this evening by a Carranza force, according to information made public tonight by Andreas Garcia, Carranza Consul here. The engagement is said to have taken place at Santa Gertrudes, a mining camp forty miles west of Santa Rosalia, a station on the Mexican Central Raidway, in the Namiquipa region. Garcia displayed the following telegram, which he said was eceived by General Gavira at Juarez.

If the report of the engagement is true, Villa is many miles southetast of where he was last reported. There was no signature to the telegram made pubfic by Mr. Garcia and no indication of where it came from.

VILLA SLIPS OUT OF NET SPREAD BY PERSHING

El Paso—General Bell has confirmed the revolt of General Lius Herrera, former Carranza commander at Chilhuahua, with 2,000 followers.

Villa apparently has escaped the net set for him by Carranza and American troops. He was last reported at Moctezuma, Chilhuahua, which is northeast of Namiquipa, Carmen and El Valle, toward which points his pursuers were pressing.

Villa held up a train near Moctezuma on Wednesday searching "for Americans to kill." He declared he was not fighting Mexicans and insisted Herrera had joined him.

General Funston has had no word from Pershing as to the progress of the American expeditionary column since Tuesday.

Americans along the entire Mexican border are greatly alarmed over the growing activity and increase of Carranza troops along the lins. Appeals for protection are flooding Southwestern State Congressmen.

Andreas aGrcia, Mexican consul here, made public tonight a telegram he said he had received from General Gavira, announcing the Carranza forces had defeated Villa today at Santa Gertrudes, near Namiquipa.

According to the announcement, Villa after leaving several dead and wounded in the field, abandoned 100 horses and fled to El Oso.

"I have confirmed the Herrera revolt through a State Department official, who received the information from Gavira. However, the yared enying this to the press. It looks authentic now."

This is the text of the telegram sent by Brigadier-General Bell, commander at Fort Bliss, to Major-General Frederick Funston at San Antonio late this afternoon.

Military Enthusiasts, 40 in Number Respond to Preparedness Call

In response to Secretary's Hollenga's invitatioп sent to the young men of the city who are imbued with the prevailing preparedness germ, about forty of the more enthusiastic ones found their way to the Chamber of Commerce rooms last night. They realized some disappointment, in that the Secretary was unavoidably detained in Syracuse, and they disbanded.

It was the intention of the Secretary to hold the meeting in order to ascertain the attitude of the young men toward the formation here of a company of volunteer soldiers, and when that should be accomplished the unit would become a part of the National Guard. The plan is receiving a lot of enhouragement, especially from the young men of the city who have served under the colors in times of peace and during the Spanish-American war; therefore the suspension of activity at the front, last night, is but temporary, and may be in reality thef orerunner of a meeting of larger proportions, for which notices will be mailed at an early date.

The question of securing a drill hall is easy to settle, say the men behind the movement, as it is learned that the old Foster theater can be procured for the purpose. While the floor space there is somewhat limited, it would no doubt accommodate pioneers for some time to come.

Germany Confident Her Army Will Break Through Verdun Lines

London—Miss Madge Lessing, an American actress who returned here from Berlin yesterday after settling some private affairs there, says if Berlin is a criterion the pinch of war is not heavily felt yet in Germany. Plenty of able bodied men are about, much money is in circulation and the theatres are in clover, she says.

Asked, "How about Verdun?" She replied:—

"The German know the losses are frightful, but they all hope the Kaiser's troops will break through. There is less general confidence in victory, however, than there was a year ago. Everybody longs for peace, as they know now they never can obtain the crushing victory they used to dream about. The feeling of hostility against the English is not as intense as it used to be. You can now talk English publicly without fear of assault, but it is dangerous to talk of America. Everybody is strafing the Amer'cans ferociously. President Wilson is hated by all Germans."

ENGLAND WILL NOT REVENGE

London—The minds of the people o Great Britain are turning with remark able unanimity to a consideration of economic and industrial conditions at the close of the war. The question came up yesterday in the House of Commons when Sir Henry Dalziel demanded a declaration of the British policy at the forthcoming allied economic conference in Paris. Sir Henry asked that the delegates should be empowered to say that never henceforth could British trade relations with Germany be the same as before the war.

'Our first object must be the successful conclusion of the war, to which everything must be subordinated." declared Mr. Lloyd George, Munitions Minister, when he arose to reply. Turning to past war problems, however, he said:—

"If we are to organize trade for generation sto come it must be done deliberately and carefully. It is not merely a question of tariffs. If we lose the war, the setting up of any fiscal system, whether free trade or protection, will be wretched consolation. There are things bigger than fiscal questions, things which go to the very root of human life and liberty—everything that constitutes the self-respect of men.

"We must not subordinate human liberty and honor, self-respect and civilization of mankind to any trade policy. When we consider trade the first thing to be done is to obliterate any idea of revenge. Let us do the best for the millions of people of this country, but I do not think that we can ever have the same conditions as before the war."

45–PHONE NEWS ITEMS–45

Friday, March 24, 1916.

That there should be reported a heavy falling off in immigration was to be expected. The slump for the six month period ending Dec. 31, 1915, was very marked. It is of interest to note the classes affected. In the last half of 1915 the greatest falling off was in Hebrew and southern Italian immigrants. England, Holland, France, Germany, Ireland, Scandinavia and Scotland furnished upward of 50 per cent of the newcomers in the last six months of 1913 and 43 per cent of the fiscal year of 1915. This fiscal year practically covered the first year of the European war, in which five of these countries were engaged. Germany furnished over 20,000 during the year, but probably many of them were in other countries than their own when the war broke out.

Until recently the immigrant arriving in New York has been left to acquire American ideals and standards of citizenship by his own unaided efforts. Night naturalization courts have been opened in that city to make easier and less expensive the alien's road to citizenship. The national Americanization committee has been organized on a permanent basis to educate the immigrant in the language, the traditions and the ideals of his adopted country. The League of Foreign Born Citizens, which for several years has been recruiting good citizens by means of free classes and lectures, has begun to increase its membership and extend its activities. All of these agencies are needed in the work of Americanizing the foreigner.

Experts tell us that not again in eighty years will it be possible to view the four planets now on exhibition nightly when the skies are clear. These are Venus and Jupiter in the west, Mars in the east and Saturn high up. When freshly sighted by the naked eye Mars appears to have a ruddy hue. Venus is called silvery, but is also described as of yellow or golden yellow hue. Jupiter is also called yellowish and Saturn both pure white and yellowish.

THE TIME HAS COME

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things" —but one of the chiefest is to talk of how Fulton can become a City Beautiful through the medium of trees, shrubs and flowers. The trees we already have—great, grand stately ones—the shrubs are far and few between, and flowers almost a minus quantity.

The time was when the public would have pooh-hooded the idea of flowers, shrubs and trees being a live asset of the community, or that they were builders of towns. However, one day the progressive people of a progressive community got their heads together. The town blossomed as a rose and real estate took on a higher value. Finally the neighboring town which reveled in burdocks and tin cans discovered something. Then they began planting roses and peonies and pinks and the real estate men 'tis said have been busier ever since.

That real estate should be of more value in a garden community than where ash heaps, cans and burdocks disgrace the landscape is no great secret. It is very noticeable that the Sahara Desert is not densely populated. Were every business place in the city this summer to display window boxes, gay with geraniums and vines, and the banks of Old Oswego cleaned, it is just possible tourists passing through the city would note the "signs following" the demonstration of a civic awakening. How better a way is there to prove to the world that we have joined the ranks of intelligent, progressive communities.

This community we must remember is our home, our civic home, if you please. Let us sweep it and garnish it, and live nobly and the whole world will want to come over our threshold.

This is such an excellent opportunity for Fulton women to give of the best that is in them. Men alone are not successful housekeepers. They do such funny, clumsy things because they weren't trained in this department. So, if we are to have a fine, clean, beautiful home city Fulton Mothers and all their dear children must join in the work.

Why not a Garden Committee of Fulton women to act as an auxiliary to the Chamber of Commerce in its work along the line this Spring?

PERSHING'S TASK IN MEXICO

If communication by wireless with General Pershing in the foothills of the Sierra Madre is at times interrupted there will be no cause for alarm. He has other means of reporting to base headquarters; aeroplanes, mounted couriers and motorcycles. Captain Bemjamin D. Foulois of the First Aero Squadron, an expert aviator himself, has several machines for reconnoissance and for such other duty as may be required of him. By this time he should have established a chain of stations as far south as Uamiquipa. He has with him 10 officers and eighty men, aviators and mechanics. Communication with Columbus should be only a question of a few hours when Captain Foulois completes his arrangements.

Fifteen motorcycles were purchased for the expedition, and they can be used wherever there is a road or a good trail. Mounted couriers can keep the advanced column in touch with the cyclists and with the aviators detailed to fly to base headquarters. It is a system that may break down under strain at this point or that, but only at brief intervals. General Funston is doubtless hearing from Pershing with a fair degree of regularity.

We are inclined to think that General Pershing can look out for himself and keep his communications open. According to the best unofficial information he entered Mexico with a force of 6,000 officers and men, including the Seventh, Tenth and Thirteenth Cavalry, the Sixth, Sixteenth and Eighteenth Infantry and a battery of the Sixth Field Artillery, besides Engineer, Signal and Hospital troops. Two hundred cowboys and ranchmen familiar with the desert region of Chilhuahua and Sonora volunteered and they are acting as scouts to the expedition. Under orders from General Obregon, Carranza's Minister of War, five columns of Constitutionaalists are cooperating iwth General Pershing. Even if he cannot use the railroads he should have no serious difficulty in getting up supplies, for by this time the fifty-six motor trucks bought in Ohio and Wisconsin should be in service at Columbus. They would of course have to be supplemented with mule wagons. The transportation question in northern Mexico presents a good deal of a problem. It is the intention to use some of the motor trucks to carry the infantry. Colonel George A. Dodd's cavalry column, which rode due south after crossing the frontier, ought now to be in touch with the main expedition.

There should be no hesitation in saying that unless General Pershing has the cordial and active support of the Carranza Generals his force of 6,000 men will prove inadequate. He may have to penetrate the country to a distance of 300 miles, and then he would experience trouble in keeping open his communications with three regiments of infantry and what mounted troops could be spared for the purpose. His command should be strong enough to deal with the Villistas, unless their leader attracts Carranza adherents in considerable numbers to his standard. Unfortunately this is to be feared, but the presumption is that General Obregon, whose prestige has not declined, can depend upon Generals Gutierrez, Herrera and Garzo to prevent desertions en masse.

Taking the most optimistic view of the situation, the War Department should immediately heed General Funston's requisition for more troops. If reenforcements should be needed the call would be sharp and sudden. We do not expect to see all northern Mexico going over to Villa, but if the pursuit should be prolonged for many days the Carranza influence might decline to the vanishing point. Washington had better be prepared for the worst, while hoping for the best. And we may add that it would be a fatal blunder to restrict General Pershing's operations by making a hard and fast compact as to scope, direction and zone with the Carranza Government. That way lie friction and complications.—N. Y. Sun.

TAKE AN INVOICE OF YOURSELF

(By Col. Geo. B. Lockwood)

It would be a good idea 'forevery citizen who feels that his country isn't all it ought to be to put down on one side of a ledger account just what the government is doing for him, remembering that life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness would be all sacrificed by the with drawal of the protection of the state; then put down on the other side just what he, individually has done for the country except to confer upon it the boon of his own presence. When a balance is struck the citizen will have some notion of what he has to be thankful for.

The man who looks within himself with out illusion will be able to detect certain imperfections which help to explain the imperfections of government and of the social and industrial order. Men prate of human brotherhood who would not walk across the street to help a neighbor. They dream of a New Jerusalem without having a semblance of it in the area within their own immediate jurisdiction, although, as Emerson said, each of us may erect about us a perfect republic "like that Plato and of Christ." The answer to all this is that the handicaps of environment make it impossible for the individual to live up to his ideal. But how many people are even trying to live up to the spirit of their own declarations about what government and society ought to be, or even within sight of it? And remembering that society is simply a collection of units like ourselves, why do we wonder that the millennium is not turned on?

Whenever an institution, a law or a custom in a republic like ours, lags far behind the conscience and the conduct of the average man, it is overthrown,—possibly, of course, after a struggle. In every such struggle every good citizen should bear a hand. But evil institutions would disappear much more rapidly if we were to cease this shot gun sort of complaining, which scatters everywhere and wounds nowhere, and focus our efforts upon the immediate evils about us that are capable of correction; some of them, possibly, pretty close home.

Opinions

USING THE SCHOOLS

Harry Turner Bailey, a director of the Chautauqua School of Arts and Crafts, is of the opinion that within the next ten years the public school system will be so developed that the schools will be open 24 hours of the day and teachers will be working on eight-hour shifts.

That may be going a bit fast, but it is a pretty safe guess that the next decade will see the schools open the year around, and from the beginning of the morning session until the evening sessions close.—Niagara Falls Journal.

A WHITMAN COMMISSION

The Public Service Commission today is a Whitman commission from top to bottom. In the fourteen and one-half months that he has been governor, Mr. Whitman has appointed all five members—Hayward, Whitney, Straus, Hodge and Hervey. No governor since Charles E. Hughes, during whose administration the Public Service Commissions were created, has had such an opportunity. For this the governor is indebted largely to Senator Thompson, chairman of the legislative committee of investigation. It is the work of this committee which made a clean, sweep possible and permitted a complete reorganization.

The present commission is not all that could be hoped for in a board possessing such vast powers and responsiblities. But at least it is a reorganized commission, made up of new material. The public will willingly forego the further services of McCall, Williams, Wood and Cram. From the Whitman commissioners it has a right to look for something different and better, although in more than one case there has been disappointment in respect to the qualifications of men chosen by Mr. Whitman for places on the commission. As governor he must be judged through the commissioners that he has named. They are his appointments, personal and political, for good or bad.—N. Y. World.

ENDING OF THE WAR WOULD NOT END OUR PROSPERITY

The phrase "a peace scare" is invented in Wall street to describe a reaction in the shares of munitions companies that had risen to very high prices.

It is an anomalous phrase. The purpose and end of every war is peace. The great struggle in Europe has benefited this country by creating an unusual demand for our foodstuffs and textiles as well as military munitions and supplies, and thus has given us an unprecedented profitable foreign trade.

But in the long run no nation is benefited by having its best customers impoverished or plunged heavily into debt. Rumors that Germany was seeking the mediation of the Washington administration to obtain peace were nebulons, and yesterday were officially denied, but the phrase coined in Wall street suggests an inquiry as to whether this country will be "scared" when the war does come to an end.

Our present prosperity is too well founded, too widespread and had too great an impetus to be checked by a peace and resulting lessened foreign demand for munitions, which even at this time form but a small percentage of our gigantic exports. The great prosperity in the textile and dry goods trade was described in the Herald yesterday by high authorities. In the steel and iron and copper industries, in the volume of bank clearances, all records are broken, and the railways for the first time in years are earning enough to make necessary purchases of rails and rolling stock and the making of improvements.

Ending of the war would not end these conditions. The plants now making munitions would revert to production for purposes of peace, Europe would need a vast amount of material for reconstruction, there would be a great demand for our cotton, and vessels now engaged in the war would be released to carry it. The prosperity here has too greatmomentum to be affected by any "peace scare."—N. Y. Herald.

DR. MARY MILLS PATRICK.

WAR NOT A BAR TO COLLEGE ACTIVITY

Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, President of College, Declares American Embassy Was Refuge For Help and For Social Enjoyment—Part of Property Was Seized For Soldiers.

New York.—How an American college in a belligerent country has followed its normal course in wartime is told in the annual report of Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, president of Constantinople college, who has under her instruction girls representing ten nationalities.

These girls have quietly performed their college work in the face of frequent rumors of famine and the absence of fuel. At one time part of the college property was seized for the housing of soldiers. During the winter many of the trees on the spacious college grounds were cut down for fuel to heat the classrooms, and before the Dardanelles campaign was abandoned food prices constantly increased.

Ambassador Morgenthau has been in close touch with the college since the outbreak of the war, according to the report, and has frequently given talks to the students.

"The American embassy was our refuge during the whole year for help of all kinds and for social enjoyment." Dr. Patrick says in her report.

"Ambassador and Mrs. Morgenthau have shown themselves untiringly devoted to the welfare of the college and of the entire American colony. Dr. Morgenthau has spoken frequently at the college and has taken many opportunities to invite the students to the embassy. In February Mrs. Morgenthau rented one of the public halls for moving pictures, and a private program was given for the benefit of the students, all of whom were afterward entertained at the embassy."

At the close of the college year in June, 1915, there were 226 students enrolled in the college. The peoples represented were Albanian, American, Armenian, Bulgarian, English, French, Greek, Hebrew, Swiss and Turkish.

These students followed their customary plan of the year's work, giving plays and entering into every form of student activity, in spite of the difficulties and anxieties incident to war conditions.

"Constantinople without its European colonies and its stream of tourists is like an isolated city cut off from the rest of the world," the report continues. "Colleges in Constantinople have usually enjoyed the great advantage of lectures and addresses from distinguished visitors and social occasions graced by friends of the British and other foreign colonies. A few lectures were given during the year, supplied wholly by local talent, and a short series of concerts greatly relieved the monotony."

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Ambassador Morgenthau by the college at the commencement exercises in June, 1915. At the same time Dr. Patrick received the order of the Shes Kap, a decoration by the sultan for meritorious work at the college.

How Silver Bow Got Its Name.

Silver Bow creek received its name from a party of prospectors who reached its valley in the vicinity of Butte in 1864, says a bulletin of the federal geological survey. While discussing the best name for the stream the clouds broke away, and the sun shine, falling on the creek as it circled around the mountain, suggested the name Silver Bow, and it was accordingly so called.

ALL STAR CAST IN "THE HENIRETTA" AT THE RICHARDSON MARCH 30.

Let him who thinks the theatre is a place of small measure these days cheer up, for all things come to him who waits and abides in faith. Witness: William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Edith Taliaferro, each a star of exceptional radiance, all in the same performance. The play, too, will add to the compelling interest of the distinguished cast. "The Henrietta," Bronson Howard's exquisite comedy-drama is the cause of this extraordinary grouping of big theatrical stars, and Joseph Brooks, to whom we are indebted for the great spectacle "Ben-Hur" and the famous revival of "The Rivals" with Joseph Jefferson, W. J. Florence and William H. Crane, is the manager. Mr. Brooks was the manager of Robson and Crane when "The Henrietta" was first produced in 1887 at the Union Square Theatre, New York. The play ran there for a year and up to that time was the best money maker in local theatre history. The piece was thoroughly American, although the author admitted his indebtedness to Thackeray's wonderful novel, "Vanity Fair" for the idea. William H. Crane as the flinty old father, "Nick Van Alstyne," the lion of Wall street, and Stuart Robson as "Bertie, his son, the Lamb," were delightfully convincing and made impressions that will always linger in pleasant memory.

The revival with William H. Crane in his original role, and the other character roles in the hands of Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Edith Taliaferro, all well known and esteemed leaders in the art of acting, has commanded an attention from the public and critical writers no production of the theatre in recent years has equalled. The engagement at the Richardson, Thursday evening, March 30th, promises to be a red letter event, and deservedly so, for it offers every inducement of refined entertainmnt and a renewal of acquaintance with some of the foremost actors on the American stage. Seat sale open Tuesday, 9 a. m. Mail orders now.

NON-SUIT IN DYGERT ACTION

Plaintiff Failed to Prove That Team of Horses Which Injured Him Were Not Unmanageable.

Justice Devendorf granted a non-suit yesterday in the case of John Dygert of Phoenix, who sued to recover $10,000 for injuries received when a team of horses owned by William S. Blake of the same village ran away. The accident happened in August, 1912.

Mr. Dygert alleged that the team was unmanageable and that the defendant knew this and should not have permitted them to be driven on the streets.

The plaintiff first sued the Syracuse, Lake Shore & Northern Railroad, claiming that the horses became frightened by one of the company's interburban cars, but was defeated when the case was tried.

The non-suit was granted by the court after the evidence for the plaintiff had been submitted.

The motion for the non-suit was made by O. M. Riley of Phoenix, attorney for the defendant, who claimed that the plaintiff had failed to prove that the team was unmanageble. Miss Julia R. Jenny of Syracuse, the attorney of record for the plaintiff, was unable to be present in court owing to illness and the case was tried by C. N. Bulger.

The next case to go to trial is that of John D. Donahue against the Oswego Falls Pulp and Paper company, an action in which thep laintiff seeks to recover damages for personal injuries. The case of William MacDonald against the Columbia Mills, Inc., will not be tried until next weefl.

Justice Devendorf will remain in Inc., will not be tried until next week. for the trial of the cases. He will be engaged in a murder trial at Utica the first week of April.

Fred Mahar, who pleaded not guilty to a charge of abandonment, was held. He will be required to furnish a bond for the support of his family before he will be released.

WOODMEN PLAYERS HAVE GOOD LEAD IN SERIES

The Woodmen last night turned the tables on the Maccabee pocket billiard artists, by taking the entire set of games in the second match of the series. As a result of last night's playing, future contests promise to be hot-waged, as it is evident the two teams are about evenly matched.

Barker started off by "trimming" Wilson of the Maccabees 50 to 17, while Dexter disposed of his man, Hall, 50 to 31. Lewis did the best work for the Maccabees, by securing 37 points; but Gardaila of the Woodmen reached the 50 mark in handy style, thus giving his team a total of 150 to the Maccabees' 85. The next game will be played at the Maccebee rooms next Thursday night.

GRAND RAPIDS CO. IN BANKRUPTCY COURT

Watertown— It is estimated that nearly 1,000 women in the city are losers to the extent of from $1 to $18 as a result of the failure of the Grand Rapids Furniture Company, Inc., of No. 267 Pearl street, Albany. This is the company, whose activities were investigated by District Attorney Claude B. Alverson not long ago, after scores of local women had complained to him that they had been swindled.

Members of furniture clubs formed in this city under the auspices of the Grand Rapids Furniture company received word today that the company had filed a petition of bankruptcy and calling for a meeting of creditors.

Members of these clubs had paid into the company varying amounts, according to the length of time they had been in the organization. A member was paid up when she paid in $18 50.

"RAG DAY" WOULD BENEFIT THE LIBRARY

Any good housekeeper who appreciates the value to this community of the Public Library may give that institution a boosting without involving herself in a lot of expense. This is the especial way to do it—simply save every old rag that is at hand, of may come to hand during the season of housecleaning; then bag or tie them up, awaiting further instructions from Miss Forsyth, librarian. This is all there is to the plan at present, but of course the ultimate end of the rags will be one of the big paper mills, where real good money will be handed out in exchange, this money to revert to the support of the Library. As soon as Miss Forsyth hits upon a plan more definite it will be announced in the public press.

BROOD OF CHICKS AIDS IN RECONCILIATION

Cincinnati—A brood of chickens, hatched out in the oven of the kitchen stove, was the medium through which Harry Schafer and his wife were reconciled in Municipal Court. Schafer was arrested several days ago, charged with failing to provide. Mrs. Schafer appeared before Judge Yeatman. She said trouble started when Schafer failed to bring home coal oil for an incubator. She told the court she feared the eggs would freeze.

Schafer said he intended to hatch the eggs in a place quite as warm as any incubator, to wit: the family cook stove oven. In proof of his judgment theb rood hatched out. judgment the brood hatched out. Schafer and his wife left the court.

OSWEGO TEACHERS WOULD CHANGE EASTER RECESS

It is claimed by the school teachers of Oswego that the week following Easter would be a more agreeable time to observe theu sual vacation than the week preceding, hence a petition to the superintendent of schools to that effect. The claim is based upon the knowledge that many of the teachers desire to take short trips, but prefer to remain at home during Holy Week. No decision has been reached by the school authorities.

DR. HILLIS SETTLES LIBEL ACTION FOR $15,000

Chicago—Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, of Plymouth Church, of Brooklyn, will have to pay $15,000 to his nephew, Percy D. Hillis, in settlement of the latter's $50,000 libel suit. Announcement was made today of a settlement by T. K. Webster, arbitrator.

PROMPT BIRTH REGISTRATION

Albany, N. Y.—Commissioner Hermann M. Biggs of the State Health Department loses no opportunity to urge the necessity of prompt birth registration, pointing out that birth certificates are often-times necessary in after-life to prove the right to vote, marry, inherit property, hold certain public offices and for school and employment purposes.

The newspapers have provided Dr. Biggs with two new arguments for registration of births. A Buffalo news story notes that as a result of William Siddons, formerly of Buffalo and now of Scotland, being able to secure certification to the fact that he was born in Buffalo, he will escape being forced into the British army and sent to the European war front.

A Utica paper tells how a young man of Montgomery county was saved from being sent to prison by the fact that his pastor was able to produce a birth certificate showing that the prisoner was only sixteen years of age at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. The young man was indicted by the grand jury and faced a long term of prison, but the intervention of the boy's minister secured release on parole.

The State Department of Health, through its very comprehensive system of records, is able to supply copies of birth certificates at any time, and the number of requests for such certificates is much larger than would be expected. Recent requests from Canada indicate that residents of the Dominion, like the young man now in Scotland, are securing birth certificates in order to prevent their being drafted for military service.

BIG MONEY AWAITS AN ASTRONOMER

Paris—M. Pierre Guzman, a wealthy amateur of science, has offered 100,000 francs ($20,000) as a prize for the astronomer who first communicates with a star other than Mars. In the document setting aside the sum for this purpose M. Guzman stated that he was convinced, on the basis of the work done by the American astronomers Perceival Lowell and Carl Lampland, that communication with Mars might be established without much difficulty before many years; hence he set aside his prize to encourage more ambitious achievement. The sum remains indefinitely after the donor's death, accumulating interest, at the disposal of the first person who convinces the scientific world that he has spoken with a star other than Mars. It will doubtless have run into millions before the French Academy of Science votes it to the astronomer who shall have merited it.

REAL ARTISTS IN THE RECITAL

Audience Hearing Syracuse Musicians Would Have Them Return—A Treat All Too Rare in Fulton.

The joint recital given in the First M. E. church Wednesday evening, well repaid the effort of those who faced the elements on a stormy evening to enjoy the efforts of three Syracuse musicians in a rarely artistic program.

Mrs. Anna Colton Ide, vocalist, possesses a beautiful soprano voice and a charming presence and simplicity of manner, which at once won the admiration of her hearers. Her modulation, diction and interpretation in all of her numbers was most excellent, she most graciously responding to encores.

Puccini's difficult Aria from "Madame Butterfly" was charmingly given, as were also "J'ai Pleure en Reve," by Hue; and the "Blackbird Song," by Cyril Scott. Mrs. Ide was accompanied at the piano by Prof. Vibbard and Fulton people would be pleased to welcome Mrs. Ide again.

Prof. Vibbard, as a musician, needs no introduction to many of the music loving people of Fulton, hence his friends in the audience were ready to give him an entusiastic greeting, and they did it. His performances were listened to with all the delight usual at his performances and respondes to the encores were hearty.

The "Sunshine Song," and "The Brook," by Grieg, were especially pleasing, bringing out the beautiful flute tones of the organ.

Miss Goldie Andrews, the pianist, altho a young girl, is attaining prominence as an artist, showing promise of a bright future in her profession. Her skill in technique is marvelous and her playing highly artistic. The church was prettily decorated with palms and potted plants.

CAN OF CORN, 27 YEARS OLD AND STILL GOOD

Indianapolis—Stories are published frequently regarding vegetables and fruits that have been canned many years. Some persons have an idea that fruit and vegetables lose in wholesomeness after being in cans for a long time. This idea, however, seems to be a fallacy, according to an analysis recently made by H. E. Barnard, State Food and Drug Commissioner who examined a twenty-seven-year-old can of corn.

The can of corn was submitted to Mr. Barnard by the Indiana Wholesale Grocers Association, and no doubt exists as to the age of the corn. Mr. Barnard reported to the association that the corn was found in good condition. "In regard to color, consistency and flavor." The interior of the can was bright. "Our investigation of this can of corn," Mr. Barnard reports, "is additional evidence that properly canned goods will keep indefinitely with no deterioration so far as food value is concerned and with little or no change in palatability."

GOMPERS ASSAILS U. S. RULE IN PORTO RICO

Washington—Urging the immediate passage of a bill to provide civil government for Porto Rico, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor told the Senate Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico today that the condition of laborers in Porto Rico was one of the darkest pages in American history." He said that the laborers had fewer rights under the United States than under the Spanish rule.

COLUMBIA DROPS MANY LAW STUDENTS

New York —Columbia is taking steps to keep out of the legal profession men whose character and ethics are inconsistent with the standards of the profession, according to Dean Harlan F. Stone of the law school, who said yesterday that in the five years he has been at the head of the law faculty at least two students who had satisfactorily completed courses had been denied degrees, and half a dozen more had been advised to leave the school.

Dean Stone said that in many cases it was practicable to steer a prospective lawyer whose ethics did not appear to be of the best away from the profession before he had received his legal training.

"In such a case," said the dean, "the student is called into the office and is told that Columbia would be much better off without him. He is advised too that he should not go into the law and in order that this may have effect we notify the Bar Association and the character committee in New York State and also the bar examiners of every State in the Union."

HUGHES LEADS IN PAPER POLL

Today's New York Herald sees in its poll of presidential possibilities that it's a case of Woodrow Wilson against Charles E. Hughes. The Herald says:

That is the result so far recorded in the pre-convention Presidential convass being conducted by The Nation, partial returns of which were contained in yesterday's issue of that publication. Up to yesterday a total of 2,479 qualified voters had expressed preference for the President and Justice Hughes. Theodore Roosevelt was only a lame third and Elihu Root fourth, only sixteen votes behind.

Although President Wilson is ahead in the straw test, analysis of the figures leaves ample room for conjecture regarding whether in a two man contest, he would be able to win. Of the total votes recorded Mr. Wilson received 1,084; Justice Hughes, 725; Mr. Roosevelt, 263, and Mr. Root, 247. The returns show that of those who so far have voted 1,109 voted for Mr. Wilson when he was elected in 1912. Thus, the present test shows a loss in actual strength of the President of twenty-three votes.

The combined vote of Messrs. Hughes, Roosevelt and Root is shown to be 1,234, or 149 more than the total cast for the President. Yet the President comes within 209 of one-half of tht total votes cast.

Stronger Than His Party

Another significant feature of the poll is its revelation that the President apparently is far stronger than his party. With Mr. Wilson the clearly defined choice of 1,085 qualified voters, the returns show that only 477 of those who participated in the test voted the Democratic ticket in 1912. In the test more persons voted for President Wilson than voted the republican ticket in the 1912 election. The returns show the republican ticket was voted by 1,058 of those who voted in the poll.

The combination republican lead, indicated as 149 in the votes cast for Messrs. Hughes, Roosevelt and Root, could be appreciably increased by the addition of scattered votes cast for republicans considered in the "favored sons" class. William H. Taft received 43 votes; Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, 24 votes; Senator Cummins, of Iowa, 11, and oGvernor McCall, of Massachusetts, 9. Governor Hiram Johnson, of California, Mr. Roosevelt's 1912 running mate, although his name was on the ballot, did not receive a single vote.

The vote of Justice Hughes shows him to be the unmistakable republican choice. The test shows that 1,-508 of those who participated in it usually vote the republican ticket. Of that number the returns show that 514 voted for Mr. Taft in 1912. Mr. Roosevelt's indicated vote in 1912 was 266. Thus the total is only 56 votes more than those received by Justice Hughes.

NEW YORK'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS ARE NAMED

New York—The public schools of Greater New York will not be designated by numbers in the future, for by the action of the Board of Education at its meeting yesterday a name was attached to each grammer school in the city. The prime object of these names, certain members of the board said yesterday, was to inspire the children of the schools to greater scholastic efforts by the teacher merely pointing out to the delinquent pupils the great name or place by which their school is known.

SAYS R R'S WILL FIGHT WAGE RAISE

Denver, Col.—Hale Holden, president of the Burlington and the Colorado & Southern railways, today announced that the fifty-four railroads involved in the new age increase demand by employes will resist to the end any advance, Mr Holden said.

"What the demand really means is an increase of approximately 25 per cent over present wages and an increase of 87 1-2 per cent for overtime. The public will have to pay an increase of $100,000,000 per year if the trainmen's demands are granted."

INDIANA GRADUATES TO MAKE OWN DRESSES

Warsaw, Ind.—Every girl who is graduated from the Kosciusko county common schools this year must make her own commencement dress. It must be of white cotton goods and must not cost more than $5.50. This was decided by the county Board of Education. The resolution adopted says the course in domestic science emphasizes the importance of economy, and that there is no better time to start it than a commencement time. About 150 girls will be graduated this year.

CHINESE RULER IS LOVER OF MOVIES

Serial Installment Delay Causes Disappointment.

ENJOYS LITTLE LIBERTY.

Life in the Forbidden City Affords Few Diversions, Especially Since There Have Been Some Evidences of Disloyalty—President Takes Exercise in Drilling Section of Army.

Peking.—Yuan Shih Kai is very fond of moving pictures, and he and all the members of his family attend a performance in the theater in the Forbidden City every week, when the films brought to the leading picture theater in Peking are shown for the entertainment of the Yuan household.

Recently Yuan Shih Kai, together with thousands of other interested movie patrons in Peking, has suffered a great disappointment. A mystery film to run for twelve weeks completed six installments of the story, but the seventh installment got lost somewhere in Sweden on its way over from London, and Peking was anxiously awaiting the unraveling of the plot. The young heroine of the film drama was seized by bandits when Peking last saw her, and residents of both the Forbidden City and the outer city are anxious to know more of her fate.

Life in the Forbidden City affords few diversions, especially since there have been some evidences of disloyalty among trusted employees. Consequently Yuan Shih Kai and his family enjoy little liberty.

The president takes his exercise chiefly in drilling a section of the modern army in the Forbidden City, while several of his sons play football and skate on the frozen lakes within the great walls inclosing the palace grounds.

Skating is also affording recreation for legation staffs and legation guards in Peking, which has been more or less isolated as a result of the bitter feeling growing out of the European war. Practically all of the legations have their own temporary skating rinks built in their compounds. These rinks are covered with bamboo matting to protect the ice from the sun and dust.

The American legation rink is practically the only rink in Peking where visitors of all European powers are entertained. However, the legation officers have set apart certain days for the entertainment of visitors belonging to the entente powers and different days for the German and Austrian guests.

IDEAL MAN FEARS NOTES.

News of Harvard Student's Perfect Figure Brings Scented Proposals.

Boston.—Harvard's "perfect man" is now worried over scented notes that now reach him through the mails. Other students say that as 1916 is leap year he may find much more sex problems than requests for photographs, indorsements and cast off clothes.

Bradford M. Fullerton, the ideal man, is reticent regarding the notes, but is ready to admit that being a "perfect man" has its disadvantages. This young athlete, captain of the Harvard varsity swimming team, whose measurements and posture dovetail with the specifications prescribed by the National Association of Merchant Tailors, has discovered that a young man with appropriate physique must withstand an avalanche of mail containing all sorts of proposals, queries and congratulations.

No Need of a "Front."

"That shabby looking old fellow is worth several millions."

"You surprise me. Why doesn't he wear better clothes?"

"Oh, he doesn't have to borrow any money. People come to him to borrow it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Mixed In His History.

"Was Rome founded by Romeo?" inquired a pupil of the teacher.

"No, my son," replied the wise man; "it was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."—Stray Stories.

Yes, Indeed.

"Th' meek may inhurrit th' earth, all right," murmured Uncle Ike, "but he's in luck if some one not so durned meek don't contest th' will an' git away with it!"—Judge.

ROCKING CHAIRS.

At First They Were Crude Affairs, Just Patched Up Armchairs.

"The history of the rocking chair is yet to be written," says Walter A. Dyer in "Early American Craftsmen." "According to some writers, rockers began to appear in this country before 1750, and Windsor rockers soon after the Revolution. Others assert that Windsor rockers were not made until about 1810 and that most of the so called Windsor rocking chairs are simply old armchairs cut down and fitted with rockers. Certainly none of the early advertisements or inventories included any mention of rocking chairs.

"The first rockers were merely short boards cut straight across the top and rounded on the bottom. Then the top side was shaped, and later the rocker was fashioned much as that of today except that it extended only four or five inches back of the rear legs. It was not until 1820 or so that the discovery was made that rockers lengthened behind increased the safety and comfort of the chair. During the decade following that astonishing discovery the popularity of the rocking chair spread rapidly."

An English lady visiting the United States a few years ago declared that one of the most curious sights to her upon her landing was the rocking chair, to which at first she feared to intrust herself, but later learned to enjoy most thoroughly.

EARLY RAILROADING.

The First American Made Locomotive Was Built In 1830.

The first locomotives in the United States were brought over from England by Horatio Allen of New York in the fall of 1829 or the spring of 1830, and one of them was set up on the Delaware and Hudson railroad at Carbondale, Pa.; but, being found too heavy for the track, its use was abandoned.

The first locomotive constructed in this country was built by the West Point foundry at New York in 1830 for the South Carolina railroad and named the Phoenix. A second engine was built the same year by the same establishment and for the same railroad and named the West Point.

In the spring of 1831 a third engine was built by the same establishment for the Mohawk and Hudson railroad from Albany to Schenectady and called the De Witt Clinton. This was the first locomotive run in the state of New York.

The first Stephenson locomotive ever imported into this country was the Robert Fulton. This engine was brought out in the summer of 1831 for the Mohawk and Hudson railroad. It was subsequently rebuilt and named the John Bull.

The Mystery of a Duel.

Having fought his duel and saved his honor by firing a shot in the air, the editor of a French provincial newspaper went back to his desk, and the incident had quite left his mind when he felt something strange in his thigh. He looked and found that he was bleeding profusely. A doctor was called who discovered that a bullet was imbedded in the editor's thigh some two inches deep and required extraction. "Why was this not taken notice of on the spot where the duel took place?" he asked. The editor was as much in the dark as the doctor. At the moment of the duel he had fired into the air and his adversary also took a distracted sort of aim. The editor felt nothing as he left the field and had shaken hands with his antagonist as a sign of reconciliation. How a bullet came to be lodged in his thigh was simply one of the mysteries of dueling.

Projecting Your Personality.

Can any man's life be held to be incomplete if it is continued in the life of a friend? Was Arthur Hallam's life incomplete when Tennyson prolonged it forever by "In Memoriam" or the life of Socrates when Plato continued it in his immortal dialogues? Confucius said wisely, "Have no friends not equal to yourself." By that he must have meant, "Make your friends equal to yourself by giving them freely of your best." Thus you make sure of a continued life whatever happens to yourself, as a manufacturer intrusts the secrets of his manipulations to his younger partners.—Christian Herald.

Soldiers In Napoleon's Day.

There are five things that a soldier should never be without—his gun, his cartridge, his knapsack, rations for four days and his pioneer tools. The knapsack should be reduced to the smallest posible weight and size and contain only a shirt, a pair of shoes, a collar, a handkerchief and a flint of steel. This is not much, but he should never part from them, for when once lost they cannot be recovered.—Napoleon.

One Way.

"Now, Johnny," said the teacher, "suppose you wanted to build a $1,000 house and had only $700 what would you do?"

"I 'spose I'd have to marry a girl worth $300," answered the young financier.—Kansas City Star.

Two Finds.

"I found a ten dollar bill this morning."

"That shows you are lucky. Have a gift for finding things?"

"My gift stuck by me too long. Next I found the owner."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is good discretion not to take too much of any man at the first, because one cannot hold out that proportion.—Bacon.

On St. Patrick's Night

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Nora O'Rourke," said the postman on the morning of St. Patrick's day, handing a maid who answered his whistle two letters. "Any such person here?"

"That's myself," said the girl, taking the mail. The postman went on, and she returned to the kitchen. One of the missives bore a black border and a foreign stamp. She tore off the envelope and read the contents, from her sister in Ireland:

> Dear Nora—I have to tell you some bad news. Our uncle Patrick, who has been in the grocery business in Dublin, is dead. But there's some good news too. He made a lot of money, and, not having any wife or children, he has left it all to you and me. We will have about £2,000 apiece.
> Your loving sister, BRIDGET.

The bad part of the news had little effect on Nora, for she had never seen her uncle, and the legacy of $10,000 was a matter of great delight. She was so interested in the latter that she forgot for some time to open her other letter; then she turned her attention to the other letter. It was from Patrick Doolan, asking her to go with him to the ball to be given on the night of St. Patrick's day, and he hoped that she would give him an answer to a question that he would ask her.

She knew very well what that question would be, but was in doubt as to her answer. She held in her hand the letter advising her of her legacy and her lover's note, turning from one to the other back and forth. Pat Doolan was a money maker, owning a number of teams, with which he did hauling. Nora's poverty had constrained her to consider his proposition of marriage, remembering that he would be able to keep the wolf from his and her door. But inclinations rather led her to favor young Michael O'Connor, who was bright and active, but had not the faculty of holding on to what he made. She knew that both Pat and Mike would be at the ball on St. Patrick's evening, and she laid a plan to assist her in the matter between them. During the afternoon she went to see her friend, Kathleen Clancy, and said to her:

"Kath, I'm going to say something tonight to Pat Doolan that may make him get sweet on you."

"What are you going to tell him?"

"That your uncle in Ireland is dead and has left you $10,000."

"But I haven't any uncle in Ireland."

"Never mind that. Likely Pat won't mention the matter to you. If he does don't tell him the truth till tomorrow, and I'll give you something pretty."

Nora went to the ball with Pat and on the way told him that she knew a girl who that morning had received a legacy of £2,000 by the death of an uncle in Ireland. Pat asked who was the girl, and Nora gave him to understand that she was Kathleen Clancy.

During the evening Pat did not refer to the answer to his proposition. Kathleen, not being a very pretty girl, was something of a wall flower.

"I'm sorry for the poor girl," said Pat, "sittin' around with no one to ask her to dance. I'm minded to go and ask her myself."

"That's right," said Nora. "She'll appreciate the attention."

Pat asked Kathleen to dance and, having danced with her once, he concluded to ask her again. Meanwhile Mike O'Connor danced with Miss O'Rourke. He asked her to dance with him again, but she declined. To do so would not have accorded with her plan.

When Pat and Nora were going home from the ball, instead of pressing her for an answer to his proposal, he said to her:

"Nora, I don't like your dancing with that miserable fellow, O'Connor."

"I only danced with him once."

"That's enough. You shouldn't have danced with him at all."

"I'm sorry," said Nora, with apparent penitence.

When Pat left her at the door she said to him:

"I suppose you don't want the answer you said you were lookin' for?"

"Not tonight. I'm thinkin' about your dancing with that spalpeen O'Connor. Maybe I'll get over it in time."

"That won't do you any good, for I won't get over what you've done this night. It's not Kathleen, whose uncle in Ireland has died and left her $10,000, but my own uncle has left that money to me. I told you it was Kathleen to see if you could be switched off by a bait of a legacy, and I've found that you don't value me so much as the fortune. Good night and goodby."

"Nora"—he began in a supplicating tone, but he got no further, for she shut the door in his face.

When Nora and Kathleen met again Nora learned that Pat had not mentioned the legacy, but he had asked Kathleen to go to a ball with him to come off a week later. Then Nora told her friend that inasmuch as she had helped her to find out that the man she had thought of marrying could be so easily turned away from her she would keep her promise to give her something pretty. When she received her fortune she presented her friend with a set of furs.

Nora married Mike O'Connor, and under her tutelage in careful expenditure of moneys he became prosperous. Kathleen was dropped by Doolan, who was beside himself with chagrin when he learned how he had been tricked. He never forgave Nora O'Rourke for having fooled him, but what she had done made her really more desirable.

SPRING SPORT SUIT.

For Young Ladies Is This Smart Suit of Toweling.

A 1916 MODEL.

This texture is one of the season's novelties, a polka dotted cotton toweling in blue and white. The skirt is cut with a wide inverted plait to give fullness, while the coat is yoked as well as paneled in front, this portion being buttoned on with novelty pearl buttons. The trim little black straw turban is also smart.

YOUR RUGS.

How Bright Ones May Cheer Up Dark Rooms.

One may select a very bright rug of the oriental order to gladden a room from which the sun is excluded, and according to the colors of the cloth cushions the wall paper is tempered as are also the mural decorations and the hangings. For the room where repose is sought subdued colors are recommended, and these are to be had in some of the beautiful Persian patterns that go very well with reproductions of eighteenth century English furniture.

When one cannot afford the large rugs and there is doubt of any kind as to the proper carpet it is well to have the floor laid with a perfectly plain color in good quality domestic weave, and thereon spread here and there the small oriental rugs. For an informal room the effect is infinitely more pleasing than when one large rug is used.

The Most Feminine Texture.

The other day a woman said, "If I had a lot of money I'd wear silk all the time." The richness of the material makes it one to be greatly desired and admired, and this season there are so many varieties of silks on the market that one could find a different kind for every day in the week.

Crepe meteor is among the many silks to be obtained. It was used in a soft shade of gray for a gown seen a short while ago. Heavily padded embroidery in blue and gray wool was added effectively to ornament the blouse and the skirt.

A novel feature of the skirt was the use of chiffon panels, which were so full that they added extra width to the skirt, which was not very scant before their appearance.

The waist line was very nicely defined by silver rosebuds. The crocheted rings and tassels suspended from the belt were gray. Sealskin formed the hem of the skirt and the abbreviated collar of the blouse.

Timely Tips.

If the dainty crepe de chine blouse shrinks a bit after its first laundering and—as many of these ready made blouses do—becomes just a trifle too scant to cross the bust, the edges at the front may be faced all the way down with similar material and the blouse worn open over a chemisette of organdie. These chemisettes in all manner of pretty styles come ready to slip under the bodice, and for the purpose just described the best model is one which opens slightly at the back, kept crisply in position by a bit of stiffening.

Knickerbocker Figs.

Wash half a pound of figs and stuff each with a mixture of pecan nuts and maraschino cherries, two cherries to three nut meats. Mix a teaspoonful of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a cupful of sherry in a small saucepan, add the figs, cover and cook slowly until the figs are tender. Let them drain, roll in powdered sugar and put into paper cases if you like.

The Candy Corner.

PEPPERMINTS.—One and one half cupfuls sugar, one half cupful boiling water, six drops oil of peppermint. Put sugar and water into granite saucepan and stir until dissolved. Boil ten minutes; be sure it really boils; remove from fire, add peppermint, and beat till smooth enough to drop from tip of spoon on wax paper. Get some of the vegetable colors sold in grocery stores and color some of these a light green; flavor some others with rose and color pink.

The small jars of coloring are harmless and will make your candies look quite professional.

Molasses Candy.—Two cupfuls Porto Rico molasses, two-thirds cupful sugar, three tablespoonfuls butter, one tablespoonful vinegar.

Put butter in kettle, place over fire, and when melted add molasses and sugar; boil and stir until, when tried in cold water, mixture becomes brittle; add vinegar just before taking from the fire. Pour into well buttered pans. Pull when cool enough to handle; cut into pieces with large shears and place on buttered pans till cool; then wrap each piece in paraffin paper.

Puffed Rice Brittle.—This is another wholesome candy relished by every one—crisp the rice in the oven before using: One cupful of granulated sugar, one half cupful of water. Boil together five minutes; add two tablespoonfuls of molasses, butter size of walnut, half a teaspoonful of salt. Boil until it hardens in cold water. Take from fire and stir in one half package puffed rice. Pour into buttered pans.

Another advantage of making these candies at home is the inexpensiveness of them as compared with the rich candies one buys often made of inferior materials. The pleasure you will find in making the candy for your family, or in having some members of the family help you make it, will add to the satisfaction.

Malted Milk Fudge.—One-half can condensed milk, two-thirds cupful of water, one tablespoonful of butter, three heaping tablespoonfuls of malted milk, two cupfuls of granulated sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, two ounces of unsweetened chocolate.

Boil ten minutes, stirring continually while cooking. After removing from the fire stir until mixture begins to thicken. Pour in a shallow dish, previously buttered, to harden. Omit chocolate if you wish a plain vanilla fudge.

Postage Stamps as Money.

An interesting innovation has been introduced in Russia owing to the scarcity of small coins. To meet the difficulty postage stamps of the value of 10, 15 and 20 kopecks have since Oct. 1 been in use as paper money. At the same time they can be used for postage, but they are printed on stouter paper and have an overprint on the back in black which denotes the new use to which they have been put.

Might Work Next Time.

A Washington girl has put a new wrinkle into leap year. Instead of popping, she simply got a marriage license and coyly showed it to the young man when he called. It should be added that the scheme didn't work. The young man took the license back and had it canceled.—Boston Globe.

A Flying Boat Record.

An altitude of 11,000 feet was attained recently by Lieutenant R. C. Saufley, U. S. N., in a flying boat, a new record for this type. But it cannot officially be so recorded because the aircraft recording pen ran off the sheet at 9,000 feet.—New York Times.

Natural Mineral Wax.

Ozocerite is a natural mineral wax, found originally oozing in small quantities from rocks of the coal formation. It has been discovered in Moldavia and Galicia and is used chiefly in candle making.

Resonance of Jade.

The remarkable resonance of jade is a peculiar quality, which gives it great importance in Chinese estimation; to such an extent that "singers' chimes" of twenty-four different pieces and tones were sometimes constructed. Occasional use is also made of the natural form of the jade bowlders, which are found in river beds.

One of a Kind.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

May Be Smock or Blouse.

Taking advantage of the freedom allowed in such matters this blouse is designed to be worn with or without a belt. It is suitable to development in serge, jersey cloth or flannel.

There is a very intimate relation between the smock and the Russian blouse, the difference being principally a matter of waist finish. The design shown here may be worn with or without a belt and is ideal for athletic wear. Carried out in flannel or serge, the blouse is built upon a sleeveless underbody. The neck is finished with a high turnover collar and has a V-shaped line at the front. A yoke forming a stole effect at the front acts as support for the front and back of the blouse, these sections being daintily gathered at the upper edges.

One yard of 36-inch lining is needed for the foundation, while the blouse calls for 3½ yards 44-inch serge. If the skirt is made also, 5⅝ yards of serge will be needed.

There are only two parts to the lining, and they are cut from the folded material, the back being laid along the lengthwise fold. The front is laid on the lengthwise thread.

The back of the blouse is laid on a lengthwise fold of the serge, as shown in the center cutting guide, with the back of the yoke to the left. The front yoke (F) is laid on a lengthwise thread, but is cut from the folded edge.

Now, take an open width of material and place the front of the blouse on a lengthwise thread so that the straight edge will rest on the selvage edge. The cuffs, sleeve and collar are laid on a lengthwise thread also. The open material is laid on the cutting table in double width so that the sections of the pattern laid on it will be cut in duplicate.

The smock offers wide opportunities for trimming, but the most effective decoration would be a fold about the lower edge of the peplum and a yoke of the same trimming.

About Club Sandwiches

The club sandwich forms an ideal quick luncheon with a cup of chocolate or tea. It is a delicious after theater tidbit. Moreover, it is easy to make in the dining room with the aid of a chafing dish or electric toaster. It has so many varieties that it can be served frequently without becoming monotonous.

To begin with, its foundation is a slice of hot buttered toast at the bottom and another at the top. Between these two slices there must be lettuce and mayonnaise and boiled or fried bacon. Besides these ingredients many other things can be used.

Perhaps what one may call the conventional club sandwich contains on the foundation slice of toast a crisp piece of lettuce, a spoonful of thick mayonnaise, a slice of chicken breast, two crisp slices of bacon, a slice of tomato, more lettuce and mayonnaise and the cover of toast.

Instead of the tomato a slice of tomato jelly may be used, or some shreds of sweet green or red pepper or sliced sweet gherkins or sliced stuffed olives may be used.

Or else over the toast may be spread a mixture of chopped celery and mayonnaise or chopped sweet pepper and mayonnaise or chopped olives and mayonnaise.

Fish paste may also be used instead of the chicken, with or without the bacon. Sardines, boned and skinned and rubbed to a paste with mayonnaise, are good.

The lower slice of toast may be spread with a thin coating of pate de foie gras, then the chicken, bacon and mayonnaise can be added, then lettuce and the top slice of toast—with or without the slice of tomato.

ABOUT FLOUNCES.

How Skirts May Be Adorned a la Mode.

Artistic effects are achieved with skirts showing flounces of different colors and materials. For instance, a dress in myrtle green faille, trimmed with jet and kolinski fur, has a two flounced skirt; upper flounce is green, the lower one is black peau de soie. The coat is also in black peau de soie, and it completely covers the green flounce. In another case a two flounced skirt will have a third flounce falling from the waist to veil the upper flounce of the skirt in some very thin material like mousseline or net, sometimes plain, sometimes embroidered. The effect is very delicate and pretty, and the fashion of flounces generally is one which leaves a wide scope for variation and adaptation. A very young and pretty model shows a ribbon skirt in vertical lines, each being juxtaposed and finished off by a tiny rose.

Welsh Rabbit.

Shave very fine or grate a good one half pound medium cheese. Set this aside. In a saucepan pour two large cupfuls of milk. When scalding hot add one tablespoonful of butter. Mix one heaping tablespoonful of corn starch, a dash of cayenne pepper, one quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one half teaspoonful of mustard and one half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, with a little cold water. Stir into scalding milk and cook about five minutes; then add the grated cheese. Serve on crisp buttered toast.

Creamed Tuna Fish in Chafing Dish.

Materials.—One can tuna fish, two tablespoonfuls butter, a tablespoonful flour, salt, cayenne and a little grated nutmeg, a cupful milk, a squeeze of lemon juice, a wineglassful of sherry.

Directions.—Open the can of fish some time before it is to be served. Melt the butter, add to it the flour, salt, cayenne and nutmeg. When smooth add the milk, then the fish and lemon juice and lastly the wine. Cook five minutes and serve on crackers or toast.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Two deep frills of frothy lace hemmed with soft satin and dropped over a foundation of charmeuse, form the skirt that is worn with the exquisite bodice of this frock. The lace is in cream color, the satin in pink, the foundation is in a delicious shade of pink and this tone is repeated in the artificial roses on the belt and bead passamenterie about the deep V-cut neck. In medium size the costume requires 6 yards 36-inch deep lace and 5 yards 36-inch satin.

HER BORROWED ROBE.

It Brought an Actress the Most Perilous Moment of Her Life.

"The only time I ever was a thief saved my life," said Rose Coghlan once. "My sister-in-law, Louisa Thornton, was playing in 'Colleen Bawn' in Scotland. I was Anne Chute, one of the bridesmaids, and I always dressed in Louisa's room with her.

"This particular night she was ill, and her understudy went on. Now, it happened that I had longed and longed to wear a certain costume of Louisa's. It wasn't one bit suitable for a girl of my age in a bridesmaid part, being made of heavy white corded silk with a long court train and all the fixings, but I adored it.

"I dressed up in it and went out to wait for the cue with the other girls. Just as we were ready to go on some one behind me said, 'Rose, your dress is on fire!'

"I think that is the most fearful word that can sound in a theater—'Fire!' My train had caught fire from one of the little gas footlights, unprotected then.

"The girls in their light dresses were trying to get away from me, and the nearest man, Hardress, was handcuffed. I crushed my train in my hands to smother the creeping flame and backed off down the steps under the stage. A man down there threw a heavy cloak over me, and I fainted. I was burned badly around my hands and arms and neck, but the heavy silk dress saved me."—New York World.

Would Help Him.

"I'll try to make you a good husband, my dear."

"And I have no doubt that you will succeed. Mother and I will abet your efforts in that direction vigorously."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Harsh Order.

On the beach near an English town a sign bearing this legend was nailed to a post:

"Notice.—Any person passing beyond this point will be drowned. By order of the magistrate."

Pity the Congregation.

An old Scotch minister told his assistant that he felt more fatigued hearing him than in preaching himself. The assistant replied that he experienced a similar feeling when his senior was in the pulpit.

"Then," rejoined the minister, "I peety the folk that have to hear us baith!"—Youth's Companion.

BRITAIN RAISES AGE LIMIT

London—Rumor in the lobby of the House of Commons last night was busy with the discussion of a possible abinet crisis over the question of the enlitment of married men. According to some reports Mr. David Lloyd George dtsires compulsion for all men of military age, while the Premier, Mr. Asquith, is opposed to any such measures.

The London morning newspapers still discuss the recruiting difficulties at great length. The Times takes the leading place as the advocate of universal compulsion. The Chronicle, on the other side, supports the government's present position. It declares:

"Many of the loudest critics of Mr. Asquith's attitude are far more anxious to overthrow the Prime Minister and destroy the coalition government than to add men to the army."

The Morning Post says: 'The people cannot understand the present state of affairs. But what they have begun to understand is that so long as the present Premier remains this state of things will continue. Nor is it difficult to see whither it is tending."

The Times says: "The only possible remedy for the present muddle is to extend the military service act to all men of military age, married or single alike, and thus abolish the manifest unfairness of a system which is blending of the least desirable elements of both. The main count against the government at the present time is that during Lord Derby's canvass married men were deliberately induced to attest on the plain understanding that those who held back would be less favorably treated than those who attested."

likely to be attempted within the next few weeks. The paper continues:

"If it is attempted, it will be a serious attempt. Some reasons for it are that it will become necessary to provide an energetic policy for the beneht of the flagging German public opinion—and all the more necessary if the Verdun offensive finally fails.

"The expected combined offensive of all the allies must be prevented, if possible, and the readiest method is to immobilize a large part of the British army for Continental warfare by the needs of home defense.

"It must never be forgotten that the British command of the sea is only provisional.

"We hold the sea because the Germans have not challenged it. The navy is ready to meet the challenge when it comes, but until the enemy's fleet is sunk, command of the sea will not be absolute.'"

THE QUIRK TODAY

World Film Corporation presents a five-part photoplay, "The Grey Mask" based on a story of the some name by Charles Wadsworth Camp.

The story deals with a band of criminals who have killed a young police inspector named Joe Kridel. The gang is joined by Simmons, who wear a grey mask covers a wound caused by an explosion. Jim Garth, a young inspector, is told off to trial the gang and as an aid in his work he assumes a grey mask, with the design of impersonating Simmons.

Jim Garth, is in love with Nora, his inspector's daughter, but she holds him aloof, for she has sworn to avenge the murder of the man she loved, Joe Kridel.

The police get after the gang and by the aid of his disguise Garth, gets into the gang who are caught of robbing a safe of a valuable explosive. Nora also learns the name of Joe's murderer, and out of gratitude to Jim for her devotion she gives him her hand.

This is a story of great strength, based on a logical, consistent plot. Edwin Arden is the young detective, Jim Garth, and the part of Nora is in the hands of Barbara Tennant.

"A Beast of Society," in three-parts Weekly No. 7, and four acts of good vaudeville will also be shown.

WAITE CHARGED WITH MURDER

New York—A woman, not his wife, was the subject of the first words of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, dentist, when he shook off for a moment yesterday the effect of narcotic drugs he had taken in large quantities. From his bed, in his apartment at Riverside Drive and 116th street, he looked into the faces of District Attorney Swann and detectives. The latter await the dentist's return to a normal state to arrest him by direction of District Attorney on a charge of wilful murder of John E. Peck, of Grands Rapids, Mich.

The Grand Jury yesterday began investigation of the death of Mr. Peck. Dora Hiller, a maid employed by the Waites, told that Dr. Waite had poured a liquid into soup which the girl was preparing in the kitchen for Mr. Peck and just before the latter's final fatal illness poured liquid into the tea the cook wos preparing for Mr. Peck. Dr. Albertus Adair Moore, acting with Mr. Swann, found medical text books in the library of Dr. Waite with passages concerning poisons, especially arsenic, marked. Arsenic was found in the stomach and other parts of the body of Mr. Peck.

The bank balance of Dr. Waite in the Plaza branch of the Fifth Avenue Trust company and a safe deposit box he has elsewhere were seized by the District Attorney, after receipt of a telegram from investigators now in Grand Rapids, who reported that Dr. Waite is accused of obtaining large sums of money upon false representations.

Evidence upon which District Attorney Swann ordered the arrest of Dr. Waite and placed the Peck death before the Grand Jury involves the assumption by the county prosecutor, as reported in his office yesterday, that Mrs. Hannah E. Peck was killed by poison six weeks before her husband died from arsenic administered with homicidal intent and that the death of Mrs. Clara Louis Waite, their daughter, was to be the next step in the acruisition of the fortune of nearly $2,000,000 of John E. Peck by his slayer.

SHIPPERS MEET TO END FREIGHT JAM

New York—Representatives of 100 of them ost important shippers in the country met at the Merchants Association yesterday and sought to devise means by which to clear that unprecedented congestion of freight in the port of New York and along the Northern and Western railroads. Several men suggested that the railroads be required to place a five day embargo on freight and during that time exert all their efforts to clean up their lines and deliver the delayed cars, many of which are from two to four weeks behind schedule.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

THE MOST ELABORATE AFFAIR EVER PULLED OFF IN FULTON—will be the CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BANQUET to be held Monday, April 3rd, 1916.

* * *

Don't forget that Fulton Fashion Days are March 29th, 30th and 31st. Come down and see what OUR MERCHANTS have to offer you. We are sure you will be delighted to find just what you have been looking for right in the City of Fulton.

* * *

Work for something,n ot for nothing. It is not wise to live just for the fleeting moment or just for today. Without some aim, one's time and work go for naught. The years go by and he has nothing to show for them. If not advancing, we are falling back. If not keeping alive, growing to something better and higher, we are becoming weaker and of less worth. Even though we never reach the goal, we have made some advance in striving for it. A good aim, a real purpose in life, makes worth of character. All have not the same tastes. There is a wide field from which to choose what one will work for. And this is well. The one, universal aim is the same, to live truer, better lives from day to day. A life without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder. Want of motive makes life dreary and monotonous—nothing satisfies. Better little talent and much purpose than much talent and little purpose. Aim for something worth while and keep your mark steadily in view. Life will mean much more to you. You will be more useful to the world, you will find more satisfaction in living.

"If you didn't include it in your New Year's resolutions, you can put it in a supplement—that you will clean up your premises before the warm days of spring make you do it."

If it were possible for the parents of an average home to see in a single pile all the small coins spent during the year by their family they would no doubt be amazed.

The reckless nickel-spending habit is not confined to the children by any means. How many good, hard-headed business men are continuously handing out small coins for things that gratify a moment's whim. There are women innumerable who are most careful in home management and self-denying in their own wardrobes who will literally "load up" with trifles merely because the cost is little. The result is more than the dropping of bits of money; their homes are cluttered up with these cheap things, until neat housekeeping is impossible.

Apples half eaten, nothing finished up, new supplies of all kinds before they are needed, nothing more than half used. It is the result of abundance, with no idea of an end hereto.

It has all come about in one generation. How our grandfathers and grandmothers hoarded their small possessions, mended their toys and cherished bright-colored cards.

The compexity of modern living lies not merely in our having too many, in more books and papers than we can possibly read, more clothes than we can wear or care for, more utensils than we have need of, and so on through a long list.

FIRST ARRIVALS IN HONOR OF FULTON'S SPRING FASHION SHOW

"Ch-e-e-r up" announced three members of the Robin Redbreast family from the tip-top of a tree on the Newton farm, Emery Road, early this morning.

Mr. H. A. Sutton overheard the message, but not being versed in Robin language was unable to translate. However he stated the three looked like members of a happy family. As a possibility it might be suggested that the three were making an excursion to Fulton in anticipation of Fashion Week. While it is known Robins do not change their style of dress, yet it is interesting to note whether, Dame Fashion has ordained cherries for the ladies' hats this season.

Gage Property Changes Owners; Important Developments Awaited

Mr. Frederick A. Gage announced today the consummation of a deal whereby the Gage mill situated at the intersection of Oneida and 1st sts., adjoining the proposed market site, will be taken over by a new stock company headed by C. H. Elwell, formerly of the Oswego Milling Co., Oswego. The plants will be remodeled to manufacture products similar to those made by the Oswego concern, one of which will be chicken feed. The Oswego firm maintains about 100 men in this one department and at certain seasons is required to employ a force of men night and day.

Associated with Mr. Elwell will be Mr. Gage and other men, including James H. Mackin, of Oswego, and H. P. Burgard, of Buffalo. The Oswego Milling company is said to load and consign as many as two hundred carloads in a week which is taken as an indication of what may be done here in the future.

The location of the Gage mill is a desirable one in more ways than one, especially in view of the fact that it can be made easily accessible for shipping goods, as the filled in canal land will enable the building of a railroad siding with comparative ease.

Mr. Gage refused today to make known the future plans of the company although it is certain that it will increase its working force to a great extent.

WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy tonight and Sunday. Probably rain. Warmerr tonight with moderate east winds becoming variable.

A FULTONIAN'S HALO LOST HEREABOUTS

Lost—A halo. To substantiate the foregoing the following bit of conversation was overhead in East First street yesterday.

"You ain't no saint." Answer. "Well, I know I ain't no saint now."

If a lost, strayed or stolen halo should be found hereabouts the fact should be reported at once. However, care should be taken that no false alarm is rung as it is very easy, and especially at this season, to mistake this article for a stovepipe collar.

THREE CHURCHES UNITE TOMORROW EVENING

Congregations of but three of the city's churches will join hands in holding services at the Baptist church tomorrow evening, the result of unbreakable arrangements made by the pastors of the First M. E. and Congregational churches. Long ago, or prior to the time when it was decided to hold union services on this particular evening, the Rev. Mr. Barrett and the Rev. Mr. Olmstead announced a program for the day in their respective churches, and they regret the occurrence keenly.

REV. ROBERT GRIESSER AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

The Rev. Robert Griesser of Syracuse will be the preacher at All Saints' church at Evensong on next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. For the past few years Mr. Griesser has been a missionary at Soochow, China, and has recently returned to this country. At present he is priest in charge at St. Paul's church in Syracuse. Mr. Griesser is a preacher of marked ability, and power. The services will begin promptly at 7;30 p.m. and all are cordially invited to attend.

S. C. HUNTER FILES BANKRUPTCY PETITION

Utica—Samuel C. Hunter of Fulton filed a petition in bankruptcy today, with liabilities of $784,796, and with nominal assets of $676,602. His debts and assets are closely connected with those of the Battle Island Paper Co. and the Hunter Arms Co. whose liabilities are $730,150. He was an endorser of notes for the two companies as well as the Parker Transmission company.

DR. GALDMAN ATTENDING McGILL ALUMNI DINNER

Dr. E. A. Gladman left the city last night ,to attend the twenty-first annual meeting and dinner of the alumni of McGill University, which is to be held in New York city tonight.

McGill University is located in Montreal, Canada, Dr. Gladman being the only graduate of that institution in this immediate vicinity. He anticipates a most interesting meeting, as there are to be many Canadian physicians present who have served in the European war and should be replete with information.

Germans Trap French Cutting Line at Three Points; 2500 Captives

Berlin—The battle in the forest of Malancourt, reported yesterday, began at 8 o'clock in the morning. Till 6 o'clock in the afternoon German drum fire was directed on the French forest positions, where they held the old line in great strength.

At 6 o'clock the infantry attacked. The fight lasted till 10 o'clock at night, as the French stubbornly defended every yard of ground.

Nevertheless the Germans broke through in three places. The territory held by the French in this vicinity is now attacked from three sides. The French are now in a sack, the opening of which is only five kilometres wide (slightly over three miles.)

The number of prisoners is officially reported at 2,500 but this nunber will be greatly exceeded when the final count is made of men now in hiding.

The Germans are surprised by their own small losses and by the number of prisoners taken.

Further successes have been won by the Germans in the vicinity of Haucourt, northwest of Verdun. Army Headquarters announced today. Two additional trenches have been occupied.

CHANNEL STEAMSHIP DISABLED OFF DIEPPE

London —The cross channel steamship Sussex, bound from Folkestone to Dieppe with, it is believed many Americans among the 386 passengers on board, met with a serious accident early yesterday evening when nearing Dieppe. The American Embassy and Consulate General in London heard last night the vessel was torpedoed, but up to this hour there has been no official confirmation of the report. All the passengers are believed to be safe, since she was afloat and in charge of a tugboat at ten o'clock.

The Sussex left Folkestone at twenty minutes past one o'clock yesterday afternoon flying the French flag, and met with mishap somewhere off Dieppe at seven o'clock in the evening. When the alarm signal was sent out vessels in the vicinity hurried to her assistance.

According to a news dispatch the steamship was passing Beachy Head when a submarine approached and discharged a torpedo at her. Her commander was Captain Mouffet. London was much exercised by the early reports, but later advices, which indicated that no loss of life had occurred, served to quiet the throngs about the Brighton Railroad's Continental shipping office.

The accident to the Sussex was thefi rst that has happened to any British of French Channel vessel since the beginning of the war. The Sussex wasm aking her first daylight passage between Folkestone and Dieppa in a fortnight.

"CHILDLIKE AND BLAND"

There is an enticing flavor of opera bouffe in the announcement from Pekin that China has stopped being a monarchy and has again become a republic.

The deliciously easy transfer of an enormous empire back to a pre-revolution status by a scrap of scrip might provoke the features of a hippopotamus to mirthful mobility. The joke receives a culminating touch by the solemn statement of the mandate that the demand for a monarchical government not being unanimous, Yuan Shi Kai rejects the emperorship and resumes the presidency.

We suspect that that "gay and festive cuss" Yuan Shi Kai is about as much of an emperor as he ever was.

And across the Oriental seas we shoot him our congratulations on having demonstrated his claim to rank as the boss humorist of the age.—Buffalo Times.

PASTORS AND BUSINESS

The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's name was a good one for business. The doctor was known from coast to coast. Promoters saw the value of his name and capitalized it to sell stock in a candy concern in which the clergyman was interested. Usually the man whose name is magic in extracting dollars is given stock. But it appears that so eloquent were the promoters that the good doctor parted with more than $80,000 good money himself. He now mourns its loss. Occasionally a clergyman appears who has a business head and makes a lot of money. But as a rule clergymen are not good business men. It is strange that they should venture into commercial life which must absorb time and attention needed in their calling. It is remarkable how many folk will part with money in a venture in which a clergyman is interested. That is the pathetic feature of ministers' embarking in commerce. — Watertown Standard.

DOES SUFFRAGE DESERVE ANOTHER CHANCES

The somewhat belated, but altogether satisfactory, action of the Senate of the State Judiciary Committee on the woman suffrage amendment places that measure well on its journey through the upper branch of the Legislature. There seems little doubt of its passage. There should be none, if no further parliamentary hurdles are placed in its course.

All the Suffragists ask and all they have asked at any time, is a fair and free vote on their proposal. To that every consideration of justice and—what is sometimes more potent at Albany—of political expediency entitles them. The vote they polled last fall was large enough to deserve for the principle which called it forth liberal treatment at the hands of any wise body of lawmakers. It is certain that there has been no falling away from the suffrage standard. It is altogether likely that the votes-for-women cohorts are stronger numerically than they were then.

Woman suffrage is not to be downed!—N. Y. Tribune.

THIS MONOPLY CRIES FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Speaking of the initiative and referendum—how long do you suppose the people of these boroughs would endure the outrageous telephone tariffs if they had the power to direct legislation?

California cities have the power of direct legislation, as well as the State. San Francisco and Oakland are the New York and Brooklyn of California. With about one-seventh the population spread over fully as much territory, the telephone rates in the California twin cities would naturally be higher than here.

Yet a subscriber in Oakland gets a telephone, with unlimited calls, at a monthly rate of $2.50.

And a subscriber in Brooklyn is compelled to pay $5 a month for 100 calls—about three calls a day—and an extra charge of 5 cents for each call over the limit.

This is simply extortion. No wonder the telephone monopoly is worried to find investments for its millions upon millions of profits.

Just to add a touch of irritation to extortion, the subscriber must deposit a cash sum before their telephone Majesties will sell him goods at all; and then they deliver at their leisure, taking as many days as they choose to install instruments and as many minutes as the operator plaeases to make connections.

If ever a public utility deserved to be seized and conducted under public ownership it is this telephone service. And when you folks wake up and adopt direct legislation you will be able to have cheaper and better telephone service, with the profits going into the bank accounts of private individuals.

Think this over the next time you are waiting upon the leisurely convenience of the telephone monopoly. —N. Y. ...ican.

INALIENABLE RIGHTS

That man has been born with certain inalienable rights no one is willing to dispute. That a property owner buys certain inalienable rights with his bit of real estate is an assured fact—but he doesn't always live to see these rights asserted. Indeed, he may even be unconscious of possessing these rights.

For instance, a man with the best of intentions may buy a plot of ground and erect thereon "a wee hoosie," as Lauder would say. He might grade his plot, mow his lawn, plant and weed his posies, also bask in the shelter of his vine wreathed porch and still not control the beauty of his own immediate door yard. His neighbor on one side may be an empty lot where burdocks, weeds, tin cans, ashes, etc., hold every foot of space in severe accounts. On the other side of this beauty loving orderly neighbor may live a family of common folks. Their chicks run wild and make havoc mid the flowers, the children following in their example. Every little zephyr sends a host of papers drifting across the orderly lawn and even the "yaller" dog forsakes the back yard where ashes and garbage are in strict rivalry, and digs up a few bean hills in the "crank's" garden to plant a bone. Then, what becomes of the man who bought his inalienable rights along with his property? The chances are that if he is a real man, and he must have been else he wouldn't be so orderly, he will do one of two things. He will either cuss his neighbors yearly, or else he will hike to the Chamber of Commerce, become a member, if he has not yet done so, and then get on the Clean-Up Committee. The latter course is the one most advised by those who have experienced conditions as described in the foregoing sentences. The latter is also described as being more beneficial to one's neighbors and their neighbor's neighbors.

Certainly, a man should do as he pleases with his property — if in so doing he benefits his neighbor's property as well as his own. When he does anything else than this he is a menace to a community and should be looked after and hauled up speedily just as surely as any other type of public nuisance. Every community owes this protection to its law abiding, health seeking, beauty creating citizenry.

Clean-Up campaigns are lovely affairs, but a few good laws carefully planned and put into strict effect would work greater wonders. A good law, rigidly enforced, may surely be said to clear the very ozone and make the little flowers grow.

LOGIC OF THE ROAD BUILDER

Senator Elon R. Brown of Watertown interrupted a hearing on Wednesday on a bill designed to do the square thing by this city to say:

"The entire highway system of the State is in danger of being ruined by automobile trucks.

"I had a conference with Edwin Duffy, Highway Commissioner, today, and he tells me there are highways within five miles of where we are that may be ruined within sixty days."

The "entire highway system of the State" we take to mean the State highways; and these were authorized, designed and constructed after the internal explosion engine became a fact that every road builder had to reckon with. Were they, then, laid out without regard to the use on their surfaces of motor trucks? Was it supposed by their designers that such vehicles would avoid them and run across lots? Or in their unsubstantial and unfit qualities is the State to learn another lesson in the science of politico-physics, with the later history of which they are so intimately connected?—N. Y. Sun.

MR. WILSON A GOOD FRIEND—TO ENGLAND

London—The Daily Telegraph this morning, commenting editorially on Mr. Roosevelt's new book, "Fear God and Take Your Own Part," almost evry page of which, it says, is an indictment of President Wilson's foreign policy, declares:

"Failing a radical change in the international situation, the issues set forth will dominate the coming campaign in the United States and render the election one of them ost momentous i American history."

The Daily Telegraph believes that unless the Mexican situation develops so as to overshadow Europe's great conflagration President Wilson may find war unavoidable or feel called upon to enact the role of meditator, which role Mr. Roosevelt enacted in the war between Russia and Japan ten years ago.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

A writer in Leslie's Weekly warns readers to beware of tipsters, who are now coming strongly to the front. He uses an argument of self evident truth when he says that a man who has valuable information will use it himself and a man doesn't pick up diamonds to give them away. The advice closes as follows:

"The tipster knows no more about Wall street than any one else. He doesn't even think he knows more, for he knows he does not. Any one can watch the trend of public events and the reports of the earnings of corporations. Any one can guess whether news dispatches indicate that we may be drawn into difficulties with foreign nations or whether great strikes will interfere with prosperity or whether the crops promise to be disappointing. There are only a few great essential factors to be considered, and you need no tipster to help you out if you are observant, careful and conservative. The greatest need is common sense, which means good judgment, caution and prudence combined with thrift."

One thing or two which ought not to be lost sight of in sizing up Germany's preparedness by way of an example for this country is the matter of roads. Germany has shown the world what part the railroads, stretching and criss-crossing from border to border, have to do with military efficiency. The war thus far has been outside, and mainly only through lines were called into use. But invasion and battle on the home soil are equally well provided for by a vast system of highways for vehicles. Any imitation of Germany's preparedness which can be depended upon in a crisis should include good roads bearing toward all points of the compass, with connecting lateral roads along the border and the coast. True, they might help forward invasion, but they surely would enable defenders to meet the foe half or three-quarters of the way in half the time that it would take by the town and county highways.

A bill before congress provides for the establishment of a national park service in the department of the interior. Aside from their possible value as a commercial asset to keep at home the cash formerly taken abroad by our globe trotters, the widely scattered park areas should have a higher and more important value as national playgrounds—to develop habits of outdoor life. Not alone physical vigor of the grosser sort, but moral and mental health and sanity spring from life in the open. Safeguarding and improving the parks for playgrounds for the people is a proper function for legislation and one not likely at present to be overdone.

Incompetence of drivers, recklessness and intoxication were proved the chief causes of the 86,000 automobile arrests in New York city in 1915. When conservative people declared against automobiles on much used thoroughfares the auto was defended as a business necessity. Yet, according to the New York showing, the greatest menace of the machines to life and limb is due to evils not at all necessary and for that reason inexcusable.

After the recognition of Carranza as the chief of the de facto government of Mexico the next important step is a national election to ratify that choice. Delay in calling this election is portentous unless the reason lies in an honest conviction that under present conditions a real declaration of the popular will is impossible.

The postoffice department proposes to have United States mails transported over certain difficult routes by aeroplanes. Carrying capacity of only 3,000 pounds is required, and this ought not to be difficult, since war air craft in Europe carry upward of 10,000 pounds, counting crew and armament.

By the way, what shall it profit the people to be safeguarded in life and limb by the newfangled street cars if they are to be poisoned by the foul air which prevails in some of these pens?

According to the Hobson theory, Japan must be anxiously watching Goethals' heroic attempts to make the Panama ditch keep open.

If whipping is restored to the schools the young idea of the nation will need no further incentive to teach itself how to shoot.

Nations may crawl out of obeying laws which they have never agreed to, but that won't go for the "man in the street."

By voting a bigger kindergarten for our navy congress shows that it is not too proud to get ready to fight.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS
President American Society for Thrift

Soon after the outbreak of the European War there was financial stringency in Canada, and much discussion was indulged in by Canadians on the subject of the high cost of living. The political leaders, professors of economics, and captains of industry, were all asked for their opinions and advice. The man whose opinion carries more weight than anybody else's in Canada, said the trouble above all things was due to the extravagant modes of living, and urged all good Canadians to practice thrift in their private and public expenditures. That man was the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, recently granted the title of Lord Shaughnessy, the son of a Milwaukee policeman, who has risen from a lowly position to one of commanding influence and power chiefly because he has considered thrift the greatest of all virtues.

Lord Shaughnessy says that the proudest day in his life was the day on which he received his first pay. This he took to his mother for her to bank—not to the ice cream parlor or to the candy store. His first job was that of office boy in the purchasing department of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. In that department he learned the value of carefulness in expenditure; carried it out in his daily life as well as in the office. He rose to be the head of that department, and when a purchasing agent was wanted by the promoters of the new Canadian Transcontinental Railway, they picked out thrifty Tom Shaughnessy. Under his watchful eye, nothing was wasted, and as a result less capital was spent on the construction of the line than on any other transcontinental railway and it became one of the most successful undertakings on the North American continent. By thrift he, himself, amassed considerable wealth, but there is nothing he dislikes so much as ostentation. "Some day," he said recently, "it will be considered vulgar for any one to be thought to possess more than a million dollars."

While saving alone is not thrift it is an indispensable part of it. Thrift teaches a man to save wisely and spend advantageously. Until very recently we have maintained fewer savings bank accounts per thousand population and smaller accounts per capita than any of the seven principal nations. The figures today show, however, that Americans are but slightly below the average of the civilized nations in the extent of their savings.

The controller of currency reports in his annual statement 2,150 savings banks, both stock and mutual, in the United States, containing $4,997,706,013 to the account of 11,285,755 depositors. The average today due each depositor is $442.83, and the average per capita estimating the nations population at 100,125,000 is $49.91.

While indicating the growth, these figures do not show the bulk of the country's savings, having to do with the savings banks only. Add to these totals the savings deposits in commercial banks and trust companies, building and loan associations, postal savings banks and private banks and we have a total savings account of $9,106,-935,000, making the proportion in the United States about three sevenths of the world's savings, which totals, $22,153,160.12.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The place formerly occupied by one of Spokane's most notorious saloons is now a "brilliantly lighter, clean smelling" market where "chops, cabbages and groceries replace the foaming brew" once sold here in great abundance. At the same counter where "red noses" were formerly in line, a fair maiden now dispenses "red roses", and at the site of the former "big bar," young men are now busy dealing out fresh meats of all kinds. Nobody but the former brewer and saloonkeeper complains that "business is ruined under prohibition." "Spokane is feeling right smart peart under prohibition, thank you!"

THE "PATE" FAMILY

There Is More Than Just Oysters, Chickens and Lobsters.

A RUN ON WINTER DELICACIES.

Expert Recipes For Making This Tasty Dish For Company Luncheons and Sunday Night Suppers—How Pineapple May Also Be Pated.

When one says "pate" visions of the oyster or chicken pate, the best known varieties, at once pass before our eyes. There seems to be an unwritten law that a pate filling must be smothered in a thick cream sauce. This is an error, for there are many varieties of sauces which fit the dish, and this the following recipe will prove:

Sweetbread Pate. — Parboil, blanch and dice a large pair of sweetbreads. Take one cupful of button mushrooms, chop them coarsely, slice six truffles into thin slices and add these to the sweetbreads. For the sauce squeeze the juice of one large lemon into the saucepan and add to it a lump of butter the size of a hen's egg. When melted together add a saltspoonful of bicarbonate of soda and a cupful of cold cream. Mix a tablespoonful of cornstarch in half a cupful of milk and add this also to the sauce and stir until the mixture is as thick as cold honey. Add cayenne pepper, salt and a teaspoonful of onion juice; then add the sweetbread mixture and allow all to cook gently for five minutes. If it should be a little too thick add a little plain cream. When done fill the pate shells with it and garnish with olive curls lightly spread with anchovy paste.

Codfish Tongue Pates.—Secure six medium size codfish tongues, parboil them until tender and when done trim and dice them. Add to them two coarsely diced hard boiled eggs, one finely minced red pepper and six chopped olives. Make a cream the same as for the foregoing recipe, only just before taking the mixture from the fire add to it half a glass of sherry. Garnish the pates with fresh cress.

Tripe Creole Pates.—Wash and cut enough honeycomb tripe into small pieces to fill three cups, place it in a clean linen cloth and wring the water out of it. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add one tablespoonful of chopped onion, cook until slightly browned, then add two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped green pepper and one-half of a chopped red pepper. Add one tablespoonful of flour, one cupful of stock, a half cupful of drained tomato juice, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, six button mushrooms (sliced), pepper, salt, a tablespoonful of chutney sirup and let all boil for five minutes; then add the tripe and simmer gently for ten minutes more, or until the tripe is done. Fill the pate shells and garnish each with a slice of fried tomato.

Pineapple Pates.—Take two cupfuls of preserved pineapple, drain it and add to it half a cupful of preserved ginger (chopped) and enough ginger sirup to moisten the mixture; then add one tablespoonful each of finely powdered macaroon and chopped pecan nuts. Fill the pate shells with this mixture, heap them with whipped cream with a tiny green preserved melon on the top.

JUST HINTS.

Easy Ways of Doing Common Things in Every Household.

When your lamps smoke remove the wicks from the burners and boil the burners for half a day in a solution of half a teacupful of baking soda to a quart of water, and as the water boils down add more to it. Use an old kettle, as it will injure a good one. After boiling at least six hours rinse thoroughly in clear water, dry perfectly, put in new wicks and yours lamps will burn clear and bright. Never throw away the burners unless they are broken. This treatment cleans out all the tubes and makes them like new. Lamps treated in this way once a month will never explode.

To save polishing forks and spoons wash them in hot, soapy water immediately after use. Dry them with a soft cloth.

When burning vegetable refuse put a handful of salt into the fire with it to prevent an unpleasant odor.

To clean papered ceilings mix two cupfuls of flour with cold water to a stiff paste. Roll into a ball with dry flour and rub the ceiling. As the paste grows dirty dip it in fresh flour, and when finished dust over with a soft duster.

A very good way of making brown shoes darker is to rub them with milk to which a few drops of spirits of ammonia have been added. This will dry very quqickly and the shoes should then be polished with a clean dry cloth.

Should the bristles of your hairbrush turn soft try the following plan: Wash the brush well in boiling water to which a dessertspoonful of ammonia has been added. Then dissolve a large lump of salt in cold water, dip the brush in several times and leave it to dry in the open air.

When it is necessary to iron a rough dry garment at once try this method: Dampen it, roll tight, wrap it in a cloth and then in paper and put into the oven while the irons are heating. Evaporation will cause it to be thoroughly dampened in a very few minutes, but care must be taken that the oven is not hot enough to scorch the things.

BILLY SUNDAY NO PACIFIST.

God is a god of war as well as of peace. We must fight as well as pray. If it hadn't been for war we would be singing "God Save the King" instead of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee;" if it hadn't been for war the bloodhounds would be chasing the black men through the swamps and canebrakes today; if it hadn't been for war Spain would still be tearing at the heart of Cuba; if it hadn't been for war the flag of Mexico would be waving over Texas, New Mexico, Nevada and California. Yes, I believe in preparedness; I believe in battleships and submarines, and if any of the nations across the sea should care to find out whether the American people believe in the Monroe doctrine let them start something. If they do I would like to be colonel of a regiment.—Billy Sunday, the Evangelist.

FUTURE OF THE AEROPLANE.

How the Lessons Learned Now Will Be Applied After the War.

When the war is over the wings of the wind will have been harnessed so effectively that a splendid profit will be written on the balance sheet of peace. The air dreadnaughts of the day are the prototypes of the aeroplane de luxe of the morrow; the winged wains that carry a ton of explosives will be commandeered by commerce, and the safety devices that stand the gaff of shot and shell will find no very great test in the trade winds of the world.

The highways of the sky know no barriers and no frontiers. Besides being lord of its own element, the new aeroplane, driving through space at a hundred miles an hour, will outdistance the fastest ship and leave in a dilatory smudge of the horizon the smoke of the speediest railway train.

The sky is a universal roadbed that never needs repair. Spanning continents and bridging seas, hurdling cities, forests and the waste spaces of the world, the aeroplane, made safe, sound and speedy at the demands of war, will be trained to the minute for the greater service of peace and humanity.—Merle Crowell in American Magazine.

A Long Time Preaching.

The Rev. Ezra Campbell is said to be the oldest minister of the gospel in the United States, if not in the world. Recently he celebrated his one hundred and ninth birthday in Kentucky. He was born in what is now Wise county, Va., and lived there until he was past fifty years of age. He then moved to Kentucky. He is a member of the Baptist church and is now the pastor of three churches. He has been preaching for seventy-nine years.

How He Got Even.

"Getting even" is a hazardous undertaking. A Philadelphia lawsuit, originally involving less than $60, ended a long course through the courts with costs aggregating over $13,000. The plaintiff got the $60 sued for, but his lawyer's bill was $1,700. He is $1,640 to the bad, but he has "got even," for the other fellow had a lot more to pay.—Christian Herald.

Why Do Dairy Cows Run Down?

No other farm animal is the cause of so much anxiety to the owner as his dairy cows; sickness gets in in spite of the best of care.

KOW-KURE

Why? Because the dairy cow is subjected to constant forcing to get the maximum in quantity and quality of the milk yield. This constant strain proves too much for many a good cow; some important function becomes impaired and for want of proper medical assistance she becomes a "backward" cow. In just such cases as these Kow-Kure has made its reputation for success when used to

of the herd. Kow-Kure is a medicine for cows only—not a stock food. It has wonderful medicinal qualities that act on the organs of production and reproduction for the prevention or cure of many serious cow ailments. It is especially useful in cases of Abortion, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring, Lost Appetite, Bunches, Retained Afterbirth, etc. Farmers who have used it keep Kow-Kure on hand constantly. Most feed dealers and druggists sell it.

SHAVE BY AUTO LIGHT.

Son Put Machine Where Barber Could Work on His Father.

Clayton, Mo.—Heroic measures were resorted to in order that Frank Tegethoff, a real estate dealer, could be shaved in time to catch a train. Tegethoff had but a short time in which to make the train and rushed into one of Clayton's barber shops and demanded a hasty "once over."

While the barber was engaged in daubing Tegethoff's face with lather the electric lights failed, and the process had to be stopped. It was up to Tegethoff's son, Leo, to supply the light.

WRONGDOING.

If society is to be further uplifted, if it is to be kept from slipping back, it must hold firmly to the right of saying that wrong is wrong, no matter who commits it or how guilty others may be. If there can be no responsibility and no condemnation till we get a perfect world there can be no way of holding the world up to the level which it has already reached.

MAKING the "Silvertown" Cord Tire, taught us a few lessons in the manufacture of lighter, cooler, more flexible and enduring FABRIC tires.

The "Silvertown" Tire, you know, gains its marvellous Speed (and the Coasting qualities that demonstrate its Speed) primarily through having only TWO layers of Cords, laid transversely.

Of course, these TWO layers bend more readily than Five, Six, or Seven Layers of Fabric do (or of Cord would).

But, we found it necessary, in order to conserve that flexibility (in the Two-cord construction), to put a Rubber Tread over it which was equally flexible,—equally strong,—and elastic enough to act as a sort of spring between the Earth and the Tire-casing, when Brakes were thrown on at stopping, or clutch thrown in at starting.

So, we had to devise practically a new kind of Rubber, for this purpose, TWO YEARS AGO.

And this new kind of Rubber Compound now does for GOODRICH Tires a work paralleling that done by the wonderful Alloys of Steel and Bronze in modern Motor Car construction.

It multiplies Rubber Efficiency, for Tire purposes, while decreasing its Weight, and without increasing its Bulk, or its Cost to you.

AS we cannot yet supply half the demand for "Silvertown Cord Tires" (until enough manufacturing equipment can be constructed) we compromise with the Public by giving them, without additional charge, the highly efficient black Silvertown Rubber in all Goodrich FABRIC Tires for 1916.

This makes GOODRICH Fabric Tires the most Resilient and Responsive-to-Power,—the most Long-Lived and Lively, of all FABRIC Tires, at ANY price,—without increasing their relative price to you.

We call this new Silvertown Tread Compound by the name and brand of "Barefoot Rubber."

Because, it CLINGS to the pavement for the same sort of reason that your bare foot clings to a slippery floor, while being flexible, stretchy, springy, and light.

TENACIOUS, resilient, enduring, this "Barefoot Rubber" you today get in all black-tread Goodrich Fabric Tires,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in none but GOODRICH products.

Test out a pair of these moderately priced black-tread FABRIC Tires and see what results from the mixing of BRAINS with Rubber.

GARY WARNS ON CHANGE AFTER WAR

"I think there has never been a time when the young man entering business has had greater opportunities for his own development and for service to his fellow men," writes Judge Elbert Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, in the forthcoming number of the Independent.

"We have here the greatest country in thew orld with theg reatest natural resources and the greatest possibilities of development. The young men of the next generation in American business have every right to be both hopeful and confident. Success or failure depends upon themselves."

Judge Gary begins by saying that business in America must prepare for the great falling off in export trade that will follow the end of the war and for the decrease in buying ability of the whole world. He says the transition from war to peace must necessarily entail a period of economic readjustment that will bring radical changes in volume and prices to most lines of business. American business men should proceed with caution, but with faith in the future of the country, he adds.

A New Industrial Age

Discussing the industrial changes of the last thirty of forty years, Judge Gary says:

"This is an age of vast cooperative organization, of large scale production going hand in hand with minute scientific economics in every process of manufacture. It is an age of machinery and enormous mills and factories where armies of men labor under the efficient direction of technical experts. Above all it is an age of specialization. No man can go very far in modern commerce or industry unless he is a specialist in some line or other."

He contends that the Gary plan of public school education is the first successful attempt to bring the teaching in public schools into a real adjustment with the conditions of life in modern industrial communities. Any young man who receives the benefits of education under the Gary plan will be fortunate, Judge Gary asserts, and continues:

"Frequently I have been asked whether I think a college education is worth the time and money necessary to obtain it. This depends upon what is meant by a college education, and also on the standard of value by which it is to be judged. It is a pleasant thing to have, and if one is young enough and has time and money enough, a very desirable thing. But considered solely as a money investment with a view to adding to the earning power, I rather doubt if the average college course in the liberal arts is entitled to all the credit it receives, though it is important and should have consideration."

Favors Technical Education

Judge Gary speaks highly of the advantages of a technical education, and says in conclusion:

"For, be it remembered, that for good or ill we have become a great industrial nation, and among the most important problems which the next generation will have to solve are economic and industrial problems. Cooperative organization and large scale production are here to stay because they mean greater economy of production and greater and more successful business.

"Yet the great opportunities given to large aggregations of wealth to succeed, to prosper, to construct and to benefit entail equally great opportunities to do harm, and this necessarily means that there should be in this country such governmental regulation as will protect business men in anything they do that is good and prevent them from doing anything that is harmful.

"It is because the future offers such great opportunities for work of national importance in solving these and similar problems that I believe the service of the great corporations will become increasingly attractive to ycung men of the coming generation."

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

In Canada Sir Wilfred Laurier, leader of the Liberal Party, has burned his bridges behind him on the suffrage question, by announcing himself at a luncheon given by the suffragists as a convert to their cause.

* * *

"Lastly I pledge myself to a constitutional amendment giving women the same right to vote as men, "So runs the platform of a would be governor of New Jersey, which suffrage advocates construe as unimpeachable testimony to the fact that woman suffrage is still a very live issue in New Jersey in spite of its defeat at the polls last October.

* * *

In Kentucky on March 8 the State Senate passed a bill giving the right to vote on all state issues. On March 2 thel ower house voted fifty-one to thirty-six in favor of taking the suffrage bill from committee. The vote fell little short of the necessary two-thirds.

* * *

The Women Voters' Campaign Alliance is lending a helping hand in Iowa. The policy of the Alliance is to try and carry one Congressional district in order to secure, even if the state is lost, one more Congressman whose constitutents have declared for woman suffrage. In Iowa it is the eighth district with Council Bluffs as a center.

* * *

In California three women have been nominated as delegates to the Democratic convention and the Democratic state committee, not only adopted a resolution favoring woman suffrage, but advised every state in the Union to give votes to women.

* * *

"The women voters at the primary polls," so runs the account of the Chicago primary election in The Survey, "gave a good account of themselves. Most of them are independents and therefore refused to register for the primaries. Yet despite their light vote on this account a larger proportion of women than men voted for the better candidates in the test wards. One of them owed his renomination to the majority of the women's votes which was greater than that of the men against him."

* * *

In Alberta woman suffrage passed its second reading with only one dissenting vote, and western Canada bids fair to match at an early day western United States as a democratic stronghold. In Canada the action of the legislature is final.

PHOENIX WINS FROM HIGH, 11-7

Oswego Victors Trounced Lodge Men---Crockett and Reynolds Did Heroic Work.

The City Hall basketball court was closed for the season last night when a lively game ensued between the High School second team and the Phoenix High. There was a wonderful come-back in the second half and, in addition to preventing the visiting team from scoring a point in this period, the local boys rolled up a high score by means of brilliant team playing, finished the game in the lead by a score of 32 to 11. At the end of the first half the Phoenix team was leading the local boys 11-7.

Maccabees Lost

The Maccabee quintet was defeated in the Y. M. C. A. Oswego, last night by the fast Victor five, the score being 24-15. At the end of the first half the Oswego team led by a score of 12 to 2. Crockett was the only man on the local team to find the net in this period.

Taking a spurt, however, in the second period, the local boys threw a scare into their opponents' camp when successive baskets by Crockett and Reynolds made a victory look possible although this howing by the Maccabees up until this time spelled hopeless defeat.

Roughness marred theg ame thruout. One of the Oswego players was disqualified on this account by Referee Snow who officiated in the second period. Every baket made during the game resulted from shots at close range. Moseburger and Keenan were the chief scorers on the Oswego quintet while Crockett and Reynolds of the local quintet obtained most of the points for their team.

DR. TEALL WILL GIVE A LECTURE

The Dr. Teall illustrated lecture, to be given in the Sunday school rooms to the First M. E. church, Monday evening, March 27th, promises to be an occasion quite out of the ordinary; not a stereotyped recital gathered from books of imagination, as the Doctor has been there, and will tell in his own language what he has seen and what it looks like in Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines, is what the Doctor will talk about, illustrating his lecture with stereoptican slides.

A rich contralto voice will be heard in song by one who always delights her hearers; and, in addition, a baritone voice quite new to Fultonians. The price of admission will be fifteen cents.

Nelson as a Courtier.

Nelson was the hero of England even in his own time, but not apparently of the court. Samuel Rogers recounts a conversation with him which appears in the life of the poet by R. Ellis Roberts. "I heard him once during dinner," says Rogers, "utter many bitter complaints (which Lady Hamilton vainly attempted to check) of the way he had been treated at court that forenoon—the queen had not condescended to take the slightest notice of him. In truth, Nelson was hated at court; they were jealous of him." But then it must be remembered that Roge s was renowned as a particularly ill natured gossip.

A Point to Consider.

"Dad," said the prodigal son, "now that I'm home again and have had my fling, I'm going to do something to make you proud of me."

"All right, son," answered the cautious father. "That's the way for you to talk, but I will reserve my congratulations until you make one point clear."

FORMER PRINTER WILL REMOVE TO SCHENECTADY

Mrs. C. T. Bailey, of 419 Rochester st., is preparing to remove from this city to Schenectady, where Mr. Bailey is pleasantly situated with the Maque Printing Company, which is subsidiary to the General Electric company. Thursday is the date set for the family's departure, much to their regret and to their many friends in this city where they have lived always.

Mr. Bailey was until recently proprietor of the Commercial Press, in East 2nd st., a business which he established three or four years ago, leaving The Fulton Times' force for that purpose. He is a printer and business man of worth and merit, and this newspaper flings the proverbial shoe all the way to Schenectady.

CITY ATTORNEY RETURNS FROM STATE CAPITAL

While in Albany where he had gone on business connected with the city's interest in the abandoned canal lands, City Attorney Hillick, presented an application for a strip of land needed to widen Wall st. He also, as a city official presented an objection to the possible acquisition of any portion of the land by manufacturers desiring to secure it.

Mr. Hillick is of the opinion that when he visits Albany next Wednesday it will be possible to clear up the entire matter. He believes it will be impossible for the city to secure the entire market site now or until it has been sold at public auction.

PEOPLE'S CO. BUYS SANDY CREEK HARDWARE STORE

Mr. Edward Joslin, president of the People's Hardware Co., Inc., has completed a deal which gives promise of being a most profitable one for his company, the purchase of the Horton-Stevenson stock of hardware, located in Sandy Creek.

Mr. Joslin describes the stock as clean and well selected, credit to any town much larger in population. It was his intention orginally to bring the purchase here, adding it to his company's stock, but his latest idea is to place an efficient man in charge of the northern store and continue its operation.

BOY SCOUTS WILL ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY EVENING

A fine set of slides, dealing with the Boy Scout movement will be shown at the First Methodist Episcopal church, tomorrow evening, at 7 o'clock. All Scouts in the city will attend in a body, and enjoy with their parents and friends this educational and inspiring service.

The Camp Fire Girls, in costume will comprise the choir.

A hearty invitation is extended to everybody.

BISHOP OLMSTED IN PEACE LEAGUE

The League to Enforce Peace of which ex-President Taft is head, has started a movement to have the political parties in the coming national conventions at St. Louis and Chicago insert planks in their platforms endorsing the proposal that a league of nations be formed for the purpose of insuring future world peace, by the establishment of international tribunals to which international disputes can be referred, such nations to pledge their joint armed and economic forces against any signatory which declares war or begins hostilities prior to a recourse to such tribunals.

The League to Enforce Peace is not an anti-preparedness organization, nor is its aim to end the present European war.

For the purpose of gaining recognition at St. Louis and Chicago the Taft Peace League has begun an active campaign in each State to have introduced in local party platforms the following uniform plank prepared by the league's national Executive Committee:

"We endorse the proposal that a league of nations be formed for joint action under such regulations as such league shall adopt against any nation which proposes to make war without prior recourse to such world tribunals and methods of concilation as such league of nations shall have duly approved."

The Taft League's membership comprises many well known leaders in political circles. Among them are ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri just appointed Ambassador to Rusria; former Ambassador to France Myron T. Herrick, Governor Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, Governor Arthur Capper of Kansas, Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, James M. Beck of New York, Alexander Graham Bell, Judge Gray of Delaware, ex-Senator Theodore W. Burton of Ohio, ex-Governor John Franklin Fort of New Jersey, ex-Ambassador to Mexico Henry Lane of Indianapolis, A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University, and ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney.

Among those in New York State who are exepcted to cooperate are: Ansley Wilcox, Dr. John H. Finley, the Hon. Charles S. Whitman, Prof. Samuel P. Orth, Dr. Andrew D. White, Dr. Lyman Abbott, the Hon. James M. Beck, Cornelius N. Bliss, jr., the Hon. Irving M. Crane, Paul D. Cravath, R. Fulton Cutting, Chas. Stewart Davison, John Hays Hammond, the Hon. Edward M. Hatch, the Hon. Job E. Hedges, Adolph Lewisohn, Prof. John Bassett Moore, the Hon. Alton B. Parker, George Haven Putnam, William Jay Schieffelin, J. H. Schiff, John A. Stewart, the Hon. Oscar S. Straus, Charles H. Strong, Frank A. Vanderlip, the Hon. William H. Wadhams, Everett P. Wheeler, the Hon. Peter A. Porter, and the Rt. Rev. Charles T. Olmstead.

STATE POLICE BILL AN EXPENSIVE INSTITUTION

The state constabulary bill, introduced in the Assembly by Louis H. Wells of Genesee, provides for a superintendent, appointed by the governor for a five-year term, at an annual salary of $5,00. This superintendent may appoint a deputy at $2,50, a clerk at $1,500 and two stenographers at $1,200 each.

The superintendent also will have the power to appoint the officers and members of thep olice force, to consist of four troops, each containing 45 privates at $900 a year, a captain at $1,800, a lieutenant at $1,500, a first sergeant at $1,200, four sergeants at $950 each and one saddler and one blacksmith, with the rank and pay of corporal.

Headquarters of the state police are to be in Albany, with local headquarters in such localities as the superintendent shall determine. The indications are that theb ill will become a law.

THERE ARE JUST THREE KINDS OF STOCKINGS— WHICH DO YOU PREFER?

No. 1 shows the ordinary seamless stocking—leg the same size from ankle up—the shape is acquired by pressing or stretching—and it goes with the first washing.

No. 2 is the imported type, fashioned to fit the leg and ankle, but with a seam the entire length of the stocking.

No. 3 is the only stocking knit to shape, without a single seam. Wear or washing has no effect on this "knit-in" shape. Made in weights and yarns to suit the taste, combining real comfort with a trim, neat style. Ask for

THE NERVE HABIT.

Doctors Agree That There Are Two Kinds of "Nerves."

LACK OF EMOTIONAL CONTROL

How Children Should Be Trained Early In Life to Avoid Easy Suggestibility and to Let Their Minds Get the Upper Hands of Emotions.

There would be far fewer nervous wrecks in the world today if it were generally recognized that nervousness often is at the bottom nothing more than bad habit.

Doctors divide nervous diseases into two great groups. The first group consists of maladies due to some physical disorder directly affecting the nervous system. Neuritis and locomotor ataxia are examples of nervous diseases of this sort.

The second group comprises diseases in which the nervous system, though originally sound, functions badly for various reasons. The principal maladies of this group are hysteria, neurasthenia and psychasthenia.

Technically these three maladies are known as the psycho-neuroses. They are the ones which frequently—one is tempted to say always—are grounded in bad mental habits.

When the history of the psycho-neurotic patient is carefully looked into it generally is found that as far back as early childhood the patient acquired the habit of allowing his conduct to be swayed entirely by his feelings.

If, as a child, he were crossed in any desire he probably reacted by throwing himself on the floor, beating the air with his fists and howling dismally.

Or, instead of venting his feelings thus violently, he may have sulked and brooded in silence, developing a sullenness which of itself was unmistakable proof of an excessive emotional reaction.

At this early stage it usually is easy, by wise educational methods, to break up this habit of allowing the feelings to dominate the mental life and bodily actions and to substitute a habit of emotional control.

The trouble is that many parents do not appreciate the importance of beginning to train their children in emotional control while the children still are very small. They may scold them and punish them, but they do not train them. So that, often without the parents' suspecting it, the habit of excessive emotionality grows until it becomes an ingrained personal trait.

Also, through parental ignorance and neglect, another disease breeding habit is allowed to become firmly rooted. This is the habit of undue suggestibility, by which is meant the habit of accepting and acting on ideas without stopping to examine their truth or falsity, their helpfulness or harmfulness.

All children are by nature exceedingly suggestible. Experience has proved that, unless steps are taken at an early age to awaken the critical faculty, this innate suggestibility, like the innate emotionality of childhood, may become both excessive and habitual.

When this occurs, and when the unduly suggestible person is at the same time a person who has never been properly trained in emotional control, then the soil is fully prepared for some psycho-neurotic malady.

Let things go badly with this person, let him experience business reverses, family troubles or a sudden emotional shock of any kind, and it is more than an even chance that he will have a hysterical attack or a "nervous breakdown."

Early training of the will power, with special reference to control of the emotions and suggestibility, is therefore the surest preventive known of the functional nervous diseases so much in evidence today.

has a red flannel tongue quaintly beaded with a little green sprig. ## PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Healthful Homes.

What constitutes the practical healthful home for young and old has been pointed out in a recent article by a Washington physician. He says first that the healthful home must be a home admitting sunshine; that children reared in dark, gloomy, damp homes are as anaemic and puny as plants reared without the stimulating effects of sunshine and light.

An old German proverb reads, "Where the sun does go the doctor does not go." In dark, damp places all kinds of bacteria, especially the tubercle bacillus, find favorable conditions for retaining their vitality. "Sunshine by day and cold, fresh air by night," says he, "are strong health factors which every home should provide."

A healthful home should be a dustless home, according to the doctor, because dust, especially dust contained in the home, and germs go hand in hand. For that reason the object of housecleaning should be to get rid of dust. In the absence of a vacuum cleaner a damp or oiled cloth is recommended for both floors and furniture.

No flies, mosquitoes or insects by which filth and diseases may spread can be admitted into the healthful home. They are as essential to the comfort of the home as to its health.

Cleanliness is the watchdog of the healthful home. Diseases find it hard to enter any home when guarded by cleanliness both of persons and things.

LOVED THIRTY YEARS.

Second Suit, When Woman Was a Widow, Proved Successful.

Alden, Ia.—A romance of thirty years ago was concluded here lately when Robert H. Lucas of Chicago married Mrs. Ada B. Dewey of Milford, Ia., his boyhood sweetheart.

The romance began when both were youngsters at Verona, Ill., but Mr. Lucas was not successful then. Some years ago Mrs. Dewey's husband died and Mr. Lucas heard she was a widow. He renewed his courtship and won the second time.

They were married by the Rev. W. G. Muhleman, a Methodist minister who is the husband of one of Mrs. Dewey's daughters. The Rev. Mr. Muhleman has also performed the weddings of two other of Mrs. Dewey's daughters and her two sons.

How to Make Javelle Water.

Javelle water can be bought ready made, but it is absurd for a woman who has much washing to do not to make it for herself. The following are the ingredients: One pound of washing soda, one-half pound of chloride of lime, one quart of boiling water and two quarts of cold water. Add the boiling water to soda and let it dissolve. Dissolve the chloride of lime in cold water and when it has settled strain off the clear solution into the soda solution. Let it stand until all the sediment has gone to the bottom and then strain off the clear liquid into bottles, cork tightly and store in a cool place. When needed for removing stains do not use plain, but dilute with at least an equal quantity of water and do not leave the goods more than twenty minutes in the solution. Rinse thoroughly in several waters, adding a little ammonia to the last.

Panned Baked Sweet Potatoes.

Boil sweet potatoes until done, drain peel and slice. Butter a baking dish, put in layer of the sliced potatoes, sprinkle rather thickly with light brown sugar and dot with bits of butter. Add another layer of potatoes, with sugar and butter, and so on. When dish is full put in oven and bake, covered for half an hour and uncovered for half an hour.

A Story of Old Ironsides.

One of the most famous of the Constitution's exploits was during the war of 1812, when she escaped from Broke's squadron, among which she had accidentally fallen. The sea was almost a dead calm, so Captain Hull had to resort to towing. All her boats were lowered, with long lines attached, and in addition Hull had ropes spliced together to make a line half a mile long, to which he attached a kedge anchor. This was carried in a boat half a mile ahead and dropped, when the crew hauled the ship rapidly forward. The commodore of the English squadron soon adopted the same tactics, and if it had not been for a breeze springing up the Constitution would have been captured.

A Barnum Story.

A story is told of the meeting of Matthew Arnold with P. T. Barnum the great showman, in America. Mr. Arnold when introduced said how proud he felt at making the acquaintance of a man with a worldwide reputation. "Ah, Mr. Arnold," said Barnum, "we are both public men, but the difference between you and me is that you are a notability, while I am only a notoriety."

CITY MANAGEMENT WORKS WONDERS.

What New Methods Have Accomplished in Certain Municipalities.

The misrule of American cities is notorious at home and abroad, writes Charles B. Strayer in Leslie's Weekly. Graft is rampant. Political spoilsmen mulct our cities and the taxpayers foot the bills. German municipalities, on the other hand, are famous throughout the world for the absence of graft and the efficiency of their administration. There the administration of cities is a distinct profession to which men devote their lives. The administrator who has made a good record in one city is called from a small municipality to a larger one.

"Great industrial corporations, such as the Standard Oil company and the United States Steel corporation, are conducted with an efficiency nowhere excelled. The taxpayers can have the same results in municipal administration whenever they get thoroughly tired of being robbed by the politicians and grafters and demand municipal reform.

"An increasing number of American cities are reaping the benefits of administration by managers chosen because of proved ability to conduct great enterprises. Gaylord C. Cummin, as manager of Jackson, Mich., worked wonders in that city of 35,000 people in one year. Municipal employees were taken out of politics. Property to the value of $383,000, formerly exempted from taxation without legal reason, was restored to the tax rolls. The poor department was consolidated with the organized charities, with a trained social worker at the head. Rigid milk inspection was inaugurated and sanitary inspection made efficient for the first time. Without raising the tax rate these and numerous other reforms were inaugurated, a floating deficit of $20,000 wiped out, the city's net indebtedness reduced $50,000 and a cash balance left of $10,000, exclusive of the sinking fund."

Beginning Right.

Papa he has been a-sayin'
We should start the new year right,
An' not quarrel in our playin',
An' mind mamma day an' night.

An' he said there's no disputin'
That whatever we might do
On the first day, sure as shootin',
We would do the whole year through.

An' I saw the chance was splendid
To do something right away
That, until the year was ended,
I would like to do each day.

An' on New Year's, startin' squarely,
I got up soon as 'twas light
An' learned all my lessons fairly,
So's I'd always have them right.

Johnny Roche's Tower.

Standing on the banks of the river Awberg, between Mallow and Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, is a remarkable edifice known as "Johnny Roche's Tower." The whole tower was built by the labor of one man, who subsequently resided in it. This individual, who received no education whatever, also erected a mill, constructing the water wheel after a special design of his own. Long before the introduction of the bicycle he went about the country in a wheeled vehicle of his own construction propelled by foot power. His last feat was to build his tomb in the middle of the river bed. John Roche died, but was not interred in the strange burying place which he selected for himself, his less original relatives deeming such a mode of sepulture unchristian.—London Strand Magazine.

The Horseshoe Legend.

Here is an explanation of the old horseshoe superstition: St. Dunstan was a skilled farrier. One day while at work in his forge the devil entered in disguise and requested Dunstan to shoe his "single hoof." The saint, although he recognized his malign customer, acceded, but caused him so much pain during the operation that Satan begged him to desist. This St. Dunstan did, but only after he had made the evil one promise that neither he nor any of the lesser evil spirits, his servants, would ever molest the inmates of a house where the horseshoe was displayed.

The Coffee Plant's Friend.

In Colombia there is a tree highly esteemed as a shade for the coffee plant. It is found also in tropical Brazil and possesses qualities that make it peculiarly suited for this particular use. It will live on a stony, poor soil, and a tree only eighteen months old will shade 144 square yards of ground, while when full grown it may be fifty feet high and have a spread of fifty feet on every side.

Parchment Paper.

To make ordinary paper imitate parchment soak it in a basin of water mixed with sulphuric acid in the proportion of one to ten parts. Let it become thoroughly saturated, then remove gently and let dry. The paper should be strong unlined foolscap.

Not Enough.

Betty Goldust—Did you have a satisfactory interview with papa? Jack Brokeleigh—Not very. He said all he could give us was his consent.—Stray Stories.

Specialization.

Doctor—What can I do for you? Patient—I have cut my index finger. Doctor—Very sorry, but I am a specialist on the middle finger.—Fliegende Blatter.

A POPULAR DESIGN.

Jersey Cloth Is In the Lead Both For Street Wear and Sports.

SMART AS THEY COME.

This silk jersey suit is in deep tan color, with brown glaced leather for cuffs, collar and pocket lids. The stringy belt and novelty buttons give a natty finish. A simple tan straw sailor goes with the suit, which is one of the spring's successes.

A CASE OF NERVES?

Is Crossness a Mood or Inherent In Just Things?

Every woman, young and old, knows what it is to have cross days—days when, from the rising up of the sun to the going down of the same, every mortal thing seems to go wrong, no matter how hard one tries to have them go right. For that matter, one always does try harder on such days than on the happy go lucky ones when life flows on smoothly and harmoniously, like "a grand, sweet song." Goodness knows, there is enough conscientious effort wasted on a single cross day to balance half a year of ordinary days.

Why is this? Is crossness a disordered state of the mind or an overwrought condition of the nerves or simply the reflection of an inexplicable but unanimous "crossedness" on the part of things in general? And if it be any or all of these is there any way of preventing or overcoming it?

Crossness, like most other conditions of life, is the inevitable effect of a perfectly natural cause. Good humor, like fine weather, cannot possibly last forever. If it could it would inevitably become an intolerable bore. Being eternally pleasant and agreeable is all right theoretically, but it is a terrible strain on the nerves.

It is dreadfully wearing, too, on other people. Did you ever have to live in the same house with somebody who was always placid, always even tempered, no matter who else was worried and distraught? And were you not sometimes seized with an unholy yearning to do something perfectly awful and fiendish, that you might for once startle that placid being out of his or her maddening imperturbility?

Dates With Lemon Jelly.

Soak one-half a box of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for about twenty minutes. Dissolve in two and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and add one cupful of sugar and the juice of two lemons. Strain and half fill a mold and set on ice. When almost firm, drop on the dates, which have been stoned and stuffed with blanched almonds. Add the rest of the jelly to fill the mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Waffles With Maple Sirup.

Two cupfuls of flour sifted twice with one teaspoonful of baking powder and the same of salt, three eggs, one tablespoonful of butter and two cupfuls of milk. Beat the yolks smooth, add the milk and turn this upon the prepared flour. Whip lightly and quickly for one minute, add the stiffened whites and drop by the spoonful into heated and greased waffle irons.

A Jabot From a Collar.

Another use for the flat Dutch collar of value is to make it into a jabot. This will require no cutting at all. The collar should be gathered or plaited at the center of the back and the two pointed ends turned directly underneath. It is then hung from the front of a stock collar. Of course a soft collar of lace or lace trimmed batiste will fill in this purpose best.

Mrs. Whitney's Recipes.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY recently held a food bazaar at her home in behalf of a hospital. Among her favorite recipes are these:

Balmoral Dessert Biscuits (H. M. the Queen's Baker, Balmoral Castle, 1850). These are no thicker than passover cakes and very "short." One-half pound of flour, one ounce of butter, four yolks of eggs, only two whites. Mix the above into a stiff paste, roll out very thin and cut into round shapes size of top of teacup, with a wavy edge pastry cutter. Bake in slow oven. The biscuits should be quite thin, blistered all over, but not browned and not pricked. The blisters are the same color as the biscuits, not darker. There are only good when quite fresh from the oven.

Lady Heywood's Milk Lemonade.—To the juice of nine lemons add one pound of fine loaf sugar. Pour on this one quart of boiling hot milk and let it stand all night. Into a separate vessel peel three lemons as thin as possible. Pour into it one pint of warm water (00 degrees heat). This also must stand all night, covered, of course. Next morning put both together and strain through a very fine jelly bag till perfectly clear and bright. Add sherry to your taste.

Grandmother's White Soup.—Two quarts stock of veal, lamb or chicken, an onion boiled with it, one quart milk and cream, mixed; a suspicion of mace, yolks of two eggs, a little cornstarch of flour to thicken. Soak a little macaroni till tender. Put it in the tureen just before serving.

Chicken Basket.—Make a ring of mashed potatoes. Fill the center with creamed chicken. Sprinkle browned breadcrumbs on top.

Codfish Foam.—Make a white sauce of one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of butter, one cupful of hot milk. Stir until smooth and then add two tablespoonfuls of finely picked codfish, freshened, and the beaten whites of two eggs.

Johnnycake.—One cupful of cornmeal, one-half cupful flour, one teaspoonful soda, salt, two tablespoonfuls molasses, one tablespoonful sugar, sour milk to mix.

The Nursery Bib.

Away with the bib and its strings that will knot or the buttons that will not button! Here is the dearest little eating apron that ever covered dainty ruffles or Dickens suits, and when mother realizes what a very simple matter the making of such an apron can be she will hasten to fashion one for the littlest girl or boy in the nursery. A Turkish towel or a simple huck affair can be turned with a snip of the scissors and a few stitches into a comfortable, easily managed apron. At about two-thirds of the length of the towel cut a hole large enough for the little head to slip through. Bind this with tape or scallop it if you wish a little extra fanciness. The shorter side is then gathered or plaited into a belt, made from wide tape or a piece of old toweling, which passes around to the front and holds the apron in place. Cross stitch may make the little apron still more attractive, especially if the design be the favorite nursery chicks, bunnies or kittens. While the linen or huck toweling is prettier, the the Turkish toweling is really more practical because of its absorbent qualities. It saves crying over spilt milk.

Oat Bread.

Make a sponge of four cupfuls rolled oats (dry), one-half cupful molasses, two cupfuls boiling water, scant tablespoonful of lard, one teaspoonful salt one-half yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water. Add only part of the flour, then let rise overnight. Now add about four cupfuls flour and knead about fifteen minutes. Let rise until twice its size, form into loaves, let rise until its bulk is doubled, then bake about forty-five minutes. This makes two large loaves.

Imitative Monkeys.

Monkeys never wash or bathe, though they have, as a rule, every chance to do so. Possibly experience has taught them to be afraid of crocodiles, which are pretty generally distributed on monkey haunted rivers. It is said that a number of Indian monkeys watched a party of Europeans in a boat who washed their hands and brushed their teeth. Next day the monkeys were seen to come to the river side and go through the form of washing their hands and of brushing their teeth with bits of stick.

In All White and All Right.

Play suit for the small boy. It is in white linen and the waist and side closing trousers are cut in one.

Primarily, this little suit is intended for play hours, but it will be found quite serviceable for general morning wear. Carried out in white mercerized linen it is always neat looking, though other materials in which it may be developed to advantage are khaki, chambray and gingham in blue or natural color.

The waist and side-closing trousers are cut in one. The practical finish for the long one-piece sleeves are turn-back cuffs. The center-front of the waist is left open near the top and trimmed with straps. In medium size the suit requires 2⅝ yards 27-inch material.

If the material is used open width and the pattern placed on it as shown in the cutting guide, there will be no mistakes. There are two rows of the main sections of the patterns and sufficient space is left between for the smaller pieces. In the upper row there are the front of waist and trousers (cut in one piece) and the back of the waist. Both of these are on a lengthwise thread. On the lower row place the back of the trousers, the sleeve, the cuff and collar, in the order named, all on a lengthwise thread. If contrasting material is used for the collar and cuffs, they should be arranged just the same as shown in the cutting guide.

By cutting off the lower part of the sleeve on small "o" perforations it may be shortened to elbow length. With the elbow sleeve, cuffs are seldom added for a play suit.

When making the suit, if desired, a straight piece of material about 2½ inches wide may be adjusted underneath the waist at the center-front for a shield.

Nightgown In Middy Style.

There is a suggestion of the athletic about this nightgown finished in middy style. The neck has a high rolling collar, to be worn high or low.

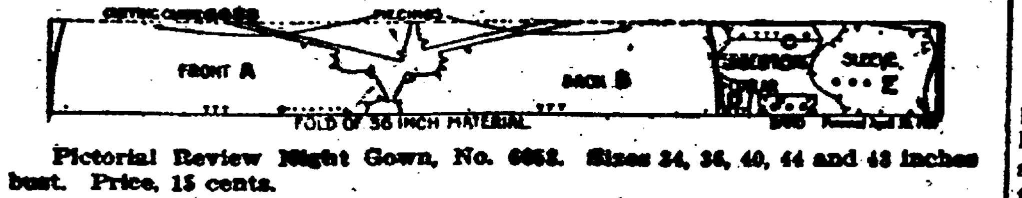
Who said that lingerie was not influenced by outer garments? Well, it most certainly is. Take, for instance, this nightgown made in middy style. The neck is finished with a rolling collar which may be worn high or low, and the sleeves offer a choice between a long effect finished with straight cuff or elbow length.

In medium size the gown requires 4⅝ yards 36-inch material. One has but to study carefully both the cutting and construction guides to make the gown in a few hours. The front and back, as shown here, are laid on a fold of the material, while the piecing for front and back is cut on the selvage edge. To the right of the back section are laid the collar, band, underfacing and sleeve, the collar being the only piece of the group placed on the lengthwise fold.

These middy gowns do not require any trimming, unless it is a stitching of finishing braid about the edge. To make the design, slash down the folds at center-front of front and underfacing, from upper edge to large "O" perforations. Adjust underfacing to position underneath front, notches and neck edges even, making seam ⅜ inch wide at upper edge of slash and graduating seam into nothing at lower edge. Work eyelets in front at small "o" perforations for lacing. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Turn hem at lower edge of small "o" perforations. Face collar and sew to neck edge, notches and center-back even; roll collar and front as illustrated.

For the long sleeve, first gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew sleeveband to lower edge; close seam as notched. If shorter sleeve is desired, see cutting directions. Sew sleeve in armhole, as notched, small "o" perforations at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

The athletic effect may be further carried out by lacing the front together instead of using buttons and buttonholes.



Pictorial Review Night Gown, No. 6658. Sizes 34, 36, 40, 44 and 48 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

ACROBATIC SQUIRREL KILLED.

Schoolgirls See "Tight Rope Walking" Pet Die.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—Jack, the "tight rope walking" gray squirrel, is dead. Jack was the pet of a girls' school because of his wonderful achievements in walking along a telephone cable. He would travel this way for blocks. The girls at the school fed him with nuts which they would place on a pole near their windows.

One day in fun a girl broke off an icicle under the window ledge and handed it to Jack to use as a balancing stick. He soon became a proficient in balancing and would sit and beg for nuts. He was doing this when suddenly one end of the icicle broke, causing Jack to lose his balance and fall fifty feet to the ground. When the girls picked him up Jack was breathing his last.

Some Nautical Facts.

A knot is 6,080 feet long. The distance from New York to Liverpool is 3,064 nautical miles by the northern track and 3,139 by the southern track. The former course is taken by vessels bound for New York, the latter by vessels bound for Liverpool. From Liverpool to New York the distances are respectively 3,089 and 3,109 miles.

In estimating records the points taken on either side are Sandy Hook and Daunt's rock, Queenstown harbor. The first light sighted on the British coast is the Bull, Cow and Calf, Ireland, and on the American coast either Nantucket or Fire island.—New York Globe.

Here's to Your Spring Bonnet

While the average woman is very well content in the appropriate season to wrap herself in furs and clothe her body in velvet or wool, she is not at all inclined to be consistent and cover her head in some suitable heavy material. No; a straw hat she hankers for, and a straw hat she wears. The incongruous combination of fur and straw is to be seen a great deal, for, though the thermometer registers winter weather in many places, the spring hat is here.

"Adorable" is the name best applied to some of the newest models. There is such a diversity of style shown in the latest millinery models that almost every woman will find something to suit her particular style of beauty. The picturesque broad brim, the high crowned toque, the flat hat of medium size—these are but a few of the attractive styles from which to choose.

The milliners are using a great deal of chip and satin straw in combination with panne, taffetas, satin and tulle. Tulle may be said to be the most popular material of the present season. Tulle hats and toques are now shown in all the best millinery shops.

The high crowned toque, composed of brown tulle and brown straw, is a very popular model. This is an effective combination of materials, especially when a band of dark fur and a rose or two complete the scheme.

It frequently happens that some one model becomes a general favorite at the beginning of the spring and autumn season. All sorts of hats and toques are worn, but the special favorite is always in view. Well, this spring the special favorite in the millinery world is the brown tulle and straw model, a delightful close fitting shape which is generally becoming.

Of course this model could be copied with the best results in mirror velvet and satin straw or in taffeta and soft chip. The plain brim is composed entirely of straw, and a band of fur hides the meeting of straw and tulle. A full crown made of velvet, taffeta or tulle should be invisibly supported with fine wires covered with slightly stiff net.

The idea of lining velvet or satin hats with straw is very Parisian. And it is a real boon to amateur milliners, for straw linings are very easily made.

Almost all the best satin straws are provided with an invisible running string in one edge, which makes it easy to shape the straw to the hat brim.

same novelty. The ends of the neck piece are handsomely finished with white silk tassels. These sets are very chic for young ladies, as the cut proves.

Smart Sports Coat.

Among sports garments is a most practical, comfortable and smart blanket coat. Indeed, if you have an extra steamer rug at home it would be just the thing for the making of the garment. The plaids are usually large. The coat is made very loose and along tailored lines. There is also a hood attached to it, so that if one is in the mountains or aboard ship upon a cool day the head can be snuggled into the hood for comfort. These coats are not usually lined, being very practical in this respect for knockabout purposes. Such a coat can be made without a hood, of course, or the hood can be made in detachable form, fastening to the neck and shoulders of the coat with buttons and buttonholes.

Crab Meat, Indienne.

Two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of finely chopped onion, three tablespoonfuls of flour, two-thirds tablespoonful of curry powder, a cupful of chicken stock, a cupful of crab meat, salt. Cook butter and onion three minutes, add flour mixed with curry powder and chicken stock. When boiling point is reached add crab meat and season with salt.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Embroidered batiste in natural color is used to fashion this lovely afternoon frock. The Spanish influence is evident in the belt and there is something picturesquely old-fashioned about the sleeves, with their deep double frills of embroidery. A collar of organdy edged with lace, finishes the neck. In medium size the dress requires 6 yards 30-inch embroidered and 2 yards of plain batiste.

CASSEROLE COOKING.

Appetizing Viands Depend Upon Dainty Serving of Them.

The cooking done in casseroles has several important advantages over some of the ordinary kitchen vessel. The dishes are without the metal taste which so often contaminates common pots and pans. As the cooking is slow and thorough the nutritive values of food are preserved, and the perfection of the flavor is therefore concentrated.

The ornamental appearance of the various dishes used permits serving the viands in the very utensils in which they were cooked, which is a tremendous point when the dish needs to be eaten very hot. Food can be put away in the casserole without danger of changing color or taste, as would happen if it were left to chill in a metal vessel. The earthenware of which the dishes are made is not open to the acid influences of fruit and therefore is without the possibility of any noxious change. The enamel of the inside does not scale off, it is easily kept clean, and so food prepared in the casserole is clean and sweet.

The pretty marmite for soupmaking, the larger and smaller pots and shallow pans and plates in every size can be bought. Among the many shades of brown there are some green ones (these vessels of French make), which are very effective on the table. Some don'ts are involved in the proper care of the charming utensils.

Before using them for the first time the dishes should be soaked in cold water for some hours, as this will help to keep them from cracking on their first exposure to heat. Never put the vessels on the hot stove or in the oven without first putting in water or fat. Do not put them roughly on a metal surface or set them when hot on a wet table. A fierce heat is never desirable, and so, even if the flame of the top of the stove is low, it is best to put an asbestos mat under the vessel used.

Many more things for the preservation of these toylike cooking vessels might be said, and for young housekeepers and girls who want to learn how to cook in a dainty and perfect manner they are certainly more inspiring than the common cook pot, pans and kettle.

Everlasting Bricks.

Once made a brick is practically indestructible. Nearly every brick that has ever been made by man from the beginning of time is still in existence on this earth. The men who made and laid them and who directed these operations have long since been gathered into dust. Some of them have doubtless contributed in their bodies to the making of more bricks. But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.—Exchange.

Battle With Villa Is Hourly Expected

El Paso—United States Military officials tonight were eagerly awaiting a report from General Pershing that our troops had actually engaged the fleeing Pancho Villa in battle.

General Pershing's report to General Funston today says that two columns of his expeditionary forces were in the vicinity of Namiquipa, 120 miles southeast of Casas Grandes, and repeated reports, from Mexican sources that Villa, with a comparatively small force, had been forced to a stand at El Oso, near there caused officers here to expect news at any time of an engagement.

General Funston, it was reported, thought it probable a fight already might have occurred.

General Gavira, Mexican commander at Juraez, also advised Consul Meltran, of the Mexican government, at San Antonio, that he had been informed that an American army officer with the forces near Namiquipa had notified General Pershing they probably would attack today.

For the Children

A Small Lady and a Big Set of Real Furs.

The smiling little lady in the picture is very happy, as her expression indicates. She has good reason for her joy, because now she has a set of real furs for her own. Formerly this young lady used to wear mamma's on occasion, usually in the house. Not long ago, however, she had a mysterious visitor at night—he probably came down the chimney—and the next morning there was a beautiful set of furs bearing her name. Wasn't that a splendid surprise? The little girl thinks it was the finest thing that ever happened in her short lifetime.

The most curious bird "islands" are to be found among the islands of Santa Barbara and in the California seas. These resting places for the birds are very small indeed, and often you can see the "island" disappear from sight, while the bird flutters hastily away to another.

They are simply fish that are perhaps the laziest in the whole world of ours. The natives call them the molamola, and the white folks know them as mole, or moon fish. They bask in the sun and seldom leave the surface of the water except when chased by an enemy. They vary in size up to ten feet across their backs. As for tails, they are satisfied with very rudimentary ones, a mere fringe of finlike growth serving as such. They are not afraid of the gulls and cormorants, for these birds settle down on their backs and rest there, preening and oiling their feathers and having a fine time. These fish are not good to eat, being of about the tenderness of india rubber.

Shrewd Boy Horse Tamer.

Out in Oklahoma there is a boy who has turned his attention to gentling colts on his father's ranch, where a great many horses are raised for the general market. Heretofore they were sold as they came from the pasture, bad and good, tame and wild, gentle and vicious, with prices set accordingly. The boy saw the absurdity of this. If good horses brought double and treble the money that bad ones did, why have any bad ones to sell? And so he studied out and followed a set principle of gentling, to the effect that, after holding each animal until its education was complete, there were received fully three times the prices as formerly. Now this youngster has been made by his father a member of the ranch company and regularly draws down a fixed income and a bonus on his added work.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Waiting.

The first little cat said, "Meow-ow-ow!"
The next little cat said, "Spit-t!"
The third little cat looked very wise,
And the fourth one near had a fit.

The first little cat reached out a paw,
The next little cat sang a note,
The third little cat twitched its whiskers,
And the fourth one stroked down its coat.

The first little cat said, "Oh, hurry!"
The next little cat said, "Oh, wait!"
The third little cat said not a word,
And the fourth one cried, "Don't be late!"

Then four little kittycats scurried
Way off to an old apple tree,
Where four little birds, safe in their nest,
Were cozy and sweet as could be.

And the four little cats, they waited,
And four little birds waited, too,
Until, with song and flurry of wings,
Mother came—and waiting was through.

Then four little cats scampered homeward,
And four little birds in the tree
Just warbled and chirruped and twittered
As happy as small birds could be.

FANCY HATBANDS IN FAVOR.

Some of the Pretty, Frivolous Things That Appear This Season.

Fancy adjustable hatbands are a feature of the new millinery and appeal to the woman whose longing for variety is hampered by a limited purse. They furnish an excellent means of introducing daring touches of color in an otherwise dark street costume and are adaptable to the stiff crowned, narrow brimmed models as well as to the soft sports hats of felt and beaver for which they were originally designed.

Plain colored ribbons in the new, bright shades as well as in striped and blocked effects, combining two colors in sharp contrast, are the most used for adjustable hatbands. Many of these are so woven as to pass for hand knitted bands and have a convenient elasticity which makes them easily adjustable to any size crown. Others are of a stiff ribbed silk similar to belting and fasten under the flattest of tailored bows.

Double faced ribbons, showing a dark shade on one side and a vivid coloring on the other, are among the most satisfactory for fancy hatbands, as they are capable of almost endless variety in adjustment.

Cold Comfort.

TOWNE ENTERS N. Y. SENATORIAL FIGHT

New York—Charles A. Towne complicated the New York United States Senatorial situation yesterday by announcing himself as a candidate for James A. O'Gorman's seat.

Having apparently convinced himself that Senator O'Gorman will not seek to succeed himself, Mr. Towne concluded to contest the primaries for the Democratic nomination with William Church Osborn, Robert Lansing or anybody else who yet developes to an aspirant.

Mr. Towne claims to be a Wilson Democrat.

N. J. SCHOOLS MUST NOW READ BIBLE DAILY

Trenton—Governor Fielder this afternoon signed the Iobst Bible bill. The law will go into effect immediately.

The bill provides for the reading of five verses of the Old Testament, without comment, at the opening exercises every morning in the public schools.

Its passage was bitterly opposed by Catholic and Jewish organization.

SEEK POISONED FOOD AT MUNITIONS PLANT

Dayton, O.—City authorities today began an investigation of the illness of twenty women and girls employed at the ecording and Computing company's plant, now manufacturing war munitions.

The women are said to have been made ill by food served at the plant. An analysis is being made for traces ofpoison.

RECAPTURE OF VILNA IS CZAR'S AIM

Petrograd—The most notable development in the situation on the northern front is the Russian smash of the German line in the Jacobstadt sector between Riga and Dvinsk.

The Czar's troops have wrested from the ermans successive rows of trenches defended by a perfect cobweb of wire entanglements.

The Germans' aggressive attempts in the Dvinsk theatre are probably in the nture of a reply to the Jacobstadt smash, but so far the Russian artillery has shattered the German concentrations.

U. S. STOPS WIRELESS AMATEURS ON BORDER

San Antonio—Twenty-five wireless stations in and about this city have been dismantled by Federal officers acting on instructions from the Department of Justice, it was announced here today.

These plants, designated as "amateur stations," have been a source of considerable annoyance to the War Department, especially since the establishment of wireless apparatus with the American troops in Mexico.

Hope of Capturing Villa Is Lessening

Casas Grandes, Chilhuahua (Via Radio to Columbus, N. M.—Reports received from forty miles south of this point are to the effect that Villa has conscripted thir y-five men and boys. The natives in the vicinity of Carralitos are reported to be hostile to Villa.

San Antonio, Texas.— Francisco Villa has escaped from the Mexican troops that had checked him near Namiquipa. Three Columns of American cavalry are pursuing him.

Already they are almost 250 miles south of the border, and unless Mexican forces bring the elusive Mexican to a stand, this distance will be greatly increased by the close of the week.

Villa's success in extricating himself from the dangerous position into which he had been driven by the American punitive force was related in a detailed report by General Pershing, that reached General Funston here today.

General Funston forwarded the report to Washington without making public any but the essential features.

Riding Hard After Villa

Colonel Dodd is commanding the advanced columns riding hard after Villa and his men, and General Pershing has divided his forces so as to provide supporting columns along the thinly stretched lines of communications from his most advanced base at El Vaille.

From El Vaille another line is being maintained back to Casas Grandes, from where communication with theb order is maintained.

General Pershing himself is somewhere south of Casas Grandes directing the work of holding together his forces andn directing so far as possible the operations of Colonel Dodd.

Cavalry is being used along the lines communicating with El Vaille, where a detachment of infantry is stationed.

Three aeroplanes are at El Vaille and will be used in scouting as soon a the high winds that have been sweeping that part of Mexico for almost a week subside.

These winds, according to General Pershing, have made effective assistance by the aeroplanes imposs went into Mexico, two are still out of commission. They were damaged in the flights from Columbus to Casas Grandes.

No Americans Engaged

Details of the operations about Namiquipa that ended with the escape of Villa were not revealed, but there is little reason to believe he was badly whipped or even weakened by the fighting directed against him by the de facto Government troops.

Reports last week from Mexican sources indicated he had been severely defeated by the Carranza forces, and a few reports stated that Americon troops had participated in the action.

It now appears no Americans were actually engaged, and the fact that Villa made his way through what was described as an encircling line of Mexican troops was taken to indicate that he was the victor.

Unless fresh Mexican forces are sent to meet Villa there appears no reason why he should not make his way uninterrupted into the mountains of the Guerrero district toward which he appears to be moving.

Once there it is conceded his capture will be difficult, and should he choose to pass through thed istrict on into the south there are trails over which he might move his little army until a juncture is made with one or more of his roving organizations in southern Chilhuahua or northern Durango.

Problem More Complex

If Villa moves into the districts further south, military men realize the problem of capturing him will become many times more complex. More troops will be necessary and their provisioning by way of country roads wil become practically an impossiblity.

Fifty-foure more auto trucks went into service today along the line between Columbus and Casas Grandes, and twenty-seven more were reported to be on their way from the factory. But with this increase in the motive power of the transportation division bad weather and heavy roads make uncertain that method of getting supplies to the front, in the opinion of officers connected with the Quarter master's Department.

The escape of Villa and his renewed flight toward the south, they say, make the use of at least one of the railroads, and possibly both, from Juarez to Chilhuahua almost essential to the success of the chase.

EMENY PLANT CHANGES HANDS

The G. J. Emeny plant, opertated in Hubbard st. for more than twenty years, with G. J. Emeny president of the concern, has been sold to F. D. Dutcher and L. W. Emerick.

Mr. Dutcher assumed complete charge of the plant this morning. The full force of employes will be maintained and the shop will contine to manufacture the Parker marine engine and do a general repairing business as in the past.

The sale of the entire G. J. Emeny interests, which includes a large three story block, where in the shop is located as well as one other manufacturing concern, is one of the most important real estate transaction of the year.

The property covers a considerable area of ground extending from the street line at Hubbard street to the border of the abandoned canal land.

WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy tonight and Tuesday. Probably local rains and colder.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time".

Fulton Fashion Display Days—March 29th, 30th and 31st.

* * *

Take those nice afternoons off Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and callon your different merchants and see what they have to offer you. We are sure you will be pleased as well as very much satisfied that the Fulton Merchants can give you just as good, if not better bargains, than you can get in any other city.

* * *

These are the days to plant those flower seeds so they will be in bloom early in the Summer.

* * *

Start NOW cleaning your sidewalks, so that your neighbors do not need to wade through water and slush all the time. It only takes five minutes of your time to do this. You will not only serve yourself but also others. Let's have Fulton clean for once, ahead of time.

* * *

The Street Department will on Tuesday start cleaning the ice on Cayuga street so that the street will not be a disgrace to the community.

Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. & A. M., has extended to the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Fulton the use of their rooms for the Annual Banquet of the Chamber, April 3rd, 1916. This is a splendid spirit which should be appreciated by the entire citizenship.

* * *

The Banquet starts at 7 p. m., but the people MUST take their seats at 6:50, giving the masters of ceremony ten minutes to bring in the guests of the evening. Those who are not in their seats at 6:50 shall have to wait until all guests are seated. There shall be no exception to the rule.

* * *

We sincerely hope and request citizens of Fulton to display the National Colors on April the 3rd, so that not only the city will look nice but to show the Governor that the real spirit is prevailing in Fulton.

* * *

You better start making preparation for the CLEAN-UP, PAINT-UP, BRIGHTEN-UP, AND LIVE-UP CAMPAIGN to be held soon. It is going to be the biggest campaign ever held in the State of New York. Especially the ladies are requested to cooperate in this movement as much as they can.

* * *

Once more we repeat the Banquet to be held April 3rd is going to outprize anything that has ever been held in Fulton.

TROOPS WILL ESCORT THE GOV.

Secretary Hollenga in announcing preliminary arrangements for the Chamber of Commerce banquet, to be held in the Masonic rooms, next Monday evening, adds that when Governor Whitman arrives in the city, he with the other honor guests will have as escorts troops from Fort Ontario. A reception will be given the guests at the Citizens Club. So far as known at present the guests will include the following:

Governor Whitman, Speaker Sweet, Congressman Mott, Francis E. Cullen, Thomas Hennessey, mayor of Oswego; James Gray, Democratic State committeeman, Edward Machold, D. B. Long, F. B. Shepherd, president of the Oswego Chamber of Commerce; Ex-Congressman J. R. Clancy, president of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce; Lachlan MacLeay, Secretary of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce.

The dinner will comprise four courses and an orchestra of ten pieces will be in attendance.

CHAMBER BANQUET TO BE HELD IN MASONIC ROOMS

Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. and A. M., has extended an invitation to the Chamber of Commerce for the use of its rooms in the Quirk building for its first annual banquet to be held April 3.

The Chamber of Commerce has accepted this invitation and expresses appreciation for the fine cooperative spirit shown.

Kaiser's Ships Flee Before King's Fleet

London—The attack by British seaplanes on German airship sheds in Schleswigi-Holstein, during which several Zeppelins and their hangars were destroyed and several British seaplanes were lost, was a more important operation than the official despatches indicate. The seaplanes were escorted by Commodore Tywhitt's cat squadron.

While the official report, in the usual British conservative style admits that the destroyer Medusa may have been lost, though the crew was saved, and that two German armed patrol vessels were sunk, despatches from Copenhagen insist that the action was of grave importance; that the German cruiser and torpedo boat squadron fled after a running action lasting more than an hour, during which about fifty vessels are said to have been engaged, and that there is every indication that this engagement is preliminary to a big sea battle in which the major portion of the German fleet, which has been in hiding for a year and a half behind the bight of Heligoland, will take part.

Seaplanes Bombard German Stations

Commodore Reginald Y. Tyrwhitt, with a force of light cruisers and destroyers, on Saturday made a daring raid along the German coast of Schleswig, releasing several seaplanes which flew over the German aeroplane stations at Hojer and Tonder, seriously damaging them. Three of the British seaplanes are missing.

An engagement with German patrol vessels also occurred and two of them were sunk. In the battle destroyers Medusa and Laverock were in collision and the Medusa is believed to have been lost during the stormy weather prevailing.

The seaplanes were released between the Island of Sylt and the Schleswig coast. During the naval torpedo boats were cut off by a number of British destroyers but eventually succeeded in making their escape, says a despatch from Copenhagen.

Despatches from Esbjerg, Denmark, to the Gerlingske Tidende, says Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent, report a great naval battle between the German and British fleets some three miles off the Gradyb Lightship at midday yesterday. The despatches adds that Tonder, in Schleswig-Holstein, has been bombarded by five aeroplanes.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Copenhage says the German armed trawlers sunk by the British outside Sylt Harbor were named Braunschweig and Otto Rudolf.

Four Destroyer Lost in Collision

The following official statement was issued last night:—

"An attack by British seaplanes was delivered yesterday morning upon German airship sheds in Schleswig-Holstein, eastward of the island of Sylt. The seaplanes were conveyed to their rendezvous close to the German coast by an escorting force of light crusiers and destroyers under Commodore Tyrwhitt.

"Three of the seaplanes which took part in the attack are missing. The destroyer Medusa was in collision with the destroyer Laverock, and it is feared that in thes tormy weather which prevailed last night the Medusa may have been lost, but no misgivings are felt as to the safety of the crew. Two German armed patrol vessels were sunk by our destroyers.

"No detailed report has yet been received, but from Danish press messages it would appear that this operation, which was carried out within the enemy's waters, achieved its object."

The Laverock, 250 feet long, was built in 1914 and displaced 965 tone. She was armed with three 4-inch guns and two torpedo tubes. Her normal complement was one hundred men. The latest available British navy records give no destroyer named Medusa.

Probably 6 American Lives Lost on Sussex

London—Although a hundred passengers, among them from four to six Americans of the cross Channel steamship Sussex have been murdered by a torpedo fired without warning by a German submarine, this fact being sworn to by six American passengers, the general belief here, and this obtains also among Americans in London, is that Washington will dispose of the latest sea horror by despatching another note to Berlin.

The Daily Telegraph says: —"Among the bodies which the sea will cast up within a few days wil be those of Americans. What will the United State do?" and answers the question by another, "What has the United States done?"

The Times declares "Washington cynics expect this latest horrible example of Germany's lawless inhumanity will be denounced time and again by Mr. Wilson and will then be hidden and forgotten behind a curtain of fire of diplomatic conversations."

The Daily Chronicle says: —"Obviously a more direct and defiant challenge never was handed by one nation to another, than that which Germany now has launched at the United States. Whether the latter picks it up or whether it lets it lie the world, and all the belligerents will now know with a clearness hitherto lacking precisely where theg reatest of neutral countries stands."

Edward Marshall and two other Americans made depositions at the American Embassy yesterday that they believed a German submarine fired a torpedo at the Sussex.

Feeling among the American colony in Londen is at fever heat, ane of the leading officials of the Society of Americans in London declaring

ILION'S PROSPERITY

The people of central New York have had an interesting spectacle in the development of the remarkable industrial boom which has brought prosperity to the village of Ilion. The boom has been so great in extent and volume that some of the embarrassments that accompany such rapid developments, such as shortage of houses and accommodations for the necessary increase of business, have been a part of the experience of the village. but the Ilionites are all very happy and are working successfully to make the most of their opportunities.

Probably no other New York village ever experienced a boom as big as Ilion's, Lucky Ilion!—Utica Dispatch.

PROPOSED CHAIN STORE TAX

There is a bill in the Assembly which would permit a local tax on chain stores. It is doubtful if the bill is constitutional, for taxing one store to the exclusion of others looks like class legislation. The argument offered in support is exempt from the taxation required from the local merchants. The chain store invariably merchant also very frequently secures his location by paying rent Neither pay a direct tax, but a part of both pays goes straight to the cost of government.

There is constant effort on the part of one interest and another to restrict trade, throwing it this way or that way. This is true in face of the fact that the great domestic business of the country has been encouraged by the ease with which goods may pass from one State to another, from one city to another, and with the utter freedom with which any one can do business.

It is proper to restrict and control business for certain purposes, such as the afeguarding of health. ut to place an extra tax upon a store because it is one of a chain can scarcely be termed good public policy. It would be just as sensible to place an extra local tax on a manufactured article because the manufacturer sells it throughout the United States.—Utica Observer.

SING SING'S STORE

It is comfort to come across a news item from Sing Sing which is neither gossip or scandal, and neither sentimentality nor malice. Such an item is the announcement made yesterday of the result of the operation of the Mutual Welfare League's co-operative store during the past fiscal year. Sales made to inmates and to callers amounted to about $12,500, and the profits—which go into the League's treasury—were about $2,800. Activities of this nature are clearly beneficient, with no drawbacks that we can think of. When the inmates are joined in the conduct of ab it of practical business that conduces at once to the benefit of individuals—as this does through the moderate prices charged by the store—and to the common benefit, the proceeding must tend to promote ideas of order, thrift, and responsibility. The time will come when thew hole of Mr. Osborne's experiment at Sing Sing will be studied from the standpoint of inherent merit, and apart from all the mess of personalities and political intrigue that has hitherto obstructed the view. And we have no doubt that it will then be found to have made a progress of rational prison management, even though among its features there may be some that will not be opproved.—N. Y. Evening Post.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING NOT A CURE-ALL

The agitation for expanding vocational training in the city schols seems to meet with considerable favor, and it is expected that strong pressure will be brought to bear on the Board of Education to institute the departure. One prospective disappointment that should be borne in mind is that whereas a modicum of such training probably is beneficial, there is such a thing as too much of a good thing, We are apt to go to extremes in this country At present vocational training is going to cure almost everything the flesh is heir to. Just establish a vocational school and presto! al will be well with the oncoming generation. oDubtless many parents will thereupon wash their hands of responsibility, leaving to the schools much that the schools may not perform.

Yet the identical fobiles, inefficiency, sloth and incompetence that obtain now will continue to obtain on the part oi many pupils. Alopathic doses of vocational training or any other kind of training will not cure a national disease. Instead of administering at one dose the contents of the phial, it would be well perhaps to try homeopathy, lest the patient become very ill under heroic treatment.

We are a fickle and impetuous race, and we grow fads like mushrooms. Vocational training, like everything else, has its good points and its bad points ,and no harm can come from approaching the subject with due regard for human experience.—Auburn Adv.-Journal.

WHAT DO THE PEOPLE WANT?

What kind of a city do the people want? Is it to be a city of thistles? Are we endeavoring to have it said of us that we are not neglecting to pull the thistles, planting in their places roses? Shall the city do full justice to its advantageous location, or shall it go in a pop and peanut fashion? Like Admiral Togo, the people should say, "we wish for to know this honorable question." The city has many good men, some of whom are officers of the Chamber of Commerce; it has some good men who are not officers of the organization. The Chamber of Commerce officers should be all good men—from head to foot—men who, if put to the true test of the soundness of a principle, will not be afraid to proclaim it. Men sometimes belong to fraternal societies for what they can gain commercially. That's their business and their privilege—but when a man would swim along easily, permitting an excellent principle to hold up his head, ignoring the great mark of the community so that it may be hit by those who would deny its rightful place in the town—that's the people's business. If the people neglect their business, then they become 'easy marks", and the swimmer should exercise the prerogatives he enjoys by virtue of indifference. He should bestride the necks of the people—not because he wants to, but because the people will be better off for being ridden.

The trifles of conduct anywhere, in or out of a Chamber of Commerce—every day—tell people what kind of a town or city we have. Nature works on the same principle. Texas has a little plant called a compass flower, because in all weathers, winter and summer, it turns its flower to the north; rains beat upon it and snows cover it, but it never swerves from its fixed direction. There are men like that. They are known by thew ork they do. They do not indulge in trifles. They have their place in the Chamber of Commerce—not on the side lines. They can stand the acid test because they will not allow a great mark to be hit.

The present week is one when the people must decide what kind of a city they want. Friday is the day set for nominating men who will have a say in conducting the affairs of the Chamber of Commerce another year. Another year should witness some lively pulling of thistles, because there remain many to pull, and the roses are few and far between.

Advancement— inprovement in condition— is the order of things in a community of equals.

ZOLA'S HYMN TO LABOR

(From "Labor," by Emile uola)

Is not the universe an immense workship in which no man can be idle, in which the very least of us are doing our part in a mighty work, in which the machine goes on and turns out what it has made and is creating incessantly, whether it be simple fermentations of things that are of the utmost perfection? The fields ripe with harvest have been at work; forests are at work when the trees put forth their foliage; oceans, as they roll their waves from one continent to another, work; and worlds, borne by the rhythm of their gravitation through infinite space, are at work. There is not one being not one thing in all the universe, that can be idle. Everything is impelled to work, is put to work, and is forced to do its part in the work common to all. Whatever does not do its work at once disappears, and is rejected as useless and superfluous. It must give place to what will work—to some worker who is indispensable.

And how admirably can work regulate things; what order it creates wherever it reigns! It is peace and joy, as well as health. I am amazed when I see it despised, belittled, looked upon as a shame or as a punishment. * * * There is no such thing as happiness, unless we place it in the united happiness of perpetual, united labor. And that is why I wish that someone would preach to the world the religion of labor, and sing hossannas to labor, as a savior, the only true source of health, peace and happiness.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

The Washington Housekeepers' alliance has taken up "waste not, want not" proposition with a view to an anti-waste campaign. This is timely as an adjunct of preparedness, but should not be made to hinge upon any war scare prepa̶redness issue. It is good preparation for every fate which can come to a nation and a people. Preachments on waste usually start with the kitchen and a rehash of the chestnut that the average American family wastes enough food to keep the average European family well fed. Of course it does, but the lamentable waste isn't confined to food supplies. The busy housekeeper can well argue to the provider. Why skimp at the table just to have money to burn on useless luxuries? Many expensive habits are indulged without reference to their appropriateness for the family involved. Probably the waste on dress in these times is more needless and impoverishing than that in the kitchen. Garments and ornaments are made for show and often for only a day's service. Relatively cheap as to first cost, they are actually tremendously dear.

"War worry" is said to be epidemic among the women of England. Joaquin Miller wrote a very strong poem depicting wife and mother as heroines of the "bravest battle." For the man at the front there is curiosity, excitement and ambition to keep the mind engaged and off from self and horror. Not so for the woman waiting, who starts at every strange sound. To her the very word "war" spells inconceivable disaster, sorrow and want. In bringing on wars due to passion women have a fair proportion of responsibility, but when it comes to paying the price they bear an unfair proportion of the burden.

The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in Washington has stated recently that more than 2,000,000 persons are working at industries which are directly dependent upon the use of artificial coloring. The value of their product is between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 annually. The head of that bureau is authority for the statement that the loss now being borne by American users of dyed stuffs and dyed wares reaches a total of $1,000,000 a day, and conditions are growing worse instead of better.

Every output of definite information from the interior of Mexico leaves much to be desired. In fact, the situation there is shrouded in mystery, and if the people rule on this Mexican proposition as it affects the United States they are doing it blindly. This absence of definite news from a neighboring country leads to the conclusion that American journalism has lost its old time dash and enterprise. Formerly the great dailies vied with one another on self appointed missions of exploration and investigation.

Authorities on baseball are saying that there will be no material cuts in salaries of stars of the major leagues during this season. In the first place, many players are under contracts which have a year to run at high prices. It is admitted that salaries will eventually drop to about old time figures and that admission prices may drop to conform to these new conditions. No cut in admission is expected, however, until salaries are brought to a lower level.

Speaking of a national defense commission, it is well to remember that we have in congress one of the very best defense commisions that could be created. It possesses ample and unquestionable power to do everything in the premises and, moreover, is a representative body.

The barrel skirt is to contain sixteen yards of cloth and be tight at the waist and ankles. Hence it requires little imagination to picture its wearer like a dirigible stood on end—that is, a pose possible except when the wind blows a gale.

The department of commerce estimates the shipment of munitions to Europe at $2,000,000 worth a day now Some of the large companies had a heavier home trade in 1915 than in foreign orders.

Military training of young men is never a waste of time, and that is more than can be said of some other training which might be named for some young men.

On second and sober thought about every normal person is confident that war between the United States and any European power will be averted somehow.

The Newark School System

Its Salient Features Presented by J. W. Kennedy, Assistant Superintendent

The all-year school has been a growth, a development from the summer schools established in 1886. These schools, started for the purpose of removing children from street influences and preserving their school habits, have broadened their original purpose and enriched their curriculum by the addition of many elementary and high school activities including attractive sports and games and varied forms of manual training.

An epoch in the history of summer schools was the establishment of "promotion Classes" in 1910. Ther esult has been a revelation. The enrollment of these classes reached 11,000 in 1915. Pupils in the promotion classes comprise two principal groups: 1. Backward pupils seeking to make up deficiencies or work off conditions. 2. Ambitious pupils wishing to qualify for a higher grade. By far the larger number of pupils in these groups go back to their schools in September bearing recommendations for promotion to higher grades. Principals at first demurred to these recommendations, refusing to believe that serious deficiencies could be mended or grades, scheduled for twenty weeks' study, skipped by means of a six weeks' summer session. The eye-opening came when it was found that nearly ninety per cent. promoted on summer school credentials sustained themselves. What ambitious children of talent could do when given a chance was a revelation to teachers and principals obsessed with the graded school notion that all must march lock-step or climb the ladder rung by rung.

These promotion classes brought clearly before the schools three things: (1) That hundreds of children were eager to study in the summer time; (2) That their minds and bodies received no damage from such study; and (3) That the time gained by these pupils in the summer school meant a financial gain to the city because of the fact that they would be able to finish their respective courses in shorter time.

The inexorable logic of these summer schools with their promotion classes led inevitably to the all-year school.

Four years ago, on the recommendation of Superintendent Poland, two all-year schools were established—one in Belmont Avenue and the other in McKinley School.

In 1915, on the recommendation of the Superintendent, two more all-year schools were established—the Lafayette and the Boys' Industrrial School. The enrollment in the Lafayette School for the year 1914-15 was 1,764. Of this number, 1,377 enrolled for the summer term on the all-year plan. Every pupil remained for the summer term in the Boys' Industrial School, where the conditions of work in the school closely approximate conditions of work in the shop.

The all-year school, like all innovations, had to run the gamlet of adverse criticism arising from conservative public opinion. Long use and wont had fixed the forty weeks' school and ten weeks' vacation on a firm foundation.

Chief Objections

1. Children would not attend in July and August, when the compulsory attendance law was not operative.

WITNESSES TELL OF VILLA'S ATTACK, WHICH SURPRISED FORCE ON THE BORDER

Lieutenant's Wife Describes How Her Husband Killed a Dozen of the Mexican Outlaws.

Bare Handful of Men Bravely Chased the Bandits Far Into Mexico, but No Battle Resul..d.

WITH every officer in the war department busily engaged in carrying out the mobilization of large military forces on the Mexican border and with several detachments of cavalry already in the troublesome little republic seeking Pancho Villa, interest of the American public has been transferred from Verdun and other European battlefields to our own country.

All American officers agree that it is no easy task to "get" Villa. He is a sly fox, in a great many respects like Huerta, who caused so much trouble in Mexico. But Huerta in all his reign never did anything as brutal and savage as Villa's attack on the little town of Columbus, N. M.

The bandits knifed every sentry to death and thus effected, undetected, entry into the heart of Columbus, according to Mrs. James Pryor Castleman, wife of Lieutenant Castleman, who, as officer of the day, repelled the invaders.

Mrs. Castleman's account of Villa's slaying the sentries is the first explanation offered from any source as to how the invaders got into Columbus without arousing either soldiers or citizens.

She saw Pancho Villa and Pablo Lopez, his chief lieutenant, standing in front of her house, she said. Until Lopez fell she had her pistol ready to fire if either tried to enter her house.

All Houses Surrounded.

Finally Villa mounted his horse and by circling among the houses escaped. The house of every officer was surrounded, as also were the homes of leading citizens, she said.

Mrs. Castleman is of the opinion that her husband killed a dozen or more Mexicans with his own revolver.

"At 4:30 o'clock I heard the most awful shooting. Bullets just rained on our house. I put my children under their bed and got my pistol, for I said they would not take me alive and I certainly would get some of them if they came in.

"An awful half hour followed, in which I heard nothing but shots and shouts: 'Viva Villa! Death to Americans!'

"Villa cut a fence and came in between the Gibsons' ranch and the gate. He killed all sentries with knives noiselessly. Then he set their horses loose. His men were right in the city before anybody knew it, and my husband's shot was the first warning.

"Mr. Castleman stepped out of the house, and a Villista threw his rifle in his face. Evidently my husband's sudden appearance frightened the Mexican, for, although he was at very close range, he fired his rifle, and the bullet passed over Mr. Castleman's shoulder. Mr. Castleman killed the Mexican.

"Mr. Castleman then turned the guard out. Then he turned out Troops F and H. Meanwhile the camp had been aroused. But Villa's men were already there. Some of the soldiers were killed before they got their guns.

Lieutenant Fought Barefoot.

"Lieutenant J. P. Lucas, in command of the machine guns, fought barefoot. The battle was in the dark, and only two men could get to Mr. Lucas. One of these, a sergeant, was killed. Mr. Lucas had only himself and another man, and in the dark he must have put a charge in wrong, for the gun jammed. The second machine gun worked properly.

"Mr. Castleman, who was in the Philippines and participated in many battles, said he had been in many tight places, but that this was the worst of all. The Mexicans outnumbered us six to one at least, and I don't see how we won, except that the Mexicans are cowards and because of their bad aim. The Mexicans all shoot high. All of the marks on my house—and it is full of bullets and bullet holes—are high. Our men all hit below the belt, as we could see from the dead Mexicans in the street.

Saw Men Shot Down.

"The battle raged right in front of our gate. Six Mexicans were killed there. I think Mr. Castleman got twelve or more.

"Only sixty-five men, by actual count, followed the bandits into Mexico. There were 500 or more Villistas. I went out into the streets shortly after 7:30 o'clock. The horrible things Mexicans had done and the more horrible things they had tried to do had changed me. I saw Mexicans dead and Mexicans suffering and was unaffected.

"Mrs. Slocum, the colonel's wife, who is one of the gentlest, sweetest women in the world, said, 'I don't understand it, but I haven't any feeling over seeing these men suffer.' Every woman was changed. They had lost all feeling. They had no sympathy, no pity."

John Lewis Childs, a former New York state senator, who has just returned from the southwest, tells of his experiences at Columbus just after Villa made his attack.

"Our train was approaching Columbus," said Mr. Childs, "when we heard the firing and saw the smoke from the burning village. The engineer brought it to a stop, and we waited in the train. Not a person had a gun, and a number of women and children were aboard. We had been somewhat fearful of a raid for a number of miles while we were going through that country."

Mr. Childs said that they could distinctly hear the crashing of the machine gun, and then it suddenly stopped, and he later learned that it had jammed.

"Later on we saw the bandits leaving," he said. "First a few appeared, and these rode away in flight, followed by ever increasing numbers, and we then realized that they were retreating, and I can tell you there was a general sigh of relief when we saw the Villistas fleeing and about a mile behind them a mere handful of our own troopers.

Anxious to Get Away.

"There was little firing from our men. They rode with grim determination, but the bandits constantly turned and fired. Their shots were occasionally answered by our men, who rode in good order, like a well oiled piece of machinery. I thought several times what would happen if the bandits should turn and give fight to our troops, who seemed to be about sixty in number. But the Mexicans were evidently only too anxious to get away, and finally we saw them disappear with our boys in close pursuit.

"When we finally pulled into Columbus I saw at least fifty bodies lying about and went at once and saw Colonel Slocum. He said that his force numbered about 350 men, while those of the bandits were at least 2,000.

"As soon as the firing began the bandits rode through the town and shot to kill whenever they saw any one appear at a window or door. A general attack seemed directed at the home of United States Customs Collector Riggs. He had his house barricaded, however, but there were thousands of shots all over the building.

"Mrs. Riggs had her baby in her arms. A nursing bottle was shot from its mouth, but the child was uninjured. Mr. Riggs put the baby and its mother on our train and joined the troopers in their pursuit of the bandits.

"The people of the town were certainly brave in their predicament, and not one of them showed the slightest terror. When we left every man and boy in the town large enough to hold a gun was forming a company to repel any other attack that might be made."

Woman Held Nine Days.

Mrs. Maud Hawk Wright, an American woman who said she was held captive by General Villa for nine days and was liberated in the midst of recent fighting, declared that Villa announced on March 1 his intention to attack Columbus and proceeded north under forced marches to carry out his purpose. His men, with scant supplies of water and meat, suffered severely she said, and many dropped from their horses on the march to Boca Grande.

Villa, she declared, ruled them by fear, and his officers with the flats of their swords beat the soldiers into animation sufficient to reach that point, where they rested.

This, of course, was based on the false conception of the pupil, painted in literature as "a whining school boy with his satchel and shining morning face, creeping like a snail unwillingly to school." The fact is the child likes to go to school, and the number attending the all-year schools has proven it. The percentage of attendance, without compulsion, in July and August has beenu niformly higher than that of ther egular term with compulsion.

2. The summer studya nd confinement in school would imperil the health of the pupils.

Many doctors supported this contention. The experience of four years has failed to reveal a case of illness that can be attributed to summer study and attendance, while investigation of the health and attendonce of these summer school pupils during September and October shows no exhaustion of energy, no impairment of health or interest.

3. Efficient teachers could notb e secured. Because teaching is nerve-racking business, many believed that t eaching twelve months would break down thet eacher who tried it.

Here again thec ritics have been confounded. Not only has it been possible to get good teachers, but at all times there has been a waiting list of highly efficient teachers from which to select. We have yet to learn of damage to a teacher's health by reason of summer service, and strange to relate, the number of dayslostbyillness during the school year has been less for those teachers teaching the summer term than for those taking the long vacation.

4. The expense of the all-year school was an added burden to the taxpayer.

On the contrary, it can be shown that it is a relief and not a burden. If pupils can complete their elementary education in 288 weeks (6 years—48 weeks per year) instead of 320 weeks (8 years—40 weeks per year) there is a clear gain of 32 weeks and in a school of 5,000 pupils, there is a saving of $86,400.

Need of an All-Year High School

One drawback to the all-year plan is the lack or articulation with the present high schools of the city, which are organized on the old plan of ten months' work and two months' vacation. The remedy for this, of course, is in the establishment of an all-year high school, and this seems to be then ext development of the all-year system. We shall then be able to demonstrate pretty conclusively the advantages of the all-year system over ther egular system, especially when we shall have graduated all-year pupils from the high school courses.

JUDGE GARY SEES MANY CHANGES

"I think there has never been a time when the young man entering business has had greater opportunities for his own development and for service to his fellow men," writes Judge Elbert Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, in the forthcoming number of the Independent.

"We have here the greatest country in thew orld with theg reatest natural resources and the greatest possibilities of development. The young men of the next generation in American business have every right to be both hopeful and confident. Success or failure depends upon themselves."

Judge Gary begins by saying that business in America must prepare for the great falling off in export trade that will follow the end of the war and for the decrease in buying ability of the whole world. He says the transition from war to peace must necessarily entail a period of economic readjustment that will bring radical changes in volume and prices to most lines of business. American business men should proceed with caution, but with faith in the future of the country, he adds.

A New Industrial Age

Discussing the industrial changes of the last thirty of forty years, Judge Gary says:

"This is an age of vast cooperative organization, of large scale production going hand in hand with minute scientific economics in every process of manufacture. It is an age of machinery and enormous mills and factories where armies of men labor under the efficient direction of technical experts. Above all it is an age of specialization. No man can go very far in modern commerce or industry unless he is a specialist in some line or other."

He contends that the Gary plan of public school education is the first successful attempt to bring the teaching in public schools into a real adjustment with the conditions of life in modern industrial communities. Any young man who receives the ben-

DAUGHTER OF PIONEERS BURIED HERE SATURDAY

The body of Mrs. Gertrude Fay, widow of the late Darwin Fay, were brought to this city Saturday afternoon. Funeral services were held at the Case Memorial Chapel in Mt. Adnah cemetery, the same day, at 4:30, the Rev. M. J. Peters, rector of the All Saints Episcopal church officiating.

Mrs. Fay is survived by one daughter, Mrs. James Manteeth, of Canandagua.

For he last few years and up to the time of her death, Mrs. Fay resided with her daughter, but formerly she was a resident of this city. The Fays, descendants of Dr. Fay, a pioneer of Fulton, owned considerable property at the Upper Landing.

MRS. AMELIA KEMP

While returning from California to this city Mrs. Almedia Kemp was taken ill at Kalamazoo, Mich., where a sister resides. She died on Saturday.

The body will be brought here, the funeral taking place from the home of her son, Mr. Albert Kemp, of 515 Rochester street.

FULTON NEWSIE GOT BUMPED FOR WEALTH

Displaying his day's earnings in an ostentatious manner proved disastrous to Norman Smith, a newspaper carrier boy, on Saturday. As a result the youngster is nursing a swollen spot on his head where a section of a shot gun barrel in the hand of 12 year old Solomon Mursky had come in contact with the cranium.

Mursky was arrested on complaint of Melvin Smith, father of the victim, and while admitting the charge blames another boy for having "advised" him to do the deed.

The incident occurred in Hubbard st., near the Hunter Arms company plant, through which thoroughfare Smith was wending his way homeward after showing "the roll" to other boys downtown.

LINCOLN'S FRIEND MR. NELSON TALKS

Murry Nelson, Well Known to Many Persons Here, Talks of Former Days in Mexico.

The New York Times of Thursday contained an interesting report of a talk with Murry Nelson, one of the founders of the Republican party and one-time friend of Abraham Lincoln, drawn an interesting comparison between the developments of the Mexican situation in 1846 and now. He is eighty-six years old, and when the Mexico War broke out he was a boy of sixteen, living in Fulton, N. Y. His brother was Willis S. Nelson, for many years senior member of the forwarding firm of Nelson & Hosmer. A son, Oliver Nelson, resides in Fulton, and so does a niece, Miss Hattie Nelson, daughter of the late Willis S Nelson, who occupied the old homestead in that city. Mr. Murry Nelson in other and more active days was a prominent member of the Chicago Board of Trade and did a large grain business through Oswego, mostly through the firm of Nelson & Hosmer.

Mr. Nelson spends his declining years at the fireside of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Fairbanks, at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., three rosy-checked happy grandchildren brighten the evening of his life. He is still as eagerly interested in the trend of political events, however, as in the days he accompanied Lincoln on the trip when he debated with Douglas.

"War with Mexico might cost lives,' he says "but our dread of war is not to be considered in such a matter. You've got to be willing to furnish the might to do the right. In 1846 the people didn't want the war. They were reluctant to enter it, but war was declared because we knew that it was the only right course for us to pursue. There was much feeling in the United States at that time, much greater than there is at present.

"When the news that war had been declared against Mexico first reached the little border town of Fulton, where I lived, they had the band out, and the boys paraded through the streets with their rifles. We had mass meetings and speeches on the street corners. In those days pretty nearly every boy was a good rifle shot. Every farmer's boy, of course, learned to shoot a rifle. The guns were all muzzle loaders in those days, though:'

"Why do you suppose the feeling was more intense in those times?" Mr. Nelson was asked.

"The people were more loyal to the Government then, in a vague way; but it would be difficult for me to say exactly how. Perhaps it was because we did not have as mixed a population and the revolution and War of 1812 were not so far away."

PREFERRED CAVE TO LIFE IN A SOD HOUSE

Unique Home of Pioneer and Family Brought to Light.

Garber, Okla.—The falling of five feet of cement porch of a farmhouse a half mile north of Garber brings to light the unique home of a pioneer of this section.

Under this porch was a cave. The cave was dug in 1894. At a point along a little ravine a sandstone ledge cropped out, and there S. H. Peters tunneled under and excavated two large rooms, with a sandstone ledge about three feet thick for a roof. The rooms extended sixty feet under the ground, and at the deepest place there was perhaps eight feet of dirt on top. To the back room a skylight 3 by 5 feet was opened.

The rooms were plastered and white coated, and the rock roof was whitewashed, making it light enough for one to read newspapers in any part of the cave. It was very dry at that time, and coffee kept in the cave ground easily. S. H. Peters and his family lived there many months before he built a home above ground.

The stovepipe ran up the skylight, and to persons passing along the road the smoke coming out of the ground was a novel sight. Hundreds of persons visited this cave home, and all wondered why the roof didn't fall in, as it was not supported by timbers.

When the wet years came a little spring in the cave which furnished all the water for the family overflowed the rooms at times, and in recent years when the drain became clogged the cave filled with water. The pioneer later built a house almost over the cave.

S. H. Peters was but little longer digging the cave home than was required to build a sod house of the same size. Sod houses were the first homes of most of the pioneers. The plaster was the only expense to the cave home. Today this section has the finest country homes in the state and is in the wheat belt.

SCIENTISTS TELL OF PANAMA SLIDES

Say Navigation Is Not Likely to Be Stopped Again.

SEVERAL SUGGESTIONS MADE

Preventive Measures Such as Planting Vegetation and Construction of Proper Drainage System Urged. Look to the Future With Confidence.

Navigation through the Panama canal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted by slides, and realization of the great purpose for which the waterway was constructed is assured in the near future, according to the finding of the committee of scientists appointed by the National Academy of Sciences at the request of President Wilson to investigate the problem.

A summary of a preliminary report by the committee was made public at the White House. Excessive rainfall was found to be one of the chief causes for the slides, and control of the falling water was the most important remedy suggested. The committee made detailed recommendations for the prevention of slides in future.

"The committee looks to the future of the canal with confidence," the report declares. "It is not unmindful of the labor necessary to deal with the present slides, and it realizes that slides may be a considerable but not an unreasonably large maintenance charge upon the canal for a number of years. It also realizes that trouble in the Culebra district may possibly again close the canal. Nevertheless the committee firmly believes that after the present difficulties have been overcome navigation through the canal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted. There is absolutely no justification for the statement that traffic will be repeatedly interrupted during long periods for years to come. The canal will serve the great purpose for which it was constructed, and the realization of that purpose in the near future is assured.

Precautions Urged by Scientists.

"The committee believes that some sliding ground will continue to enter the canal for several years to come, though in diminishing amounts. Any relatively inexpensive measures which tend to arrest the present active slides or which promise to reduce the charge against maintenance of the canal in the future are therefore fully warranted."

The committee believes that every available and practicable device should be used to turn rain from ground that is sliding and prevent its entering adjacent ground, and it suggests the following measures:

"The committee believes that threatening ground bordering the slides, quiescent slides and, so far as practicable, active slides themselves, should be sufficiently covered with vegetation to prevent surface wash.

"Before extensive movements of the ground occur warning is frequently given by the appearance of cracks peripheral to the coming slide. As soon as they are formed they should be filled up in order that they may not intercept surface water.

"Undisturbed and threatened areas near the slides should be thoroughly drained both by surface and by tile drainage, to keep as much water out of them as possible, for they may become unstable, and they may supply water to the slides.

"A complete system of open drains should be established on the great slides and the water carried away as directly as possible.

"Drainage by means of tunnels might be adapted to a few special cases, but should be tried with caution and extended only in cases which promise results commensurate with the cost."

In summing up the history of the present slides the committee concludes that since the three great slides are all in the Culebra district this is the chief area of danger. This is the natural consequence of the fact that by far the deepest part of the canal cut is in this district, and that the weakest of the geological formations, the Cucaracha, is strongly developed here.

INCORPORATED

30,000 Engineers to Help U. S. Industrially

New York—With the authority of President Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Daniels, the Committee on Industrial Preparedness of the Naval Consulting Board has accepted an offer of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to conduct a free advertising campaign, nation-wide, in support of the committee's plan to prepare the industries of the country for the manufacture of munitions of war. This announcement was made tonight by Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the committee, together with details of the plan, which embrace arrangements for making, for the first time in national history, a thorough inventory of American industry by an organization of 30,000 engineers.

With "national defense and international peace" as the slogan, the advertising campaign will be conducted in all classes of publications, on bill boards and by electric signs, under the leadership of Herbert S. Huston, president of the associated bodies, and of a committee of leading publishers and advertising experts. Mr. Houston said tonight that already "without cost to the government," newspaper, magazine and trade paper publishers, poster men and electric sign men had offered space to carry the advertising.

Expect Pacific's Cooperation

"This is not a war measure," he said, "but a peace measure. The militarist wil support it and so will the pacifist."

The industrial inventory, involving the task of building up a card index system, probably will be made during May and will be based on what it is necessary to know in determining the capacity and facilitiees of 30,000 plants which in time of war can he employed in the manufacture of munitions. The industrial lessons learned from the European war will be considered in co-relation with this inquiry. One of thep rincipal features of the committee's plan, as revealed in Mr. Coffin's announcement, is a scheme whereby in time of peace manufacturers shall receive small annual contracts from theg overnment for the manufacture of munitions, so that thye will be familiar with methods of manufacture in time of war.

Mr. Coffin outlined what he declared to be the three initial steps—first to find out what American industry can actually produce in munitions of war; second, to apply that knowledge "in a practical way which will put the plants into the service of the government behind the army and navy; and third, "to form such an organization of skilled labor as will not get off the job when the war comes, that will not allow skilled workers to go to the front onl yto be pulled back later, more or less demoralized, to tasks from which they should never have been taken."

In the taking of an industrial inventory, Mr. Coffin said that the committee plans to "enroll American industry at its source." He explained how every state, as well as Alaska, has been organized through the appointment of forty-nine boards of a total of 245 engineers, each state providing five leading "business engineers" chosen from the great American technical societies. The method of procedure will be under the direction of W. S. Gifford, chief statistician of the American Telephone & Telegraph company and regarded as one of the country's foremost business statisticians.

FLED FRANCE IN PLANE, HE SAYS

FEARED THE FIRING SQUAD.

Arrested After Attempting to Send Dispatches by the Censor, He Broke Out of Jail, Walked Many Miles and Met an American Aviator, Who Took Him Safely to England.

Thomas A. Price, a news writer, of Audubon, N. J., came back from the European battlefields the other day with a story of strange and divers adventures. The narrative as Price told it—his flight from court martial and death in France, crossing the English channel in an aeroplane and returning to New York as a stowaway aboard the American liner Philadelphia—follows:

"I went over last May as a free lance. But I soon found that I could not see anything more than the authorities wanted me to see, and I couldn't send that out unless they were willing. So I went to Kent and enlisted as a Canadian. I was sent to France about the 1st of July to a station at Kemmel, between Ypres and Messines, with the Second divisional ammunition corps. I was made a dispatch rider, and I went all through the French and Belgian lines, under shell fire most of the time.

"I saw the battle of Loos and got sent to the base hospital at Etaples as a result of being buried in a shell crater.

All His News Censored.

"All the time I was trying to get something out, but I found that everything I wrote was slashed. At last I found a man going to England on leave, and he agreed to take some of my stuff. I don't know whether they trapped him or whether he turned back on me, but I was arrested and held for court martial. The rules are severe in such things, and death is usually the punishment.

"I was put in prison at Westoutre, Belgium, in an old building that had been hit by shell fire. It looked easy to escape, and as I saw nothing ahead but the firing squad I made the attempt. When the sentry was lounging in a corner out of sight I slipped away. I could only travel by night, for I was hemmed in on all sides. At Ploegstreet, near the Belgian-French border, I got caught in the middle of a body of troops accidentally, and I had to hide in a haystack for four days without food or water before they moved on. I weighed 170 pounds when I started, and I'm down to 130 now. The whole trip was practically a continuous fast.

Saved by American Aviator.

"At last I got to an aviation hangar at Bailleul, about eight miles across the French border. I hid near by, living on raw turnips from the fields and creeping in when no one was around to gather up the leavings from the soldiers' mess.

"At last one day I heard an American talking. I was hiding behind a hedge fence, and I managed to get him alone. I told him the whole yarn, and I begged him to get my memorandum book home to my folks. But the American—I don't dare to give his name—did more. He was starting with some dispatches across the channel, and he put me on his machine, goggled and disguised as his helper. We were thirty-five miles from the channel, the distance across was twenty miles, and he dropped me near Hendon, where he was going, sixty miles inland, a distance of 115 miles in all. Then he gave me a pound note and left me. I made for my old quarters at London and got some clothes and enough money to take me to Liverpool.

"I sneaked aboard and hid in the sand lockers. I expected to be caught even them, for, although I had my American passport, I wouldn't have dared to show it, for it would have revealed me as Price, a deserter. But I found that I could walk among the steerage passengers without anybody suspecting that I was not one of them. When the ship docked I just walked ashore as one of the crew, and somehow or other I got by with it."

ANTHRAX CURED BY SERUM.

Remedy Sent to Newark Case by Bellevue Authorities.

Serum furnished by Bellevue hospital, New York, to the City hospital in Newark is said to have brought about the cure of Maty Wilha of 103 Chambers street, Newark, who was admitted to the Newark institution suffering from anthrax. Dr. Max Wegman made the diagnosis and a messenger was sent to Bellevue at midnight to obtain the serum. A similar case was cured at the Newark hospital about a year ago through aid of the serum. It was said that the quick diagnosis and prompt application of the serum were responsible for the recovery in both cases.

Jap Women Won't Marry.

It is said that an organization of women in Japan numbers 10,000 members, who have sworn never to marry unless their prospective husbands agree to support a movement for obtaining for them equal treatment with men and an improved economic position.

WHISKYTOWN CHANGES NAME.

Now Called Schilling After Man Who Refused to Serve as Postmaster.

Schilling is to be the postoffice name of the town of Whiskytown, Cal., between Shasta and French Gulch, on the Redding-Weaverville stage route. The name Schilling has been decided upon by the postoffice department.

Stella is the old postoffice name of Whiskytown. The office was abandoned six years ago when the late John F. Schilling, who had been postmaster for several years, positively refused to serve longer if the department insisted on putting money orders in the office. Schilling held out, and the office was abandoned. It has since been re-established.

Husband Too Nice and Kind.

Husband "too nice and kind, and I can't stand it," seventeen-year-old wife explained in Cincinnati court in telling why she left him. "If he would bully me I would like him better." So hubby was advised to bully her awhile.

Repartee.

"But why are you in mourning?"
"Oh, for my sins."
"I didn't know you'd lost any!"

BOWSER'S SIDE OF IT

He Avers That Mrs. Bowser Has Also Made Mistakes.

By M. QUAD.
Copyright, 1916, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Readers of the Bowser sketches cannot have helped but notice that Mrs. Bowser always twists everything around so as to appear one of the smartest women in the land, while I am held up to scorn and contempt as a fuddist and an incompetent. I have stood this as long as I shall stand it. Mrs. Bowser is a very good woman, but I shall not longer allow her to boost herself up at my expense. If I have made mistakes she is also guilty of the same thing and should share the blame with me. She has related in these sketches thousands of my blunders, but I shall content myself at present with relating only a few of hers.

One evening last fall as we sat enjoying our home life I observed that I must soon see about the winter's supply of coal for the furnace. She replied that I was an overworked man and that it was her duty as a wife to take all the burdens off my shoulders she could. I needn't bother about the coal, for one thing. She would not have me strain my voice at the telephone for fear of producing some lasting injury to my vocal cords. I might go right along in peace and contentment and on the morrow she would order the coal. She looked at me so lovingly and her attitude was so confident that I left the business to her.

I shall not state that I expected she would blunder about it, but between you and me I looked for some calamity. On the next morning as soon as I left the house she got into communication with our coal man and asked him over the telephone:

"I HAVE BEEN A HOUSE PAINTER FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS."

"You have got coal, I presume?"

"We have kept coal for twenty-eight years," was the reply.

"Then I want five tons of it."

"Very well, madam. It shall be up today."

That was just like a woman—just like Mrs. Bowser. There are about a dozen different brands of coal. She did not specify whether we wanted it for the range or the furnace or a steam boiler, and as a consequence five tons of pea coal came up. Pea coal is the smallest size, you know, and will almost sift through a pepper box. The men had deposited half of it in the bins when she discovered her mistake. That pea coal would last about as long in the furnace as so much sawdust, and it cost her $4 in cash to have it reloaded and taken back to the yards, and she paid the money out of her weekly allowance and bribed the cook with a new pair of stockings to say nothing to me.

And again. When she tells me that we are out of butter I go over to the grocer and say to the swindler who runs the concern:

"Look here, Brown; I want five pounds of butter."

"Yes, sir."

"I want butter instead of lard, wagon grease or margarine."

"Yes, sir."

"I don't want to find any coat buttons, peach stones or vest buckles in it. I want good creamery butter and less than a hundred years old. If you attempt to swindle me I will make Rome howl around this old shebang. You know me, sir. My name is Bowser. I am a desperate and dangerous man!"

And wouldn't he have sent me the sweetest, nicest, slickest, juiciest five pounds of butter that two horn cows ever produced on this grassy globe? Sure he would.

And what did Mrs. Bowser do? She waited until she saw a farmer driving past on our street. Farmers occasionally come our way to dispose of their products. She rushed to the door and called to this farmer, and when he had come up the steps she asked in the gentle tones of an angel if it so happened that he had a crock of butter which he would be so kind and courteous as to sell to her for 2 cents over the market price. Yes, sir, that's just what she did instead of calling him a fraud and a robber to show him that he could not be deceived. The farmer replied that he had such a crock and it was such butter as had never been offered for sale in the city before. He brought in the crock. It looked good to Mrs. Bowser. Because it looked good on the surface she made no investigation. Because the farmer looked childlike and innocent she did not doubt his word. She bought that crock and paid cash down for it, and all day long she was smiling and chuckling and thinking of how she would boast to me of her bargain.

Some butter was wanted for dinner, and the crock had been brought out and a nice chunk lifted up just as I came in. I could not help but see it. I must have been stone deaf not to hear the gasps of surprise and chagrin uttered by Mrs. Bowser and the cook. About two inches of nice looking butter had been spread on top of a crock almost full of dirt, and Mrs. Bowser had been made a victim of a bold faced villain. He had never been on our street before and didn't intend to ever drive there again.

Did I use sarcastic words then to Mrs. Bowser? Did I say that she ought to have known better? Did I say that it served her just right? No! No, I did not even look sarcastic at her and had not a single word to say. We had no butter for dinner, but not a kick from me, and Mrs. Bowser has never mentioned this incident in print, but on the contrary every time I brought home a dozen eggs, and she has found a bad one in the lot, she has told of my utter failure as a business man.

And speaking of eggs reminds me of an occasion when she asked me, in a soft, bland voice, why I didn't buy them at wholesale instead of retail. I replied like any conservative husband would have done, that I would think the startling suggestion over for awhile, but she could not be content. She was in our family grocery when the grocer offered a crate of twelve dozen eggs at wholesale price. She did not ask if he would warrant them fresh eggs, but closed the bargain at once and was very proud of her economy.

Mrs. Bowser wanted to make an egg omelet for dinner, and the first nine eggs out of that crate proved to be bad ones. Out of the twelve dozen eggs she found later on about three dozen good ones—that is, they were not so bad but what they could be forced down the throat. Now, then, how would I have proceeded to buy twelve dozen eggs? I would have entered that grocery and said to the swindler who runs it:

"I want to buy a crate of eggs at wholesale. I want them for 10 cents a dozen less than retail price. I want every egg to be as fresh as the summer dew on a pumpkin vine. If there is a bad egg among them, or a shortage in the count, I will come in here and work such destruction in this old shanty of yours that you will have to go into bankruptcy inside of an hour. Don't think you can swindle me, you old hyena. I am up to the games you practice on innocent customers! Twelve dozen eggs, sir, and every one of them a fresh egg!"

And wouldn't every egg have been fresh, and wouldn't I have saved a dollar or more where Mrs. Bowser lost two or three? Of course I would—of course. And has Mrs. Bowser ever told the public of the swindle in eggs? She has not even hinted it that such a thing occurred, and she never will.

One evening not so long ago she observed that our front steps needed repainting and that she wished I would employ a painter to do the job. I was about to declare that I would do it myself and thereby save $100, when she swished off on some other subject and shut me up. On the next day when a big tramp came along and begged for something to eat she asked him if he had ever done any painting.

"I have been a house painter for over twenty years," was his reply.

"How much will you ask to paint the front steps?"

"Only $3, ma'am, if you will furnish the paint. I wouldn't do it for any one else for less than $7."

We had five or six different kinds of paint down cellar, and Mrs. Bowser brought them up and mixed them altogether. There was no oil to thin them down, and so she poured in a pint of kerosene. The cook said that oil of some kind was highly necessary, and so she emptied a bottle of castor oil in on top of the kerosene, and the tramp went to work.

Were those steps when finished a thing of beauty and a joy forever? Not hardly—not as you could perceive. There were streaks of green and red and purple and lead color and white. There were spots of oil here and there. There were spots of the old paint showing through the fresh coat. They were variegated front steps. They were such as no house ever had before. This incident occurred days and days ago, but the steps have not been in use since, and they may not be for years and years to come.

The tramp had got his money and gone when I reached home, but a crowd still lingered in front of the house. I borrowed a ladder and climbed up to the chamber window to get in and found Mrs. Bowser mentally perturbed. But did I say anything to add to her sufferings? Not one single word. In fact, I patted her on the back and told her this was a good world to live in. She made the most of it when I bought a dozen hens and none of them laid an egg. But did I try to avenge on her when those steps were painted? Not a try!

I am still entering and leaving my house by way of the ladder and the window. But am I saying or doing anything to humiliate Mrs. Bowser? Not a thing. On the contrary, I am saying that she is a nice woman—a very nice woman—and I don't see how I could get along without her. She has her faults, as we all have, but I can excuse and overlook each and every one of them.

WOMAN AND BABY HID DEEP IN MINE

"Just Sat There In Dark and Prayed," She Says.

BANDITS PASSED ABOVE HER

Stayed 1,500 Feet Underground For Two Days With Little Food and Waited Until the Danger Had Passed—Men In Community Were Away at the Time.

Mrs. Wallace Rogers of Detroit, Mich., arrived in El Paso the other day with her fifteen-month-old infant. She told how she had hidden with her baby from Mexican bandits for two days 1,000 feet and more down in the shaft of an abandoned mine near Cananea.

Mrs. Rogers' husband is interested in mining property near Cananea, but was away from home when the little colony fled on the approach of the bandits.

"The whole country around where I was living," said Mrs. Rogers, "was filled with abandoned mines, the shafts of some of which had been sunk 2,000 feet or more. Most of the American men were away when we heard of the approach of the bandits.

"We fled to one of the abandoned mines, carrying whatever food we could snatch up. One of the men took my baby, and we crawled down an abandoned shaft by ladders until we reached the 1,000 foot level. Here we remained for twenty-four hours.

Go Down Deeper.

"Finally, as we heard no shooting, one of the men ventured to the surface. He reported everything quiet, and we returned to our homes.

"We had hardly reached there, however, when we again heard the bandits were coming. This time we went down to the 1,500 foot level, where we remained another day. We were in a little spot about ten feet square. We had no lights of any kind, and I had only a couple of cans of condensed milk to feed my baby.

"We just sat there on the floor in the blackness and prayed. At last we could stand it no longer. I think we would have all gone mad if we had stayed there. We crawled up into the sunshine. There was no sign of the bandits, and we made our way safely to Cananea, where we got a train."

Mrs. Rogers declared the Mexican bandits not only had no respect for the American flag, but that it actually incited them to outrages. The only flag that offered any protection at all, she said, was the British flag.

Union Jack Respected.

"I am bitterly ashamed to admit it," she said, "but whenever trouble started we began to hunt for a 'union jack.' It was by no means a bullet proof shield, but it was the only flag I ever saw the Mexicans paid any deference to.

"There was a young Englishman who committed suicide where I was. The Mexicans thought he was an American, and they hurriedly dug a shallow hole and were going to put him away without ceremony when the officer in command overheard some one say: 'I wish we knew where his mother is so we could notify her. She is somewhere in England, but I do not know where.'

"The officer stopped the burial and asked if the suicide was an Englishman. When he learned he was he ordered the body preserved and tried for four days to get in touch with an English consul."

Refugees continue to arrive in El Paso and at other points along the border, but the majority of them refuse to discuss conditions in Mexico in any way, as they fear their property in that country would be destroyed if they aroused the resentment of the Mexicans.

CUTS OFF AIDE'S FINGERS.

British Aviator Performs Remarkable Stunt While Under Fire.

The heroism of two British air men was demonstrated recently when one of them amputated the fingers of another while under fire.

Lieutenant S. and Captain C. D. were being chased by a German aeroplane. The British aeroplane began to descend, and the Germans fired, wounding the captain in the right arm and smashing two of his fingers. While the captain steered with his left hand Lieutenant S. amputated the two fingers.

The air men came down to safety, but as they had no more gasoline in their tank they were unable to set fire to their machine, which fell into the hands of the Germans.

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL HAND.

Successful Invention to Replace Members Lost by Soldiers.

Two new types of artificial arms with hands are shown at the Academy of Sciences in Paris. One is for heavy work, with fingers like the claws of a lobster. The other has articulated fingers, enabling the hand to reproduce closely the action of natural fingers.

Successful experiments were made in the presence of members of the academy by two men, each of whom had lost an arm. One of them sawed through a beam of wood without difficulty, and the other played a violin.

PLANT THE GARDEN

Some Seeds That You Should Use at Once.

SEVERAL FREE BLOOMERS.

In Planning Your Plot Always Bear In Mind Where Certain Plants Will Go and Their Relation to Other Flowers and Other Colors.

While seeds are germinating and plants are very small they must be handled with the utmost care and precaution, for, tiny and insignificant as the young seedling may appear, it is extremely sensitive to changes in temperature, too much or too little moisture, gas in the room, disease and all the things which sometimes even larger plants have not the strength to resist.

There are a few flowers that should be started in the seed pans. One is salvia, or scarlet sage. It is such a daring color that it must be planted with exceedingly good judgment—not prominently, for it will make itself seen in whatever distance or concealment it is placed, and not close to the porch of a red brick house, a mistake which is so frequently made, but it should be near blending or well contrasting colors. Salvia is one of the last flowers to bloom in the fall, but it is slow growing, and the seed must be started at once.

Verbenas are free blooming and generally satisfactory, but they must be chosen carefully with regard to colors. Avoid the scarlet and other shades of red and purple unless you know exactly where they are to be put and are sure that they will not clash with other things. The white is lovely in a small garden where there are already flowers of many colors.

It will please you later if you sow one pan of salpiglossis and any of the varieties with gold. The flowers are so beautifully veined they should be popular.

You should have snapdragon or antirrhinum in the soft rose shades or yellows. Snapdragon seedlings must be transplanted into another pan as soon as they can be handled and watered cautiously, as they have a fatal habit of "damping off"—that is, the stem rots close to the ground.

A few seeds of Cobaea scandens, the cup and saucer vine, may be started in a three or four inch pot and the strongest plant left to grow until it is time to plant out of doors.

"The purple perfume of petunias" may be remembered now in your plans—and the asters.

Nemesia and terenia are two dainty flowers not often seen in gardens, but delightful, as is also the little blue lobelia, the crystal palace compacta.

patch pockets, set low on the flare of the peplum, also give a chic finish. The white faille lining of the collar is detachable.

Take Care of Your Veil.

The appearance of a veil depends on its freshness, and its freshness depends on the way it is taken care of. So it is well worth everybody's time to keep a veil free from wrinkles. Roll it, if possible, on a cylinder especially kept for the purpose. This can be covered with silk or cretonne, and it should be a little wider than the veil kept on it.

Another good way to keep a veil fresh is to fold it, pulling it smooth and wrinkleless as you fold over and over, with one hand at each side of the veil.

Never fold a wet veil, as the folds will stick together if you do.

Blue veils of lace and net are smart with blue suits and frocks, and plum or purple veils, too, are worn with many of these colors.

Blouse of Satin and Chiffon.

Buttons formed by twisting satin covered cord into fanciful shapes would be effective as a trimming.

China blue satin, with chiffon of the same shade, is used for this lovely blouse. The underbody is of chiffon, built upon a silk lining and across the front of the lining a band of wide lace is stitched to shew through the chiffon. The front is ornamented with a bretelle bib of satin, this material being used also for the collar and deep cuffs. In medium size the design requires 1⅛ yards lining, 1½ yards lace 11 inches wide to gather on the lining, 1⅝ yards 40-inch chiffon and 1⅛ yards 36-inch satin.

First make the underbody, extending the facing from the neck edge to small "o" perforations to form a yoke. Close under-arm and shoulder seams and hem the front. Place lower edge of underbody, sew standing collar to the neck and add the lace.

Next, gather the shoulder edge of the front of the chiffon overblouse, then gather the lower edge. Arrange trimming piece, or bretelle bib, on the right blouse front, notches even. Close under-arm and shoulder seams and gather lower edge of blouse between double "TT" perforations; gather back along small "o" perforations. Bring small "o" perforations at lower edge of trimming piece to corresponding perforation in peplum and tack.

Arrange blouse on underbody center-fronts, center-backs and under-arm seams even; stitch lower edges together.

Sew collar to front edge of trimming piece, notches and small "o" perforations even; and to neck edge of waist, center-backs even.

Turn the front section of belt over on outside on small "o" perforations, gather ⅝ inch from fold and sew to back belt section, drawing gathers to fit; large "O" perforation indicates upper edge. Leave the belt free to the left of center-back and finish for a closing. Adjust belt to position, stitching upper edge of back belt section along upper row of gathers in back; leave the lower edge of belt free.

Close sleeve seam as notched; gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Close seam of cuff as notched to extension; lap extension, matching small "o" perforations when closing. Sew to sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve; and bring the seam of cuff to small "o" perforation in sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole, notches and small "o" perforations even, easing in any fulness.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6626. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Is It Merely Indigestion?

It's queer about life. We like to talk about its large issues. But most of them, when reduced to their lowest terms, are extremely simple.

An old minister's wife never used to hear her husband preach an especially accusing or intolerant sermon without wondering what she had been giving him to eat that did not agree with him. For she had learned by experience that even the color of his theology was affected by his digestion.

A prominent citizen admits that for years life looked like a dreary desert and a barren waste to him until one day a doctor exclaimed, "Why, man, do you realize that you are going about this earth without a particle of hydrochloric acid in your system?"

The full significance of this highly important fact had never before pierced the outer rim of his consciousness, but he learned then that to most humans a certain proportion of this acid is essential to digestion. "And," he went on to say, "after a few weeks I felt like going around preaching the gospel of ten drops of dilute hydrochloric acid in a glass of water after meals to all of suffering humanity." It was all so perfectly simple and so almost ridiculous to know that so much of the value of life itself could turn on so small a matter as ten little drops of fluid with your food.

It's the old story of the horseshoe nail. For the want of a nail a kingdom was lost, and there are more trifling little nails missing in every day life than we imagine. And this is not by way of urging us to brood over our ills, but to examine them sufficiently to find out how simple some of them are.

Perhaps it isn't a matter of ten drops of anything that will make this world a fairer place for you. Perhaps it is a simple little pair of reading glasses that will remove your eye strain and eliminate your headaches and sweeten your disposition. Perhaps it is nothing but a foolish little corn that is pressing on a nerve and making you think you are going to be laid up for life with rheumatism or paralysis or what not. But if it is a small thing on which much of comfort and health depends, how foolish not to take the trouble to set it right.

For, after all, it takes more than sentiment to live well and happily. It takes common sense and as much decent interest in the care of the machine you live with, which is your own body, as you would bestow upon your dollar watch or your typewriter, not to mention your sewing machine or your automobile.

SHRIMP WIGGLES.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, paprika, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of peas and one cupful of shrimp. Melt the butter, add the flour and gradually pour on the milk, stirring continually. Season and add the drained peas, saving the liquor for soup the next day. Rinse, drain and break the shrimp into small pieces, removing the black substance found just under the surface. Add to the mixture, bring to the boiling point and serve hot on toast, crackers or with sandwiches.

Finnan Haddie.—two cupfuls of finnan haddie, cooked; two cupfuls of cream or milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, one egg, salt and paprika. Melt the butter, add the flour and stir until smooth. Gradually pour on the milk, stirring constantly, and when just boiling lower the heat. Add the slightly beaten egg and stir until smooth. Season and heat the fish in the sauce, taking care that the mixture does not boil, as that would toughen the egg. Serve on toast or crackers.

Deviled Oysters.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, two teaspoonfuls of chopped onion, a teaspoonful of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of tabasco sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, paprika, two dozen oysters. Put the ingredients in the saucepan or chafing dish in the order named, stirring constantly so that a smooth sauce may be formed; then add the oysters and cook until the edges curl, five minutes. Serve hot on toast.

Chicken a la King.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, a tablespoonful of flour, two cupfuls of milk, a teaspoonful of salt, paprika, the yolk of an egg, half a cupful of canned mushrooms, one-fourth cupful of canned pimento, shredded; one-fourth cupful of chopped olives, two cupfuls of shredded chicken; one-fourth cupful of sherry. Melt the butter and add the flour, stirring till smooth; then gradually add the milk and let come to a boil. Season then, lower the heat and add the slightly beaten yolk. Add the remaining ingredients and let simmer until thoroughly heated. Serve hot on toast, crackers, or in a shell.

Some Interesting Information For Boys and Girls.

BIRDS AND THE WEATHER.

Our Little Feathered Friends Not So Wise as We Give Them Credit For Being—Making the Most of Opportunity—Portrait of a Little Girl.

That birds are not such good weather prophets as they are generally believed to be is one of the assertions of Frank M. Chapman, the well known ornithologist, in an article on "Birds as Travelers" in St. Nicholas. Birds make as serious miscalculations as the rest of us, according to Mr. Chapman. "Sometimes," he says, "encouraged by an unusually mild period, birds come so far ahead of their usual time that they are trapped by the sudden return of cold weather. Then if they do not retreat they may suffer for lack of food. I have seen geese on the coast of Texas migrating northward in large numbers, urged onward by a warm wave. The next day, to my surprise, they all came flying back. But the day following that a severe 'norther' suddenly arrived. The geese had evidently encountered this storm and were driven back by it."

Make the Most of Opportunity.

Don't wait for your opportunity—make it, as Lincoln made his in the log cabin in the wilderness. Make it, as Henry Wilson made his during his evenings on a farm, when he read a thousand volumes while other boys of the neighborhood wasted their evenings. Make it, as the shepherd boy Ferguson made his when he calculated the distance of the stars with a handful of beads on a string. Make it, as George Stephenson made his when he mastered the rules of mathematics with a bit of chalk on the sides of the coal wagons in the mines. Make it, as Douglass made his when he learned to read from scraps of paper and posters. Make it, as Napoleon made his in a hundred important situations. Make it, as the deaf and blind Helen Keller has made hers. Make it, as every man must who would accomplish anything worth the effort. Golden opportunities are nothing to laziness, and the greatest advantage will make you ridiculous if you are not prepared for it.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Stars In the Sky.

Man may never know how many stars there are. The best we can do is to figure on the number that can be seen with the largest telescopes that have been invented, for you know there must be many millions of them which to us are invisible.

We have counted the stars so far as we can see them, or, rather, so far as we can photograph them. Astronomers have found that a photographic plate exposed to the stars will show more of them than can be seen with the naked eye. By this method, the "Book of Wonders" tells us, man has been able in a way to count the stars he can see. It adds up to more than a hundred million of them. Astronomers found this out by taking photographs of the heavens at night, devoting one picture to each section until the entire heavens had been covered and then counting all the stars shown in the pictures.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Just so the plaid combines pretty and fashionable colors, it may be in taffeta, serge or ginham to fashion this attractive frock for a young woman. The skirt and waist are trimmed with narrow bands of plain material in a dark color—the darkest tone in the plaid is suggested. The collar and cuff-caps are of plain white batiste, giving an unusually neat finish to them odel. For medium size, the dress requires 5 yards 36-inch material, with 1 yard of trimming.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6313. Sizes, 14 to 20 years. Price 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Some Nautical Facts.

A knot is 6,080 feet long. The distance from New York to Liverpool is 3,064 nautical miles by the northern track and 3,139 by the southern track. The former course is taken by vessels bound for New York, the latter by vessels bound for Liverpool. From Liverpool to New York the distances are respectively 3,039 and 3,109 miles.

In estimating records the points taken on either side are Sandy Hook and Daunt's rock, Queenstown harbor. The first light sighted on the British coast is the Bull, Cow and Calf, Ireland, and on the American coast either Nantucket or Fire island.—New York Globe.

efits of education under the Gary plan will be fortunate, Judge Gary asserts, and continues:

"Frequently I have been asked whether I think a college education is worth the time and money necessary to obtain it. This depends upon what is meant by a college education, and also on the standard of value by which it is to be judged. It is a pleasant thing to have, and if one is young enough and has time and money enough, a very desirable thing. But considered solely as a money investment with a view to adding to the earning power, I rather doubt if the average college course in the liberal arts is entitled to all the credit it receives, though it is important and should have consideration."

Favors Technical Education.

Judge Gary speaks highly of the advantages of a technical education, and says in conclusion:

"For, be it remembered, that for good or ill we have become a great industrial nation, and among the most important problems which the next generation will have to solve are economic and industrial problems. Co-operative organization and large scale production are here to stay because they mean greater economy of production and greater and more successful business.

"Yet the great opportunities given to large aggregations of wealth to succeed, to prosper, to construct and to benefit entail equally great opportunities to do harm, and this necessarily means that there should be in this country such governmental regulation as will protect business men in anything they do that is good and prevent them from doing anything that is harmful.

"It is because the future offers such great opportunities for work of national importance in solving these and similar problems that I believe the service of the great corporations will become increasingly attractive to young men of the coming generation."

The Nursery Bib.

Away with the bib and its strings that will knot or the buttons that will not button! Here is the dearest little eating apron that ever covered dainty ruffles or Dickens suits, and when mother realizes what a very simple matter the making of such an apron can be she will hasten to fashion one for the littlest girl or boy in the nursery. A Turkish towel or a simple huck affair can be turned with a snip of the scissors and a few stitches into a comfortable, easily managed apron. At about two-thirds of the length of the towel cut a hole large enough for the little head to slip through. Bind this with tape or scallop it if you wish a little extra fanciness. The shorter side is then gathered or plaited into a belt, made from wide tape or a piece of old toweling, which passes around to the front and holds the apron in place. Cross stitch may make the little apron still more attractive, especially if the design be the favorite nursery chicks, bunnies or kittens. While the linen or huck toweling is prettier, the Turkish toweling is really more practical because of its absorbent qualities. It saves crying over spilt milk.

PLENTY OF OIL IN SHALE BEDS

Running through the western and central part of the state is a layer of black shale rock, 50 feet wide and 250 feet thick, reeking with gasoline and other oils, which Dr. John M. Clarke, director of science and state museum, says can easily be distilled and made to produce great quantities of gasoline.

With the price of gasoline higher in this state than it has ever been before and with a prospect of it going still higher, this announcement by Dr. Clarke will be good news to all users of gasoline throughout the state. There are billions of tone of the black shale rock in the layer, which is 150 miles long, and there is little doubt in Dr. Clarke's mind that gasoline could be produced from this shale and sold at a much cheaper rate than prevails in this state today.

Source of Great Wealth

Because Dr. Clarke believes that the layer of black shale rock is an undeveloped source of great wealth to the state, during the coming summer he will endeavor to have large quantities of it tested with a view of finding out just how much gasoline can be produced from a ton of the shale rock, and also of interesting capitalists i the development of the rock

Starting just south of the city of Buffalo and running directly east, the layer of black shale extends through Wyoming, Yates, Schuyler, Tompkins counties and stops somewhere in Madison county. The same colored shale rock is to be found in various sections of the Hudson river valley, but it is of much harder quality than the shale rock in the western and central section. The shale rock in the Hudson valley, according to Dr. Clarke, could not be developed and made to produce gasoline because of its hardness.

Extends Into Pennsylvania

The layer in the western and central part of the state, acording to Dr. Clarke, dips down into the earth and is a part of the same rock layer which has made the state of Pennsylvania noted fo rits great oil wells. The reason given for this by Dr. Clarke is that during the past centuries the oils in black shale have filtered down through the rock fissures and have formed in large quantites at the foot of the layer in Pennsylvania.

With the oils, all distilled from the rock by a natural process, according to Dr. Clarkes, all thew ork that is necessary in Pennsylvania to obtain the oil is to drive a deep well into the ground until the oil bed is penetrated. This is impossible in this state because the black shale rock is too near the earth's surface and the oils have never had an opportunity to settle in one particular place.

TO SCHOOL ON SKIS.

Then Crawl Down to the Door Through a Hole in the Snow.

Ellensburg, Wash.—Coming to school on snowshoes and skis, sliding over the schoolhouse roof and climbing down to the door through twelve feet of snow is the experience of children at the school at Meadow Creek. Mrs. Mary Boedcher, county superintendent, has received a number of letters which tell the children's idea of the situation.

"Our schoolhouse is about twelve feet high on the outside," writes one boy, "but the snow is so deep that a person can walk right over and not know that there is a building there. We have to crawl down eight steps through a hole in the snowbank to get into it."

"We live in a tent," says a twelve-year-old girl in the seventh grade. "The roof is covered with large pieces of bark. All that you can see of the house is the very front, where you go out. I went halfway to school on the skis and crawled a little way so as not to go in so deep."

Mrs. Beach, the teacher, in her report to Mrs. Boedcher, said that in spite of the snow school kept up every day and that only two absentees were noted during the severe weather.

SHE TRAVELS FAR TO BE MRS.

Young Woman Popped by Mail, Bought Ring and License.

Des Moines.—After traveling over 600 miles Miss Augusta Knies of Lansing, Mich., became the first leap year bride of this city by leading Harley Decker of 1290 East Twenty-sixth street to the altar.

She managed the whole affair. She popped the question, named the wedding day, paid her railroad fare, purchased the marriage license and bought the ring.

Miss Knies, who is twenty-five, was strolling along the streets of Detroit with a girl friend last June. Her companion greeted a young man, and fifteen seconds later she was introduced to her future husband. It was Decker, then employed in a Detroit automobile factory.

He was called back to Des Moines by the illness of a sister in February. Three weeks ago Miss Knies popped the question by mail, and Decker, who is twenty-nine years old, accepted. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank W. Mutchler of the Great Park Church of Christ.

GUN TOTING DAYS AGAIN ON BORDER

People Are Tense, Alert, Expectant, but Not Aflame.

NEWS SPREAD BY COURIERS

Everybody Ready For Any Emergency. Even the Railroad Brakemen Are Armed—Funston Denies That Censorship Is Imposed to Test Sentiment For the Future.

The Rio Grande and the west Texas border district is tense, expectant, armed and alert, but to say that it is aflame over the Mexican situation is to exaggerate, writes one correspondent there. He sees Americans and Mexicans standing peacefully together on the station platforms. The Mexicans hold aloof and are silent, but appear neither terrified nor menacing. The Americans seize the papers as they are flung from the train, eager for the latest news of developments across the line. The Mexicans merely stand there.

Everybody is talking Villa and little else. The Columbus episode has quickened the pulse of the border and worked out a paradox. It has brought a new life to the frontier by bringing back the old. Remington died too soon. He should have seen his southwest today. Men such as he so loved to draw, spurred and booted and with six shooters on their hips, clumped along the station platforms or waved hats from behind a barbed wire fence. It is men of this type who are piloting Pershing's expedition in Mexico.

In the Pullman smoker of the Southern Pacific train speeding toward El Paso the brakeman, C. D. Lussiter, a Texan, flung back his coat and with pride displayed an old single action Colt 44.

"Babies hereabout used to be born with one of these on," he said, "and the fashion's comin' back."

This man's wife was in Columbus the night of the Villa raid, and four bullets pierced her dress. Her brother-in-law was killed.

Went For a Souvenir.

"I went down there right afterward," said the brakeman, "and I got a souvenir."

He took something out of his pocket and passed it around for inspection. It was about an inch square, and it was bone—a bit of skull from one of Villa's men.

Close to, yet far from that strip of northern Mexico into which the expeditionary force has thrust its way, the border towns from El Paso south know less of developments across the line than do others in the rest of the country. Without daily newspapers, except those that arrive from El Paso or San Antonio, they hear of events only through cowboy couriers or from train passengers.

General Funston himself, directing the expedition from San Antonio, is nearly 700 miles from the scene of action, a distance that is increasing daily if the columns push westward. Kitchener, in the war office in London, was far closer to the British front in Flanders, and to reach the trenches from England was vastly more simple than travelling from Fort Sam Houston to Columbus, N. M.

General Funston denied the report that in clamping a censorship on news from the front he was feeling out the American public with a view to determining how far the army could go in the future in the matter of exacting journalistic discipline.

General Funston said the censorship would be no more rigid than that imposed at Vera Cruz at the time of the American occupation.

EX-TRAMP A MILLIONAIRE.

His Ambition Once Was to Buy $1,000,000 Worth of Beefsteak.

Leslie R. Drake of Central America walked past a Los Angeles (Cal.) park and, pointing at the benches and fountains beneath the trees, said:

"Twenty years ago I sat in that plaza on a bench, and I had neither a place to sleep nor anything to eat. I was a tramp, and as I sat there looking up at the sky I planned on how many beefsteaks I would buy if I had $1,000,000."

Mr. Drake neglected to say that, according to Dun's and Bradstreet's he is today rated at more than $1,000,000, but he did say that now he had enough money to buy all the beefsteaks he would want for the rest of his life.

Mr. Drake has made his fortune in Central America, but he does not advise others that they may hope to do likewise.

Shorn of Beard, He Lost His Reason.

Anguish caused by being shorn of a beard which had never before felt the razor's edge is believed to have been responsible for William Brosius, twenty-one years old, of Elizabeth, N. J., becoming temporarily deranged to an extent that his father caused his arrest, fearing that he might carry out threats to kill him. Despite his youth, Brosius had cultivated a long jet black beard, which his father insisted be shaved off. When the shorn youth returned a short time later friends failed to recognize him. Then William acted in such a strange manner that he was committed for examination as to his mental condition.

Platform of Alabama Man Who Seeks Election.

Birmingham, Ala.—Dr. John S. Gillespie, who was court clerk in this county for twenty years, is out as candidate for county treasurer, announcing as the chief plank in his platform conviction of the uselessness of the office and declaring his purpose to do everything in his power for its abolishment. It is the first time in the history of the country, so far as known here, that a candidate for public office has run on a platform to abolish it.

Mrs. Floribel Brown Ohme, one of the best known educators in the state, is a candidate for membership on the Jefferson county board of education. She is the first woman in the south, so far as known here, to become a candidate for an elective public office. Women cannot vote in this state. She is relying on the men to elect her, and her prospects for success are generally regarded as highly favorable.

James A. Mitchell, a prominent lawyer of Birmingham, recently published an article severely criticising the state supreme court for its ruling on a case he had conducted before that tribunal, and strongly intimated that the court was unduly influenced. For this he was cited to appear before the court and show why his license to practice before it should not be canceled. He answered this summons by announcing himself a candidate for chief justice of the supreme court, which is filled in this state by popular election.

WOLVES CHASE MESSENGER.

Duluth Youth Breaks Record When Pursued by Wolves.

Duluth, Minn.—Simon Morgan, nineteen years old, a telegraph messenger boy, recently broke all messenger boy speed records.

Morgan lives at Duluth Heights and gets through work at 1 a. m. When within a block of his home he heard a patter of feet on the frozen walk behind him. Two gaunt timber wolves with blazing eyes were following him. Morgan speeded for the [illegible] and slammed the door shut as the night prowlers dashed against it.

A friendly dog, hearing the disturbance, interfered and was considerably chewed up, so much so that it was killed later. Clarence Johnson, a neighbor, raised his window and emptied both barrels of a shotgun at the wolves, putting them to flight.

Papa and Great-grandfather.

Lafayette, Ind.—Not many great-grandfathers can boast of having a bouncing baby daughter, but Fred Landes, a farmer northeast of Lafayette, holds this record. Landes, who is a civil war veteran, seventy-four years old, was for many years a widower. A year ago, however, he married a young woman he had known for years. A baby daughter was born to them. Landes has a great number of grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

POLICE QUIZ WOMAN REGARDING DR. WAITE

New York—For more than four hours today, attaches of the District Attorney's office interrogated Mrs. Dorothy Palmenberg concerning her knowledge of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, they oung dentist under arrest here in connection with the death by poison of his wealthy father-in-law, John E. Peck of Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Palmenberg is a friend of Mrs. Margaret Horton, with whom Waite is alleged to have shared a "studio" in a New York hotel.

"Mrs. Palmenberg is a rather important witness," said Assistant District Attorney Dooling at the conslusion of the examination. "and we got information from her which will help us in checking up the documentary and other evidence which the District Attorney's office and the police have gathered. The story she told in some particulars concerned the main theme of the poisoning and that is all we are after"

Waite was visited today at Bellevue Hospital, where he is a prisoner, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Waite, of Grand Rapids, and his brother, Frank Waite, of this city. Mrs. Waite was on the verge of collapse when she left. It was said Waite's condition was slightly improved, although he is still to weak to be moved.

Assistant District Attorney Dooling announced tonight that Percy Peck, brother-in-law of Waite, his wife and Dr. Harry Schurz will arrive here tomorrow from Grand Rapids. Assistant District Attorney Mancuso who went to rGand Rapids at District Attorney Swann's request, will accompany the party.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock sharp, through the kindness of the manufacturers the Chamber of Commerce will announce the opening of Fulton Spring Fashion Display.

* * *

The different merchants are busy today putting the finishing touches in the different departments, so everything will be in readiness tomorrow.

* * *

We call your attention again to the fact that the Annual Banquet of the Chamber of Commerce will take place in the Masonic Lodge rooms Monday evening, April 3rd, at 7 o'clock sharp.

* * *

Don't forget to display the National colors on April the 3rd; so the City will look nice and be ready to greet the Governor.

* * *

THE CLEAN-UP, PAINT-UP, BRIGHTEN-UP AND LIVE-UP CAMPAIGN will be held in the very near future.

* * *

Did you clean your sidewalk today? If you did not PLEASE do so tomorrow, let's get the City cleaned up just a little earlier this year than before.

* * *

THREE CHEERS FOR FULTON SPRING FASHION DISPLAY.

FULTON BIDS YOU WELCOME!

* * *

We ought to have a snowday here in the city; all the people should come out in the morning for about five minutes and take the shovel and clean those sidewalks that have not been cleaned as yet. Some people seem to ignore the ice and snow in front of their places and they really should be brought to time by the City officials and made to clean up quick.

* * *

There is a chance now to show your loyalty to the FULTON merchants during Spring Fashion Display. The windows as far as they are ready show you the GOOD SPIRIT OF THE MERCHANTS; they have the goods to deliver to you. Now show them that you appreciate this and don't go to Syracuse. You can get just as nice goods here as in the bigger city and when OUR merchants [illegible] much interested in making their windows look nice, you should by all means patronize them. DO IT NOW.

* * *

Flowers should be shown everywhere. Follow the example of the Chamber of Commerce; look at our window and do likewise.

* * *

There is nothing nicer looking than flowers. Get busy, for a few cents you can make your window look like a twenty dollar gold piece.

* * *

The following people are looking for work:
Three farm hands.
Two common laborers.
One stenographer.

Please call up the Chamber of Commerce, if you need some one in one of these lines.

* * *

If you want work or need some one to work for you use the Chamber of Commerce Employment Bureau.

* * *

The Credit Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce is able to give you detailed information in regard to the financial standing of most of the people in FULTON. Use it.

QUESTION: Would the merchants of Fulton contribute to have mail order catalogs brought to their customers' doors?

ANSWER: Certainly not. But the few blind local advertisers who use space in the Syracuse newspapers are doing a worse thing. Have you noticed those Special Editions of Syracuse advertisements left in local homes this week?

PRES. WHITAKER LAYS OPEN REASONS WHY MILL REMAINS INACTIVE

Mr. N. L. Whitaker has taken occasion to respond in public print to the numerous inquiries as to why there is no activity at the Battle Island plant. He says in part as follows:

"I have been frequently asked of late when the Battle Island Sulphite mill will be placed in operation and in answer would say that active steps will be taken just as soon as the Public Service Commission approves the application for the transmission of power from the new power house to be erected at the west end of the lower dam in this city to the mill. Some delay is anticipated in this, for the reason that the Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. has through a representative expressed to the Public Service commission its desire to oppose this application.

"It has been necessary to secure permission from General W. W. Wotherspoon, the Superintendent of Public Works of the State, to construct this power line over certain of the State lands. This permit I have secured."

Continuing his communication Mr. Whitaker arraigns in severe terms the opposition conducted by Mr. George Coffing Warner to the State granting permission to construct a power line, saying that Mr. Warner opposed the proposition before the Superintendent of Public Works and Governor Whitman. However, the State officials granted the permit.

Mr. Whitaker says further:

"The permission of the City of Fulton has also been granted wherein necessary to conserve the interests of the city and upon motives similar to those which prompted the State to act favorably.

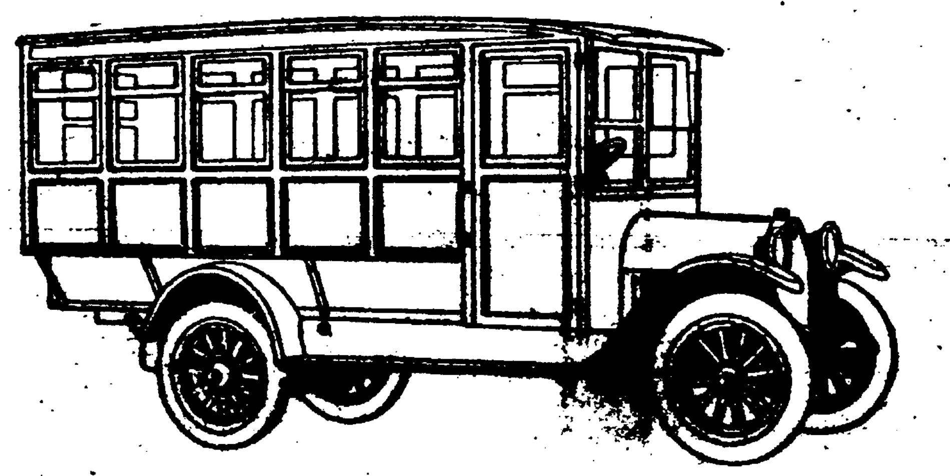
"The rehabilitation of this industry means much to the industrial welfare of Fulton, insuring as it does not only the restoration but an increase in one of the larger payrolls of the community.

"The effect this increased development it has been necessary to secure water power of greater capacity than that which was formerly owned by the Battle Island Paper Co. and which was destroyed by the State. Water rights have been secured from the Granby Pulp & Paper company, and therein is the apparent reason for the opposition of Mr. Warner. For some time he has looked toward the acquisition of the water power of the Granby Company that, as in accord with statements written by him on the subject, he might centralize the water power on both Fulton dams and through a hydro-electric development transmit it to Syracuse in large quantities, where he states that he has one customer to take 6,000 horse power and another who will consume a very large amount.

"The acquisition for the Battle Island mill of a part of the Granby water power does not leave the Granby possessed of such amounts of power as Mr. Warner has expressed a desire to acquire from that company for the Syracuse development. Therefore his motive in opposing the transmission of the power to the Battle Island mill is most obvious.

"I believe further explanation of the situation unnecessary. The opposition of Mr. Warner and his company is a matter of record. His explanation to the public may be that he wants to save Battle Island the expense of constructing a pole line. Such a statement cannot envelop the plans for taking Fulton's power to Syracuse.

Westward-Ho Auto Bus Coming, Capacity of Sixteen Persons



As soon as the State road west is in good condition for automobile traffic the Wilson & Scott Company who operated an auto service last year between Fulton and Hannibal and intermediate upoints, will place in operation a Studebaker bus capable of seating sixteen passengers.

The new vehicle, which has been purchased through George B. Palmer, the Studebaker agent in this city, is expected to arrive here within a few days and then the firm will make ready for its first trip. The accompanying picture shows the entrance to be near the driver's seat which will enable passengers to pay fare to the driver when entering.

The car can be operated in any kind of weather, having special appliances for this purpose, and will be capable of maintaining a speed of thirty miles an hour.

If business warrants it, the service will be duplicated. As the seven-passenger car which the company used in the Fall was loaded to capacity at all times and as the service has by this time received much publicity in the territory served, it is believed by the firm that the one car may prove insufficient during the summer months.

BRITISH STORM 600 YDS. OF TRENCHES AT YPRES

London— "The British infantry stormed today and took first and second line German trenches along a front of six hundred yards at St. Eloi," says the British officials communication, issued last evening.

The text of the statement reads:

"This morning, after exploding mines, infantry of the Northumberland Fusiliers and Royal Fusiliers assualted the German salient at St. Eloi successfully, taking first and second line trenches on a front of some six hundred yards. Heavy casualties are known to have been caused to the enemy. Two officers and 168 men were made prisoners.

"The artillery activity today has been mainly confined to the neighborhood of Angres, Wulverghem, St. Eloi and Weiltje.

"Last night and today there has been much mining activity. At La-Boisselle we successfully exploded a mine. To the south of Neuville- St. Vaast and near the Hohenzollern redoubt there has been crater fighting in which we were successful.

"Opposite Hulluch the enemy exploded mines last night, damaging our trenches and causing some casualties. We are established on the crater formed by the explosion."

The fighting in the St. Eloi sector, which lies on the west side of the Ypres-Comines canal, two and three-quarters miles directly south of Ypres, has been spasmodic since early in January. The Germans attacked with some force on February 15 and carried six hundred yards of British trenches. Counter attacks organized immediately wonb ack part of this lost ground and yesterday's action more than regained the territory evacuated. St. Eloi lies back about a quarter of am ile from the canal, and the advanced lines have run between the village and the canal banks. The new British front, it is assumed, is close up to the bank as a result of the latest fighting.

The Berlin version of the engagement yesterday is contained in this paragraph from the official Army Headquarters statement:—

"By an extensive mine explosion early this morning the British damaged our position near St. Eloi, south of Ypres. More than one hundred yards of trenches were blown up. Casualties were caused among the company occupying the position.

AMERICANS CLOSE UPON VILLA'S HEELS IN SIERRAS

Casas Grandes, Chilhuahua, Mex. (byw irelesstd Columbus, N. H.), — Villa is flying southwest toward the foothills of the Sierras.

According to army reports received here today the rapidity of his flight is hastening the American pursuit.

All arms of the service is being used in an attempt to force the bandit into a corner.

The Mexican residents of this section which has been ravaged time and time again by Villa bandits, are freely giving information concerning Villa's flight, supplies, armament and strength to the American military authorities.

While much of this information has been too indefinite to be of value, it is presumed the knowledge that, the Americans are kept informed as to his movements has influenced the bandit chieftain to the greatest haste in his retreat.

Although the United States troops are following closely in his wake so far, it is stated, no fighting has taken place.

VILLA'S MEN EXHAUSTED

Field Headquarters, American Expeeditionary Forces, Colonia Dublan, Chilhuahua, Mex., (by aeroplane to Columbus, N. M.)— Evidence that Pancho Villa is preparing to resist the American pursuing columns and that the Mexican people are not as yet rallying to him has been collected by officers and scouts of the American troops.

The officers who have ridden over the various fronts now maintained in the state of Guerrero, where Villa fled when the United States expedition crossed the border, have found numerous indications that Villa miscalculated completely when he predicted his Columbus raid would cause a general uprising against Americans.

Villa is retiring continually southward, trying to force recruits into his ranks. His men are feeling the pinch of hunger and are hoping for an early Summer to shield them against the cold of the mountains, where they have retreated somewhere south of Namiquipa.

The one question of overshadowing importance bow being asked by the officers in the field is:

"Will Villa continue to prepare for resistance?"

It is frankly hoped he will, for that is considered the best chance, barring a lucky capture through treachery of Villa's own men, of bringing the American expedition to an early and successful conclusion.

If Villa refuses to make any resistance the men who have been over the ground here believe it may require months to catch him.

An officer who has been through many places where Villa had passed within a week found the fugitive had failed to inflame sentiment against the Americans.

"These rural people," said the officer, "are in ignorance of the nature of the American expedition. They have been told the Americans are an invading army, a dangerous enemy, that they must fight for their lives. But they appeared to be waiting — with some suspicion, it is truel but waiting before making up their minds.

A writer in Leslie's Weekly furnishes food for thought in discussing the amenities of traveling, as follows: "With the knowledge of traveling conditions abroad and at home, and after having seen America pretty thoroughly, I must acknowledge that the dining car service, the sleepers and facilities generally on our trains and steamers are ahead of those of any other country. But it is true that the employees of our railroads are not as polite as they are abroad, excepting perhaps the porters, who do not regard their service as beneath them and are therefore willing to do their best to make every passenger comfortable. Of course they receive tips, but conductors would not accept them. One never found a conductor on a foreign train who was above accepting a gratuity. On the other hand, too frequently the traveler is apt to be discourteous when hurried or worried and often complains with little cause and is inappreciative of many small attentions. A pleasant 'Thank you,' and a genial smile can be as readily appreciated by the railroad or steamship attendant as by the traveler himself."

The late Henry James was American born, but lived abroad the great part of his threescore and odd years. He wrote of America, as a rule, and his "Daisy Miller" led to a popularization here of his name, which otherwise must have stood for peculiarity in literature. James' Daisy Miller was not a genuine type, but was at least a human creation. The tale appeared soon after the Centennial exhibition in Philadelphia, where on a large scale American manners and ideals were pitted against those of Europeans visiting the show and incidentally the country. It furnished wholesome food for reflection, and no doubt many of the newly and extravagantly rich American girls modified their deportment in the face of that cutting satire upon presumption. But the satire reacted, because the girl was so lovable in herself that the onus fell upon the parents responsible for her unsophistication and helplessness.

The war with pneumonia, the great decimator which is on from December to May, also calls for preparedness. Preparedness against pneumonia lies not so much in doing things as in not doing things. The don'ts in the case are many and can be summed up briefly in the commandment—don't overdo one's normal powers in anything whatever. Do not in the danger months eat too much, drink too much, work too hard nor play too hard nor work nor live nor sleep in vitiated air. It is said that tramps are seldom victims of pneumonia, for the reason that they continually breathe in the open.

The federal bank reserve act has been in operation about one year, and it is conceded that during this period the reserve resources of the United States have not had a fair test. This means that the law creating the new system has not had adequate trial. The federal reserve board, however, declares that "the year's experience has confirmed the board in its profound conviction that the act has been one of the most beneficial pieces of legislation ever adopted." The principle is sound, and it has worked to practical advantage.

Discussing government ownership recently, Senator Weeks of Massachusetts pointed out that it would cost the United States $15,000,000,000 to take over its railroads and that if the government owned the railways there would be a loss in the taxes it now obtains amounting to about $140,000,000 a year. These are striking figures.

A layman would have supposed himself presumptuous in advising the New York subway engineers that an underground highway needs adequate drains as well as a surface highway, but it seems that the warning would have been pat.

The recent sale of fifteen yearlings sired by the best racing stock of the old world to a single buyer for $50,000 is taken by turfmen as an indication that good judges are willing to invest in choice horseflesh.

THE HIGHEST TAX

The most burdensome tax in this country is that paid on bad roads and, incidentally, streets. No other tax approaches it, yet there is less complaint against it than any other tax that has to be paid. The temperance people worry a lot about the enormous tax on whiskey; the farmers worry about the taxes on their lands, and right now, the whole automobile world is sputtering lest there shall be a tax on gasoline. Nearly everybody has shivers, fearing that an increase will be made on this or that kind of property. But there is hardly a protest against the heaviest of all taxes.

The mick-a-muck of something-or-other in another state, according the "Country Gentleman," has figured that the tax in that state is six cents per bushel on wheat, due solely to bad roads. It costs much more to get farm produce to market over bad roads than it would cost if the roads were improved. In this state while the roads are new they are good roads. There is of course one exception, it being First st., between Rochester st. and Broadway, which in comparison with the modern roads that will not stand motor truck traffic, is a very old road. This piece of road is a tremendous tax upon every pound of freight drawn over it. But this is digressing. The point is, First st., between the points indicated beggars description. Everybody knows all about it, and that it is to be made good. It will cost a lot of money, one-third of the total coming from the pockets of the people of Fulton. Incidentally the merchants of Fulton will bear their share of the expense, but they are good men and will not mind giving up for a good cause. They never do, more's the pity, since some people are so ungrateful. This newspaper would like to help the merchants in more than one way, so here's a suggestion:

Why not have the Chamber of Commerce write to Montgomery Ward & Co. and to Sears, Roebuck & Co. of Chicago, calling their attention to the condition of First st., between Rochester st. and Broadway and asking for contributions to help repair it. These firms enjoy a large trade in this city and vicinity, and as they do not pay any taxes here they will no doubt cheerfully make a substantial cash contribution for such a worthy cause. There are other sections of the city having bad roads which connect with goods beyond the limits and it may be the Chicago firms can be brought around to contribute something toward repairing them as well.

Objections to the suggestion are awaited with interest.

LOAF, BROTHERS, LOAF?

The subjoined wrath inspiring deliverance from the headquarters of modern sociology defaces the press:

"Henry Ford of Detroit thinks that a work day shorter than eight hours would give too much time for loafing."

He is completely, fundamentally, longitudinally, latitudinally wrong; wrong generally and wrong specifically; wrong in his head, his heart; and his gizzard: morally, physically, intellectually wrong. There never was and never can be a work day short enough; no man, regardless of the situation in which he finds himself, has sufficient time to doall the loafing he wants to do and should do. Loafing is the one thing for which most men are ideally equipped; the one calling in which they might be reasonably efficient; the one art in which each and every one of us, regardless of birth, education, previous condition of servitude, prenatal influences, environment, economic condition, domestic obligation or taste in the selection of neckwear might attain eminence and win the bays.

Through the malevolence of such men as Mr. Ford the true beauty, the sterling virtues of loafing are obscured and hidden. He and his fellows—his friend Edison like to work 28 hours out of every 24—by their wretched persistence, by their false standards, by their maligant assaults on man's best friend, have distorted public opinion and enforced acceptance of a vicious theory that loafing might advantageously be dispensed with, and certainly should be taken in small doses. A citizenry trained to labor meekly assents to their demoralizing doctrines, and sees its most precious privilege curtailed, snipped off and utterly destroyed.

There should be no work. All hands should loaf all the time. All men are created loafers. The fall was from luxurious idleness, unvexed by alarm clocks factory whistles, matured notes, engagements that must be kept, to the present servile and task ridden situation of Adam's unfortunate sons and daughters.—N. Y. Sun.

'LATE TO BED AND LATE TO RISE"

According to the old jingle, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy and wealthy and wise," but Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, says, in a recent interview that he does not go to bed before 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning, because he can do his best thinking after midnight. Besides, although he is seventy years of age, he says that he does not tire as easily now as he did at fifty, so he must be healthy, and we know that he is both "wealthy and wise." Doctor Bell has helped to explode another of the numerous superstitions of which the world is, alas! so much the victim.—Rochester Herald.

EXPORT OF RAGC

For eleven months of the year ending December 31, 1915, we exported over sixteen million pounds of woolen rags, valued at $1,246,848. The quantity shipped abroad was over twelve million pounds less than for the eleven months of the 1914 year, yet our rag exporters received over $300,000 more money for their shipments than in the previous year. The average price in 1915 was 7 3-4 cents, while the 1914 average was around 4 3-4 cents.

The figures shown above bring up the interesting question of wool fabric manipulation. Our rags, wool in a technical sense, are shipped to England, there processed and made into cloth, and thousands of yards of the cloth are shipped back here and sold in competition with American made fabrics, and the wearers swell up and pose as "best dressers" in English made fabrics.

With our high grade equipment manufacturers and department managers as skilled as any in the world the only explanation is low wage abroad and our low Tariff.—Fibre and Fabric.

TEACHERS IN THE WAR

One of the many lamentable features of the war in Europe is the drain made upon teaching forces of the countries involved. The lack of competent instructors will be severely felt in the years immediately following the restoration of peace.

It is stated that 30,000 of the teachers of France have thus far been enrolled in the active forces of the army. During the first year of the war, when the mortality of the younger men of the nation was highest, 2,657 fell victims of shot, shell, noxious gases and disease. It is a matter of record that the number of wounded and prisoners is nearly 8,000. In addition, large numbers of other teachers have been obliged to forego their educational work to aid in hospitals and in the various administrative departments of war preparations. Generally speaking, it is the younger teachers who are on the firing lines the older and presumably less efficient members of the profession being utilized for quasi-military service Altogether it has been estimated that practically one-half of the members of the teaching staff of France have been removed from their school duties and assigned to posts connected with the carrying on of the war.

It is creditable to the French people that they realize what the deflection of such a large porportion of the teaching foree means for the coming generation, now of tender school age. Everywhere there is a call for voluntary instructors to take the place of the patriotic teachers who have responded to their country's call. A correspondent of the London Times learned that the result of the appeal was surprising. As an illustration: "In one school a judge gives Latin lessons, a dentist teaches natural science and an artist, a hotelkeeper, a chemist and a bookkeeper have joined the teaching staffs." Every effort is being made to secure competent substitites for the absent teachers, and schoolhouses which have been occupied by the military are being evacuted as rapidly as possible in order to rehabilitate the schools. It is, though, frankly admitted that the loss of so many trained instructors in the war will have a marked effect on the education of the young during the decade or two following the ending of the conflict. — Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

HOW

To Make a Safe Gift For Almost Any Man

THERE is one article which it is safe for a woman to embroider for a man, and that is a handkerchief. Women, too, who object to what they call embroidered fol-de-rols are always glad to accept embroidered handkerchiefs simply because they are useful things to receive.

Frequently it is difficult to find the exact initial one desires. There are types of initials that are particularly suitable for certain types of people: For this reason one should use judgment in selecting the letters for handkerchiefs.

Failing to locate a suitable initial among one's collection of needlework designs, the next best thing is to look over the front pages of one's books. On one or more of these one is sure to find an initial of the right size and style. Once found it is quite an easy matter to transfer the letter with carbon paper to the corner of the handkerchief.

Pad the letter carefully and then embroider over it in solid stitches, placing the stitches close together, so that the result will be pleasing. White or colored cotton or silk can be used to work the letter.

Beauty can be added to the initial or initials embroidered on the handkerchief by surrounding the letters with a delicate floral wreath. A plain circle of eyelets is also effective.

FOR SPRING HOUSECLEANING.

How to Polish Furniture So That It Looks Like New.

Polished furniture should require no other treatment than washing with warm water, to which a very little methylated spirit has been added, followed by a vigorous rubbing with very soft cloths. For furniture which has been stained and polished and has become scratched it is best to get a good oil and color man or a furniture dealer to put up a French polish mixture which can be used very sparingly. Polishing with a thin beeswax and turpentine polish answers satisfactorily if there are no scratches.

For the cheaper kinds of furniture a mixture of methylated spirit with a small quantity of orange shellac can be used. This will remove scratches and brighten the furniture, but must be used sparingly. If the furniture needs brightening only a beeswax polish can be used or a mixture of linseed oil, turpentine and vinegar in equal parts.

FOR SOIL GRUBBERS.

How to Make Your Worn Out Garden Soil More Fertile.

In many cases rotted stable manure and humus will prove all that the gardener need add to make his garden fertile, but in some cases, especially when the ground is being worked annually it will be well to add a commercial fertilizer. The best results are usually gained by the rotation of crops—that is, by never planting the same piece of ground with the same crop two years in succession.

The government agricultural bureau issues charts and pamphlets showing the proper rotation of crops which will prove invaluable to the gardener. They can be obtained, along with much other valuable information, for the asking.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR PET FURS FROM DIRT RAVAGES.—About this season of the year one's furs that were so soft and glossy back in November begin to take on a matted, dingy look which is distressing. If madam's pet Pomeranian ever took on the rusty, matted appearance of her furs in February he would be dropped into the bathtub without loss of time. But furs may not be treated in this simple, practical fashion when they become soiled. For all that is the matter with furs in spring is that they are soiled. No one ever thinks of using a whisk broom to furs, yet obviously the fur coat has acquired as much dust as the broadcloth or velvet suit, assiduously brushed every time it is taken off. Dirt and dust do not remain on the surface of fur, but work down into the roots of the hairs, which become matted because of it. All furs should be shaken briskly in the open air once a week, and it will do no harm to hang them on the line and give them a brisk beating with a light wand. A near seal coat will keep its smooth texture better if brushed over lightly now and then with a whisk broom dipped in cold water.

NO REDUCTION IN THE NUMBER OF SENATORS

Senator Brown Declares That There Is No Basis for the Claim That the Number Should be Reduced to Fifty by the New Apportionment—Question Was Carefully Considered in the Constitutional Convention of 1894.

Albany, March 27.—That there should be no reduction of the number of Senators by the new apportionment was pointed out by Senator Brown in a statement given out to-night. He said:

"There is no basis for the claim that the number of Senators on this legislative apportionment should be reduced from 51 to 50. The declared purpose of the convention which framed the present constitution in 1894 was to base representation not only upon population, but upon territory, diversity of interests and convenience. It was recognized that every Senator from a city in a sense represented the whole city. Senatorial representation was, therefore, based on a smaller number of inhabitants in rural than in urban districts. The constitution provides:

'The ratio for apportioning Senators shall always be obtained by dividing the number of inhabitants, excluding aliens, by fifty, and the Senate shall always be composed of fifty members, except that if any county having three or more Senators at the time of any apportionment shall be entitled on such ratio to an additional Senator or Senators, such additional Senator or Senators shall be given to such county in addition to the fifty Senators, and the whole number of Senators shall be increased to that extent.'

"The convention followed the practice of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri and other states in this respect. The provision for additional Senators was, however, incorporated in the article to give additional representation commensurate with their growth to the great cities of the State, and in the expectation that it would not be necessary to reduce the representation of counties having a comparatively stationary population for the purpose of providing for the great New York district. The growth of Queens and Westchester has, however, disappointed this expectation. They must each have an additional Senator, and 48 counties now comprising 19 Senatorial districts must be content with 17 Senators.

"The purpose of getting an additional Senator or Senators was clearly stated in the 1894 convention by Mr. Bush, a member from Chemung, afterwards the Democratic leader of the Assembly, and now a member of Assembly from Chemung. He said:

'It provides that when in counties having four or more Senators the population increases so that an additional Senator may be had they shall be added to the total number of Senators. And I will illustrate: We will assume that ten years from now the State of New York has six millions of people. That, divided by fifty, the manner in which the ratio is to be determined, will give 120,000 for each Senator. If the city of New York shall at that time have 1,800,000 inhabitants, it will be entitled to fifteen members. That is three more than it has under this apportionment. Therefore, all that can be done is to give New York three additional Senators and add three to the total number of Senators in the State, and it will not in any way change the country districts. In other words, this scheme contemplates simply that the present apportionment may always remain, but you may add to a district when it has sufficient to give it another member.'

"To reduce the Senators to 50 would reduce the representation in the 48 counties now having 19 Senators to 16 instead of 17 Senators, and further reduce a representation which the convention sought to protect. The County of Kings fell short by only a few hundred of being entitled to a second additional Senator, and the future growth of the great cities of the State will undoubtedly result in a number of additional Senators. The contention that these additional Senators are awarded for a single apportionment only and not permanently added to the 50 Senators would, if successful, destroy the constitutional plan for the apportionment of Senators.

"The constitutional provisions result in requiring a full ratio of 161,190 of the citizen population for a Senator in every county having more than three Senators and an average population of 143,816 in the remaining districts. This, too, is in harmony with the constitutional provision providing for greater representation in larger territory where counties have to be combined to form a district. Of the total area of 50,000 square miles in the State, 41,000 is found in these 48 counties. While this provision was frequently referred to as an obvious injustice to the urban sections, the amendment was the subject of the widest and fullest political agitation in 1894 in the State. The article was separately submitted and adopted by a large majority. It was approved by a majority of the voters of New York City and in every county now comprising the City of New York."

SOUTH SEA ISLAND COLONY IN AMERICA

Strange Community Is Discovered In Utah.

Salt Lake City.—Discovered—the strangest community in the United States.

It is a community of south sea islanders. A thousand in number, they are now settled in the Skull valley in Utah, between the Great Salt lake and the Nevada line.

There are Maoris, Samoans and Hawaiians living and farming in perfect harmony, intermarrying and raising children.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago the older men of this strange colony came from across the Pacific, some as sailors, some as stowaways.

They wandered in small groups about California, and some of them came across the Sierras into Idaho and Utah. They were starving when a group of business men decided to help them.

They secured 15,000 acres of land in the Skull valley, collected all the south sea natives that they could find and established them in a colony which they call Ioseppa.

An American farmer was selected as superintendent. Each man was paid good wages at the start, and as soon as they were capable they were allowed to buy half acre lots and cottages at actual cost.

Now there is a new generation growing up. Some of the boys have gone from the grade school and taken full courses at the State Agricultural college. Several of the girls have become stenographers in Salt Lake City. A number have graduated from the University of Utah.

TAMES WILD DUCKS.

Madison (Wis.) Resident Has a Flock of Nearly 200 of Them.

Madison, Wis.—Wild ducks may be domesticated and raised on the farm as well as tame ones. The plan has been tried by J. C. Halpin of this city for the past three years with success.

Last fall he had a flock of nearly 200, and when the cold weather came on they took their regular "spin" in the skies and then returned to the yards. The wild duck sells for more than the tame variety because of the flavor of the meat.

The first birds were kept in captivity by clipping the wings, but the young ducks are as easily handled as domestic ones.

These domesticated mallards retain many of the instincts peculiar to wild nature. Let one mallard start limping and in less than ten minutes, unless something is done to attract attention elsewhere, a majority will be limping.

TWINS AND BURGLARS.

Latter Left When They Found the Stork Had Come to the House.

Kansas City, Mo.—Because the stork and burglars selected the same time to visit M. H. Brotherson of No. 644 Ohio avenue, Kansas side, the burglars had to withdraw and postpone their visit. The stork left twin boys. Mr. Brotherson now is the father of six children.

Mr. Brotherson hastened to his store next door to summon a doctor at 5 a. m. He hurried in, picked up the telephone, and as he jiggled the receiver, nervously he heard a noise in the rear of the store.

"Come quick!" he said over the wire. The noise increased, and something fell. He stepped out the front door, quickly locked it and hurried home.

The twins having arrived safe and sound and the excitement abated, he went back to the store. The back door was open, some sacks gone and a pile of boxes overturned.

RULES FOR NAVY'S CIVILIAN CRUISE

Battleships Will Be Used In Summer Training.

COURSE TO BE FOUR WEEXS

These Enlisting For Trip Will Have to Pay Traveling Expenses to Seaboard and Deposit $30—Starting Points Will Be at Coast Cities—Enrollments Close June 1.

Washington.—The navy's civilian cruise, which is expected to do for the navy what the Plattsburg training camp did for the army, will begin Aug. 15 and last until Sept. 12, according to an announcement made by Secretary Daniels' department.

Battleships of the Atlantic reserve fleet will be used for the cruise, it is stated, and the starting points will be Boston, Newport, New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk and possibly Charleston. Civilians enlisting for the cruise will have to pay their traveling expenses to the seaboard and return and also a deposit of $30 to cover the expenses of the cruise.

The detailed regulations issued by the department, which will govern the cruise, have been tentatively adopted and in part follows:

"Recruits for the cruise to be citizens of the United States between the ages of nineteen and forty-five, and must be able to pass a prescribed physical examination. They must be able to demonstrate to the recruiting officer that they possess some nautical knowledge or have had some technical training which would fit them for service in the navy.

SECRETARY DANIELS.

"The applicants who qualify will be required to sign an application blank for enrollment. In this application the recruit obligates himself to hold himself during the cruise subject to the navy regulations, obey all authorized orders and perform such work on board ship as regularly assigned.

"The objects of the training cruise are to help equip properly equipped men to act as reserves in time of war or national emergency by giving them a course of training on board warships under naval officers and naval conditions.

"The total expenses of the cruise, outside of the cost of transportation to the point of embarking and for returning home, will be about $30. Upon reporting on board the ship to which assigned each recruit will deposit $30, which will cover the cost of his subsistence and the necessary clothing outfit. Should the actual cost of subsistence and clothing be less than this amount the difference will be refunded.

"Upon reporting on board the civilian clothing of recruits will be turned over for storage, and they will be issued a sufficient outfit of uniform clothing. When all recruits are on board the ships will leave their respective naval districts and cruise for a period of four weeks, during which time the recruits will be given practical instruction in the duties required on board ship.

"A portion of each day will be given to the study of special subjects, which will be largely optional, so that those who have an aptitude for or knowledge of such subjects as navigation, signaling, radio work, steam or electrical engineering, etc., may have an opportunity to specialize. Boat drill will be given and landings made, and recruits will be taught the manual of arms and military formations.

"During the final week of the cruise the ships will return to the naval districts whence they came, and, in addition to the courses of instruction, recruits will be given a general idea of their own naval district and its defensive problems. During the final week also residents of the district who own yachts or motorboats which would be useful as auxiliaries in time of war will be given an opportunity to operate in conjunction with the ships.

"Enrollments will be closed on June 1, and no application will be received after that date. Application blanks will be furnished to all who desire them by the navy recruiting officers at the various recruiting stations throughout the country."

Spring Fever

Just now we all are longing for the coming of the spring.
We want to see the grass get green and hear the robins sing.
And some of us have dreams of golf or trout, but most of all
We want to climb the bleacher seats and see a game of ball!

We want to see the mellow time for gardening begin;
We want to start the hotbed and to get the sweet peas in;
We want to carry out the plans we've had in mind since fall,
But most of all we want to see a good'old game of ball!

We're tired of old winter, and the frost and ice and snow.
We're weary of the icicles; we want to see them go.
We want to see the batter bat and hear the umpire call—
In short, we shan't be happy till we see a game of ball!

AMERICANS WASH TOO MUCH, SECRETARY REDFIELD SAYS

As a Result the Old Rags Are Not Good For Making Paper.

No one ever accused a man with side whiskers with being afflicted with a sense of humor, but when Secretary of Commerce Redfield announced that American rags were of little use to the manufacturers of paper because the "American people wash too much" there was a burst of laughter which ran country wide.

It appears that the raw material for the manufacture of paper is running extremely low—so low that the manufacturers are becoming seriously alarmed. The secretary some time ago issued a call to the country to save its old rags. This call met with considerable response, especially when it was explained that the European war had virtually shut off the importation of rags into this country.

When the first consignments of American rags, principally linens and cottons, reached the manufacturers there was a discordant wail of despair. The product would not do at all, the manufacturers said. They had been used to the rags of Europe, which were filthy and contained much of their original component parts.

"The American rags are too clean," they said. "The American people apparently are addicted to washing their clothes to an extent that destroys the usefulness of the remnants, so far as paper making is concerned."

Secretary Redfield thereupon issued a grave warning that citizens of the United States were washing too much for the good of the paper makers' industry. He followed it later with a call, however, for such material. More than 1,000,000 copies of the announcement have been sent broadcast throughout the United States and will be posted in postoffices and other public places. Chambers of commerce and other commercial organizations also have been enlisted in the crusade.

USE ARMORED AEROPLANES.

New Machines to Have Steel Plates on Their Bottoms.

If new aero squadrons are organized for service they will be equipped with armored aeroplanes, according to word received from Washington at the army aviation school at San Diego, Cal.

Aeroplanes to be supplied to the war department hereafter, it was said, were to be fitted underneath with a thick plate of steel to protect the pilot, observer and engine from rifle or shrapnel fire. The new machines will be of the same type as those which American manufacturers are sending to Europe for the French and British flying corps.

Military aeroplanes ordered by the war department will be of two types, according to the Washington advices. One type will have a speed of ninety miles an hour and will carry two passengers. The other will be capable of flying at the rate of ninety-five miles an hour, carrying pilot, observer and bomb thrower. Provision will be made on the latter class of machines for the installation of machine guns on a movable base.

ELECTRICITY IN A PUDDLE.

Believe Shoe Dealer Adopted Novel Method to Sell Rubbers.

Whether one of the department stores of Waukesha, Wis., is trying a scheme to stimulate the sale of rubbers has not been made known, but suspicion points a questioning finger.

A puddle of water which completely covered the sidewalk became charged with electricity, and every "unrubbered" person who passed received a sharp shock. Women appeared to be better conductors of the current than men, and screams frequently could be heard for a block or more.

A dog which innocently stepped into the water jumped three feet into the air and then before skulking away with its tail between its legs snapped at several newsboys who had gathered to watch the fun.

Chief of Police Don McKay arrived after the pool had been exposed for a half hour and warned pedestrians, while linemen shut off the current.

Have Erected 135 Memorials.

Members of the high school of technology in Berlin have thus far erected 135 memorial tablets to their comrades who have died at the front. The first of these was for the well known architect and historian Dr. Heinrich Lattermann, who fell at Liege in the first days of the war.

William H. Crane and Edith Talliferro in "The New Henrietta," at the Richardson, Oswego, Thursday evening, March 30th.

FIVE STARS OF THE STAGE IN "THE HENRIETTA"

Joseph Brooks is the one manager in our producing guild who has clung to the American idea in play and players. Since the days of Robson and Crane in "Our Boarding House," a farce salted with the dry humor of Yankeeland, he has diligently and proudly sought and offered American plays. In 1887 he tendered "The Henrietta," am asterful story of dollars and hearts, toa skeptical public with a result that is now a red-letter record of stage history. Its production brought riches to all concerned, including the author, Bronson Howard, and at the present time it is the vehicle of entertainment for five of our preferred stars, namely: William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Edith Taliaferro.

The romance of "The Henrietta" is generous with opportunities for superior acting, and the engagement of five such stars for the performance of this revival marks an event that will long remain in cherished memory. The splendid response of the public to the occasion reminds one of the previous revival of the old English comedy, "The Rivals," with Joseph Jefferson, William J. Florence, William H. Crane, and other stars of the same distinction, which tour was also managed by Mr. Brooks. Jefferson, Florence, E. M. and Joseph Holland, Robert Tabor, and Mrs. John Drew have gone to their eternal reward. William H. Crane, who played Sir Anthony Absolute, is of the few remaining to give us wholesome diversion of the theatre. The beloved actor's appearance in "The Henrietta," with similar association of stars, is the great redeeming feature of the season's theatrical calendar.

"The New Henrietta" will be staged at the Richardson, Thursday evening, March 30th.

RETURNED BABY'S BANK.

Thief Robbed the House, but Brought That Back.

Sierra Vista, Cal.—A thief with a conscience recently entered the home of Clark Rubido here and after decamping with valuables amounting to $100 returned to the burglarized house and deposited a child's bank containing $2 in pennies, which had been part of the loot, on the front porch.

The Rubido family visited friends in Los Angeles that day, and about noon a neighbor, Mrs. Caroline Martin, saw a well dressed young man carrying a suit case walk up to the front door of the Rubido home, fumble with the lock a moment and walk in.

Mrs. Martin thought the stranger was probably a friend of the Rubidos, and when the young man reappeared some time after, still carrying the suit case, she told him that the Rubido family was passing the day in the city. The young man thanked her and hurried on.

Half an hour later Mrs. Martin saw the young man come back and deposit something on the front porch of the house.

When the Rubidos returned they found that the pleasant faced young man had carried away all their silver, several articles of jewelry and $30. The baby's penny bank, which had been returned, was about the only movable valuable not taken.

SOAP BRINGS REUNION.

Brothers Meet For First Time In Thirteen Years by Accident.

St. Paul.—Charles McKee of Ray, N. D., was sent to room 322 when he registered at the Hotel Sherman. Desiring to shave, he unpacked his grip. But his shaving stick was missing.

"Have you got any shaving soap?" he asked a man who was issuing from room 324.

"Sure," was the answer. They entered room 324 and turned on the light to look for the shaving soap. McKee looked at the other man critically.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"R. E. McKee of Shakopee, Minn." was the answer.

"I'm your brother Charley," the North Dakotan said.

The two had not seen each other for thirteen years. They were reared in St. Paul and separated after their parents died. Charles went to North Dakota, where he owns a half section of land. R. E. McKee went to Shakopee, where he owns a section.

In the last thirteen years they had not corresponded. Unknown to each other, each had amassed a fortune.

ATTRIBUTES HER LONG LIFE TO SWEET DIET

Woman, Ninety, Begins Meals With Dessert.

Melrose, Mass.—Mrs. James Rodie celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary several days ago. She is in excellent health and attributes this fact to an astonishing diet that consists largely of chocolates, puddings, fruits and other sweetmeats.

Mrs. Rodie was personally conducting the frying of a batch of five dozen doughnuts when the reporter called at her home. While in conversation with him she ate several hot doughnuts, and upon being asked if she was troubled with indigestion she replied that she had relished dainty foods more in her old age than when she was young.

She is known as the "spry old lady of Melrose," and every morning during good weather she takes a walk of two miles or more just for a "little exercise," as she terms it. Mrs. Rodie is a zealous worker and exhibited for the reporter's benefit over twenty-five fancy woven knit table pieces that she had completed since last fall. She also assists her daughter-in-law, with whom she lives, in the general housework, and twice a week she dusts all the furniture in the house.

Mrs. Rodie has an excellent appetite. Every morning she has cake and coffee for breakfast, sometimes eating a little oatmeal. Her daughter-in-law told the reporter that Mrs. Rodie always eats her dessert first and that if she is hungry she will eat a little meat. She eats on the average a box of chocolates a week.

Mrs. Rodie is a fresh air enthusiast and has not slept in a room with any of the windows closed for over sixty years. She is also a firm follower of the "early to bed and early to rise" rule, for she retires every evening at 7 o'clock and is up bright and early at 6 o'clock the next morning.

Sends Wilson 60 Cents For a Divorce.

Washington.—President Wilson received a plea from a citizen of Georgia asking for a divorce. A money order for 60 cents as a fee or for expenses was inclosed in the letter. The Georgian explained that he had been deserted by his wife. "We did not fall out," he wrote; "she stepped out."

WHO'S WHO IN BASKETBALL?

The first of the series of three basketball games to decide the city championship will be played Thursday night on the Maccabee court, between the lodge quintet and the successful high school five. The contract under which the teams will operate says that none but eligible men shall be in the lineup—the Maccabees to permit only lodge members in the game, the high school retaining its regular five.

As the teams are about evenly matched, there is much interest felt in the series by the followers of the sport and it is expected that the first match will draw one of the largest crowds of the season. Morin will officiate in each contest. The proceeds will be equally divided between the teams.

An unusual feature of the series is the fact that until this year, the representative high school quintet was acknowledged to be the city champions beyond disput. With the advent of the lodge quintet this season, it is proper to have the two teams meet and settle for all time the question of superiority.

While the Maccabee players display better guarding tactics they are weak in scoring which defect they will try to overcome in several practice sessions. On the other hand, the high school team is stronger at scoring than in defense. This situation makes it impossible to pick the winner.

AMERICAN MECHANICS OBSERVED LADIES NIGHT

Preceeded by a short business session, Ladies nightat the American Mechanics rooms was a grand success with about forty people present. The chief entertainment was afforded by a progressive pedro contest in which Mrs. Alice Cook won the 1st prize for women and Mrs. Burt Smith the consolation prize in the same classification. R. E. Parks won the men's prize and B. G. Boigeol took the consolation award.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS BECOME GARDNERS

There are persons who are picturing Fulton as a garden. The spirit is abroad, as one may gather from snatches of conversation. As a leader the Craftsman Class with Miss Nancy Cook, instructor, are preparing plans for a bit of landscape gardening round about the high school building. Last fall scores of bulbs were planted by the class and this spring more flowers and shrubbery are to be added. The city should be proud of its youngs craftsmen who are taking a lead along this line of city building.

QUAD. SESSION OF CONFERENCE

Opens May 1, to Continue One Month---Six or Seven Bishops Will Be Elected

New York—

As the time approaches for the quadrennial session of the General Methodist Conference, which will open at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 1, and continue through the month, interest becomes keener about who will be the choice for new bishops. It is certain that the conference will elect six or seven bishops, and perhaps more. If a new law is enacted permitting bishops for races, it is assumed a negro bishop will be chosen to preside over those of his color.

One of the clergymen who is expected to be elected a bishop is the Rev. Ezra S. Tipple, president of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J. Dr. Tipple has received votes at the last two quadrennial conferences. He has done much to build up the seminary. Dr. Tipple is chairman of one of the most important conference committees.

Dr. Nicholson Mentioned

Perhaps the next most talked of man for bishop is the Rev. Dr. Thomas Nicholson, of this city, secretary of the Methodist Board of Education. He has held this position for the last eight years.

At Peekskill, where the New York Conference is in annual session, Dr. Tipple, Dr. Nicholson and the Rev. Mr. James Roscoe Ray, chancellor of Syracuse University, sat at the same table in the Eagle Hotel last Wednesday. It was a matter of comment that there were present two possible bishops-elect, and a bishop who was elected but never consecrated. Dr. Day, is the only living man in the history of Methodism ever elected to the bishopric who refused the honor. The only other man who ever refused the bishopric was the late Rev. Dr. Wilber Fisk who half a century ago was president of Wesleyan University

Another candidate for bishop is the Rev. Dr. Franklin Hamilton, chancellor of the American Methodist University, at Washington, D. C. He is a brother of Bishop John W. Hamilton, of Boston.

The Rev. Dr. L. J. Birney, dean of the Boston Methodist School of Theology is said to have his hat in the ring.

Dr. Downey Also in Field

Another clergyman of this city who stands an excellent chance, it is believed, is the Rev. Dr. David R. Downey, book editor of the Methodist denomination. Dr. Downey just missed election at the Minneapolis convention. Before being chosen book editor Dr. Downey was secretary for Sunday schools.

Friends of the Rev. Dr. Allan MacRossie, superintendent of the New York district, have episcopal aspirations for him.

There is some gossip that Professor F. Watson Hannan of Drew Seminary, may receive a good vote. He was until a few years ago pastor of one of the largest chuches in Brooklyn.

Many leading Methodists are of the opinion that some of the new bishops should be chosen among men who have "made good" only as pastors. It is always difficult, however, to get a pastor elected because bishops are chosen by the conference as a whole and a pastor is seldom sufficiently well known in the church at large.

Among the pastors being advocated is the Rev. Dr. Andrew Gillies, pastor of Hennepin Avenue church, Minneapolis. His salary is $7,500 —larger than that of any other pastor and as large as the bishops' salaries.

Other Pastors Named

Other pastors who are possibilities are the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Mitchell, of St. James' Church Chicago; the Rev. Dr. Matt S. Hughes, of Passadena, Cal., a brother of Bishop Edwin F. Hughes, of San Francisco, and the Rev. Dr. Charles Mesley Burns, of Germantown, Pa.

The Rev. Dr. Bertrand S. Tipple, pastor of the American Methodist church in Rome, may be made Bishop for Southern Europe. He is at present in this country. Dr. Ezra S. Tipple is his brother. Dr. B. S. Tipple some time ago brought property in Rome and is now erecting buildings for a Methodist theological seminary there.

War Affects Situation

The war has made a dividing line in Europe for Methodism as well as other communions. At present the only Methodist bishop for the Continent is the Rev. Dr. John L. Nuelson, whose official residence is at Zurich, witzerland.

Other bishop's timber at home may be the Rev. Dr. William F. Oldham and the Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North, both secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions, this city; the Rev. Dr. Herbert Welch, of Ohio Wesleyan University; the Rev. A. W. Leonard, pastor of the First church, Seattle, Wash.; the Rev. Dr. C. E. Locke, of Los Angeles, and the Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of Topeka, Kan., secretary of the Methodist Temperance Board.

The two bishops at home who automatically retire at Saratoga because of their ages are Bishop Earl Cranston, of Washington, D. C., and Bishop John W. Hamilton, of Boston. The Methodist law is that bishops must be retired at the conference nearest their seventieth birthday. Bishop Cranston just missed retirement at Minneapolis.

Missionary bishops who will be retired are Bishop Merriam C. Harris of Japan and Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell of Africa.

Bishops who have died during the quadrennium are the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Smith, the Rev. Dr. David H. Moore, who was retired, and the Rev. Dr. David McIntyre. There is a proposition under consideration to change the method of Episcopal oversight in Africa to save money and time. The bishop for Southern Europe, if there is one, may be made bishop for Africa also.

Just where each bishop will be assigned, for the next four years is a vital subject to Protestants. Interest centres about who will be sent to Washington as successor to Bishop Cranston, Washington and New York are the most desired location.

It is believed the Washington "plum" will go either to Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of New York, or Bishop William Fraser McDowell, of Chicago.

THE QUIRK TODAY

H. Cooper Cliffe, who is cast as Baron Chevrial in the William Fox photoplay revival of Richard Mansfield's famous success, "A Parision Romance," believes that the spirit of the departed tragedian aided him in his interpretation of the role. Mr. Cliffe is admittedly a spiritualist, and it is known that Mansfield had leanings toward that cult.

"Some occult power guided me in the enactment of the part," says Mr. Cliffe. "I believe that it was the spirit of Mr. Manfield, who was a good friend of mine and who had played the part so many times. Frankly, I am a spiritualist, and from casual remarks by Mr. Mansfield long before his death, I have come to believe that he, too, believed in spiritualism."

FORECASTER SEES GOOD WEATHER AHEAD

Frank N. Richards, the Auburn long-distance weather forecaster, has given out his predictions for the coming six months. He looks for a fine Spring and Summer, his monthly predications following:

Up to the middle of April—Northwest winds prevailing; cool but bright and clear.

Latter part of April—Bright and clear; prevailing winds southwest; warmer.

May — Prevailing winds South; clear and warmer.

June and July—South winds prevailing, with plenty of moisture.

August and September — Cool months for the season of the year; northwest winds prevailing.

Mr. Richards desired to emphasize that while he did not wish to predict that August and September would be cold, he meant that there would be little extremely hot weather. He said further that he believed Spring would be fairly early, and that when it set in the Spring and Summer would be fine.

Bowser Gets A Sure Tip

But He Loses His Money Just the Same

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Bowser never comes home to his lunch. If he feels in need of one at midday he goes out to a restaurant. Therefore, the other day, when he came home at 12 o'clock and found Mrs Bowser with cap and apron on sweeping the front hall she had a right to be surprised and to call out:

"Why, Mr. Bowser, are you home at this hour?"

"S-s-s-h!" he whispered as he walked down to the sitting room and beckoned for her to follow. "I don't want Maggie, the cook, to hear a word of what I am going to tell you. I have got a big thing on, and the man who put me wise would hardly consent for me to tell you. We have got $100 in the house, haven't we?"

"Yes, but—but"—

"Haven't we?" persisted Mr. Bowser.

"Yes," she replied, "but what of it? You are not going to buy a new milk cow, are you?"

"Mrs. Bowser, here is the case," he said, holding up a warning finger for her to keep her voice down. "You have long known what I have thought about horse racing. I never saw a horse race in my life, and I never have bet on one. I have considered it a most disgraceful thing. I have raised my voice against it and have advocated that it should be done away with for the good of the public at large."

"WE TALKED AND TALKED."

"Yes; I know," whispered Mrs. Bowser.

"But something happened this morning to change me all over. I sat at my desk reading the morning paper when I absently turned to the sporting page. There were accounts of three or four horse races, but I had not read one of them when a stranger came in, and I laid down the paper. After a short conversation with the stranger he informed me that he was engaged in missionary work among the heathens of Africa. He was home on a leave of absence. The heathens in his district had expressed their strong desire for baseball, golf, poker and other civilized things, and he had come home to solicit contributions to the end that they might acquire them. Anything that would civilize and progress them would be of benefit to the whole world. You know, Mrs. Bowser, I was never stuck on the African heathen."

"No," she replied. "I have often heard you say that you would never subscribe a cent for his benefit."

"Yes; I have said he could go to for all of me, but my views were changed almost in a moment. I was about to make some decided remarks to the stranger when his eye caught the paper I had been reading, and he picked it up and said:
